Mr. M. M. Quaife,
Madison, Wisc.,

Dear Sir:--

Replying to your favor of the 17th ult., with reference to current issues of The Bulletin, will say that owing to the Scrivenoter of our Order having been ill and also owing to the fact that at the present time we are engaged in effecting a complete reorganization of it's business affairs, The Bulletin has not been issued since November 1914, which will explain why you have not received further copies of same since that time. As soon as our present plans of reorganization are completed, it is our intention to again commence publication of this paper and I will see to it, that copies are sent to you.

Yours very truly,

NASHVILLE, TENN., NOVEMBER, 1911.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

Atchison, Kans., December 2.

In announcing his concatenation of December 2, briefly mentioned in last month's Bulletin, Vicegerent Ed A. Horr, of Atchison, Kans., has issued the following excellent letter under date of November 18, to all members in his district:

Atchison, Kans., Nov. 11, 1911.—A Hoo-Hoo concatenation will be held at the "Moose Hall," corner of Sixth and Commercial Streets, Atchison, Kans., commencing at 7:30 p. m., sharp, on Saturday night, December 2, 1911.

The great black cat, assisted by the gods of fun and frolic, will hold undisputed sway. Twenty-five applications are already on file, with several others promised, so all may be assured of having a first-class time.

Immediately after the concatenation a banquet and smoker will be held at Dunton's Cafe, to which all members are cordially invited.

The writer will be assisted by Vicegerents Edw. Leech, of Salina, Kans., and N. H. Huey, of Kansas City, also Burt J. Wright, of Falls City, Neb.

Do not stay away from this meeting on account of lapsed dues. Bring your last membership card with you, and we will be glad to take your money and issue receipt up to date.

Enclosed herewith return postcard. Kindly sign and return at once, so that we may know definitely how many to expect, and make arrangements in accordance.

As this is the first concatenation to be held in the new district, all members are earnestly requested to attend. Bring all the desirable candidates that can possibly be procured, and in this way make the meeting a success.

Remember the date, Saturday night, December 2, 1911.

Trusting to have the pleasure of your attendance on this occasion, I am

Yours very truly,

ED A. HORR, Vicegerent Snark.

Birmingham, Ala., December 7.

Vicegerent J. W. Douglas, of the Iron City Lumber Company, Birmingham, Ala., recently appointed Vicegerent for the Northern District of that state, announces his first concatenation to be held on the evening of December 7. This concatenation, it will be remembered, is the outcome of the splendid meeting held at Birmingham by Vicegerent H. B. Wood on October 12, one of the first concatenations of the new Hoo-Hoo year. Twenty-two men were initiated at this meeting, but ten or a dozen were left over—out in the cold, so to speak. The meeting was an exceptionally notable one, and was followed immediately by a movement to have another just such concatenation held.

Vicegerent Douglas is being actively assisted by such good Hoo-Hoo workers as ex-Vicegerent H. B. Wood, W. A. Hammond, of the Acme Lumber Company; J. W. Far-rior, of the Farrior Lumber Company; H. H. Snell, of Lathrop Lumber Company, and, in fact, by a large percentage of the members at Birmingham.

San Diego, Cal., December 9.

December 9 will see a splendid concatenation at San Diego, Cal., held under the supervision of Vicegerent J. T. Bate, of Los Angeles, Cal. The meeting has, however, been worked up by Mr. H. D. White, of the Western Lumber Company, of San Diego, an enthusiastic private in the ranks of Hoo-Hoo. This will be the first concatenation in the home state of Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo Frank W. Trower, of San Francisco, but arrangements are taking shape for a number of others to occur at various points in that state.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 11, 1912.

Vicegerent J. G. Brannum, of the Northern District of Indiana, announces that his first concatenation will be held at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, Ind., on the afternoon of January 11. This is the concluding day of the annual meeting of the Indiana Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, coincidentally with which is usually held the Indiana Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers' Association. Vicegerent Brannum has begun work on arrangements early, and purposes to make his concatenation a notably successful one.

Des Moines, Iowa.

Vicegerent I. F. Noxon, of the Southern District of Iowa, has already begun work on arrangements for two concatenations to be held in February and March. The first will be in connection with the Southeastern Iowa Lumber Dealers' Association at Des Moines. As soon as dates for the lumber meetings are announced, active work on the two concatenations will begin. In holding both these concatenations, Vicegerent Noxon will be assisted by Vicegerent Joseph Cowan, of the Northern District of Iowa.

Short Notice on This.

Just as The Bulletin goes to press comes a telegram from Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew, newly appointed Vicegerent at Tampa, Fla., asking that trunk be rushel to him for a concatenation to be held Thursday, November 23, at Ocala, Fla. The Bulletin is uninformed as to what circumstances have arisen to cause this concatenation to be held on such short notice, but has had experience with Brother Bartholomew as a Vicegerent before and will bet its bottom dollar that whenever and however the concatenation is held it will be a notably successful and enjoyable one.

Jewelry for Christmas Gifts.

Members desiring to purchase Hoo-Hoo stick pins, brooches, watch charms or souvenir spoons to give to friends for Christmas presents, are requested to shop early. Some belated buyers wait until the last minute and then send a frantic "rush order," which cannot be filled in time for Christmas. The following are points to be remembered: All Hoo-Hoo jewelry is sold for spot cash; each article sold has engraved upon it the Hoo-Hoo number of purchaser, and the engraving takes some little time; jewelers will not do this engraving on the rush days immediately preceding Christmas Eve, and therefore Christmas orders should reach the Scrivenoter's office by December 20 at the outside.

THE DEATH EMERGENCY FUND.

It is hoped every member of the Order has carefully read the statement of receipts and disbursements of this fund as submitted at the last Annual Meeting. This financial statement was incorporated in the booklet reprinted and sent out with the Third Call. The Third Call went out under date of September 27, but not all the notices were mailed for several days. Therefore October 1 has been announced officially as the date of the Third Call, causing the records to close on the Second Call, October 15. This is mentioned here for the reason that it touches a clause in the original plan under which we are operating on which we are making some comments below.

Getting back to the financial statement: The following is a condensed statement showing receipts and disbursements from the beginning to Nov. 22:

Total subscriptions, First Call	$ 7,963 62
Total subscriptions, Second Call.....	5,637 97
	$13,601 59
Total expense First and Second Calls— printing, postage, etc., as reported in detail at twentieth Annual Meet- ing	$1,390 16
21 death claims paid under First Call..	5,250 00
16 death claims paid under Second Call.	4,000 00— 10,640 16
Balance forwarded to Third Call....	$ 2,961 43
Collected Third Call to close of business, November 22	4,134 50
	$ 7,095 93
October 14, 1911. 17,000 "Record Cards" sent with Third Call (invoice Remy- Nance Printing Company, 9-28-11)...	$ 34 50
October 14. Reprinting 15,000 booklets sent out with Third Call (invoice of Remy-Nance Printing Company, 9-28-11)	188 35
October 3. Postage on Third Call.....	150 00
October 16. Refund to subscriber (check No. 23)	2 00
November 15. Claim of S. S. Walker, Groesbeck, Texas	250 00
Balance at close of business, No- vember 22, 1911	$6,471 08—$ 7,095 93

It will be seen that we collected a total of $13,601.59 on the First and Second Calls, established and maintained the proposition for a year on an expense of $1,390.16, and during that period paid 37 death claims, amounting to $9,250.00, and that we had a balance left over of $2,961.43 to carry forward to the Third Call.

Of the expenses incurred last year over two-thirds of the amount shown was incurred in connection with the establishment of the initial fund of $6,000 necessary to make the undertaking operative.

The record so far on the Third Call is exceedingly gratifying, only one death claim has yet been paid under that call, while it will be seen that in a little over a month the total collections have reached $4,134.50. It will be observed, further, that the expense of getting out this Third Call is considerably less than any call heretofore, being only $184.50. This is $34.50 for printing the necessary return cards—records cards, as we call them here—and $150 for postage. The other item of $188.35 is for reprinting a number of the booklet explanatory of the fund and its operations sufficient to send one to each member of the Order. It was felt wise to do this because it was apparent from the correspondence coming into this office that there were many of our members interested in the project who did not fully understand all its details. It was well enough anyway to acquaint the entire membership with how the plan had worked after a year's trial.

A very material saving was effected by sending out the Third Call along with the first notice of Hoo-Hoo dues, and splitting the expense for postage between the parent organization and the Death Fund. It requires just $300 to send out a two-cent letter to all members in good standing.

As stated, only one death claim has so far been paid under the Third Call. As a matter of fact, only five deaths have occurred since August 21—the date of the last death reported at the Annual Meeting. It is a little singular how these deaths run. From August 21 to September 18 there was not a single death, though that was a period of intensely hot weather. On September 18 there was one death reported, and three on September 29. No other death occurred until October 31, and then not one until November 15.

Of course it is barely possible that there will yet be claims to pay under the Second Call, or under the First Call for that matter. It is always possible that a death among the subscribers occurs which is not reported to the Scrivenoter. As a matter of fact, one of the claims paid last spring was not reported for several months.

Some Correspondence With Participants.

The following letter from Brother J. T. Hanson, and the comment made thereon, should be carefully read by every member:

Mauston, Wis., October 28, 1911.—I have your communication of the 18th inst. regarding footnote on my recent letter. I had no thought of fault-finding. What I wished to call your attention to is that a fifteen-days' limit was too short, and that at some annual meeting this time should be extended.

Now, for you to get all those calls out you must have time to do it. Ten days should be allowed you, and that should be added to the time limit, making it twenty-five days.

My idea is that the plan should provide that at the end of thirty days next succeeding the issuance of a call the records are to be closed so far as subscriptions in response to the previous call are concerned. Now, let us see what would happen in the following:

"A" was a wealthy lumberman and subscriber to the fund regularly. A call was made on October 1, 1911; by industrious work his letter could not have been reached before the 10th of October, 1911; he was not at home and did not receive it until the 15th day of October, 1911, at night; that he sent the money on the 16th day of October, 1911, and it reached your office on the 18th day of October, 1911; that on that day, or just previous, his property was all washed away by flood—house, mill, lumber and even the ground on which his property was situated, and himself and family left dependent on the good will of the people (as is just what happened with many people at Black River Falls a few days ago)—what would be the result?

You could not, under the present fifteen-day limit, send the $250.00, could you?

Well, that is the point I was trying to make in that footnote.

I have been an admirer of you ever since you took hold of the work in that office, but never should have told you of it but for what seems to me to have been a misunderstanding.

ing of my meaning in the few (too few, perhaps) words I used to illustrate a point.

Now, as to the above illustration. The destitute family of a just-previously-wealthy lumberman would have been deprived of the $250.00 under the present fifteen-day limit, through no fault of either you or him.

Have I made my point clear? I don't want to be misunderstood.

Sincerely yours,

J. T. HANSON.

It will be seen that the point Brother Hanson raises is that involved in the following clause of the plan under which we are operating:

The designated beneficiaries of those who contribute to the fund may expect payment of the sum named PROVIDED THE DEATH OF THE SUBSCRIBER OCCURS PRIOR TO FIFTEEN DAYS AFTER DATE OF ISSUANCE OF THE NEXT SUCCEEDING REQUEST FOR CONTRIBUTION.

The point Brother Hanson raises in his comment is a good one, and the illustration he cites is convincing. The Scrivenoter is frank to confess that the importance of the matter had not been impressed upon his mind. One or two brief suggestions somewhat similar to the one contained in Brother Hanson's first letter have come in, and perhaps were not given the consideration they deserved.

Brother Hanson has convinced the writer of this that the time limit should be extended for a period of at least twenty-five days—perhaps thirty days, as Brother Hanson suggests. There is not usually much delay in getting out the notices. They are mailed on a mailing machine and can usually be got out in one day. Even if this were not true, the date of the call could be fixed a few days ahead so as to cover the period necessary to do the mailing. That is not so much the point as the fact that a good many of these notices might go astray. Many of our members are traveling men and frequently away from home. Often they do not promptly receive Hoo-Hoo mail. This fact is also true—when a large number of notices are mailed out on a mailing machine there is always a certain percentage returned, the printed address which is pasted on the envelope being miscut by the machine so as to make the address illegible. Sometimes these addresses get pulled off and other things occur causing the mail to be "returned to sender." In the case of these death fund calls, every effort is made to remail these returned letters as promptly as possible, but even with the greatest care that can be given this little point, it is very apt to be the case that quite a number of members will not receive their successive calls in time to remit within the fifteen-day period.

The Bulletin regrets that this point was not clearly raised so as to be submitted at the Annual Meeting. There is small likelihood that there would be objection to making the extension suggested by Brother Hanson. The Bulletin does not see just how it could be formally and legally done except at an Annual Meeting, but it believes that the Supreme Nine, upon having the matter properly brought to its attention, will not hesitate for a moment to make this extension simply as an administrative measure, intended to prevent some good brother, who responded to the new call just as quickly as he knew it had been issued, from being cut out of his participation.

The Scrivenoter will present the matter in a formal way to the Supreme Nine, asking that permission to make this ruling be granted him.

Chance of a Lifetime.

The following is taken from the current issue of Pioneer Lumberman, of San Francisco, of which Brother Wallace Everett is editor:

These are the days of frenzied finance when a man goes to bed worth and feeling like 30 cents. When he wakes up in the morning he finds that Rolph is elected Mayor of San Francisco and that the western metropolis is saved, including himself. He may not be a millionaire, but he will be, provided he is a Hoo-Hoo and reads carefully that which is written here.

The Hoo-Hoo Consolidated, Unlimited, has been formed in California, with papers filed somewhere or other, and the following well-known Hoo-Hoo as the first board of directors: Black Cats, F. W. Trower, A. J. Russell, Earl Riley, W. A. Hammond, Fred Palmer, Walter Wood, Dick Hiscox, Dick Chamberlain and Millionaire Fair. Stanley Dollar is President of the Hoo-Hoo Consolidated, with Jack Prideaux Secretary. The 1911-12 Vicegerent Snark for Northern California will be Collector of Cats and their custodian.

Every Hoo-Hoo in California is invited to purchase stock in the new company, and the following is the letter which will be sent to any interested in the possibilities of the company:

San Francisco, Cal., September 27, 1911.—Dear Brother Hoo-Hoo: Knowing that you, as a member of the Order, have had some interest in the cat business, I take the liberty of presenting you with what seems to me a most wonderful business proposition, and in which, no doubt, you will take a lively interest and perhaps wire me the amount of stock that you wish to subscribe towards the formation of this company.

The object of this company is to operate a large Cat Ranch in or near Oakland, where land can be purchased cheap for this purpose.

To start in with we will collect about, say one hundred thousand (100,000) cats. Each cat will average twelve (12) kittens a year. The skins run from ten cents (10) each for the white ones, to seventy-five cents (75) for the pure black. This will give us twelve million (12,000,000) skins a year to sell, at an average of 30 cents apiece, making our revenue about ten thousand dollars ($10,000) a day, gross.

A man can skin 50 cats per day for two dollars ($2.00). It will take 100 men to operate the ranch, and therefore the net profit will thus be nine thousand eight hundred dollars ($9,800) per day.

We will feed the cats on rats and will start a rat ranch next door. The rats multiply four times as fast as cats. If we start with one million rats (1,000,000) we will have, therefore, four rats per day for each cat, which is plenty.

Now, then, we will feed the rats on the carcasses of the cats, from which the skins have been taken, giving each rat a fourth of a cat.

It will thus be seen that the business will be self-supporting and automatic all the way through. The cats will eat the rats and the rats will eat the cats, and we will get the skins.

Awaiting your reply and trusting that you appreciate the opportunity that I give you and which will get you rich quick, I remain

Yours B. T. O. T. G. S. B. C.,

OAKLAND CAT & FUR COMPANY,

Per M. E. O. W.

In spite of the estimate that in the United States and Alaska there will be at least $100,000,000 in new gold mined every year for some time to come, there is no new gold offered for sale in the United States excepting for the arts. All the gold that comes into the country from Alaska or is mined here is, as soon as the assay can be made, converted into gold certificates, and then passes directly or indirectly into circulation.

NOTES & COMMENTS

The following is a very interesting account of a trans-Atlantic voyage on a "slow" steamer, which, to many people, is far more attractive than a trip on one of the swift ocean greyhounds:

New Orleans, Oct. 10, 1911.—A short description of the delights of a trip I took to my old home in England recently may interest some of your readers, as it was not in the order of things usually pursued by travelers in that direction. Leaving here on one of the passenger freighters and calling at Norfolk for coal (to the traveler who has the time to make a trip of this kind, and who desires a rest) is to be recommended, and one out of which he will get a good deal of enjoyment, and incidentally a little instruction pertaining to the sea and its mysteries that he cannot pick up by the ordinary passage on the trans-Atlantic liner from New York to Europe.

We left here about 5 p. m., and after a pleasant run down the Gulf and up the Atlantic Coast, arrived at Norfolk and left the ship in the hands of the coal man to replenish bunkers for the trip across the Atlantic. This is a time when the voyager will be glad to get away from the ship, for the coal dust filters into everything that is left open and enshrouds the ship, and every man who can gets away during this operation.

The trip across was uneventful except crossing the Arctic current, where the temperature drops for an hour or two below the point pleasant to those who have sojourned in southern climes any length of time, but it is soon over and he feels again the pleasant influence of the Gulf Stream, which is helping him in the matter of temperature, as well as on his way, with its one to two-knot current. We had a couple of bad days nearing the English Channel owing to a visit from that famous "Atlantic roll," which makes you chase your plate on the table, notwithstanding the fact that the table is sectioned off with the fiddles, and you become an acrobat with your knife, fork and spoon or go hungry, in addition to which you become an expert walking a deck which seems constantly trying to rise up and meet you, and if you don't happen to keep your balance, may playfully try and pitch you over the side. However, all good things come to an end and she settles down to that easy riding like you get on those famous horses raised in your country which saddle under you without motion. The trip up the Channel is a pleasant one and the voyager sees many points of interest as he is practically offshore all the time.

We reached the entrance to the New Waterway at Rotterdam at about 9 p. m., sixteen days from Norfolk, and had to anchor owing to its being low water, and lay just where a fine passenger steamer of the Harwich-Hook of Holland line had recently been lost with all hands in a heavy gale in attempting to make the mouth of the river, and she had completely disappeared, but the position had no terrors for us that night, as the sea was quite smooth. We hove anchor next morning at daylight and passed up the river, lined with its quaint houses, and farms and gardens cultivated to a point undreamed of in the United States. Everything looked fresh and green, and the smell of the new mown hay was sweet and delightful after the sea voyage. As you approach the harbor the busy scene of shipbuilding and manufactories close-huddled is surprising after the large areas one sees used in the river here. It is a revelation to see how the shipping is handled in the many harbors, and you wonder how the ships get in and out from the crowded wharves without fouling each other all the time. I made but a short stay in Rotterdam, leaving the night of my arrival, but Rotterdam itself is an interesting place and you can spend pleasantly several days looking over the city intersected with its many canals and full of strange sights. I made the trip from Rotterdam to London by one of the fine boats of the Batavia Line running between these points, and arriving there next morning after a passage with plenty of roll and pitch and the spray flying, got through the customs, always on the lookout for smuggling from the Continent, and taking the tender at Tilbury, got ashore, and an hour later landed right side up in town, finding it with the same old face and manners it had when I left and with a goodly sprinkling of coronation visitors still enjoying the sights. You are struck by the lack of change you see in contrast to what you see in a city in America in an equal length of time, where they are ever on the tear-down and build-up, big things to give way to bigger. Perhaps to me the most notable change was the enlarged underground traction systems, which give access to all parts of the city with rapidity, coolness and comfort, in contrast to the old, slow, smoky steam underground roads that would nearly choke you at some places where the ventilation did not happen to be good. I spent a very pleasant time at home, with the weather ideal throughout, and was loath to leave, but needs must, etc. And I got afloat once more to return via New York by the orthodox route on an orthodox boat with orthodox weather, which did not prove nearly so pleasant or instructive as the trip going out.

The reader will probably ask how will he pass the time and amuse himself on such a passage. Well, that will depend on his temperament. He will probably have one or two fellow passengers with whom he will soon get thoroughly acquainted, and when they get tired of each other's company they can amuse themselves by learning a new trade if they are so inclined, doing painting and other things about the ship of which there is always plenty, and a little work is always a welcome diversion, and it has the advantage that it can be dropped when one tires of it without getting fired for his laziness. He will find the captain and officers generally a good set, with many a good yarn to spin when off duty and always willing to answer questions and give information. So with his fellow passengers' company, his own, which he will want to cultivate more or less, his books and a little work for diversion, and the naps he will find himself so willing to take out of hours (and these occasions will be often, for nothing is more conducive to that pleasant laziness than a sea trip), he will get through the passage with benefit and pleasure. And if he does not step ashore with that feeling of the good ocean traveler—of mixed pleasure and regret at the ending, the latter predominating—then he must have had something more than the non-existent cares of an ocean trip to worry him. (No. 4905.)

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 5, 1911.—Mr. J. H. Baird, Scribe-noter. Dear Brother: I herewith hand you my check for Hoo-Hoo dues for the ensuing year, also including $2 for the third call to the Death Emergency Fund.

As to criticism, I have none to make, for with the slight change made at the annual meeting, I think the plan is as nearly perfect as it can be made. None of us can know who will be the next called from labor to rest, and what our financial condition will be at the time. Two dollars is a very small amount, but $250 in cash would be a very large and acceptable sum to the loved ones of a deceased brother left without means, be the beneficiary a wife and babies, an aged mother or a widowed sister with children to raise.

I was very much struck with a letter from a member in Seattle, Wash., in which he stated that in meeting the new assessment he did so with the same feeling that he would contribute to a floral wreath for the deceased brothers. Sympathy and flowers go a long way to console the grief-stricken loved ones, but an offering in the shape of a $250 check brings to the needy ones a greater realization of the brotherhood of man than anything we can do for them, and I sincerely trust that Hoo-Hoo will never let this floral offering die. I, for one, will always respond cheerfully to every call, even though they come twice as fast as they have so far.

Yours fraternally,
J. M. ADAMS (No. 18281).

Tyler, Fla., Oct. 9, 1911.—Enclosed please find my check for $3.65. The above to dues for next year and third call on Death Emergency Fund.

I have read The Bulletin, with the proceedings of the last annual meeting, and only wish I could have been there. I have never attended one of the annuals yet, but I am living in hopes every year that I will be able to go the next year.

I feel glad to know that you decided to cut your trip down to four days instead of drawing on the funds of the Order, for I believe it would give Hoo-Hoo a black eye to have done so.

There is another thing I am in favor of. That is to have a limit of thirty days before a man can share in the Death Emergency Fund benefits.

There is one thing, though, that I don't want you to ever agree to, and that is stopping the publishing of The Bulletin.

Wishing you all success in coming years' work, I am, as ever,
I. B. VINTON.

It will be remembered that at the annual meeting the only change made in the Death Benefit Fund was the imposing of a sixty-day limit on new subscribers. The meaning of this is that a claim will not be paid when death occurs within sixty days after subscription is made, unless the death be from accident or unless the deceased had responded to previous calls for payment to the fund. Possibly the writer of the foregoing letter had overlooked this point in the report of the Annual.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 7, 1911.—Friend Jim: Just received notice for dues and "Third Call." It is with pleasure that I enclose you my check to cover both. The Death Emergency Fund is the greatest thing Hoo-Hoo has ever done, and will do more to immortalize the Order than anything else. It is more than an insurance feature—it is a manifestation of the Christ principle. It is Love and Charity in their highest attributes. There are possibly several hundred worthy Hoo-Hoo that cannot get insurance at any price, and it is no more than our duty to help them on their way. We are indeed our brother's keeper. If we will do these little things in the proper spirit they will be the means of our finding the kingdom within ourselves. I trust that the members of Hoo-Hoo will never allow this fund to fall by the wayside. So far, you have handled this proposition admirably, and I can think of no suggestions to offer, as I believe the plan to be as nearly perfect as possible. With kindest personal regards and hoping that your years of usefulness may be many, I am

Fraternally yours,
HOMER P. ALLEN (No. 10260).

San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 2, 1911.—I enclose $5.30 in payment of dues for 1911-12, and in response to the third call for the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, which is the first I have received, or I would have been in sooner. I consider it a fine thing, and while I am young and healthy, will sure do my part towards keeping it up. Will also urge every member I run across to do likewise.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. SALTER (No. 22227).

In the August issue of The Bulletin was published some correspondence in regard to the placing of Bibles in hotels by the order known as the Gideons. A member who lives in the State of New York, but who does not desire his name published, writes the following communication:

The Gideons and the Bible.

I am not a Gideon, but I think they are to be commended for putting Bibles into many of the hotels. The great majority of men do not attend church regularly, yet nobody would say it is wrong to build churches on that account. The churches reach some men and there is a distinct gain to whatever extent men are thus reached and helped. Most men will not read the Gideons' Bibles placed in the hotels, but some men will, and if the others would consider how little time it takes to read a chapter many of them would really enjoy a few moments occasionally with the good Book. The fact that all the Gideons know they have placed these Bibles in the hotels ought to inspire each of them to read the Bible more than he otherwise would, and if it does do so, then that is another distinct gain. The country needs good Gideons. Many a man who will not read the Bible will observe the consistent life of a good Gideon, and in that way God may speak to many men. It sounds strange to say it, but a good Gideon is a better advocate for God than an unread Bible. It ought not to sound strange, however, because God does not limit himself to books in speaking to mankind. The one perfect man is called "The Word of God," because through that perfect life God spoke and still speaks to other men. The Gideons are headed right. They certainly have adopted a good guidebook and they are anxious to show it to other men, which is praiseworthy.

As is well known, some of the members have expressed objections to the quality and character of the jokes published in The Bulletin. Recently somebody—who omitted to give his name or number—sent in this collection of jokes clipped from the Christian Register. The date of the paper was not given, but the jokes are supposed to be entirely unobjectionable:

The prayer of Dr. Lyman Beecher was, "O Lord, grant that we may not despise our rulers; and grant, O Lord, that they may not act so we can't help it!"

An Unfinished Poster.—An artist relates that one day he was standing in front of a huge poster which represented a well-known actor in the character of Henry V. Two men strolled by and stopped to look at it. Finally, one of the men turned to his companion with a look of disgust, and asked impatiently, "Henry V.—what?"

"Where's your daughter Mary living now, Mrs. Herlihy?" inquired one of the neighbors. "Her hoosband's got a foine job on the Toimes, reporting accidents," said Mrs. Herlihy, proudly; "and the two av thim and little Moike is living in a suit up-town." "What's a suit?" inquired the neighbor. "A suit," said Mrs. Herhily, slowly, "is one o' thim places where the parlor is the bedroom and the bedroom is the kitchen, and the closets is down in the cellar, and the beds is plannys—or organs, and—well, it's one o' thim places where iverything is something else," concluded Mrs. Herlihy.

The following clipping from the London Daily Mail, of September 28, was sent The Bulletin by Brother W. C. Davie, of London. The members of Hoo-Hoo will doubtless be interested by the account of the "Boojum," which apparently is on the rampage in England:

The pleasant Mid-Sussex country around Burgess Hill, at the foot of the South Downs, is being ravaged by a Boojum. Naturalists owe their knowledge of this vague and mysterious beast to Lewis Carroll, but no living specimen has ever been captured or even seen at close quarters. The Sussex Boojum has been heard howling in a blood-curdling manner in the middle of the night by a number of people, and its howlings have been described in picturesque hearsay terms by thousands of others. But it is never seen. Directly any hunter gets near enough to see it the creature fades away.

It was in Pilbeanis Wood, between Burgess Hill and Ansty, that the first manifestation occurred. In the middle of the night a dreadful howling proceeding from the wood was heard for miles around. Women and children awakened from slumber added their heartrending screams to the noise of horror. On succeeding nights the awful sound broke out. Farmers organized a hunt in the wood and disturbed something which dashed past them in the darkness and disappeared. The hunters got a vague impression of a creature something like a fox, but people who were not present on that occasion were able to give more particular but widely varying descriptions of its terrifying appearance. Its howlings are recognized by some as resembling those of a jaguar, by others as being like the cry of a banshee, only louder.

The strangest circumstance, and one that lends color to the supernatural fears, is the fact that the weird creature commits no depredations. It does not worry the South Down sheep nor kill the plentiful game. It only frightens human beings. The theory that it is a jackal has been advanced by unimaginative people, but it is unsatisfying. There is little doubt that it is a true Boojum, and that it will never be seen by human eyes.

_____, N. Y., Oct. 7, 1911.—An article in the American Lumberman has been brought to my notice—"in regard to Hoo-Hoo."

Almost every other organization has a meeting place where the members can get together, but Hoo-Hoo has none, only once a year, and I am quite confident that not more than four or five from this district attended the last annual out of a membership of 150 or 200. Why is it? My version of it is that there is absolutely no interest taken in it because everyone that goes must bear his own expense. Now, if regular meeting places were organized and a sufficient amount of dues be paid, regular officers for each district, the appointment of delegates could be made to annual meeting and expense borne by the lodge, you would get a larger representation than you do now.

The matter has been talked over frequently among the Past Vicegerents in this district, and at a recent date we have all agreed that if a plan could be devised to harmonize, we will all put our shoulders to the wheel and help it along.

I have nothing but the very kindest feelings toward the present Scrivenoter and the working staff of his office, knowing that to work against such tremendous odds which have been visible for some time is not an easy task. And I stand ready with others to assist in any way for betterment of the Order.

Fraternally yours,
No. 10850.

The following letter was crowded out of the September Bulletin owing to the fact that there was more matter for that issue than our space could accommodate:

Office of Auburn Lumber Co., East Auburn, Cal., Aug. 31, 1911.—Harry J. Miller, Snark of the Universe: In response to your circular letter in The Bulletin, have to say that I should like very much to attend the annual meeting this year, but it will be impossible for me to do so.

I have no suggestions, criticisms or complaints to offer. It appears to me that the Death Emergency Fund is a splendid feature and should be continued. It helps somewhat to keep up interest in the Order and it furnishes a small amount of insurance at a much less rate than the old line companies charge.

I am not in favor of reducing the size of The Bulletin. If it is necessary to reduce expenses, I would rather dispense with the handbook, but if the funds permit, would favor continuing to publish a limited number.

By experimenting a little, the officers ought to be able to determine the best way to collect the dues, but really I cannot see how it can be done any cheaper than by mailing a notice to each member personally. Perhaps a notice published in The Bulletin a little ahead of time would bring in many payments. There is such a notice in the August Bulletin, but it does not state the amount, and I must confess that I am not sure of the amount, so cannot remit until I receive a notice.

Fraternally,
E. T. ROBBIE (No. 25478).

From time to time a member of Hoo-Hoo bumps into politics. A recent letter received at the Scrivenoter's office contained the following paragraph:

You probably have not noticed that two cats have been caught in the political net. Governor Wilson, of Kentucky, appointed John E. Garner, No. 17656, and W. R. Waters, No. 16304, as members of the Kentucky State Board of Equalization and Assessment in 1908, each to serve four years. They have written their names into Kentucky tax history—be it good or bad.

As is well known, Brother Sam R. Guyther, No. 4916, is never satisfied. He has always objected to the Egyptian border on the front page of The Bulletin, as well as to everything else in the way of artistic embellishment of the paper. The following is his latest outburst:

Patterson, Bayou Teche, La., Aug. 27, 1911.—Dear Mr. Jimbaird: That ship on the cover of the August Bulletin is "perfectly all right." Hope you have destroyed the plates that make the pictures of those flat people carrying bark on their heads. Now, if you cut out the petrified mummies standing at each end of The Bulletin you will be nearly "perfectly all right."

SAM R. GUYTHER.

The following clipping is from the Smithwick, South Dakota, "Sentinel," of August 8. The Mr. Chase mentioned is Hoo-Hoo No. 13407, ex-Vicegerent of Nebraska. He had been "sworn in" as deputy sheriff for the day and had no intention of taking up Indian chasing as a side line for a lumber salesman:

An exciting automobile chase after Indians was pulled off in the vicinity of Smithwick Tuesday morning when Deputy Sheriff A. H. Jensen, in company with J. Weston Chase, of Lincoln, Neb., who was also deputized, captured one Ben Redbear, an Indian, who was wanted at Hot Springs on a charge of burglary.

A bunch of Indians came into town Monday and camped nearby. Tuesday morning one of the bunch took a new Colt's automatic revolver to the blacksmith to have him replace a missing part. A message was received here from the Springs inquiring for the Indians and upon receiving the information the blacksmith was instructed to be as long as possible at the job of fixing the gun, as it was stolen property and officers were on their way to arrest the thief. The Indians, however, became suspicious and fled to the east, where, a few miles out, more Indians were camped. Then a chase followed. The Indians were overtaken just as they reached the camp. After a little gun display, but fortunately no shooting, Mr. Redbear was furnished a seat in the car and a free ride to the Springs.

The Indian is charged with having broken into a car on the Burlington and stealing the gun, which is the property of an employee.

The following letters exemplify the old saying that a wise man sometimes changes his mind. It happens occasionally, of course, that for business reasons a man resigns his membership in Hoo-Hoo and that afterwards, when those conditions no longer obtain, he feels inclined to come back into the Order. The first letter was written under date of September 2 last:

I enclose you herewith check in the amount of $1.65, covering my dues for 1911. In putting myself in good standing, I would request that you mail me withdrawal card from the Order, as I do not desire to longer continue my membership at the present time.

Under date of October 6 the same brother writes:

Dear Brother Baird: I enclose my check for $1.65 in payment of annual dues to September 9, 1912. I have concluded to continue my membership in Hoo-Hoo for awhile, even though as a railroad man I do not come in contact with the trade most interested in this organization. I have, however, never found anything but the highest type fellows belonging to this organization, and I have concluded to continue my affiliation with them.

I would ask that you kindly change your record of my address to read _____.

I formerly used to receive The Bulletin and found some very interesting reading therein. My understanding is that a member in good standing is entitled to this publication, and if I am correct, would be glad to have you see that it is sent me regularly.

With kind personal regards, believe me,

Vicegerent R. A. Whitlock, of the Western District of Texas, newly appointed a few weeks ago for about the fourth time, as The Bulletin recalls it, held a splendid concatenation at El Paso on October 19. Vicegerent Whitlock has made several efforts to get out of the Vicegerency at El Paso, but every time he starts something of that nature the protests are so numerous and vigorous that he is finally overruled and, like the good man he is, submits to the will of the majority. The successfulness and notableness of his meeting of October 19 cannot be better put forth than in the following characteristic letter from Brother Whitlock. It is interesting to note that there is a great big new lumber concern going to put its headquarters at El Paso, and that Brother Whitlock says he is going to hold in about six months the best concatenation we "ever heard of." We have heard of some pretty good concatenations, but if Brother Whitlock sets his head to break all records he is very likely to do it.

Returning to Brother Whitlock's letter, he says:

My report shows twelve nice clean candidates, and I am proud of them. We had a parade last Thursday, had a squad of police in the lead, then a band, then a carriage, and then the Hoo-Hoo, other floats following, which made the line about half a mile long. Held this parade in conjunction with an Arizona and New Mexico jubilee celebration, and there were about 5,000 people to witness the line, much red fire and lots of electric lights. Thought I would join this parade they were getting up; do not know if I was on the right side in doing it; anyhow, it is over and all feel fine.

I am going to pull off the best concatenation in about six months you ever heard of. Am now figuring on it. The big Pearson interests are going to open up here and employ about 500 men, many of whom we can get. I was talking to the manager, Mr. Leaver, this morning, and he said, "You bet we will get them." Mr. Leaver was one of our kittens on the 19th.

Had the eats and trimmings before the concatenation, and it was and is the best way to have it. Had a big banner, 5 feet square, painted with a black cat on either side; put it in the end of a 8x8-24 on a wagon, then put the kittens on the 8x8; had them with white gowns and white caps.

I am in receipt of my commission for 1911-12, and will do in the future just the same as I have done in the past—my best. Am not going to make any promises, but will take the conditions as they show themselves; and say, Baird, do you know we have a good live bunch in Hoo-Hoo out here now; all young blood and good boys, and, further, they are willing to help. I have done less at this meeting than I ever did; had a meeting and appointed the committees and told them to go to it, and they did.

OBITUARY.

Matthew Harris (No. 4130).

The report of the death of Brother Matt. Harris, which occurred August 14, 1911, has just reached this office.

Brother Harris was born at Blue River, Wisconsin, June 11, 1842. When only nine years of age he removed to California. Gradually working his way upward he became a partner in the firm of Harris & Jones. Later he was partner in the firm of Van Arsdale-Harris Lumber Co., which came to be known as one of the foremost lumber concerns in San Francisco. Just after the great fire of 1906 Brother Harris retired from active business, leaving the management to his sons and their business associates.

Brother Harris took active interest in civic and political circles, serving as supervisor of the city of San Francisco, also of that county at the time of his death.

Possessed of a strong personality, Brother Harris won many friends in business and elsewhere. He took active interest in the three fraternal orders to which he belonged, the Masonic Order, the Order of Odd Fellows, and Hoo-Hoo, becoming a member of the last named at San Francisco, California, April 9, 1896.

James Franklin Cummings (No. 17764).

In October issue of The Bulletin was printed a brief notice of the death of Brother James F. Cummings.

Below are further particulars, received after the October Bulletin went to press.

Brother James F. Cummings died on Thursday morning, September 27, 1911, at his home in Weston, W. Va., after a brief illness caused from paralysis.

Brother Cummings was born April 7, 1845, in Lewis County, Virginia (now West Virginia), and resided in this section most of his life, except for a few years spent in Kansas. For the past twenty years he had been connected with some of the leading lumber companies of the state of West Virginia in the capacity of inspector and manager.

Brother Cummings was a member of the Baptist Church, and the funeral services were conducted from his home.

The pallbearers were members of Hoo-Hoo. A widow and seven children survive Brother Cummings.

Mrs. George H. Anthony.

Hoo-Hoo deeply sympathizes with Brother George H. Anthony (No. 4666) in the loss of his beloved wife, who died at Monrovia, California, October 14, 1911.

Mrs. Anthony was born at Allegheny, Pennsylvania, August 29, 1853.

Funeral services were held at Monrovia, and the interment took place at Evergreen Cemetery, Los Angeles, California.

Mrs. Anthony was greatly beloved by all who knew her for her fine character. During her severe illness she showed wonderful fortitude and careful consideration for those around her.

John T. Donovan.

The many friends of Brother John T. Donovan, of Paducah, Ky., deeply sympathize with him in the loss of his son Frank S. Donovan, who died at Endee, N. Mex., October 30. The young man was but twenty-three years of age, and was entering upon a very promising career when ill health compelled him to seek a change of climate, and for months prior to his death he had been in the west in the hope of finding renewed strength in the dry atmosphere of the high desert country. At college Mr. Donovan was fond of athletics, and took an active interest in baseball and football. He was possessed of a sunny disposition, and had a wide circle of friends. With him at the time of his death were his parents and sister. The body was taken to Paducah, where the funeral and interment took place.

Sidney Sherman Walker (No. 1687).

Brother S. S. Walker died of apoplexy at his home, Groesbeck, Texas, November 12, 1911. He was born near Booneville, Texas, September 5, 1844.

When very young Brother Walker removed to Limestone County, Texas, where he remained throughout his life. At the age of eighteen Brother Walker joined the Confederate Army, Company I, Second Texas Cavalry, Major's brigade. During the two years' service he escaped without a wound. After the war he helped restore law and order, and in 1880 removed from Mexia to Groesbeck, where he established a lumber business in which he was successfully engaged thirty-one years under the name of S. S. Walker & Sons.

Brother Walker was a most generous and public-spirited citizen and numbered his friends by the score. He was a member of A. F. and A. M., Knights of Pythias, Woodmen of the World, K. of H. and joined Hoo-Hoo at Dallas, Texas, April 11, 1894. He was also a participant in the Death Emergency Fund.

Funeral services were held at the residence and the interment was at Faulkenberry Cemetery, under the auspices of the Masons.

Erastus Cole Knight, Jr. (No. 23344).

Brother E. C. Knight, Jr., died at Bogalusa, La., August 5, 1911. The remains were sent to Buffalo, N. Y., his former home and interred in Forest Lawn Cemetery. He was born at Buffalo, N. Y., March 3, 1887. The death of so young a man causes the deepest regret.

At the time of his initiation, which occurred at Bogalusa, La., August 14, 1909, Brother Knight was connected with the Great Southern Lumber Company, of Bogalusa. He was connected with that company at the time of his death. He was a member of a well-known family of New York, his father serving as Mayor of Buffalo.

A lumberman was wrecked on a desert island in the Pacific Ocean and was slowly starving. Each day he walked the beach and searched the horizon for a sail. But he saw no sail, and Lord knows we know how hard it is to have day after day go by without a sail. Then he had an inspiration. He decided to write a message on a piece of paper, place it in a bottle and cast it adrift, in the hope that some vessel would find it floating and pick it up and come to the rescue. Being a lumberman, he had the bottle. He went down into his pocket after a piece of paper on which to write the message, and all he found was a fire insurance policy. He started to read it, and found enough provisions in it to last him six months.—London Insurance Post.

Got Promptly to Work.

In announcing the appointment of Brother L. A. Bartholomew, of Tampa, Fla., Vicegerent for the Southern District of Florida, The Bulletin is pleased at the opportunity of according him fuller credit than he has ever received for good work done in past years. Brother Bartholomew served a term as Vicegerent at Tampa for the year ending September 9, 1908, and did good work during this period. In November, 1908, his successor was appointed, but Brother Bartholomew went right ahead with the work of the office and is the man who held the splendid concatenation at Tampa on February 20, 1909, when fifteen men were initiated, probably the best concatenation ever held in the State of Florida. In the Scrivenoter's annual report for that year credit for this year was inadvertently given to the new appointee, when all of the work was done by Brother Bartholomew.

In accepting this new appointment, Brother Bartholomew evinces his continued interest in the welfare of Hoo-Hoo by promptly announcing a concatenation which will occur just as The Bulletin goes to press, and which will be reported next month.

Brother Bartholomew is in the lumber business at Tampa, and has a wide acquaintance with men throughout the southern portion of the State.

Are you preparing for your rainy day? Remember a time is coming when your relatives will ask in a tired, disgusted way: "Why does he hang on so long!"

A PLEASING INCIDENT PLEASANTLY RECALLED.

All our members who took part in the now celebrated lake cruise will recall with much pleasure the entertainment given us by the citizens of Owen Sound, especially the soiree given the men of the party at the Owen Sound Club and the reception tendered the ladies at the residence of Mrs. E. Lemon.

Immediately after reembarking at Owen Sound a little meeting was held at which it was determined that some token of our appreciation should be secured and sent these good people. Ex-Snark W. A. Hadley was entrusted with carrying out the resolutions then and there adopted. The following pleasing correspondence will show how admirably and gracefully he has executed the commission and will recall to the minds of all who made the trip a most pleasing incident:

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 25, 1911.—Messrs. Keenan Bros., Owen Sound, Ont.—Gentlemen: You will receive in the course of a few days a package from Hamilton containing a silver loving cup and a sandwich tray which I will ask you to present in behalf of the members whose names you will find enclosed herewith, in the following manner:

The sandwich tray is to be presented to Mrs. Lemon with the accompanying letter, which explains fully why it is being sent, and then present to the Owen Sound Club the loving cup as a slight expression of the appreciation of the members whose names and addresses you will find attached herewith of the many courtesies extended by your own good selves and the citizens of Owen Sound and the members of the Owen Sound Club to the members of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo on their visit to your most hospitable city on September 10 last, being one of the days of their trip up the lakes on the occasion of their annual meeting.

After leaving your city and partaking of your hospitality every one expressed themselves in terms of highest praise on your cordiality, stating further that never before had the Order of Hoo-Hoo received such a magnificent reception from any city that it had been privileged to visit, and while a few members who subscribed to this slight remembrance desired to send something more tangible, we hope that what has been sent will be received in the spirit in which it has been sent and not from its value, and in no way is to be considered a full expression of their appreciation.

No attempt was made to get up a suitable souvenir by canvassing the members, but this little expression was made possible by those whose names are attached, happening to meet the evening we left Owen Sound, and they and they only were permitted to assist in this expression to the Owen Sound Club.

We send you this with the hope that the club will long live to fill such a useful place as it apparently does in the entertainment of visitors, to your own good selves and your good city. Let me personally thank you as a Canadian for the delightful time you gave all our members who were principally from the United States, and would say that I feel doubly honored.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) W. A. HADLEY,
In behalf of the Committee.

Owen Sound, Ont., Nov. 2, 1911.—Mr. W. A. Hadley, Chatham, Ont.—Dear Mr. Hadley: In due time your esteemed favor of the 23d came to hand, and the day following your magnificent presents to the club and to Mrs. Lemon were also received. How the writer happened to let the occasion go by without acknowledging same at once is more than he knows, unless it was that the magnificence of the gift made him lose his powers of speech, and consequently would not be able to properly express himself until the club had the pleasure which it did have since of filling the goblet to the brim and sampling the contents.

Needless to say to you on our behalf that we are more than astonished at your remembrance of our town's expression of good will to you and your associates on your recent visit here. We had not thought that you were going to remember us in any such way, and the writer can only express to you the many kind things that were said by our club members when the presentation was made to them.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemon also expressed themselves as being delighted with the gift, as indeed they might be, and you will probably hear from them direct. In the meantime this letter of acknowledgment will let you know that the gifts were received, and properly presented, and this will be your token of thanks until the directors meet in due form to acknowledge the gift, which will be shortly.

Personally we are very glad to have helped in showing Canadian hospitality in this northern land of ours to our guests from the United States, and possibly of letting some of them see that the United States is not quite the whole thing in the western hemisphere. Yours very truly,

KEENAN BROS., LIMITED,
Per J. E. Keenan.

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 23, 1911.—Dear Madam: A few of the members of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo met on the boat after our delightful visit to your hospitable city and decided to express to you our sincere appreciation of the many courtesies extended by yourself and the other Owen Sound ladies to the ladies of our party, and would ask that you accept this sandwich plate as a slight reminder of our visit to your hospitable home, and kindly extend to the ladies of your committee our very kindest remembrances.

W. A. HADLEY,
Acting for these members.

To Mrs. E. Lemon, Owen Sound, Ont.

Owen Sound, Oct. 28, 1911.—Dear Mr. Hadley: I wish to convey my sincere thanks to you and the members of your Order whose names you enclosed for the beautiful sandwich plate you sent me.

Mr. Lemon and I were delighted to open our home and felt amply repaid by the pleasure they all seemed to derive from it, and the nice things we have heard since, but such a charming and unexpected surprise as this makes it hard to express.

The ladies who assisted me and myself enjoyed meeting you all so much, and hope a return visit of your Order will be made sometime in the near future, and it is a great pleasure for me to extend your thanks to them.

Hoping you and Mrs. Hadley may soon again visit our town and we may be able to have you to our home and renew a meeting which I trust is a friendship.

Kindest regards to Mrs. Hadley, and again thanking you for your kind remembrances.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) FRANCES LEMON.

OUR VICEGERENTS

Ed Leech (No. 9707).

Brother Ed Leech, No. 9707, Vicegerent Snark for the Central District of Kansas, is a product of the great South-west. His childhood and early youth were spent on a farm in Oklahoma, but after he had arrived at the age of manhood and after having vainly endeavored to make two blades of grass grow where only one had grown before, he decided that by temperament and inclination he was adapted to a broader career than that afforded by agriculture. He, therefore, ceased to dig in the ground and applied himself to the cultivation of his mind; to this end he read through the entire family library, which is said to have consisted of Gaskell's Compendium of Forms, The Royal Path of Life, and the Farmers' Encyclopedia. With the wide range of information afforded by these volumes, Mr. Leech speedily outgrew his narrow environment. Meditating on the fact that up to this point the extent of his dissipation and enjoyment of high life was the devouring of a piece of custard pie and a cup of coffee at Dad White's restaurant, he determined to strike out and see the world. Accordingly he went to Guthrie, Okla. Arriving in that dizzy city he struck as rapid a pace as was possible on the available recently reappointed Vicegerent for Southern District of California, and who will hold a concatenation at San Diego, Cal., on December 9th.

J. T. BATE, of Los Angeles, Cal.,

to take the position as manager of that particular yard. Brother Leech, however, had the hardihood to accept the place and he continued in the capacity of manager for some years, finally resigning to accept a position "on the road." His first connection as traveling salesman was with the Kirby Lumber Co., of Houston, Texas. He next represented the Redwood Manufacturers Co. of Black Diamond, Cal., together with Mr. C. J. Flack. Brother Leech traveled over a large portion of the United States introducing California redwood, using a moving picture machine to illustrate the merits of that wood and the various uses to which it can be put. For the past three years Brother Leech has represented the Dibert, Stark & Brown Cypress Co., in Northern Kansas. Brother Leech is also a member of the firm of Bennett & Leech Lumber Co., owning and operating yards at Wellsville and Weatherby, Mo.

Mr. Leech has devoted considerable time and work to the welfare of Hoo-Hoo, and the promoting of its interests in various ways. He has the faculty of remembering words with exceptional accuracy, and is one of the few members in the Order who can deliver the charges and put on the work without the use of the Ritual. He was initiated at Oklahoma City, November 22, 1902. Brother Leech is now serving the second term as Vicegerent Snark, having been first appointed in November, 1910.

I. F. Noxon (No. 18274).

Brother I. F. Noxon, No. 18274, Vicegerent Snark for Southern District of Iowa, was born July 16, 1879, in Stanislaw County, Cal. At an early age he left the Golden West and most of his school days were spent in Kingston, Ont., Canada. From the Pacific Coast to an Eastern Province in Canada is somewhat of a jump, but the young man on leaving school took a step barkward, geographically speaking, and entered the lumber business in Duluth, Minn. In 1898 he took a position with the St. Louis Lumber Company, and continued with that concern for five years, being general superintendent of their two plants when their timber was cut out. He went to Louisiana in 1904 and entered the employ of the Louisiana Cypress Lumber Company at Harvey, La., in the capacity of shipping clerk. He continued with that concern one year, at the end of which time he became connected with the Cypress Selling Company, now the Louisiana Red Cypress Company, of New Orleans. He had charge of the order department for two years, when he took a position with Lutcher & Moore Cypress Lumber Company, of Lutcher, La., becoming Iowa sales agent for that concern at Des Moines, Ia., his present location.

this year. Brother Noxon has done good work for Hoo-Hoo, and his present term as Vicegerent bids fair to promote greatly the interests of the Order in his district. He expects to hold a concatenation in February when the Southeastern Iowa Lumber Dealers' Association meets, the date of which is soon to be decided. He also has arranged to hold a concatenation in Des Moines in March, during the meeting of the Central Iowa Lumber Dealers' Association.

A Belated Credit.

In the Scrivenoter's annual report of concatenations held last Hoo-Hoo year, an injustice was done Brother N. H. Huey, Vicegerent of the Western District of Missouri, or, more properly speaking, there was a failure to do his good work full justice. Before being appointed Vicegerent at Kansas City, to which point Brother Huey removed from Wichita, Kans., in November last, he was Vicegerent for Western District of Kansas, and as such, of course, held over until his successor was appointed and took charge. During this holdover interval Brother Huey held a splendid meeting at Wichita on October 21, 1910, where twenty-five men were initiated. In the annual report of course this had to go to the credit of Western District of Kansas, but there should have been a footnote showing by whom the meeting was held and that the meeting was not properly a credit to the new Vicegerent, who was not appointed until after the Wichita meeting.

But for this oversight the annual report would have shown Brother Huey to have had two concatenations with a total initiation of fifty-seven men, which would have put him in fourth place among the Vicegerents for work done.

Germany is much pleased with the completion of a German submarine cable connecting the Fatherland with Brazil and the German settlements in that republic. The stretch from Emden to Teneriffe was laid in 1909, that to Monrovia in Liberia in 1910, and now the cable end has been landed at Pernambuco.

How to Quit Smoking.

Do not light the first cigar less than half an hour after breakfast. The more difficult this delay may be, the more need there is for a cure. The remainder of the day, smoke the same as usual. It is only the first cigar with which we are dealing. Keep this up for a week then lengthen the intervals to an hour for another week, then make it one and a half hours, two and a half, and so on. If you have an "all gone" sensation, a longing for something-and-don't-know-what-sort of feeling, eat an orange, or apple, or almost any kind of fruit, but don't smoke until the time is up! The nerves being deprived of their morning stimulant, are crying for nourishment, which nature is hastening to supply through increased appetite to supply digestion. By the time the first cigar is entirely eliminated, the cure is effected with no serious derangement of the heart or digestive apparatus. It now requires only a moderate will power to make the cure permanent.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE HOO-HOO JEWELRY

PRICES.

No. 1, (Wishbone).....	$6.00
No. 2, (Horseshoe).....	6 50
No. 3, (Crescent).....	8 00
No. 4, (Clover Leaf).....	12 00
No. 5, (Bar).....	4 00
Souvenir Spoon.....	3 00

THE SOUVENIR SPOON.

The out gives but a faint idea of its beauty and artistic elegance. In addition to bearing the Hoo-Hoo emblem, it is adorned with nine cat-tails, such as grow in the marshes in the South, enameled in the natural color of brown, with green leaves. The workmanship is of the highest quality. It is no cheap affair, but is hand-painted, and hand-enameled. This spoon itself is sterling gilt, which means that it is sterling silver, plated with gold. To all intents and purposes it is a gold spoon. The price is about right, I think, considering what you get.

THE HOO-HOO BROOCHES.

In addition to being artistic and beautiful, these are all "lucky" pins, and I guarantee them to bring success to the purchaser and make his wish come true, provided he wishes for the right thing, and is willing to work.

The simple "bar" brooch is recommended as a present to a practical-minded girl. It carries with it a suggestion of solid worth and is calculated to impress her with the idea that you are about as good a chance, all things considered, as she will be likely to get. The WISHBONE design was made with a view to marrying-off the confirmed bachelors of Hoo-Hoo. THE HORSESHOE PIN is the luckiest of all. It will be observed that this horseshoe is not the old-fashioned kind, such as a common "plug" would wear, but is the up-to-date shoe worn by a running horse. It is, therefore, symbolic of the speedy realization of the purchaser's brightest dreams. The CRESCENT PIN is intended for presentation to a romantic maiden, and may be accompanied by a speech about the moon—"the inconstant moon that monthly changes in its circled orb"—and entreaty that her love be not likewise variable. The CLOVER-LEAF PIN is for widowers with children, who are trying to marry young girls. It is absolutely irresistible—"a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The clover-leaf has a border of Roman gold, with the center enameled in the natural clover green. Any one of these pins would make an appropriate present from a man to his wife. The horseshoe pin might prove effective as a present to one's mother-in-law, as it would carry with it a delicate hint to "walk away."

THE HOO-HOO GRIP TAG.

This, also is guaranteed to bring good luck to any traveling man and to keep him from journeying on the downhill road towards failure or disaster. It will be seen that lost grips with this tag on them will probably be sent in to me. In every such case the greatest secrecy will be maintained as to the contents. If your bag contains only a collar button and your other pair of socks, nothing will be said to humiliate you. Price 99 cents, and cheap at the money.

THE LADIES' PIN.

I have yet to see a lady, old or young, who did not want one of these pins the minute she saw it. To have these pins in the hands of pretty women—and a good Hoo-Hoo knows no other sort—is the best possible advertisement for the Order. Every Hoo-Hoo ought to buy one of these pins, have his number engraved on it, and give it to some good woman. Price $1.50 by registered mail—$1.50, flat, if taken f. o. b., Nashville. Loosen up, boys, and give the women a chance.

THE HOO-HOO WATCH CHARM.

The new design being alike on both sides, it will never hang "wrong side out." The edges are smooth, which is also a great advantage.

PRICE $7.50 PREPAID.

We once had a most beautiful design, to which we thought there could be no possible objection. It had, however, some sharp points, and numerous kicks began to reach us from married brothers who said the charm "scratched the baby's legs all up." This watch charm is perfectly harmless, as well as very beautiful, besides being appropriately suggestive of Egypt, the birthplace of Hoo-Hoo. That part of the design which looks like the top of a gate or door represents the "Propylon." The Propylon was the great gateway erected in front of the temple of Osiris. It was massive in proportion and rich in sculptural design and inscriptions. In shape it was like the pylons of the temple, from which it took its name. It served as a kind of introduction to the temple, and beyond it was sacred ground. From beneath its portal, on account of its position, the temple in all its glory was seen. Leading from it was the sacred way, bordered on each side by the recumbent sphynx. Once a year, when the earth in its circuit around the sun had reached a certain point in the ecliptic, the rays of the rising sun, cutting across the desert, shone through the great Propylon down the avenue of sphynx into and down through the temple until it lighted up the place of the Most Holy and glittered on the gilded horns of the sacred bull—and the Egyptian new year had begun. The rest of the design is made up of a continuous border of the lotus, symbolic of the resurrection—the lotus sleeps and awakens. The Egyptians believed that their spirits would return to earth after a lengthy sojourn elsewhere and that they would inhabit their old bodies—hence mummies. (You don't have to remember all this, if you buy the charm, but ought to.)

Now, then, none of this Hoo-Hoo jewelry will be sold to other than members in good standing, and only for cash. There is a profit in it to the manufacturer, but none to Hoo-Hoo. It is handled for the accommodation of our members and the good of the Order. None of it will be sold without the buyer's number. Address all orders to J. H. BAIRD, Scribner, Nashville, Tenn.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE.

The men whose Hoo-Hoo names appear in the notices below are out of work and want employment. This is intended as a permanent department of The Bulletin, through which to make these facts known. It is, or should be, read by several thousand business men who employ labor in many varied forms, and it can be made of great value in giving practical application to Hoo-Hoo's central theme of helping one another. It is hoped the department will receive very careful attention each issue.

Some of our members advertising in The Bulletin fail to advise me when they have secured positions, so an old ad keeps running for months and months. To avoid this I have adopted the plan of running the ads as long as three months and then if I have heard nothing from the advertiser I will cut his ad out. If at the end of the three months he still wishes me to continue it, he must advise me.

VOL. XVIII.

NASHVILLE, TENN., DECEMBER, 1911

No. 194

THOMAS PATTERSON, Hamilton, Ont., Canada,
Supreme Bojum.

A MONTHLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF HOO-HOO

J. H. BAIRD, Scrivenoter, Editor.

Published Monthly by the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, at Nashville, Tennessee.

Entered at the Postoffice at Nashville, Tennessee, as second class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year.....66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

THE BULLETIN is the only official medium of Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo recognized by the Supreme Nine, and all other publications are unauthentic and unauthorized.

NASHVILLE, TENN., DECEMBER, 1911.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

Concatenations will come in thick and fast after the first of the year. The Bulletin does not easily recall when there have been so many and such good meetings in prospect. It makes the following announcements of meetings for which definite dates have been fixed:

Indianapolis, January 10, 1912.

This meeting will be held by Vicegerent J. G. Brannum, and will occur at the Claypool Hotel in connection with the big Retail Lumber Dealers' Association meeting. All lumbermen in the central part of the country are familiar with this annual round-up of the Indiana retail lumbermen and their friends and coadjutors. The occasion is always one for an immense gathering. Brother Brannum has begun work early on his meeting, with the determination to make it more than ordinarily successful.

Toledo, Ohio, January 6, 1912.

This meeting has been announced by Brother Frank Spangler, of the Frank Spangler Company, the well-known hardwood concern of Toledo. Brother Spangler was only recently appointed Vicegerent, but he got immediately to work, has rounded up several delinquent members at Toledo, and has all arrangements well in hand for this meeting of the 6th. He expects to have a good class.

Denver, Col., January 16, 1912.

This meeting will be held by Vicegerent William R. McFarland, recently appointed Vicegerent. It will be the regular annual Denver concatenation. Our members there always hold one meeting some time during the winter, and always hold it right. Vicegerent McFarland writes that Hoo-Hoo has a large and enthusiastic membership in that territory, and that the meeting is to be the usual success, both as to attendance and number of initiates. The meeting will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the Colorado retailers.

Kansas City, Mo., January, 1912.

This meeting will be held by Vicegerent N. H. Huey. His very successful concatenation of last January will be easily recalled. Prior to that time Brother Huey had already established an enviable record as one of the Vicegerents for the year before in Kansas. He writes to say that he has a "good, live bunch working on the meeting." The concatenation is to occur in connection with the annual meeting of the Southwestern Lumber Dealers' Association. Brother Huey is just starting on a business trip to the Pacific coast, but will return in ample time to look after this meeting.

Lincoln, Neb., January 10-11, 1912.

The Nebraska Lumber Dealers' Association will hold its annual meeting at Lincoln on the dates named above, and in connection therewith a big concatenation will be held. Most probably that old, time-tried and fire-tested Hoo-Hoo, Brother Mell Eaton, will be in charge, assisted by ex-Vicegerent Bird Critchfield, from of old Secretary of the Retailers' Association, and now President of the Empire Lumber Company, of Lincoln.

Brother Critchfield, in writing about this meeting, has this to add: "Be you assured that we are all ready and willing out here to stand by the Order, notwithstanding the little free advertising that has been accorded us by the press." The Bulletin hopes this free advertising will continue. The more the merrier. It's the best investment Hoo-Hoo ever made—in more ways than one.

Lake Charles, La.

No date has been set for this meeting, but the movement is well under way to hold a big roundup there—one of the old-time, fun-producing, clean-cut, but nevertheless jolly Texas concatenations.

Orange, Texas.

All that is said above with reference to Lake Charles applies here. A staunch little body of old-time members of the Order have put their shoulders to the wheel and are determined on a rousing concatenation. The exact date will be announced before the end of the year.

Hinton, W. Va.

This meeting will occur during the first week in February, and will be held by Vicegerent James Morrison, of the Southern District of West Virginia. There are three other Vicegerents in West Virginia. The plan is for all these other Vicegerents to now chime in with dates for their meetings, it being the intention to so arrange such a sequence that the same men can attend all, especially the Supreme Representative.

Los Angeles, Cal.

This meeting will be held by Vicegerent J. T. Bate, "about the first of the year," to quote his letter. Brother Bate writes that he has just returned from a trip over to San Diego, and that Brother White will hold his concatenation there on December 16, having postponed it from an earlier date because he could not secure a proper hall.

Hoo-Hoo, Beware.

Two members of the Order have reported to The Bulletin being victimized in small amounts by a person giving his name as A. J. Somerville and claiming Seattle, Wash., as his home. No such man has ever been a member of Hoo-Hoo, but on one occasion the man now complained of gave the Hoo-Hoo number 13272. This is a man who was initiated under the name of William Somerville, Jr., at St. Louis, Mo., on October 1, 1904. He soon became delinquent for dues and was suspended, and for several years his whereabouts have not been known. The person now complained of appears to have a Hoo-Hoo button bearing the number 13272, but whether he has surreptitiously come into possession of this button and assumed a name similar to that of the man to whom it was originally issued, or whether he is the man initiated as William Somerville, Jr., is not known.

The man made his appearance at Memphis early in November, where he victimized at least one member of the Order. He was next heard of a few days ago, when he repeated the offense at Temple, Tex. In both instances he represented himself as connected with a lumber concern at Seattle, to which point he was returning from a business trip. Undoubtedly this man is a fraud.

STATEMENT OF DEATH FUND.

Below is a statement of the Death Fund to date. It will be seen that only two claims have been paid in the nearly thirty days that have elapsed since the last Bulletin was issued. As a matter of fact, however, one more death has occurred. Brother Henry M. Bush (No. 14509), of Portland, Ore., died on November 26, but, as his Record Card named his estate as beneficiary, payment of the claim cannot be made until the administrator is appointed.

Of the two claims that are to be paid, it will be seen that one is that of Brother W. B. Judson (No. 624), one of the best known members of the Order, of whose death a more extended notice appears elsewhere. Brother Judson took much interest in the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, writing to commend it as soon as the plan was announced. He wrote again only a few days before his death expressing the belief that this fund constitutes an ample justification of the perpetuation of Hoo-Hoo, and expressing the hope that "next year" more of the members would become participants.

In "Notes and Comments" appear some remarks about the Death Fund that may be of interest.

Personal Mention.

Ex-Vicegerent J. W. Chase, of Lincoln, Neb., where he is connected with the Polleys Lumber Company, writes The Bulletin a brief note from Miles City, Mont. While Brother Chase does not say so, The Bulletin assumes he is on a visit to his company's mill at Missoula, Mont. He adds a little postscript to his letter to say that this mill has just made what he believes is a world's record for a seven-foot, single-cutting band mill—93,400 feet in ten hours. How's that for such a mill? In the language of our bucolic contemporaries, "can you beat it?"

Brother Chase sends The Bulletin the following boost of Roundup, Mont. Brother Chase says this boost of Roundup shows the prevailing and characteristic spirit of the State:

"Our Buck," the Round Up Booster, Says

"This is surely the biggest domain out of doors, and the folks back home are just finding it out. Montana is big enough and rich enough to support fifty million people—Japan does, and Montana is larger and better than the land of Nippon.

"We've got prairies broader than Kansas, more mountains than Colorado, more timber than ever Michigan had, more copper than Spain, more cattle than Texas, more horses than Kentucky, more silver than Mexico, more sheep than Arizona, more water power than New England, more coal than Pennsylvania, more marble than Vermont, more sunshine than California, more rivers than New York, and more politicians than Ohio.

"If you have money to invest, labor to sell, ideas to exploit, or a career to carve out, right here in Montana is where the money is, you bet.

"Don't show you are a tenderfoot by kicking on the prices. If pie does cost ten cents a cut, remember that dimes grow on sagebrushes and the sagebrush thrives without irrigation. Buy a big white Stetson and get into the game—by and by you will be demanding mushrooms on your steak and you will forget your Boston accent. Once get the western ozone into your system, and you won't be satisfied until you send for the old folks, and this card sent with your letter will gently break the ice."

A Word to the Members.

Responses to the first notice of dues sent out October 1 were splendid—better than for several years. Either business is getting better with our members and they are feeling more buoyant, or interest in Hoo-Hoo is rapidly reviving—or both. The Bulletin firmly believes the latter to be true, and hereby extends its congratulations to all members, with its best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

There are, however, something like 5,000 members who have not paid 1912 dues, and to these members just a word: What better clean-up can you make of the old year's record than to send in your check covering these dues and get your 1912 card, spick, span and new, to reach you on New Year's day? It will start you off all right on New Year's, and a good start is half the race.

Also do not forget the Death Emergency Fund. This is not a charitable proposition primarily, but is clean-cut business. The success of this thing is now amply demonstrated—demonstrated in the way the thing has worked out for more than a year. You are familiar with the record. If you are not, you will be supplied with the information up to date. See other columns of this Bulletin for more about this Death Fund. Read it.

You may not need this little trifling bit of insurance. Maybe you feel that it is too small for you to fool with. Remember, however—during this Christmas week—that there are a whole lot of members of Hoo-Hoo to whose families $250, coming promptly right after the death of their breadwinner, means a whole lot—maybe more than $2,500 would mean to you. The thing is amply worth your cracking down with a check for $2.00, irrespective of your own feelings on the insurance as a business proposition.

Make your check for $3.65 and you will start the new year all right.

Do it now.

Who Needs These Men?

The Bulletin is in position to furnish any concern who needs them with two first-class lumber accountants. Both men are competent; both are of high character; both have had long experience with well-known Southern pine concerns.

Who can use either of these men? If you can use either, wire that fact to The Bulletin.

NOTES & COMMENTS

It is well that New Year's comes soon after Christmas. The holiday season is a time of spontaneous good will, of turning loose and giving play to the higher impulses, and New Year's is a time to start again, let us hope, on a higher plane. Generosity relaxes the system and gives the heart more room; it loosens the strained nerves and prevents the individual from becoming root-bound, like a plant in a pot. The hand that is too tightly closed to give is also closed to receiving. "Shell out" is a slang phrase, but it holds true philosophy if we read into it the deeper meaning of shedding the shells. The present and future is evolved for each individual out of his past, and he is perpetually creating it. But the weight of the past is sometimes a grievous burden. We make so many mistakes, life is so full of "errors and ignorances." No wonder the poet cried out in dismay:

"My soul is sailing through the sea,
But the Past is heavy and hindereth me.
The Past hath crusted cumbrous shells
That hold the flesh of cold sea-mells
About my soul.
The huge waves wash, the high waves roll,
Each barnacle clingeth and worketh dole,
And hindereth me from sailing!"

It is a comfort to reflect that it is in our best moments, and not in our worst, that we are most truly ourselves. "Oh, believe in your noblest impulses," said a great writer. "Believe in your purest instincts and most unworldly thoughts." The power of the exalted moment is a real force. It is at such times that we are able to shed the shells that hinder our progress. The Christmas spirit, then, is not a vague, misty phantasm or illusion, but a force, a form of energy, a factor of growth.

Dickens gives a vivid picture of a miser, a man who never took any part in Christmas doings and who would not part with a single penny if he could possibly help it. Of course his soul was badly crusted over with shells. He was a tight-wad of the extremest type. This man's name was Scrooge, and this is the way Dickens describes him:

"Oh! But he was a squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner! Hard and sharp as flint, from which no steel had ever struck out generous fire; secretive and self-contained and solitary as an oyster. The cold within him froze his old features, nipped his pointed nose, shriveled his cheek, stiffened his gait; made his eyes red, his thin lips blue, and spoke shrewdly in his grating voice. He carried his own low temperature always about with him; he iced his office in the dog-days and didn't thaw it even one degree at Christmas. No wind that blew was bitterer than he, no falling snow was more intent upon its purpose, no pelting rain less open to entreaty. The heaviest rain and snow and hail and sleet could boast of advantage over him in only one respect: They often came down handsomely and Scrooge never did! Nobody ever stopped Scrooge in the street to say, with gladsome looks, 'My dear Scrooge, how are you?' No children asked him what it was o'clock; no man or woman ever once in all his life inquired the way, to such and such a place, of Scrooge."

Surely nobody but Dickens could draw such a picture as that! "A Christmas Carol" is a good story to read just before the holidays, when you begin to have that broke feeling. Scrooge is a horrible example. His meanness broke out on him so terribly—it shriveled his cheek, stiffened his knees, reddened his eyes and blued his lips!

Nothing befalls us that is not of the nature of ourselves. There comes no adventure but means to our soul the shape of our everyday thoughts. And none but yourself shall you meet on the highway of fate. It is a solemn thought that our whole environment, the universe so far as we are concerned, is but the self extended. Scrooge had made a dismal world for himself. "Even the blind men's dogs appeared to know him, and when they saw him coming, would tug their owners into doorways and up courts; and then would wag their tails as though they said, 'No eye at all is better than an evil eye, dark master.'"

But at last, in the strangest way, the Christmas spirit came even to Scrooge, and his life was quite transformed. "And it was said of him that he knew how to keep Christmas well, if any man alive possessed the knowledge. May that be said of us and all of us!"

It has always seemed to me that the motto of Hoo-Hoo implies, in some measure at least, the observing of the rules of right living, including a feeling of comradeship and sympathy for others. For how can one have Health, Happiness and Long Life if the chill in his blood ices his office in the dog days and does not even thaw at Christmas time? There is no Scrooge in the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo. The basic principle of the organization is co-operation, unity of purpose, a pulling together for the good of all. Concatenated means linked together. And this presupposes sympathy, fellowship, brotherhood. Nor is all this merely theoretical. It is the nature of ideals to materialize—that is, to take some tangible form, to pass from "being" into "appearance," or, as the old writers phrased it, "to put on substance." Early in the history of the Order a "fund for the relief of imminent distress" gave evidence of the fundamental principles of the Order; and the establishment of the Death Emergency Fund is, on a larger scale, a practical illustration of the fraternal spirit on which Hoo-Hoo is founded. Perhaps in no other way could the small sum of two dollars be spent to better purpose, for its benefits certainly reach the stricken family at a time when relief from immediate financial stress is most welcome. Life is full of uncertainties; if today we are up, we do not know but that tomorrow we shall be down; human wisdom cannot always guard against misfortune. It is fitting, therefore, that our attitude toward others should be one of helpfulness and sympathy. Can we hold out a helping hand in a more effective way, or at less expense, than by making the Hoo-Hoo Death Fund a sure and permanent success? The plan was founded upon faith in Hoo-Hoo and in the large-hearted generosity of the men who compose its membership. Death payments began when the sum had amounted to $6,000; that is, when $2 each from as many as 3,000 men was remitted to the Supreme Scrivenoter. There were to be additional calls for contributions as occasion demands. All contributions are voluntary. The plan became operative in December of last year. The second call was issued April 6, 1911.

and the third call went out October 1, 1911. A heavy percentage of responses to the "second call" was from those who had responded to the "first call." Responses to the "third call" are coming in now, but the volume of responses from those who did not give heed to the first and second calls is not as large in proportion as it should be. There are several thousand members who have not remitted to the fund at all. Probably there are few, if any, of these who do not approve of the establishment of the fund. The failure to remit is due in many cases no doubt to carelessness. It is easy to procrastinate, to put off from day to day the doing of a good deed. Evil deeds are usually done without delay; unkind words are quickly spoken; ill news travels fast. The world is not perfect, but we are here to make it better. The feet of him who brings relief should not be laggard; the hand that holds blessings should be prompt to reach.

As stated in the booklet, which explains thoroughly the workings of the plan, with eight or even six thousand participants the fund could probably be maintained on two calls each twelve months. On this basis the fund would not only magnificently exemplify the spirit of brotherly love and charity upon which it is primarily founded, but would prove the cheapest form of insurance any man could buy.

If a man pays $4.00 per annum for death indemnity he is paying at the rate of $16.00 per annum per $1,000 of insurance. If three calls per year are issued, the participant is paying at the rate of $24 per annum per $1,000 for insurance.

A man in the bloom of youth and the prime of health can get insurance at a less cost than $24 per $1,000, but hundreds of our members cannot, and many of them—most frequently those whose dependents need it most—cannot get life insurance at any price. In this Death Emergency Fund plan, no medical examination is required and no age limit is imposed. There is a sixty-day limit on new subscribers; that is, a claim will not be paid when death occurs within sixty days after subscription is made, unless the death be from accident or unless the deceased had responded to previous calls for payment to the fund. The reason for this limit is obvious.

Now, it may be that you do not need this insurance yourself. Perhaps you already have what you think is necessary. But the point is that the plan cannot continue in operation unless the members cooperate in its maintenance. There are many that do need it, even if you do not. Now is a good time to realize this.

The holiday season is a time, not only to rejoice and to hope, but also to remember. Christmas commemorates the greatest event in the history of mankind. The original object of the day was not one of festivity; that came afterward, and very naturally, too. "It was only when men had made a holy day for God that they found they had made a holiday for man." To remember the needs of others is to make a holy day and a holiday truly one.

If you have not contributed to the Death Emergency Fund, do it now. If you have contributed and feel that you can afford to "come again," your mite will go far toward keeping up the good work.

During the past two months there have come to this office many letters of encouragement and cheer. A word of friendship, fitly spoken, is a real inspiration, and an expression of approval now and then heartens the spirit. The great volume of correspondence received lately gives evidence of cordial cooperation on part of the membership and constitutes an earnest of renewed loyalty to the Order. Not all these letters have been answered personally, but all are appreciated. And to all members of Hoo-Hoo, individually and collectively, The Bulletin extends best wishes and Christmas greeting.

The other day a member sent The Bulletin a newspaper clipping containing some "striking statements" (as the heading of the article read) made by an evangelist in St. Louis. This is one of the "statements":

It is a shame and disgrace that this city is cursed with so many cheap 5 and 10 cent shows. You can't breed a nation on a 5 and 10 cent show basis. God is not in your heart if you are looking for cheap fun.

When an usher runs across any man in this audience who contributes $5 let him whistle. Should some one give $10, yell "Hoo-Hoo." That's the yell of the lumbermen, and they are pretty liberal fellows.

The man making this harangue certainly was more vigorous than elegant in his language, but perhaps he had found such methods effective. It is not recorded that any of the ushers yelled "Hoo-Hoo"!

PEACE ON EARTH AND GOOD WILL TOWARD ALL

Cat Tracks Through the Everglades.

At Ocala, Fla., on the evening of November 23, Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew held a concatenation that will long be remembered by those members of the Order from Southern Florida who had the good fortune to attend. It was "Hoo-Hoo Day" at the Ocala Fair, which was in progress, and the following sprightly account of the concatenation appeared in the Tampa Daily Times:

Ocala heard the call of the Hoo-Hoo last night—and Ocala sat up and took notice. A number of the prominent citizens of Ocala will prefer standing for several days, however, as a result of their encounter with the bunch of old black cats, who assembled there from Tampa and Jacksonville, to initiate them into the mysteries of the order.

Twelve veteran Hoo-Hoo left for Ocala on the morning train on the Seaboard yesterday, headed by Snark L. A. Bartholomew. They were met on their arrival in the Brick City by a delegation which had the arrangements for the concatenation in charge, and escorted to the Ocala house. After dinner the party were taken out to the fair grounds and given the opportunity to inspect the splendid displays from the farms, gardens, orchards, stock and poultry farms, and industrial institutions of Marion county. It was a showing of which the people of Marion county have every reason to feel proud. The great throngs of visitors from other parts of the state and from other states were delighted and were enthusiastic in their praise.

The concatenation was held in the lodge room of the Elks, and the banquet following was served there also, most of the old cats, and the kittens as well, being members of that order also. The fun began shortly after eight o'clock and continued until midnight. A class of twelve were taken through the devious windings of the onion beds, and they had some very strenuous experiences before their eyes were finally opened. It was fine material, and the veterans of many previous concatenations in charge of the work did their level best to give the new members all that was coming to them.

At the close of the ceremonies a banquet was served, and with appetites sharpened by the work of the evening this was done full justice. Mayor McKay, of Tampa, who was one of the old cats present, was chosen toastmaster, and short addresses were delivered by a number of those gathered about the board.

Vicegerent Bartholomew had as his Junior, Brother D. B. McKay, who is the editor of the Tampa Times and also the Mayor of Tampa. Brother McKay knew the men who were brought before him, and his work in the garden of the left was one of the features of the meeting.

Vicegerent Bartholomew is especially proud of the class he initiated. All, he says, are "B. and Better, with emphasis on the Better." Such members of the class as M. G. Roess, R. C. Muncaster, D. W. Davis, Emmet E. Robinson, Bruce E. Neff and E. E. McLin are well known throughout the State of Florida, and the entire class is an honor to Hoo-Hoo. Brother McLin, of the novices, is a son of the Secretary of Agriculture of the State of Florida.

Vicegerent Bartholomew announces a big concatenation to be held in Tampa at an early date. At that time a class of about fifty will be handled.

Nothing the Matter With Kansas.

December 2 at Atchison, Kan., Vicegerent Ed A. Horr held an unusually interesting concatenation. He had a strong initiating Nine, with Burt J. Wright in the chair of Junior. The following account of the meeting has been sent The Bulletin by Brother Ed Leech, of the Bennett & Leech Lumber Company, of Kansas City:

There was a time when you mention the name of Atchison, Kansas, the people would say, "That is John J. Ingalls town." Later it was known as Ed. Howe's town. If you would have asked anyone on December the 2d who's town Atchison was they would have said, "Ed. Horr's town."

Brother Ed. A. Horr has certainly won his spurs as a promoter of Hoo-Hoo concatenations. Never has the writer (and he is no novice in Hoo-Hoo work) ever attended a concatenation where all the details were more carefully arranged and executed than was this one. Mr. Horr had the hall very tastefully and appropriately decorated with pine boughs and oak leaves. The "team" was composed of "old wheel-horses of Hoo-Hoo," each a Past Grand Master of his station. The brightest feather in Brother Horr's cap is the bunch of kittens he secured. They are all good, sound, substantial business men; each will be an honor and an ornament to the order.

Mr. Case, of Nortonville, has the distinction of being one of the oldest kittens in Hoo-Hoo, having passed his allotted threescore and ten years—being seventy-six. He can yet gambol over the onion bed as spry as a sixteen-year-old.

The banquet was served at The Dunton Cafe. Mr. Dunton is a disciple of that famous caterer Fred Harvey, and he has acquired the art of tempting the appetite and pleasing the palate. The menu was:

Blue Points on the Half Shell.
Sliced Tomatoes.	Celery.
Fried Silver Smelts, Tartar Sauce.
	Julienne Potatoes.
Breast of Turkey with Dressing.
	Cranberry Jelly.
Croquettes of Sweetbreads Supreme.
	Petit Pois.
Shrimp Salad.		Mayonnaise.
Pine Apple Ice.		Assorted Cake.
	Coffee.

"Old Reliable" Mell Eaton was toastmaster, and when it comes to plain or fancy, catch-as-catch-can, bottled in bond, or pinch hitting toastmastering, Mell can bat about nine hundred and ninety-nine.

The following gentlemen made speeches: Ed. Leech, Vicegerent of the Western District of Kansas; N. H. Huey, of the Western District of Missouri; Burt J. Wright, ex-member of the Supreme Nine. Everybody seemed to be of one opinion: "Make Hoo-Hoo bigger and better." The Death Emergency Fund was thought to be a progressive step; some were in favor of going still farther and adding accident insurance. It was thought that if certain lumber journals were going to continue fighting the Order that we should build up our paper, The Bulletin, make it an advertising medium, and instead of being an expense to the Order, make it a source of revenue.

The Hoo-Hoo of Northeastern Kansas are unanimous in their belief that Hoo-Hoo is the best Order in which to belong, and that now is the best time to belong to it. And they are not going to sit idly by and see a bunch of knockers destroy the Order. They are "going to make Hoo-Hoo bigger and better." And B. T. T. O. G. S. E. C. they will win.

Out for the "Second Round-Up."

The second concatenation held in Birmingham, Ala., during the present Hoo-Hoo year took place on December 7. It was, however, the first concatenation held under the vicegerency of J. W. Douglas, who was appointed only a few weeks ago. As an exemplification of the Hoo-Hoo ritual, the initiating ceremonies were as finished a piece of work as has been done in many a day, and the "Session-on-the-Roof" showed the brilliancy and the wit and the oratorical ability of the members of the Order in the Iron City district.

Vicegerent Douglas was ably assisted by the retiring Vicegerent, Brother H. B. Wood, and, due to the efforts of these two men, there has been a remarkable revival in Hoo-Hoo interest in North Alabama. The success of the big concatenation held on October 12 made the Alabama Hoo-Hoo call for another meeting, and this was responded to by the new Vicegerent in the ceremonies of December 7.

The concatenation was held in the Council Chamber of the City Hall, and the session on the roof, during which a Bohemian supper was served, took place in the hall of the Builders and Traders' Exchange in the Chamber of Commerce building.

At the session on the roof nearly one hundred lumbermen of Birmingham and vicinity sat around the festal board. The entertainment proved both unique and enjoyable. The principal address of the evening was delivered by Mr. J. A. Roundtree, editor of the "Dixie Manufacturer," who also filled most admirably the roll of Junior Hoo-Hoo. The postprandial fireworks began by the introduction of Allen J. Krebs as toastmaster by Vicegerent Douglas. Mr. Roundtree explained that the "ringmaster" of the evening had assigned him the task of speaking for two hours. He said that he had been instructed to tell of the beauties of fraternalism, the best way to hold up prices in lumber, how to avoid the referendum as well as to enforce the prohibition laws, and, if possible, to recommend some plan to use the "Black Cats" in breaking up the "Blind Tigers" that were so prevalent in Greater Birmingham. Instead, however, of the two-hour oration, Brother Roundtree burst into song in the following manner:

"I can't sing a song,
 I can't tell a story;
 I can't do a thing
 That will bring myself glory.

"I can't do a dance
 As light as a thistle;
 I can't sleight-of-hand,
 I can't even whistle.

"I can't do a stunt,
 I can't cut a caper;
 I can't tell a joke
 That will go in a paper.

"I can't do a thing
 Calculated to ease you,
 But I can go away back and sit down,
 And I know that will please you."

EX-VICEGERENT H. B. WOOD, whose splendid concatenation of October 12th is well remembered, and who rendered valuable and loyal assistance to his successor, Vicegerent J. W. Douglas, in holding the concatenation of December 7th.

While this bit of verse was most roundly applauded, the banqueters would not stand for Brother Roundtree deserting the post of duty in so short a time, and this resulted in an impromptu talk by him that was filled with wit and eloquence. Among the other speakers were Brother H. B. Roxie, Brother E. L. Mountfort, Brother H. S. Smith and Supreme Scrivenoter J. H. Baird, who, at the request of Vicegerent Douglas, had filled the chair of Snark during the initiation ceremonies.

Vicegerent Douglas was called upon to hold at as early a date as possible another meeting, and he announced that he would fix some time in April for the festivities. So successful and enjoyable have been these reunions of the lumbermen of Northern Alabama under the auspices of Hoo-Hoo that it was suggested that a monthly smoker be held, and in this way the members of the Order could be brought together more frequently than would be possible by waiting for concatenations, and this suggestion will probably be put into effect. The following committees had charge of the preparations for the concatenation and the entertainment of the kittens and the visitors:

Membership Committee—W. A. Hammond, Chairman, Acme Lumber & Coal Co.; Henry Brabston, Thomas Brabston Lumber Co.; Frank A. Elseminger; A. E. Chester, Jr., Twin City Lumber Co.; J. M. Barnett, Barnett Lumber Co.; J. M. Kytte, Kytte Bros. Lumber Co.; E. J. Mountfort, S. F. A., I. C. R. R. Co.; John B. Wood, S. F. A., N. & W. R. R. Co.

To Our Owen Sound Friends.

The November Bulletin chronicled the pleasing incident of the presentation of a silver loving cup to the members of the Owen Sound Club in recognition of the splendid hospitality they extended our members on the boat excursion in connection with the last annual meeting. By oversight The Bulletin was not furnished with the inscription placed upon this cup. It is as follows:

PRESENTED TO THE OWEN SOUND CLUB
BY A FEW MEMBERS OF THE CONCATENATED ORDER OF HOO-HOO IN APPRECIATION OF THE COURTESIES EXTENDED TO THE ORDER BY THE CLUB DURING OUR VISIT, SEPTEMBER 10, 1911.

The following acknowledgment was made by the Club under date of December 14, 1911:

W. A. Hadley, Esq., Chatham, Ontario.—Dear Sir: The members of the Sydenham Club of Owen Sound having just held their first general meeting since your visit, desire to thank you and through you to convey to your associates of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo their united thanks for the handsome piece of plate presented to the Club, in the form of a loving cup, as a souvenir of the entertainment of the members of your jovial fraternity on the occasion of their visit to Owen Sound on the 10th of September last.

The Club was delighted at the opportunity which your visit afforded of showing that our latch string is always out to our cousins across the line as well as to the native Canadian Hoo-Hoo, and that they are always welcome to the best our larder contains.

The splendid specimen of the silversmith's art, by which it has pleased you to commemorate your visit, will always be cherished among the most valuable of the Club's possessions and as an ever present reminder of the event. Come again; come often.

Signed on behalf of the Sydenham Club.

D. M. BUTCHART, President.

JOHN PARKER, Secretary.

OBITUARY.

Anderson James Armstrong (No. 14226).

The death of Brother A. J. Armstrong, of Boise, Idaho, occurred at his home early in November. He was born at Ashland, Ohio, October 31, 1843.

Brother Armstrong was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Boise, Idaho, February 24, 1905. He was also a participant in the Death Emergency Fund.

At the time of his death Brother Armstrong was a director in the Hawkeye Lumber Company, of Boise, Idaho.

William Bosworth Judson (No. 624).

Brother Wm. B. Judson died at Pasadena, Cal., where he had gone for the winter from his home at Seattle, Wash. Paralysis was the cause of his death.

Brother Judson was born at Syracuse, N. Y., May 17, 1849. At the age of 18 he became local editor of the Miami Valley News at Piqua, Ohio. In 1873 he started publishing the "Michigan Lumberman," with Benjamin Wait as partner. Soon after he removed the office of the paper to Chicago, Ill., buying the interest of Mr. Wait, and changing the name of the paper to the "Northwestern Lumberman." In 1899 the "Northwestern Lumberman" and the "Timberman," a strong competitor of the older journal, consolidated into the "American Lumberman," with Brother Judson as manager.

In 1906 Brother Judson retired from journalism after a very successful career. He spent much time in travel, but, deciding to locate and establish a home, he selected Seattle, Wash., as his permanent location and became largely interested in real estate.

Brother Judson was a success in the journalistic world, being a man of extraordinary attainments. His friends were in all parts of the continent and also in many foreign lands, and his death was a distinct shock to all.

At Chicago, Ill., September 8, 1893, Brother Judson joined Hoo-Hoo and took an active interest in all its workings. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Henry Milton Bush (No. 14509).

Brother H. M. Bush died at Portland, Ore., November 26, 1911. He was born at Washington, Ore., April 22, 1867.

Brother Bush was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Portland, Ore., April 15, 1905. At that time he was connected with the Jones Lumber Company, of Portland, Ore. He was with that company at the time of his death.

Brother Bush was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Thomas Francis Neville (No. 9446).

Brother T. F. Neville died at Milwaukee, Wis., Thursday, November 23, 1911, after a long and painful illness.

Brother Neville was born at Chicago, Ill., September 10, 1863. When quite young he entered the employ of the Rockwell Manufacturing Company, and after twenty years of service with that enterprise accepted a position with the Allis-Chalmers Company, with whom he was connected for fifteen years. He also took an active interest in military affairs, being a charter member and an officer in several companies. During the Spanish-American war Brother Neville served as captain of Company G, Fourth Wisconsin Volunteers.

Brother Neville was a member of several fraternal organizations—Branch 71, C. O. F.; Branch 50, Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, and of Hoo-Hoo, which he joined August 21, 1902, at Milwaukee, Wis.

OUR VICEGERENTS

Sam R. Guyther (No. 4916).

Our Vicegerent for the Eastern District of Tennessee is none other than the irrepresible, unquenchable Sam R. Guyther, late of the Inda Pine Company, of Inda, Miss., but now settled in Chattanooga, and one of the officers of the Central Lumber Company, of that city. Brother Guyther has always cherished two illusions; one is that he is an art critic, and, therefore, capable of greatly improving the appearance of The Bulletin if he could have his way; the other is that somewhere, somehow, he will be able to find a competent "he-stenographer" whom he can hire and keep indefinitely. The Bulletin has tried in vain to clear Brother Guyther's mind of these two misconceptions. On all other subjects he is possessed of remarkable mental insight; his business judgment is unquestioned; his financial acumen is recognized alike by associates and competitors. And, after all, perhaps it is true that no man is happy who has lost his illusions. Brother Guyther, then, must surely be a happy man as well as a successful one. And this combination is sufficiently rare to be of more than passing interest.

Brother Guyther's ancestors came to this country from England in company with Calvert, commonly known in history as Lord Baltimore. They settled, of course, in Maryland, and Calvert's name, or rather his title, has been perpetuated by the finest monument a man can have—a city of beautiful homes and of many and varied industries. In his early youth, after the fashion of boys, Brother Guyther preferred the open to the school-room—the old swimming hole appealed to him more strongly than arithmetic or grammar. All of his school books were published by the D. Appleton Company, which concern has been boycotted by Brother Guyther ever since because of the great prejudice he formed in boyhood. No matter how bad a book is, he will not read it if it is published by D. Appleton. In this way he has missed some right lively reading. But no matter. He has had that much more time to put in on art and on the quest of the he-stenographer. After running away from home two or three times, Brother Guyther settled down for a season and got a job in a country store in Louisiana. A few years later he obtained a position as "cub" overseer on a sugar plantation, but soon decided that this was not his true vocation. About that time, too, he began to have visions of domestic bliss; so he got married, and his visions of happiness have never grown dim, but, rather, have increased in radiance as the years have passed. Three children came to his home; the eldest, a daughter, is now grown up and married. As for his age, he refuses to divulge it, wherefore it is a safe bet that the candles on his birthday cake look like a torchlight procession. He claims, however, that he is too young to be eligible to the G. A. R. or to the United Confederate Veterans.

Some years ago Brother Guyther and several of his associates, having, as he says, "conceived an idea that a saw mill was a good thing to have in the back yard," formed a partnership known as N. B. Trelue & Co., at Patterson, La. In the early nineties the concern was reorganized and the name changed to the Trelue Cypress Lumber Company, Limited, manufacturing cypress lumber, lath and shingles. Afterwards they acquired a sash and door factory, and the company became the Cypress Tank & Manufacturing Company, manufacturing all sorts of things from cypress, including the famous "dog-on-good tanks." Later on Brother Guyther, having sold out his interest in this concern, went to Mississippi and organized the Inda Pine Company. In December of 1910 he closed out at Inda and removed to Chattanooga, Tenn., and bought an interest in the Central Manufacturing Company, changing the name to the Central Lumber Company. Of this concern Brother Guyther is secretary and general manager, D. W. Hughes is president and treasurer, and W. B. Hughes is vice-president. The company manufactures all kinds of lumber, lath, shingles, cross-arms, insulator pins and brackets, and they purpose soon to add other lines of woodwork. The personnel of the company is assurance of the success of the enterprise, and the outlook is extremely promising.

Brother Guyther was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Houston, Tex., in April, 1897. He has always taken a deep interest in all the doings of the Order, and no doubt he will bring to bear on the work of Vicegerent Snark the energy and executive ability which have distinguished his business career.

Our business in this world is not to succeed, but to continue to fail in good spirits.—Stevenson.

Ed A. Horr (No. 18092).

Brother Ed A. Horr, Vicegerent Bark for Eastern District of Kansas, was born at Onokosh, Wis., in 1881. He completed a course in the high school, and at the age of sixteen went out of school life into life's school. As saw-milling and sash and door manufacturing were the chief industries in Onokosh at that time, he naturally drifted into the lumber business. After holding positions with various concerns in Wisconsin, Brother Horr put in a year with a yellow pine mill in Texas. Later on he removed to Atchison, Kans., and ever since 1906 has been identified with A. E. Almsworth in the wholesale lumber business as travelling salesman, covering northern Kansas and southern Nebraska. He joined Hoo-Hoo in Kansas City in 1907, under the administration of Burt J. Wright, at that time Vicegerent. Brother Horr has a wide acquaintance among retail lumber dealers throughout his territory and is much liked by all who know him.

In October, 1907, Brother Horr was married to Miss Willie E. Bridger, of Lenoxa, Kans. He is thoroughly domesticated, his only dissipation being quail-hunting. In pursuit of this sport he sneaks away for a week every November, in company with Brother W. R. Canfield, of Holton, Kans.

Brother Horr takes a deep interest in the workings of the Order and has recently held a splendid concatenation, report of which appears on another page in this issue of The Bulletin.

J. W. Douglas (No. 18288).

On another page will be found an account of the successful and most enjoyable concatenation held at Birmingham by Vicegerent J. W. Douglas, which makes it possibly appropriate that his biographical sketch should appear here.

Brother Douglas was born at Pelham, Shelby County, Ala. on February 25, 1881. He was never in any other than the lumber business. He made a start in the business in 1901, when he was just 20 years old. He started in with the Krebs Lumber Company, of Birmingham, and remained with that concern until their interests were taken over by the Barnett Lumber Company. This occurred in January, 1905. Brother Douglas continued with the new owners as yard and factory manager until July, 1907, when he resigned to accept a position as salesman for his present company, the Iron City Lumber Company.

In February, 1908, when some changes were made in the Iron City Lumber Company, Brother Douglas was made manager, a position he has ever since held. The Iron City Lumber Company is one of the prominent yellow pine concerns of Birmingham, and Brother Douglas is one of the best known and most popular lumbermen in the State.

Even in New York comparatively few residents know the origin of the name Bronx. It came from an early settler, Jonas Bronck, who with two companions sailed from Holland in the private armed ship Fire of Troy and arrived in New Amsterdam in July, 1639. Bronck at once obtained from the Dutch West India Company a grant of 500 acres of land in what is now Westchester County, "lying between the Great Kill" (the Harlem River) "and the Abquahung" (the Bronx River). An old "Tracing of Broncksland" is still preserved in the office of the Secretary of State at Albany, and the location of Jonas Bronck's house is shown thereon.

WHEN the clock struck twelve on the night of September 9 last, dues became payable for 1912. The Hoo-Hoo year begins and ends on September 9. Look up your receipts, and if you find that you have not paid 1912 dues, send $1.65 to the Scrivener at once. Any form of remittance will do except stamps that are stuck together. Your individual checks will be all right.

There was an old Scotchman in Glasgow who was moving from one house to another, on the same street. Being of an economical turn of mind, he had moved his bits of furniture on the wheelbarrow himself. The last thing left for him to carry was one of those old grandfather's clocks. It was rather heavy and awkward to handle. As he toddled up the street to his new home, with grandfather's clock over his shoulder, he met a friendly Scot, who had been imbibing. "Tak ma' advice," said the intemperate, "buy yersel' a watch."—Argonaut.

"Who's that man who just kicked the chair over and threw a pack of cards into the fireplace?" inquired one waiter. "Oh," replied the other, "he's the gentleman who tries to rest his nerves by playing solitaire."—Washington Star.

"Look at the team New York has. New York is no yap town." "Do not sneer at smaller towns, my friend. The New York team is composed of young men from Terre Haute, Warren, Syracuse, Toledo, Little Rock, Kankakee, Ypsilanti, South Bend, and Waco."—Pittsburg Post.

An Englishman and a Welshman disputing in whose country was the best living, the Welshman said: "There is such noble housekeeping in Wales that I have known above a dozen cooks employed at one wedding dinner." "Ay," answered the Englishman, "that was because every man toasted his own cheese."—Life.

Sir Matthew Begbie, Chief Justice of British Columbia, once had before him a man charged with having killed another man with a sand-bag. The evidence was conclusive, and the judge charged the jury accordingly, but a verdict of "Not guilty" was promptly brought in. The judge was astonished. "Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "this is your verdict, not mine. On your conscience the disgrace will rest. Many repetitions of such conduct as yours will make trial by jury a horrible farce, and the city of Victoria a nest of crime. Go! I have nothing more to say to you." And then, turning to the prisoner: "You are discharged. Go and sand-bag some of those jurymen; they deserve it."—Oregonian.

An old lady was going over the zoo, and after some time she went up to a keeper and tapped him on the shoulder with her umbrella. "Well, mum," said the keeper. "I want to ask you," explained the old lady, "which of the animals in the zoo you consider the most remarkable." The keeper scratched his head for a while. Then—"Well, mum," he replied, "arter careful consideration, as you might say, I've come to the conclusion as the biscuit goes to the laughing hyena!" "Indeed!" said the old lady in surprise; "and why do you consider the laughing hyena so remarkable?" "Well, mum," answered the zoological expert, "he only has a sleep once a week. He only has a meal once a month. And he only has a drink once a year. So what he's got to laugh about is a bloomin' mystery to me!"—Punch.

"You never go to banquets with your husband." "No. I'm always afraid that they will ask him to make a speech." "And can't he make one?" "That's it exactly. He can't. But if he were asked I just know he'd get up and try."—Detroit Free Press.

A passenger who escaped uninjured from a serious railway smash, seeing a fellow-traveler searching anxiously among the wreckage with a lantern, offered to assist in the search, and, thinking the old man had lost his wife, asked in sympathetic tones: "What part of the train was she in?" Raising his lantern and glaring at the kindly disposed passenger, the old man shouted with indignant distinctness that triumphed over physical infirmity: "She, sir! she! I am looking for my teeth!"—New York Sun.

"It's hardly right," the enthusiast urged, "that men who just happen to have the money should be able to take Rembrandts and Van Dycks from countries that have had them for generations." "That's so," agreed the Texan. "Those fellows go over to Europe and buy em up, don't they? Why, say, not one in ten'll ever read 'em."—Kansas City Star.

"I say, old man, I need $50 badly and haven't the least idea where I can get it." Glad to hear it. I thought perhaps you had an idea you could borrow it from me."—Washington Herald.

Mr. Crimsonbeak—Here's an item which says the swan outlives any other bird, in extreme cases reaching 300 years. Mrs. Crimsonbeak—And, remember, John, the swans live on water.—Sacred Heart Review.

Just as the minister was about to begin his sermon the woman remembered that she had left the gas burning in the range oven. Visions of a ruined dinner and a smoky kitchen stared her in the face. She borrowed a pencil from the young man in the next pew and scribbled a note. With a murmured "Hurry," she thrust it into the hand of her husband, an usher, who came up the aisle at that moment. He, with an understanding nod, turned, passed up the aisle, and handed the note to the minister. The woman saw the act in speechless horror and shuddered as she saw the minister smilingly open the note and begin to read. But her expression of dismay was fully equaled by the look of amazement and wrath on the good man's face as he read the words: "Go home and turn off the gas!"—Philadelphia Record.

On St. Andrew's Links.

It was at St. Andrew's in Scotland, the home of golf, where the links stretch away over the moors by the sea, and dear quiet Aunt Mary had gone up from London to visit a golfing family of nephews and nieces. At tea the first afternoon some one managed to stop talking long enough to ask: "Well, Aunt Mary, and how did you spend the morning?" "Oh, I enjoyed myself immensely. I went for a walk on the moor. A good many people seemed to be about, and some of them called out to me in a most eccentric manner. But I didn't take any notice of them. And oh, my dear! I found such a number of curious little round things! I brought them home to ask you what they are." Hereupon Aunt Mary opened her work-bag and produced twenty-four golf balls.

As an instance of acute hydrophobia, it is difficult to surpass the story of the Scotch boatman who, while crossing a loch, was asked if he would take some water with his whisky, and replied: "Na, there was a horse drowned at the head o' the loch twa years ago." The head of the loch was twenty-four miles distant.

Mrs. Reno—Do you believe in a uniform divorce law? Mrs. Nevada—Let's see the uniform.—Smart Set.

Crawford—Do you really like to please your wife? Crabshaw—I can't say that I do, but I've found out it's the best plan.—Smart Set.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE.

The men whose Hoo-Hoo names appear in the notices below are out of work and want employment. This is intended as a permanent department of The Bulletin, through which to make these facts known. It is, or should be, read by several thousand business men who employ labor in many varied forms, and it can be made of great value in giving practical application to Hoo-Hoo's central theme of helping one another. It is hoped the department will receive very careful attention each issue.

Some of our members advertising in The Bulletin fail to advise me when they have secured positions, so an old ad keeps running for months and months. To avoid this I have adopted the plan of running the ads as long as three months and then if I have heard nothing from the advertiser I will cut his ad out. If at the end of the three months he still wishes me to continue it, he must advise me.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, as Amended at the Nineteenth Hoo-Hoo Annual, held at San Francisco, Cal., September 9-12, 1910.

ARTICLE I.—NAME.

Section 1. The name of this organization is the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo.

ARTICLE II.—OBJECT.

Section 1. The object of the Order is the promotion of the Health, Happiness and Long Life of its members.

ARTICLE III.—MEMBERSHIP.

Section 1. Active Membership.—The membership in this Order shall be limited to white male persons of full age of twenty-one (21) years, of good moral character who possess one or more of the following seven qualifications: Lumbermen, Foresters, Officers of Lumber Associations, Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies, Newspaper Men, Railroad Men, Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men; and so definitely shall the line of qualification be drawn in each class that the occupation under which persons apply for membership shall be their main or principal occupation, and it shall be the business of the person recognized in the community in which he resides as his principal vocation.

SPECIFIC DEFINITION OF ELIGIBILITY.

(a) Lumbermen.—Lumbermen shall be those who are engaged either in the ownership or sale of timber lands, timber or logs, or the manufacture or sale, at wholesale or retail, of forest products, either as owners, officers, managers of departments, general superintendents, sales managers or traveling salesmen.

(b) Foresters.—This class shall include those persons graduated from recognized schools of forestry, officials of the forestry service and members of forest commissions or boards, either state or national.

(c) Officers of Lumber Associations. Regularly organized lumber associations, state or national.

(d) Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies.—Officers or representatives of mutual or inter-insurance companies placing risks on lumber property exclusively.

(e) Newspaper Men.—Publishers, proprietors, or persons regularly connected with the editorial or business departments of newspapers.

(f) Railroad Men.—General officers, general and assistant freight, passenger, claim, purchasing, commercial, soliciting and station agents, chief dispatchers and train masters and members of railroad commissions.

(g) Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men.—Persons engaged in the manufacture or sale, to lumber manufacturers, of sawmill or planing mill machinery and mill supplies.

(h) Initiation.—Such persons as above mentioned may be initiated under proper application, payment of initiation fee and election to membership.

(i) Limited Active Membership.—The active membership shall be limited to 32,999 members in good standing.

ADMISSION OF PAINT, CEMENT, TILING, ROOFING AND OIL MEN.

(j) Manufacturers, wholesale dealers and salesmen of cement, roofing, paints, oil, tiling and other staple articles cannot become active members, but will be welcome as honorary members.

MODE OF ELECTING OR REJECTING APPLICANTS AT CONCATENATIONS.

Sec. 2. Each applicant for membership shall fully fill out the final application blank, which must be endorsed by three members of the Order in good standing. Applications for membership shall be balloted on collectively. In case there are three or more black balls in the first ballot, each applicant shall thereafter be balloted upon separately, or the applicants may be balloted upon in groups of five. In case three black balls shall be cast in voting for an applicant singly, he shall be rejected. Any applicant rejected shall not be balloted on again within six months of the date of his rejection.

Sec. 3. If any Vicegerent shall knowingly or by culpable negligence admit to the initiatory ceremonies of the Order any person not legally entitled to same under the provisions of this article, he shall, upon due proof thereof to the Snark and Scrivenoter, be removed from his office by the Snark, and, in the discretion of the Supreme Nine, if the violation be flagrant, be expelled from the Order; and any member of the Order who shall sign the certificate on any application herein referred to, if the facts stated in such application with reference to the present business interests of the applicant are not true, shall upon due proof thereof submitted to the Scrivenoter, be expelled by the Supreme Nine. It shall be no defense that the member was deceived into signing the certificate. Any member endorsing certificate on an application for membership must know of his own personal knowledge the truth of the facts to which he certifies.

Sec. 4. Whenever a removal or suspension shall be made in accordance with the provisions of this article, the Scrivenoter shall immediately bulletin the fact to every member of the Order in good standing.

Sec. 5. This Order retains the ownership of every handbook and button issued to its members, such being furnished only for the proper and legitimate use of the members in accordance with the Constitution, By-Laws and Ritual of the Order. Whenever any member, to whom such property is furnished, ceases, either by suspension or expulsion, to be entitled to the benefits and privileges of the Order, the right is hereby reserved to demand and enforce the return of the same to the Scrivenoter.

Sec. 6. The handbook shall be issued between the first of February and the first of April each year, and shall be sent only to all new members and such old members as request a copy of same, and who have paid dues for the preceding year.

Sec. 7. The initiation fee shall be $9.99, which, together with the current year's dues, must accompany the application. The annual dues shall be one dollar and sixty-five cents ($1.65), of which amount sixty-six cents (66 cents) shall be applied as an annual subscription to The Bulletin.

Sec. 8. Honorary membership in this Order may be granted upon application filed with the Scrivenoter by the Vicegerent of the state within which the applicant resides; provided, that such application shall be endorsed by nine members of the Order in good standing; the honorary membership fee shall be $99.99, and shall accompany the application; and no further fees, dues or assessments of any nature shall be levied on such membership. The honorary members shall be required to take the first obligation in the Ritual, but no further initiatory ceremonies shall be necessary.

Sec. 9. Life membership in this Order may be granted upon application by any one eligible under the Constitution at a regular meeting, upon payment of $33.33, and no further dues or assessments of any nature shall be levied on such member. Life members shall be entitled to all rights and privileges of Hoo-Hoo. They shall be required to take the first obligation in the Ritual, but no further initiatory ceremonies shall be necessary.

ARTICLE IV.—OFFICERS.

Section 1. The elective executive officers of the Order shall be Snark of the Universe, Senior Hoo-Hoo, Junior Hoo-Hoo, Bojum, Scrivenoter, Jabberwock, Custocatian, Arcanoper, and Gurdon. The above-named officers shall constitute the Supreme Nine and shall perform such duties as are prescribed in the Ritual, Constitution and By-Laws of the Order.

Sec. 2. The above-named officers shall be annually elected by a majority of the votes cast at the Hoo-Hoo Annual by roll-call of states, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. In case of the death or resignation of an elective executive officer, the Supreme Nine shall have power to appoint a successor, who shall fill the unexpired term caused by such vacancy.

Sec. 4. The appointive executive officers of the Order shall consist solely of Vicegerent Snarks. Each state of the United States or similar political grand division of any other civilized country having nine or more members shall be entitled to a Vicegerent Snark, the particular title of this officer to be Vicegerent Snark plus the name of the foreign country or political grand division of this country which he represents.

Second—When in the judgment of the Supreme Nine the interests of the Order demand they may appoint two or more Vicegerent Snarks for any state, dividing the territory equitably for such purpose.

Third—Except as may be herein-after provided, the jurisdiction of Vicegerent Snarks shall be limited to the territory to which they are appointed, and to the conduct of the work of initiation (in the absence of the Snark) and for those purposes which may be necessary to the proper initiation of candidates to exercise all the powers and execute all the duties of the Snark of the Universe.

Fourth—For the purpose of extending the growth of the Order the Supreme Nine shall attach to the territory of Vicegerent Snarks such contiguous territory as may be without the requisite number of Hoo-Hoo to entitle it to a Vicegerent Snark; provided that, when there shall be nine Hoo-Hoo within any such attached territory, they may petition the Supreme Nine for the appointment of a Vicegerent Snark. That officer having been chosen and installed by legal appointment, the authority of the first Vicegerent Snark shall cease by limitation, and without further provision than an official notification thus acquired shall be subject to redivision thereafter, as provided in Section 4 of this article.

Fifth—The Vicegerent Snark shall be appointed by the Snark of the Universe, by and with the consent and approval of the Supreme Nine, and shall serve until the next Hoo-Hoo day succeeding his appointment, or until his successor shall be appointed, unless removed for cause.

Sixth—The Supreme Nine shall cause to be issued to each Vicegerent Snark by the Snark of the Universe and Scrivenoter a warrant of authority, which shall explicitly define his powers and jurisdiction, this warrant to be accompanied by such instructions for the conduct of concatenations, initiations and admissions as it may deem wise. The Supreme Nine, through the same agency, shall have power to revoke such authority, and appoint such successor to fill the unexpired term.

Seventh—No member is eligible to an office in the Order either by election or appointment if delinquent in his dues.

Sec. 5. The judicial and advisory officers of the Order shall consist of the House of Ancients, a body originally instituted at the Annual Meeting of 1893, and made up of former Snarks of the Universe; each Snark, upon the successful termination of his office in the Supreme Nine, to be given the title of "Past Snark," and to become a member of the House of Ancients. It being the duty of the Order to invest the Past Snark at that time with an emblematic ring, as a token of regard from the Order and the badge of authority within the scope of these provisions.

Second—The chief officer of this body shall be entitled the "Seer of the House of Ancients," this office to be held by Bolling Arthur Johnson, founder of the Order, his badge of rank—the Emblem of Revelation—a nine-pointed diamond star, to be worn by him until his death, and then transmitted as a legacy from him to the "House of Ancients." This emblem shall thereafter be worn by that member of the body who is chronologically the next living "Past Snark," the title of the "Seer of the House of Ancients" to descend, with the "Emblem of Revelation," in perpetuity—the emblem to be ever worn by succeeding Seers as a perpetual token of esteem for him through whom was transmitted the secret legends and traditions upon which the Order is founded; and there shall be neither fashioned or worn in Hoo-Hoo another emblem of like form, design or import.

Third—It shall be the duty of the House of Ancients to act as a standing committee on Constitution and By-Laws to digest and consider any proposed changes in the laws of Hoo-Hoo which may seem wise, may originate from that body or from any other source, it being the privilege of every active member of the Order to file with the House of Ancients any suggestions which may seem wise to him, it being the duty of the House of Ancients to report to each Annual Concatenation any revision which it believes to be for the good of the Order.

Fourth—The House of Ancients shall constitute an Advisory Board to which the elective executive officers of the Order may refer any problems of constitutional polity upon which that body shall disagree, or for any other reason shall desire the cooperation of those who have held elective executive positions in the past, it being understood that questions so referred shall be settled by a joint vote of both bodies, the ruling to stand as law until the next Annual Concatenation, when all such joint procedures shall be referred to the concatenation assembled for a sustaining approval or veto; the decision of the Annual Concatenation to become final, unless otherwise determined by amendments to the Constitution, as hereinafter provided; this system to build up practical, initiative and referendum legislation.

Fifth—It shall be the duty of the House of Ancients to prepare and preserve the historical and archaeological lore of Hoo-Hoo, and it shall also be the custodian of the copyright of the Order, and entrusted with its care and protection from improper and unlawful uses.

Sixth—The members of the House of Ancients shall have power to conduct concatenations the same as any member of the Supreme Nine.

SUPREME REPRESENTATIVE.

Sec. 6. A Supreme Representative shall be employed by the Supreme Nine and the House of Ancients, his salary and expenses to be determined by said bodies in joint session, it being the duty of said representative to attend such concatenations as possible; to look after the reinstatement of desirable delinquent members; to see that all concatenations conform to the Ritual and spirit of the Order, and to eliminate all unnecessary expenses, and to see that all moneys not expended shall go into the treasury of the Order, said Supreme Representative to operate under the direction of the Supreme Nine.

ARTICLE V.—SUPREME NINE.

Section 1. The Supreme Nine is vested with full authority to administer the affairs of the Order in accordance with its Ritual, Constitution and By-Laws in the interim between the Hoo-Hoo Annuals, and shall, through the Scrivenoter, make a full report of its doings to the Order at each annual meeting, and its action on any matter shall be subject to review at such meeting.

Sec. 2. The Osirian Cloister shall constitute the Upper Chamber of Hoo-Hoo, and all Vicegerent Snarks who shall have served one year in that capacity, and all ex-members of the Supreme Nine, may be eligible to membership therein. It shall be competent for the membership of the Cloister, under its own regulations, to prescribe rituals and initiatory ceremonies for the admission of its members; rules and regulations governing the business of the Cloister, including the imposition of such fees and dues as may be found necessary; to regulate and enlarge the limits of eligibility by such vote as may be prescribed in its By-laws, and, if deemed advisable, to make alteration in the name under which the Cloister now exists. The Cloister shall perform the rite of embalming the retiring Snark preparatory to his incarceration in the House of Ancients.

Sec. 3. The Supreme Nine shall appoint regular times for meeting, and may hold such special meetings as may be required, provided that no special meeting shall be held unless notice thereof shall be given to each member at least one full day more than it would take him to reach the place of such meeting by the route necessary for him to travel, unless he shall in writing have waived his right to such notice; and when summoned by the Snark of the Universe and the Scrivenoter to attend any such special meeting, he shall be paid from the funds of the Order his necessary expenses for such meeting.

Sec. 4. No measure shall be passed by the Supreme Nine except upon the affirmative vote of five of its members.

ARTICLE VI.—MEETINGS.

Section 1. Hoo-Hoo Day is the ninth day of the ninth month of the calendar year. On that day shall occur the regular annual business meeting of the Order, at a place to be selected by vote of the Order, in default of which it shall be selected by the Supreme Nine, as hereinafter provided, the first session of which shall convene not later than the ninth minute after nine o'clock p. m. of said day.

Sec. 2. The entire membership in each state in good standing shall be the basis for voting at the Hoo-Hoo Annual, and the vote of each state shall be divided pro rata among the members present from such state. States not represented at the Annual shall have no vote.

Sec. 3. Every member of the Order should attend the meeting on Hoo-Hoo Day if possible, or, failing to be present, he must forward to the Scrivenoter, in time to be read at the meeting, a letter telling how Hoo-Hoo hath used him during the past year, or he must send a prepaid telegram giving his whereabouts, so that it may be known where every member of the Order is on that day.

Sec. 4. In the permanent record of Hoo-Hoo Day, the Scrivenoter shall note the attendance as follows:

First.—Members deceased; for the living memory of those who have gone beyond is always with us.

Second.—Those who respond by letter or telegram.

Third.—Those who are present in person.

Sec. 5. The Supreme Nine present at each Annual Meeting shall constitute a committee to hear the report of the delegates from cities bidding for the next annual meeting, and after hearing these reports shall refer their finding to the Annual Meeting then in session for choice of place in the usual way.

Sec. 6. Concatenations are meetings held for the initiation of members, and no business shall be transacted thereat. Concatenations shall be held by the Vicegerent Snark of the state wherever six or more applicants are ready for initiation, and the Scrivenoter shall have forwarded to the Vicegerent Snark an authority blank signed by the Supreme Nine, authorizing the holding of such concatenations.

Sec. 7. At concatenations the Vicegerent Snark shall appoint members of the Order to fill the ritual stations of those members of the Supreme Nine who may not be present in person.

Sec. 8. The Snark of the Universe may hold concatenations anywhere upon the issuance of authority blank, as may also any member of the Supreme Nine.

Section 9. Clause 1.—The Hoo-Hoo territory of the United States, British North America and Mexico shall be divided into nine permanent jurisdictions, each jurisdiction to be represented each year on the Supreme Nine.

Clause 2.—The metes and bounds of each jurisdiction and vicegerency shall be definitely established.

Clause 3.—Each Vicegerent shall be required to call a general convention, mass meeting or concatenation of the resident membership of his district, to be held not later than forty-five (45) days prior to September Ninth of each year for the purpose of concluding proper arrangements for insuring a substantial representation at the Annual Meeting.

Clause 4.—At each Annual Meeting the Snark of the Universe shall appoint a Nominating Committee of nine members, consisting, where possible, of one member from each of the nine jurisdictions. This Nominating Committee shall give impartial hearing to the reports of any and all delegations or individuals to ascertain their preferences and wishes as to candidates for the offices of the Supreme Nine, and after due consideration said committee shall recommend and nominate nine members for said offices.

Clause 5.—Any member shall have the privilege of placing an opposing candidate in nomination for any of the said offices.

ARTICLE VII.—NUMBERS.

Section 1. The general numbers of the members of the Order shall be assigned by the Scrivenoter in the rotation of concatenation numbers, and in the order concatenation reports may be received by him.

ARTICLE VIII.—SUSPENSION AND EXPULSION.

Section 1. Dues shall be payable on Hoo-Hoo Day for the year ensuing. The Scrivenoter shall issue as a receipt for dues a special card, and no member shall be admitted to any meeting or concatenation, after January 1st of such Hoo-Hoo year, who does not present such certificate. Members shall be delinquent for unpaid dues on the Hoo-Hoo Day succeeding that on which dues become payable. Within thirty-three days after Hoo-Hoo Day, the Scrivenoter shall send notice to each delinquent member, notifying him that in thirty-three days thereafter he will be suspended, if such dues are not paid; and if dues be not paid within the thirty-three days, he shall be placed on the suspended list, and such list shall be published to all Vicegerents.

Sec. 2. When the Scrivenoter sends out the notices, herein provided for, he shall prepare a list of those to whom it is sent in each vicegerency and transmit the same to the Vicegerent Snark, who shall adopt such means to secure the collection of such dues as he may see fit, rendering his account for the expense incident thereto to the Scrivenoter.

Sec. 3. Suspended members may be reinstated upon the payment of all back dues, the amount to be paid not to exceed $5 of delinquent dues, upon the approval of the Vicegerent of the state in which such member lives or on the approval of the Scrivenoter of the Order.

Sec. 4. If any member of this Order shall violate its Constitution, By-laws or Ritual, or engage in any unlawful or disreputable business, or in any manner bring public shame or disgrace to this Order or its membership, he may be suspended or expelled only in the following manner: There shall be filed with the Scrivenoter a written statement of the offense charged, signed by the member making the charge and verified under oath, and supported by such affidavits of other persons as he may desire to present, together with a copy of the same. The Scrivenoter shall file the original and transmit the copies to the accused by registered mail, without the name signed thereto, which shall be furnished by the Scrivenoter on demand if defense is made. The accused shall have 33 days after the receipt of the charges made in which to make answer, which shall be prepared under oath, and may consist of the statement of others as well as himself. When the Scrivenoter shall have received the answer of the accused, he shall transmit a copy of all the papers in the case to each member of the Supreme Nine, who shall determine the innocence or guilt of the defendant, and in case of conviction fix such penalty as they may deem proper.

In case the accused shall not make answer, within the time herein prescribed, he shall stand suspended until such answer shall be filed.

If any member shall make a false or malicious charge against another member, he shall be subject to suspension or expulsion by the Supreme Nine, and in any case in which the accused may be acquitted the burden of proof shall be upon the complainant to show that he acted in good faith in case the acquittal shall result from a failure to prove the facts alleged, but not when the acquittal results from the construction of the law.

The serving of intoxicating liquors at any session on the roof or in or around the place of meeting, or the initiation of any candidate under the perceptible influence of liquor, or the presence of any member under like influence, is absolutely prohibited, and it is the duty of the officer in charge to see that this section is enforced. Any Hoo-Hoo refusing to obey the mandate of the officer in charge is subject to expulsion from the Order on no further evidence than the signed statement of the officers acting for the Order where the offense occurred.

Sec. 5. Whenever a member of this Order is suspended the Scrivenoter shall demand of him a return of his handbook and button, which shall be retained by the Scrivenoter during the period of his suspension. Whenever a member of this Order is expelled, the Scrivenoter shall demand a return of his handbook and button, and if the same shall not be returned within 33 days, he shall proceed to the recovery of same by action of law.

ARTICLE IX.—AMENDMENTS.

Section 1. This Constitution may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the represented membership of the Order as provided in Article VI hereof at any Hoo-Hoo Annual.

By-Laws.

1. In the absence of the Snark from any Hoo-Hoo Annual, his place shall be taken by the next officer in rank who is present. In case of temporary vacancy in any position, the acting Snark shall have power to temporarily fill such vacancy.

2. The Scrivenoter shall be custodian of the funds of the Order, and shall give bond satisfactory to the Supreme Nine in the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000), the cost of said bond being defrayed by the Order. He shall pay out moneys only on vouchers countersigned by the Snark and Senior Hoo-Hoo. He shall receive an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500), and be allowed necessary expense for the proper conduct of his office.

3. The accounts and disbursements of the Scrivenoter shall be annually audited within nine days of each approaching Annual by a competent accountant appointed by the Snark for that purpose; and the certified report of such auditor shall accompany the annual report of the Scrivenoter. Such necessary expense as may attach to such auditing shall be paid upon proper voucher.

4. In case of the death of a member of the Order in good standing his number and name shall be retained in all official numerical lists of members of the Order thereafter published, but surrounded by black lines. In case of the resignation, suspension or expulsion of a member, his name shall be dropped from the rolls of the Order.

5. It shall be the duty of the Vicegerent Snark, at the close of each concatenation, to remit to the Scrivenoter $5.00, together with one year's dues, for each regular member initiated, which amount shall cover the dues to the next Hoo-Hoo Day. He shall remit ninety dollars ($90) for each honorary member, and twenty-three dollars and thirty-four cents ($23.34) for each life member obligated under Sections 8 and 9 of Article III of our Constitution. He shall also remit the balance of funds received at any concatenation which has not been expended in the necessary expenses of the concatenation, rendering a detailed account of same, attested by the acting Scrivenoter and Custodian.

Out of the fund set apart for the Vicegerent Snark he may pay his necessary expenses for attending such concatenation, and those of such other members as he may deem necessary to call upon for assistance in the work.

6. The Hoo-Hoo Annual shall be governed in its deliberations by Roberts' Rules of Order, unless otherwise provided for.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JANUARY, 1912.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

The following shows at a glance the meetings to be held within the next five weeks. Do The Bulletin and the officers of Hoo-Hoo the favor of glancing over this and the comments which are appended.

- January 10, Lincoln, Neb.
- January 11, Indianapolis, Ind.
- January 16, Denver, Colo.
- January 18, Cairo, Ill.
- January 19, Salt Lake City, Utah.
- January 23, Dayton, Ohio.
- January 23, Buffalo, N. Y.
- January 25, Kansas City, Mo.
- January 27, Little Rock, Ark.
- January 27, Tampa, Fla.
- January ?, Gulfport, Miss.
- February 2, Charleston, W. Va.
- February 6-7, New Orleans, La.
- February 7-8, Spokane, Wash.
- February 10, Shreveport, La.
- February 13-14, Chicago, Ill.
- February 15-16-17, Seattle, Wash.

The first two of the meetings named above will occur before The Bulletin can reach its readers. The first will be held by Vicegerent S. M. Eaton, and the latter by Vicegerent J. G. Brannum. Both these meetings are to occur in connection with important lumber association meetings.

Next in date is the meeting at Denver. This will be held by Vicegerent Wm. R. McFarland, assisted by all the old guard that has so long supported Hoo-Hoo work in Colorado and which effected the spread of the Order into several of the contiguous States. The meeting occurs in connection with the Colorado and Wyoming Lumber Dealers' Association. A large class will be initiated.

The meeting at Cairo on January 18 is in connection with the meeting of the Southern Illinois Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, and will be held by Vicegerent F. C. Cannon, assisted by that good Hoo-Hoo and good lumberman, ex-Vicegerent P. T. Langan. Many others will take part in the meeting. Supreme Representative Stephenson will attend. A large class is in prospect and a most enjoyable time is assured.

Vicegerent W. P. Monson has been at work on arrangements for a meeting at Salt Lake City ever since his appointment two months ago. He has the stage all set for a very successful meeting. Nowhere in Hoo-Hoo territory has better concatenations been held than at Salt Lake. A class of eighteen or twenty is assured, and the number may largely exceed this. Another meeting will be held later on by Vicegerent Monson, probably at Ogden, the place of his residence.

The meeting at Dayton, Ohio, on January 23 is to be made the occasion for a general round-up of the membership of the State of Ohio. Vicegerent J. E. McNally, assisted by Brother M. A. Hayward and a number of other Columbus members, has been at work on the proposition for more than sixty days. A more extended mention of the arrangements for this meeting appears elsewhere. Notices have been sent to every member of the Order in the State, and a special personal letter written to many of them. A concerted effort to revive the interest of the old-time members in Ohio will be the leading feature of the meeting. The meeting, it should be noted, will occur in connection with the annual meeting of the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber Dealers, a convention that is always well attended. The presence of Snark Boggess will lend additional interest to this meeting.

The meeting at Buffalo, N. Y., will be held by the newly appointed Vicegerent, H. T. Trotter, of Mixer & Co., the well-known wholesale lumber firm of Buffalo. The meeting will occur in connection with the annual session of the Retail Lumber Dealers' Association of the State of New York. Brother Trotter has behind him the hearty assistance and cooperation of the old guard members of Buffalo. He is confident of making the meeting most enjoyable and successful.

The meeting at Kansas City on the evening of January 25, during the sessions of the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association, has already been widely announced. It will be presided over by Vicegerent N. H. Huey, assisted by a half-dozen or more Vicegerents from Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, and probably as many ex-Vicegerents from the same territory. Among the men who are assisting Brother Huey, and notable for past good work, may be mentioned Vicegerent Ed A. Horr, of Atchison, Kans., whose recent successful concatenation will be remembered; Ed Leech, of Salina, Kans.; ex-Vicegerent Homer P. Allen, of Kansas City, and numerous others. Vicegerent Huey will have with him also two and probably three members of the Supreme Nine. Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd will be present, and Supreme Arcanoper John C. Ray, of Waco, Texas, is expected. The concatenation will be held at the Eagles' Home, the magnificent hall in which the concatenation was held last year. The initiatory session will occur after the show at the Orpheum, tendered by the Kansas City lumbermen to the association membership and visitors. For the session on the roof the Hoo-Hoo have accepted the invitation of the Kansas City Bark and Sap Club, of which Vicegerent Huey is president. An unusual and novel entertainment is promised all who participate. The following are the committees in charge of arrangements:

Entertainment, E. M. Lockridge, Chairman; L. Hector and E. McLain. Program, Ed Leech, Chairman; R. J. Oliver and L. Noll. Hall and Refreshments, N. H. Huey, Chairman; E. A. Cummings and F. C. Mariner.

It is not unlikely the class initiated will be a record-breaker, as the lumber convention is usually attended by from twelve to fifteen hundred lumbermen and traveling men. This year the attendance is expected to be unusually large.

Vicegerent W. C. Norman, appointed only a few weeks ago, has announced a meeting for Little Rock to occur on January 27. He is being actively assisted in all arrangements by ex-Vicegerent R. A. Parke, and that good Hoo-Hoo, J. C. McGrath. He is also being ably assisted by Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd, who will attend the meeting, coming immediately back from the Kansas City convention to be present. This Little Rock meeting will be the beginning of a series of concatenations to be held in Arkansas, including one at Glenwood, Ark., for which arrangements are already under way.

Meetings at Tampa, Fla., January 27, and at Gulfport, Miss., for which exact date has not been named at this writing, complete the list of meetings for the last two weeks of January. The meeting at Gulfport will be held by Vicegerent J. F. Wilder, assisted by Supreme Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell, and will occur in connection with the meeting of the Mississippi Yellow Pine Manufacturers' Association. The meeting at Tampa, Fla., will be held by Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew, who has already held one notably successful meeting since his appointment in October. He is being assisted, as before, by Brother Marcus E. Sperry.

Announcement has just been made of a meeting to occur at Charleston, W. Va., on "Ground Hog" day. This will be held by Vicegerent James Morrison, newly appointed for Western District of West Virginia. He will have the able assistance of Snark Boggess, together with a number of ex-Vicegerents and a number of men who have long been prominent in the Order in West Virginia. The meeting will be the start-off for a series of concatenations to occur in West Virginia and the states contiguous. Four Vicegerents have been appointed and have got to work in West Virginia, four in North Carolina, and three in Maryland. Every one of these men is scheduled for at least one concatenation, and is now at work on the preliminaries. Brother J. E. Walker, of Roanoke, whose splendid concatenation of last summer is well remembered, has been reappointed for the Western District of the Old Dominion, and will fall in line with a good concatenation to come along with the others in the neighboring States. Another appointment for Virginia will be announced in a few days, the appointee to be located at Norfolk. Since the Annual Meeting Snark Boggess has spent much of his time at Roanoke, Va., near which place he has large business interests. He has, therefore, divided much of his time between Clarksburg, W. Va., and Roanoke, Va., and has kept wonderfully well in touch with all the Hoo-Hoo work throughout both States.

The big round-up for February will be the big concatenation at New Orleans on February 6 or 7, at the meeting of the Yellow Pine Manufacturers' Association. Geo. W. Wicks, Vicegerent at New Orleans, is in charge of this, with a corps of helpers. Supreme Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell is especially interesting himself in this meeting, as it comes right in his balliwick, and as he is himself a prominent yellow pine manufacturer. Vicegerents Wilder and Schumann, of Mississippi, will participate, as will also Vicegerent J. W. Douglas, of Birmingham. All these men are yellow piners, and are fully determined that the New Orleans meeting shall be made a notable success. The presence is also counted on of that live wire from Texas, Supreme Arcanoper John C. Ray. In fact, quite as much interest is being worked up in this New Orleans meeting on the west side of the river as on the east side, and quite as much outside of New Orleans as in the city. Vicegerent F. Rust Smith, of Pensacola, Fla., and ex-Vicegerent H. B. Wood, of Birmingham, the latter also a prominent yellow pine man, together with ex-Vicegerent H. H. Snell, another lumberman of the same stripe, so to speak, also of Birmingham, will fetch along quite a delegation of Florida and Alabama lumbermen.

The exact date for the meeting at Spokane, Wash., has not been announced by Vicegerent Ehrmantraut, but the meeting will likely occur during the meeting of the Northwestern Pine Manufacturers' Association, February 7-8. Vicegerent Ehrmantraut was only recently appointed on an application to have that action taken sent in to the Supreme Nine over the signatures of more than forty of the members of Spokane. Vicegerent Ehrmantraut set to work immediately making arrangements for the meeting now announced. It is to be a big one, and a number of members and candidates are expected to come up from Northern Idaho. All the members who have made Hoo-Hoo what it is at Spokane and throughout Western Washington are heartily participating in the arrangements for this meeting.

The meeting at Shreveport, La., is being worked up by Vicegerent F. G. Snyder, recently appointed, assisted by a number of the local members. No concatenation was held at Shreveport last year, which is the first time such a thing has happened for many years, with the effect that the membership there is now determined on making good for lost time in having this coming concatenation one of the old-time sort. Brother Snyder is another good Hoo-Hoo who served a term as Vicegerent and did excellent work several years ago, but who has not hesitated a moment to pull off his coat and put his shoulder to the wheel for more work. The other two men alluded to here are W. C. Norman, of Little Rock, and L. A. Bartholomew, of Tampa, Fla.

The meeting at Chicago, Ill., on either the 15th or 16th of February will occur during the Illinois Lumber Dealers' Association meeting. It will be held by Vicegerent A. H. Ruth, assisted by Brother T. A. Moore, F. L. Johnson, Jr., and many others. Brother Ruth has already put arrangements well under way, and is confident of making the meeting a big success.

The meeting at Seattle, during the session of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association, February 15-17, is already an assured success. Vicegerent L. R. Fifer, of the Long-Bell Lumber Company, has been quietly at work ever since his appointment, and has now a fine corps of lumber traveling salesmen covering the whole of Western Washington and actively assisting him in arrangements for this meeting. He expects to have present at the meeting Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter, of Portland, and ex-Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo G. A. Griswold, also of Portland, together with many of the old-timers, ex-Vicegerents and others, such as E. Clark Evans and Victor H. Beckman.

In addition to the above many other concatenations will occur during February. For instance, a class of twelve has already been lined up at Lake Charles, La., where a Vicegerent will be appointed in a few days. Appointment of E. V. Folsom, assistant sales manager of the Lutchter & Moore Lumber Company, has just been made at Orange, Texas, and here, too, a concatenation will be held, much of the preliminary work having already been done.

Vicegerent H. H. Coombs, Vicegerent at Tifton, Ga., Southern representative of the H. H. Hettler Lumber Company, of Chicago, writes that he will hold a meeting soon at either Waycross or Bainbridge, Ga., while Vicegerent H. H. Hoyt, of the Borden-Vay Lumber Company, of Quincy, Ill., makes the same announcement of a meeting to be held in his district. Brother Hoyt is now in correspondence with Brother C. H. Hascall, of Chandlersville, Ill., who brought up some time ago the matter of a concatenation there. Definite announcement covering this will come a little later.

Vicegerent Carroll L. Beck, working with that good ex-Supreme Niner, Charlie Wolfin, of the Wolfin-Luhring Lumber Company, of Evansville, Ind., is at work on a meeting to come within the next few weeks. Vicegerent Beck thought of holding this meeting at Evansville on January 18, at the time of the meeting of the Indiana Hardwood Lumbermen's Association. As the lumber meeting, however, occupies only one day, and is to be followed by an elaborate banquet, tendered by the Evansville lumbermen in the evening, he has concluded that a good opportunity will not exist for a first-class concatenation. He will announce time and place later.

So much for "Coming Concatenations" for the start-off of this year of grace 1912. Was such a record ever before equalled? It was not. Doing pretty well, don't you think, in view of the total death of the Order so hysterically announced a few weeks ago by a handful of men, one of whom, going first out of one fit into fifteen, finally arrived at the point of setting the exact date for the Hoo-Hoo funeral. The whole thing fell through. Neither the corpse nor the mourners appeared.

It is to laugh.

Booming the Dayton Meeting.

The following letter was sent out from Columbus, Ohio, under date of January 15, in connection with the approaching concatenation at Dayton. The letter went out, as will be seen, over the joint signature of Vicegerent J. E. McNally and Brother Morris Hayward, both of whom are taking a deep interest in the outcome:

Dear Brother: In connection with the great revival of interest lately aroused in Hoo-Hoo, and in response to the numerous requests from all over the State, it has been decided to call a meeting of the Ohio Hoo-Hoo, and all others who can attend, at Dayton, January 23, 24 and 25, at the time of the annual meeting of the Ohio Retail Lumber Dealers' Association. The Hoo-Hoo matters, beyond the big concatenation which will be held, will occupy but a very little of your time, leaving you plenty of time to look after your own business.

It is especially requested that all members come prepared to pay up their dues. For those who, through oversight and neglect, have failed to pay their dues for several years, it has been provided that their reinstatement may be effected upon the payment of the flat sum of $5.00—this to cover dues to September 9, 1912. We are advised that many will take advantage of this, and finding your name on the list of those who are in arrears, we write this personal letter to ask if you will not come along with us.

You may ask, Why? Well, for one thing, we have now established the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, from which is paid to the family of the deceased participant $250 immediately on notice of death. We appreciate that personally you probably do not need this protection, but there are many of our members who do, evidenced by the fact that during the year in which this fund has been in operation claims have amounted to $5,000, all paid without a moment's delay or the least bit of red tape, and in most instances the payment was of the greatest aid at a time when sorely needed. We feel that from the charitable side of the question you cannot help but see the good your help will do. In this connection read the enclosed booklet, fully explanatory of this death fund.

If you find you cannot attend the meeting, will you not at least come along with us to the extent of remitting your dues? We need you. Some good woman left a widow with several helpless, fatherless children, needs your aid. Will you not come? Make checks payable to J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, mailing to Columbus, Ohio, to either McNally or Hayward.

Faternally yours,
Chairman of Committee.

Vicegerent,

THE HOO-HOO DEATH EMERGENCY FUND.

Below is statement of the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund to close of business, January 6:

Only two death claims appear in the above as having been paid since report in December Bulletin. A third death, however, has occurred, for which a draft authorized by wire has not yet been presented for payment. In the meantime, however, at least four deaths have been reported among members who responded to either the First or Second Call, but who declined or failed through oversight to come in on the Third Call. It has been hard to decline payment of these claims, as in two cases to our certain knowledge the money was most direly needed. Under the terms and conditions of the plan there was nothing to do but to decline them—the men had simply failed to keep "in line."

The whole proposition of participation in this death fund is purely voluntary. There can be no dunning for renewal of subscription. However, from now on, realizing that in nearly every case failure to respond to the succeeding call is through pure negligence or oversight, a careful checking will be made of the responses to each call, checking with the responses to the previous call, and to every man who has not responded after a reasonable time to the outstanding call, a personal letter will be sent. This will involve considerable work and expense, but in the judgment of The Bulletin it is well worth doing. It will put the proposition squarely up to the man. It will at least make it a little less trying on the feelings to turn down these invalid claims that always urge that the man was a good Hoo-Hoo and that death came on him unawares when he intended all the time to keep up his subscription.

As a reminder right now, it may be stated that the Third Call (the now outstanding call) went out October 1. Every man who has responded to that call is in line all right, and will continue in line until the Fourth Call is issued. If he has not responded to this Third Call, he is not in line—he is absolutely "out" no matter what he did on the First and Second Calls. The proposition is a continuing one only when the man continues his part of it—that is, to pay up.

When the Fourth Call will be issued depends on two things—how the money continues to come in on the Third Call and how fast the deaths occur. Last year the death rate jumped up very high in February, March and April. Insurance men tell us that this is to be expected; that the early spring is the season of greatest mortality among adults. It looks singular that a man should scuffle through a long, hard winter, and then die just when the birds and leaves and flowers are ready to come again, but it is a fact that they do so.

It will be seen that we are still getting in about $200 a month on this Third Call, and that we have a very comfortable balance still to the good—say $4,000 out of which to pay claims, above the minimum reserve of $2,000.

In our judgment this $4,000 clear balance ought to take us through to April, unless something exceptional happens to the death rate. If this is so, the new call will go out just when it did last year, thereby confirming the substantial accuracy of The Bulletin's predictions in the beginning, that the deaths will average right at eight to the thousand per annum necessitating two calls each twelve months, and making the proposition cost the participant $4.00 per annum for $250, or at the rate of $16 per thousand per annum.

It is obvious, however, that this good record cannot be continued very long unless the number of subscribers increases on future calls. The participants who came in on the First Call and who have continued are older now than they were, and getting a little older every time the wheel turns. Out of a given number of men, whether large or small, the percentage of mortality increases each year, with the increasing age. We must continue to get in new men if we are to continue the success of this fund.

It will be seen that the amount so far received on the Third Call (up to January 6) is only $4,643.50, whereas on the Second Call we received a total of $5,637.97, just about $1,000 more than the sum received so far on Third Call. However, as stated above, the money on this Third Call is still coming in at the rate of about $50 per week. If this keeps up and the number of deaths does not compel the issuing of the Fourth Call until April, we will get in an additional sum of, say, $550. This will run total receipts of the Third Call up to about $5,100, only about $500 less than the amount received under Second Call. This is not much less, to be sure, but still it is less, and instead of a decrease we should show a constant increase, if the proposition is to be all the success it should be.

Clearly what we need is an increase in the number of subscribers to the fund. The easiest and quickest way to get them is for each participant to turn in and make one other member of the Order become a subscriber. There is not a participant in the undertaking but who can do this, and do it easily and promptly. It ought to be a pleasure for him to do it—that is, if he thinks, as The Bulletin does, that this death fund is the best thing Hoo-Hoo ever undertook, and the most economically handled thing that any organization ever put out. The fund is doing a noble work, and there is mighty little to us individually and collectively if we do not maintain and greatly enlarge its capabilities of doing good.

Suppose we try out this suggestion right now. Will you who read this be one to go out and "get your man"? This office will be glad to furnish any applicant with copies of the booklet explanatory of the whole proposition, its inception, plan of organization and report as to how it has come along. Now is a good time to make this effort. During the next two months of the lumber convention season every one of us will see from one to five hundred members of the Order. All we need to do is to speak a few words in season. The Bulletin has never yet seen or heard from a man who had looked into the thing far enough to understand just what it is, but who commended it. Let's act on this suggestion right now.

Just a word in further reminder to the participants or to those who have been participants in the past: Look right now and see if you have a card showing response to this Third Call. If you have not, then this Bulletin ought to be a sufficient reminder to you without waiting for a personal letter. If you have not a card, but still think you have paid, write in and find out. It is no trouble to look the matter up. If you have not a card and do not think you have paid, then you certainly should write in—enclosing check for $2.00.

Since the above was put in type comes the following from Arcanoper Jno. C. Ray:

Waco, Texas, January 8, 1912.—Mr. J. H. Baird, Scribe-noter, Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Jim: I am inclosing you a receipt from Mrs. John G. Fall for $250.00, which I received on the morning after I wired you. I tell you right now no other thing of this sort can come up to our little Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. You look at it this way: Friday afternoon, January 5, at 5 o'clock, I wired you of this man's death. Saturday morning, January 6, at 9 o'clock, I had the money for this man's wife and had a receipt for it. I tell you, old man, it gladdened the hearts of lots of our local Hoo-Hoo, lumbermen, and citizens of this city to know that this money had been paid to Mrs. Fall. Mr. Fall's illness has been practically of a year's duration. He has been a loyal Hoo-Hoo, and has been of great benefit to the Order.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN C. RAY, Arcanoper.

BUSINESS CHANGES.

Brother Maurice W. Wiley, for years President of the Wiley-Homer Lumber Company, of Baltimore, and an old time-tried and fire-tested Hoo-Hoo, has made a change of business connection. Having sold out his interests in his old company to his partner, Mr. Homer, he has associated himself in a wholesale lumber business to be conducted under the name of Wm. M. Burgan, 604 Continental Trust Building, Baltimore, Md. Here are the wishes of hundreds of friends in Hoo-Hoo and out of it for Brother Wiley's very great success in his new connection.

Brother Marcus E. Sperry, who helped so ably with the concatenation held recently at Ocala, Fla., by Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew, has gone into the timberland business at Tampa in his own name. Brother Sperry's stationery bears the legend, "Business opportunities." He will handle all properties in which lumbermen are interested, saw mills, planing mills, etc., looking up location for all such enterprises, and generally bringing together lumbermen and timber holders who want to make any sort of a trade, swap or combination. Brother Sperry was for some time connected with the Gress Manufacturing Company at Jacksonville, Fla., before that being located at Atlanta.

Vicegerent Carroll L. Beck, of Bloomington, Ind., made a change of firm connection on January 1, going with W. J. Hughes & Son, the well-known sash, door and blind concern of Louisville, Ky. Brother Beck has formerly represented for seven years the Foster-Munger Company, of Chicago. The field of his activities will remain practically unchanged. He will continue to cover Southern Indiana and Western Kentucky.

Another of our Vicegerents makes a business change with the first of the year. This is Vicegerent N. H. Huey, at Kansas City. On January 1 he formed a connection with the Angelina County Lumber Company, of Keltys, Texas, a connection with which he is much pleased. He says it puts behind him a fine stock of fine lumber cut by a fine mill out of fine timber—both long leaf and short leaf. Brother Huey will continue to cover about the same territory as heretofore. His smiling countenance will not, therefore, be withheld from his friends, but his line of talk will be of his new company's products.

NOTES & COMMENTS

The month that marks the beginning of the earth's new journey around the sun is nearly in the middle of the financial year. And yet it seems to denote an intermission, a pause in the so-called march of events. It offers opportunity alike for retrospect and prophecy.

The earth has made the trip around the sun countless times, and yet the time is different from all others because, as astronomers tell us, the whole solar system (the sun and all the spinning planets, including the earth—a comely wheel—) is rushing forward at tremendous speed toward a goal which no man knows. Our place in the heavens is not the same as it was last year—some of the stars are no longer there, while others are opening up a new vista of light and color. But the law of gravitation is so exact that the earth's return is as predictable as the seasons.

And so it is that the year is always different from the year. New constellations and new needs of the world are being met, and new ambitions are being set. The year is a constant state of flux, and the only thing that is certain is that it is always changing.

It is a curious thing, the year, that it should be so full of change and yet so full of continuity. It is a year of many faces, and it is a year of many hearts. It is a year of many dreams, and it is a year of many hopes. It is a year of many sorrows, and it is a year of many joys. It is a year of many tears, and it is a year of many smiles. It is a year of many lives, and it is a year of many deaths. It is a year of many beginnings, and it is a year of many endings. It is a year of many things, and it is a year of many more.

more pathetic than this can possibly be imagined. In some of these cases the money was greatly needed and it was truly painful to withhold it.

This whole plan of the Death Emergency Fund is, of course, based on voluntary contributions, and it was not the idea of the Supreme Nine for the Scrivener to go after the contributors in a drastic, "dunning" sort of way. Nevertheless it has become manifest that efforts should not stop with the mere sending out of notices to the recurring calls, but that this office should undertake the extra work of checking over the call after a lapse of a month or such a matter, and see who failed to respond to the last call who had already responded to a preceding call—and that to every such person there should be written a courteous letter, to the end that he might not drop out through failure to get the formal notice or through oversight. So obvious seems the necessity of this that the work of "checking" on the Third Call (and comparing it with the First and Second Call) has begun and is now well under way. It is quite a tedious task, but it is progressing as fast as possible. It unquestionably will redound to the advantage of the contributors, and to that extent will serve to insure the permanency of the plan. It is important that every possible effort be made in this connection. The Death Emergency Fund has worked well so far, and has aroused much interest even among those who already carry so much insurance that the small additional amount is negligible except in so far as their cooperation helps to carry on the work. It is hoped and believed that the plan will increase in efficiency as time goes on and as new phases of the scheme may present themselves.

The "men in the field" are very busy with their various plans for extending the bounds of the Great Black Cat's domain. The concatenations in prospect embrace a territory reaching from the Gulf Coast to New York State and from Florida to Washington. Some of these meetings will have occurred before this issue of The Bulletin is mailed, and no doubt arrangements for others will have been completed. The Vicegerents are energetic and able men, as is fitting that they should be, for on their efforts depends the success of the year's work, though the degree of hearty cooperation manifested all along the line on the part of the lay members is also extremely gratifying and is a very real factor in advancing the interests of Hoo-Hoo.

The mail received at the Scrivener's office is and has been for months exceptionally heavy. Also it has been exceptionally interesting. Letters are human documents which constitute an absorbing study. When one takes his pen in hand, he usually intends to tell of what he wants to do or have done or what he disapproves of being done, or really he accomplishes far more than this—he reveals what he is. Our enemies magnify our faults, and our friends exaggerate our virtues. We ourselves tell what we really are.

The year is a curious thing. It refuses to be caged or to stay caged up. With grim determination it "will out." Whether it starts in every line of thought in the soul; hypocrisy, hypocrisy from the pages of the nature is steeped in deceit, it will have its feeble light in a message clicked across a doorway. Distance is no barrier to the self; for it is and space is not exist. Where indeed can the self hide from the self of men? Where with shall it be revealed?

Of all the things in the world, the year is mightier than the sword, and perhaps the year is a far more dangerous thing to hold a sword. With a strong hand and one without the edge of a sword, but with a sword without behind the hand, you can have long experience with a pen and still be a manly man. It is a year of many things, and it is a year of many more. It is a year of many lives, and it is a year of many deaths. It is a year of many beginnings, and it is a year of many endings. It is a year of many things, and it is a year of many more.

means of "self-expression" a cutlass has its limitations. A man slashing around with a glittering blade would be appalling, terrifying; but his wild antics would hardly be interpreted as the outlet for a petty and ignoble nature. You might guess him to be a maniac, but you would not size him up as striving to disguise jealousy or to cloak ambition.

The comparative harmlessness of a sword lies in its simplicity. A blade is simple; a pen is complex. There is such a thing as a safety razor. Who ever heard of a safety pen? The wounds inflicted by a sword on an enemy, or mayhap on the luckless wielder of the weapon, will sometimes heal and leave no scar. The written words remain.

Yet for one whose principles and aims are right, the pen holds no menace. Regardless of "style" or rules of language, that which is genuine will be evident. What is true will ring true, whether said in pure English or in slang.

Because the activities of the pen, so to speak, are at once so unrestricted and so complex, an enormous mass of correspondence cannot but be of deepest interest. It is a world in miniature.

It is a feature of this year's work that never before have there been so many expressions of interest in the Order, although letters of encouragement have never been lacking. "If I can be of any use in any way to make this a banner year, call on me," writes a brother in the East, and from the Puget Sound region comes the message. "Count me among the live ones." From the Middle West the cheerful prophecy is sent, "I predict a still greater future for Hoo-Hoo. It appears to me that prospects are brighter for the Order than ever before."

But to quote is hopeless—this whole paper could be filled with extracts from innumerable letters of like tenor.

Such messages are an inspiration and a solace. They are evidence of that loyalty to the Order which alone can make of Hoo-Hoo an organization of benefit to its members and of real use in the world.

During the talk and argument about reciprocity, Rudyard Kipling, in almost childlike wonder, exclaimed: "I do not understand how 9,000,000 people can enter into such arrangements as are proposed with 90,000,000 strangers." If Kipling knew anything about Hoo-Hoo, he would find it hard to understand how he ever thought of "strangers" in connection with Canadians and the people of the United States. Hoo-Hoo has had no difficulty in welding the people of the two countries into a brotherhood that knows no boundary lines. There may be difference of opinion as to reciprocity, but there is no thought of our being "strangers" to each other.

By a strange coincidence, two of the sons of one of the most eminent of Englishmen are buried in America. Charles Dickens was more than a great writer. Through his writings he was a great reformer. Thousands of people have a square deal now because he lived and wrote. Alfred Tennyson Dickens, who came over here a short time ago to deliver a course of lectures, died the other day in New York, and his body was laid in a vault, the funeral services being conducted by Reverend W. T. Manning, of Trinity Church, formerly rector of Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn. Francis Dickens, elder son of the great writer, died at Moline, Ill., in 1884, while on a lecture tour. He was buried at Moline on a bluff which commands a wide view of the Mississippi Valley. His tombstone bears a portrait medallion which is said to be a good likeness and of superior workmanship. Both the sons of Dickens died suddenly and far from home, yet not among strangers, for in the heart of thousands of Americans there is a very warm place for any one nearly related to him who was the creator of Tiny Tim, of Dolly Varden and Little Nell and Oliver Twist, and who was the abolisher of the debtors' prison and the reformer of schools and almshouses.

Canada is sometimes referred to by enthusiastic Canadian writers as the "empire of the larger hope." How appropriate this is, so far as concerns settlers who come over from the "old country," is shown in the following, from a letter written by a farmer in Saskatchewan: "One source of consolation is that we are sole owners of our property and can either dispose of it or will it to our descendants."

The letter from which the foregoing is quoted was written to Lady Gordon Cathcart, Cluny Castle, Aberdeen, and was printed lately in a paper published in a town in the Highlands of Scotland. It appears that Lady Cathcart some years ago assisted a number of poor farmers to emigrate to Canada from her estates in the west coast islands of Scotland, and recently some of them have written to inform her of their present condition. The fact that in the new world they are able to own land outright, instead of renting or leasing a small piece of ground from the owner of an immense entailed estate, makes a great difference in their outlook on life. One man writes that he owns 800 acres of land, sixty head of cattle, twenty horses and seventy-five sheep, and that one of his sons owns a livery and feed stable worth $6,000. Another one of these settlers seems, under the circumstances, but mildly enthusiastic. He writes:

"At the present time I have only 677 acres on my estate, twelve horses, twenty-two head of cattle, eleven pigs, a large number of fowls, my wife and ten children—six daughters and four boys." He adds, however, "We shall always speak in loving memory of your Ladyship as long as we live and of what you have done for us, which our fathers and mothers could not have done for us. Enclosed is a photograph of the family group."

We of the United States may well envy our northern neighbor the thrifty class of settlers which the latter country is securing, especially when we contemplate the riff-raff pouring into our own land from the countries of Southern Europe.

Louisiana, Illinois and one or two other States have forbidden the use of public drinking cups in Pullman cars. The women's clubs of Kentucky are agitating for a similar law in that State. Soon the time will come when the unwary traveler who has neglected to provide himself with a cup must go thirsty. The desert will not be the only place where the pilgrim with parched tongue and feverish brow will have tantalizing visions of bubbling springs and gushing fountains. Perhaps in course of time, and after many painful experiences, the average traveling man will learn to pack his cup along with collars and other things which he carries as a matter of course. A cup should be as easy to remember as a bottle, but just at first it won't be.

The object of doing away with the public drinking cup is to promote sanitation and to safeguard the health of the people. But this sort of thing can easily be overdone. Kansas has been agitating for a law against coffee drinking, and its health officers are warning citizens to clip their cats in order to eliminate germs. A list of all the preposterous laws proposed would be too long to print. A Western paper says:

We may laugh at them as freak legislation, but the unfortunate traveler who has been fined $20 for smoking a cigar on Sunday or drinking a glass of beer on Monday will hardly find them a laughing matter. At a distance they are objects of derision; at close quarters they are objects of exasperation and detestation. If this sort of insanity continues it will destroy the last remnant of personal liberty that is left to us. It will be legislated to death. An impudent and intrusive officialism will be always at hand to regulate what we shall eat, what we shall drink, and where-withal we shall be clothed. Every session of every legislature is besieged by social mountebanks clamoring for some new prohibition, some new restriction, some new regulation.

All Lumbermen at San Diego.

The concatenation held by Vicegerent J. T. Bate, of Los Angeles, at San Diego on December 16, proved all the success that was anticipated. Vicegerent Bate was ably assisted by Brother H. D. White, of the Western Lumber Company and the M. A. Graham Mill Company, who is a very prominent lumberman of San Diego. The initiates were all lumbermen, without an exception, and all of the higher type. The session-on-the-roof took the form of a splendid banquet held in the grill room of the U. S. Grant Hotel.

Vicegerent Bate writes that this concatenation gives San Diego a total of thirty-five members, and says they are discussing the establishment of a Hoo-Hoo Club there. The lumber business of San Diego is increasing rapidly, and it is Vicegerent Bate's expectation that one or two more concatenations will occur there during this Hoo-Hoo year. He says that the San Diego Hoo-Hoo are planning "something special to interest Hoo-Hoo during the exposition at San Francisco in 1915." Vicegerent Bate and Brother White deserve much credit for the success made of this meeting.

Concatenation No. 1743, San Diego, Cal., December 22, 1911.

Twenty-four in Montana.

On account, no doubt, of being called away by important business, Vicegerent H. M. Yaw has not made formal report of the splendid concatenation he held at Great Falls, Mont., on December 16. The lumber papers report the meeting as a most successful one, twenty-four men having been initiated, all of the highest type and nearly all of them lumbermen.

The meeting occurred in connection with the convention of the Montana Retail Lumbermen's Association. On the evening of the concatenation all the visiting ladies were entertained at the home of Mrs. H. A. Templeton, wife of the President of the association, while the men adjourned to the concatenation at Luther Hall. At the close of the concatenation every one present was invited to attend the session-on-the-roof in the palm room of the Rainbow Hotel. Special music by the orchestra and vocal numbers by Mrs. C. S. Grant were furnished while the members and new initiates enjoyed the feast prepared for them. This occurred on the evening of the first day of the lumber convention and was a most enjoyable incident of a very enjoyable meeting.

The following are the initiates as reported in the lumber papers; The Bulletin does not guarantee accuracy of names, as the blanks have not come to hand:

- A. Ellis, Harlem, Mont., A Ellis Lumber Company.
 William J. Scott, Hardin, Mont., Bacheller-Scott Lumber Company.
 Henry C. Stimson, Triudent, Mont., Three Forks Portland Cement Company.
 Wesley L. Herman, Great Northern Traveling, Freight and Passenger Agent.
 George W. Slack, Kallispell, Mont., Somers Lumber Company.
 Fred G. Hanneman, Seattle, Wash., Chicago Lumber & Coal Company.
 Edward G. Matke, Williams, Mont., Nuzum-Matke Lumber Company.
 Rudolph Lehr, Valler, Mont., Libby Lumber Company.
 Andrew Westburg, Columbia Falls, Westburg Lumber Company.
 Herman Karow, Somers, Mont., Somers Lumber Company.
 Ralph E. Nuzum, Valler, Mont., Valler Lumber & Investment Company.
 W. E. Fleming, Valler, Mont., Boorman Mercantile Company.
 Edward T. Fitzgerald, Collins, Mont., Boorman Mercantile Company.
 Walter S. O'Connell, Stanford, Mont., Stanford Mercantile Company.
 Frank Walnum, Cascade, Mont., Cascade Lumber Company.
 Gustave F. Thompson, Malta, Mont., Thompson Lumber Company.
 Lewis J. Hancock, Great Falls, Mont.; St. Anthony & Dakota Lumber Company.
 Royal S. Woods, Galata, Mont., R. S. Woods.
 H. R. Thompson, Chouteau, Mont., H. R. Thompson.
 Thomas Jefferson Purser, Great Falls, Mont.; Holcer-Boorman Lumber Company.
 William C. Lyng, Fort Benton, Missouri River Lumber Company.

First at Toledo Since 1901.

Just as we go to press comes in formal report from Supreme Representative W. M. Stephenson of Vicegerent Frank Spangler's concatenation at Toledo on January 6. While only six men were initiated, the meeting was both successful and enjoyable. The meeting occurred during the worst of the recent blizzard, which served to keep away not only many members, but several of the candidates.

The meeting was held in the hall of the Builders' Exchange, the work beginning at 7:30 p. m., and being all out and over by 11:30. An old-time "session-on-the-roof" was held after the initiation, in the same hall and room, and every one had a good time. Brother Frank Spangler spoke at some length, telling of the purposes, methods and benefits of Hoo-Hoo. Supreme Representative Stephenson spoke briefly in explanation of the Death Emergency Fund, while Brother Sam D. Dare and several others told good stories.

When it is considered that this is the first concatenation to be held at Toledo since 1901, and many of the members we once had there have either died, moved away or gone out of the lumber business, this first meeting of Vicegerent Spangler's cannot be regarded other than as a pronounced success. He has certainly worked hard to bring it about, and deserves much credit. While he feels somewhat disappointed over the number both of his initiates and of the members he had present, he feels that he has re-awakened a very healthy interest.

Following are the officers who administered the ceremonies and the list of initiates:

Snark, Frank Spangler; Senior Hoo-Hoo, L. D. Gotshall; Junior Hoo-Hoo, W. M. Stephenson; Bojum, W. H. Talbott; Scrivenoter, E. H. Wean; Jabberwock, C. H. Reiser; Custocatian, A. T. Neff; Arcanoper, Sam D. Dare; Gurdon, N. L. Curtis.

- 26172 Richard Jay Bird, Ypsilanti, Mich.; partner Bird & Brown.
 26173 Edwin Dash Goulet, Toledo, Ohio; secretary and treasurer Goulet & Co.
 26174 Hugh William Hubbard, Toledo, Ohio; salesman W. T. Hubbard.
 26175 Earl Pardee Payne, Port Clinton, Ohio; assistant manager E. Clinton Lbr. & Coal Co.
 26176 Frederick John Puck, Toledo, Ohio; vice president The Western Mfg. Co.
 26177 William Harrison Whaley, Milan, Mich.; buyer Gotshall Mfg. Co., Toledo, Ohio.

LUMBERMEN BEWARE.

One H. L. Sartain, claiming to be a Hoo-Hoo, and presenting an alleged power of attorney from Anton Soeller, the well-known hardwood exporter of New Orleans, is reported to be obtaining money on bogus drafts and checks from lumbermen and others in Texas. No man of this name was ever a member of Hoo-Hoo, though Sartain exhibits a Hoo-Hoo button, and claims as his the number of a man in Nebraska who is in good standing, and, so far as this office knows, is a man of character and standing. The New Orleans exporter writes a Texas victim about Mr. Sartain's actions as follows: "New Orleans, La., Dec. 23, 1911.—Mr. Sartain is receiving money under false pretenses. A great many drafts have come in, and I am putting your letter with a big bunch of others into the hands of my lawyer. The power of attorney is void, and in case you can take some steps against him same will be appreciated. I sympathize with you in this matter, but am unable to do anything."

The two following communications are self-explanatory:

Mr. J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Sir and Brother: Enclosed you will please find card of description with reward offered for the arrest of a certain individual going under the name of "Albert" A. J. Galloway, and claiming to represent R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, in outdoor advertising. He works his game by going to his victim and getting an estimate on enough material to erect a certain number of billboards, these boards to be 8 feet high and 20 feet long. He is very particular to have good material figured and uses three pieces 2x4x20 feet, one at the bottom, one at the top and one in the center, with one at each end 8 feet long. This man has letters, supposed to be from the Reynolds Tobacco Company, with instructions regarding the boards, as well as other instructions concerning the checks they are supposed to have sent him. The City Lumber Company took in one of his checks and one of the leading liverymen of this town endorsed a check for him, and, of course, the check proved to be a fraud. Of course the check he got off on the City Lumber Company was for more than the bill, and he got the difference in cash.

We wish you would publish this man in The Bulletin.

Yours truly,

CITY LUMBER COMPANY.

W. C. Hickman (No. 19422.)

$25.00 Reward.

Arrest (Albert) A. J. Galloway, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, weight about 160 pounds, age about 45; decided blonde, left eye out, right eye blue, wore glasses, clean shaven, florid complexion; dressed in dark brown Prince Albert overcoat; claims to represent R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company in outdoor advertising.

We hold warrant for his arrest for realizing cash upon worthless checks, committed week of December 16, 1911. Arrest and notify

T. C. GASTON,

Chief of Police, Jackson, Tenn.

This man appears to make no claim of being a Hoo-Hoo, but this warning is nevertheless printed in The Bulletin for what protection to lumbermen it may afford.

In certain sections of West Virginia there is no liking for automobiles, as was evidenced in the case of a Washingtonian who was motoring in a sparsely settled region of the state.

This gentleman was haled before a local magistrate upon the complaint of a constable. The magistrate, a good-natured man, was not, however, absolutely certain that the Washingtonian's car had been driven too fast; and the owner stoutly insisted that he had been progressing at the rate of only six miles an hour.

"Why, your honor," he said, "my engine was out of order, and I was going very slowly because I was afraid it would break down completely. I give you my word, sir, you could have walked as fast as I was running."

"Well," said the magistrate, after due reflection, "you don't appear to have been exceeding the speed limit, but at the same time you must have been guilty of something, or you wouldn't be here. I fine you $10 for loitering."—Lippincott's.

Dues for 1912.

WHEN the clock struck twelve on the night of September 9 last, dues became payable for 1912. The Hoo-Hoo year begins and ends on September 9. Look up your receipts, and if you find that you have not paid 1912 dues, send $1.65 to the Scrivenoter at once. Any form of remittance will do except stamps that are stuck together. Your individual check will be all right.

OUR VICEGERENTS

W. P. Monson, No. 14412.

The accompanying picture is that of Vicegerent W. P. Monson, located at Ogden, Utah, whose approaching concatenation at Salt Lake City is announced in another column.

Brother Monson was born June 30, 1875, at Richmond, Cache County, Utah. His father before him was a lumberman of the progressive type. Brother Monson was brought up in the lumber business, from "sawdust monkey" up to manager. He has worked in every department of a saw mill and has done everything there is to do about a lumber yard. When 17 years old he was put in charge as manager of the manufacturing plant of the Excelsior Lumber Company. When 22 years of age he organized the Superior Lumber Company, of Preston, Idaho, which was very successful under his management. On May 1 of the present year he took over the general management of the Eccles Lumber Company, at Ogden, a large business which is growing rapidly under his vigorous management. Always an optimist and always smiling, in good times as well as bad, Brother Monson's abilities and his progressive spirit have won him many honors and many friends. He served as a director for several years of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association. He was elected County Commissioner on the Republican ticket, a position he held until his duties in other lines called him to Europe, from which trip he returned only last April.

VICEGERENT W. P. MONSON, Ogden, Utah.

Last, but not least, Brother Monson has been a loyal and enthusiastic Hoo-Hoo for many years, and carries his pride as high with respect to his membership in Hoo-Hoo as he does with respect to any of the other honors that have come to him. He was named Vicegerent for Utah on the unanimous recommendation of the leading members there, all of whom he has behind him to make his approaching concatenation a notable success.

S. M. Eaton, No. 282.

The Hoo-Hoo of eastern Nebraska made a happy selection a year ago when they demanded the appointment of that genial Brother Mell Eaton. He has now served out two full terms, having served one year as Vicegerent for South Dakota in 1905, and a business feature of the concatenation which was to have occurred, and which we presume did occur at Lincoln, Neb., on January 10, was the selection of his successor. The Bulletin has not received formal report of this concatenation, and does not know what action was taken. It will hazard the guess, however, that a very strong effort was made by the old-time working members of Lincoln to continue Brother Eaton in office another year. It will look mightily like riding a willing horse too hard, but if there ever was a willing horse it is Brother Eaton. He is a man eminently well qualified for the position of Vicegerent. His number shows him to be one of the oldest members of Hoo-Hoo. He has always been a loyal and enthusiastic member. He has probably held more concatenations than any one man in the central west, and probably knows more members of the Order personally in the territory from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains than any other two men.

S. M. EATON, Lincoln, Neb.,

Engineers announce that by July, 1913, the Keokuk dam, the largest in the world except the Assouan, will be completed, harnessing the Mississippi. When the waters, guided by engineering craft, pass through thirty turbines they will generate 250,000 horsepower, enough to light every private and public lamp, run every street car and turn every factory wheel in practically every Mississippi Valley city from the Saint on the north to the Saint on the south. Keokuk will become one of the largest power distributing centers in the entire world. Already contracts have been signed for the transmission of 60,000 horsepower to St. Louis, 175 miles south, to run the street cars and light the streets of that city. Negotiations are under way to transmit the power north and south, east and west, from St. Paul to Memphis and from Chicago to Omaha.

OBITUARY.

James Hosmer Bardwell (No. 5344).

Brother J. H. Bardwell, No. 5344, died at Leadville, Colo., December 13, of apoplexy. Brother Bardwell was born at South Deerfield, Mass., in 1864. He went to Colorado over thirty years ago. For many years he was employed as a salesman for McPhee & McGinnity, after which he was manager of the Chicago Lumber Company and later manager of the Pueblo branch of the McPhee & McGinnity Company. More recently he was engaged in the lumber business at Salt Lake City, where his health began to fail. At the time of his death and since early last spring he was in partnership with Brother C. E. Bullen, of Denver, Colo., the firm name being the Continental Tie & Lumber Company, with offices in the Colorado Building.

Brother Bardwell was a good lumberman and a good Hoo-Hoo. He will be recalled by many who attended the Denver Annual Meeting in 1899, when he and his wife, who survives him, were very prominent in the entertainment given the visitors. Brother Bardwell is survived also by a son.

William Moore (No. 6771).

Brother William Moore, Hoo-Hoo No. 6771, a wealthy lumberman of Denver, died suddenly at his home in that city on Christmas Eve, after having assisted until early bedtime with the preparations for the Christmas festivities. Though suffering from a slight cold, Brother Moore had been enjoying better health for the past year than for many years. He made no complaint of feeling ill, but only of being a bit tired with the Christmas shopping. He retired to his room quite early in the evening. His wife, after finishing her preparations for Christmas, repaired to the bed-room to find him dead, death having occurred probably an hour before, and very soon after he retired.

Brother Moore was born at Princeton, N. J., May 7, 1854, and had been engaged in the lumber business at Denver for more than sixteen years. He went West in June, 1889, locating at Dickinson, N. D., where he engaged in the lumber business. Later he was engaged in the stone business at Fort Collins, Colo., and later still in the grain and milling business at that place until August, 1895. In the latter year he removed to Denver, establishing himself in the lumber business, in which he was notably successful. As will be noted from his number, Brother Moore was an old Hoo-Hoo. He was a loyal and enthusiastic member, taking part in all the meetings held at Denver. The widow and one son, Gullford Moore, survive him.

Anderson James Armstrong (No. 14226).

A brief notice of Brother A. J. Armstrong's death appeared in the December issue of The Bulletin. Later full particulars reached the Scrivenoter's office and are as follows:

Brother Anderson J. Armstrong died suddenly December 4, 1911. He and his wife were visiting friends at Vale, Ore., when the end came. The attending physicians pronounced the cause valvular heart trouble.

Brother Armstrong was born at Ashland, Ohio, October 31, 1843. He leaves a widow, one daughter, five sons and hosts of friends. He was a man of fine character and was greatly beloved.

As a director of the Hawkeye Lumber Company, of Boise, Idaho, he was well known in lumber circles, and took active interest in the Order. He became a member at Boise, Idaho, February 24, 1905, and was also a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Percival Merrick Lindsay (No. 17559).

Brother P. M. Lindsay died suddenly Decemberr 30, 1911, at Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. He was born at Rapid City, Manitoba, Canada, Apral 25, 1882.

Brother Lindsay joined the Order at Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, August 10, 1906. At the time of his death Brother Lindsay was connected with the Vancouver Eng. Works, Ltd. A widow and three small children survive him.

Alfonso Cardenas Fernandez (No. 22512).

Brother A. C. Fernandez was instantly killed in an automobile accident early Sunday morning, December 24. The accident occurred a short distance from Calpulalpam, Mexico, where the automobile plunged through a railing of a bridge. Two other members of the family were killed, but his wife, who was with him, escaped with severe injuries.

Brother Fernandez was a native of Mexico, born at Mexico City, Mexico, August 20, 1873. At the time of his death he was connected with the firm of Paula F. Cardenas, of Mexico City. He took active interest in Hoo-Hoo, joining December 12, 1908.

John Gilbert Fall (No. 19769).

Just as The Bulletin is ready for the press, a telegram from Supreme Arcanoper John C. Ray announces the death of Brother John G. Fall, which occurred at Waco, Texas, the night of January 4. The burial to take place Sunday, January 7.

Full particulars will appear in the February issue of The Bulletin.

Clarence Louine Cross (Life Member No. 17).

Brother Clarence L. Cross, Life Member No. 17 of Hoo-Hoo, died at his home in Riverside, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, on December 31, after a brief illness. He left a widow, two daughters, both unmarried, and one son, Brother A. J. Cross, No. 21583, who has been associated in business with his father for several years and who will continue the business in the name of C. L. Cross as heretofore. Brother Clarence L. Cross was born in Binghamton, N. Y., in 1854. He went to Chicago in 1857, where he completed his education at the old Chicago University, and then engaged in the lumber business. This was at the early age of 17. He made his start as office boy in the office of T. W. Harvey, afterwards head for many years of the T. W. Harvey Lumber Company. In due course Brother Cross became assistant bookkeeper, and then traveling salesman. When the T. W. Harvey Lumber Company was organized in 1882, he was elected secretary of the company, and continued in that capacity until 1889, when he became head of the firm of Cross, Badger & Co., wholesale lumber dealers, with offices in Chicago.

As early as 1878 Brother Cross had acquired interest in the lumber business in Nebraska, and in that State was associated with J. L. Tidball and H. S. Fuller, with a string of fifteen or twenty yards in Nebraska. Since 1897 Brother Cross has conducted a wholesale and commission cypress business, he being one of the first Northern lumbermen to perceive the capabilities of cypress. He devoted himself to the introduction of that wood in the Northern markets. He was exceptionally successful. He first acted in the capacity of general sales agent for the Southern Cypress Lumber Selling Company, which later became the Cypress Selling Company and later the Louisiana Red Cypress Company. Brother Cross represented this well-known concern up to the time of his death. It is unlikely that any other seller of cypress ever had so completely the cordial friendship and confidence of all the cypress manufacturers of the South. In recent years, in connection with his cypress interests, Brother Cross had been a frequent visitor to New Orleans and other points in the cypress field. He was well-known in lumber circles all over the country, and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of every man with whom he came in contact. Brother Cross always bore himself as a high-class man in every relation of life. He was a good citizen, a good lumberman, and a good man. He was devoted to his family and a loyal and helpful friend. He was a patriotic and useful citizen. Few men were ever better known in the lumber trade and none were ever held in higher esteem.

Brother Cross was a loyal and active member of Hoo-Hoo, and always took a deep interest in the Order's welfare. He was very prominent in the arrangements made for the entertainment of the Hoo-Hoo Annual Meeting at Chicago in 1908. His death will bring a sense of keen personal loss to hundreds of men in the Order.

The Truthful Typewriter.

In writing a letter by hand you may be able to throw marks around promiscuously and delude yourself and, maybe, the other fellow that you really are punctuating correctly, but the typewriter shows up plainly just how much you really do know about it. It seems strange, but it is true, that these fundamental principles of language seem to be taught less in this day than ever before. Not one in a thousand of the so-called stenographers and typewriters can write a letter for you without the most glaring errors in some of these lines, punctuation, especially, something that every scholar out of the high school should have at his finger ends. Yet they can hardly be blamed, as some of the worst letters we get in that respect come from their instructors.—Polk County Itemizer.

Of the vast forest of cedars that once clothed the mountains of Lebanon, in the Holy Land, only 200 remain. They are carefully enclosed and watched over to prevent their destruction like all the rest.

They Wore Kilts.

At Tel-el-Kebir (says E. L. Butcher in his volume on Egypt), the first Highland regiment that had been seen in Egypt was encamped apart from the rest of the English army. The natives took it into their heads that these were the wives of the English soldiers left unguarded. The Oriental imagination determined that the chance was too good to be missed, and hastily arranged an expedition to carry off the women. They were very much astonished at the reception they met, and they changed their minds, and told each other that among these incomprehensible English the short petticoat was a robe of honor, and only given to those who had proved their bravery in fighting.

Powers of Vision of Savage Races.

More or less wonderful accounts have from time to time been given of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During a British anthropological expedition to Torres Straits the visual faculty of the natives was carefully tested, and from these tests the conclusion was reached that the excellence of vision shown by the savages has a psychological origin; that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the civilized man acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can. Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.—Scientific American.

R. H. Barlow, the golf champion, said at a recent luncheon at the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia:

"Golf has its humors, and this struck me particularly in a conversation at a golf club that I once had with a Persian prince.

"The prince, as he sat on the club piazza watching various champions drive off, drawled:

"I don't see very much in golf. No object is to be gained by the depositing of a white ball in a subterranean cavity; and if any object were to be gained, the shortest and surest method would surely be to carry the ball in the hand from cavity to cavity."

"I laughed.

"But, Prince," I said, "the difficulty of getting the ball into the cavities, as you call them, is what constitutes the attraction of the game."

"The difficulty constitutes the attraction, eh?" The prince frowned. "Well," he went on, "it would be more difficult to shave with a coal shovel than a razor, but I don't think many men are tempted on that account to remove their beards in that way."—Los Angeles Times.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE.

The men whose Hoo-Hoo names appear in the notices below are out of work and want employment. This is intended as a permanent department of The Bulletin, through which to make these facts known. It is, or should be, read by several thousand business men who employ labor in many varied forms, and it can be made of great value in giving practical application to Hoo-Hoo's central theme of helping one another. It is hoped the department will receive very careful attention each issue.

Some of our members advertising in The Bulletin fail to advise me when they have secured positions, so an old ad keeps running for months and months. To avoid this I have adopted the plan of running the ads as long as three months and then if I have heard nothing from the advertiser I will cut his ad out. If at the end of the three months he still wishes me to continue it, he must advise me.

THE HOO-HOO JEWELRY

PRICES.

No. 1, (Wishbone).....	$6 00
No. 2, (Horseshoe).....	6 50
No. 3, (Crescent).....	8 00
No. 4, (Clover Leaf).....	12 00
No. 5, (Bar).....	4 00
Souvenir Spoon.....	3 00

THE SOUVENIR SPOON.

The cut gives but a faint idea of its beauty and artistic elegance. In addition to bearing the Hoo-Hoo emblem, it is adorned with nine cat-tails, such as grow in the marshes in the South, enameled in the natural color of brown, with green leaves. The workmanship is of the highest quality. It is no cheap affair, but is hand-painted, and hand-enameled. This spoon itself is sterling gilt, which means that it is sterling silver, plated with gold. To all intents and purposes it is a gold spoon. The price is about right, I think, considering what you get.

THE HOO-HOO BROOCHES.

In addition to being artistic and beautiful, these are all "lucky" pins, and I guarantee them to bring success to the purchaser and make his wish come true, provided he wishes for the right thing, and is willing to work.

The simple "bar" brooch is recommended as a present to a practical-minded girl. It carries with it a suggestion of solid worth and is calculated to impress her with the idea that you are about as good a chance, all things considered, as she will be likely to get. The WISHBONE design was made with a view to marrying-off the confirmed bachelors of Hoo-Hoo. THE HORSESHOE PIN is the luckiest of all. It will be observed that this horseshoe is not the old-fashioned kind, such as a common "plug" would wear, but is the up-to-date shoe worn by a running horse. It is, therefore, symbolic of the speedy realization of the purchaser's brightest dreams. THE CRESCENT PIN is intended for presentation to a romantic maiden, and may be accompanied by a speech about the moon—"the inconstant moon that monthly changes in its circled orb"—and entreaty that her love be not likewise variable. THE CLOVER-LEAF PIN is for widowers with children, who are trying to marry young girls. It is absolutely irresistible—"a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The clover-leaf has a border of Roman gold, with the center enameled in the natural clover green. Any one of these pins would make an appropriate present from a man to his wife. The horseshoe pin might prove effective as a present to one's mother-in-law, as it would carry with it a delicate hint to "walk away."

THE HOO-HOO GRIP TAG.

This, also is guaranteed to bring good luck to any traveling man and to keep him from journeying on the downhill road towards failure or disaster. It will be seen that lost grips with this tag on them will probably be sent in to me. In every such case the greatest secrecy will be maintained as to the contents. If your bag contains only a collar button and your other pair of socks, nothing will be said to humiliate you. Price 99 cents, and cheap at the money.

THE LADIES' PIN.

I have yet to see a lady, old or young, who did not want one of these pins the minute she saw it. To have these pins in the hands of pretty women—and a good Hoo-Hoo knows no other sort—is the best possible advertisement for the Order. Every Hoo-Hoo ought to buy one of these pins, have his number engraved on it, and give it to some good woman. Price $1.00 by registered mail—$1.50, flat, if taken f. o. b., Nashville. Loosen up, boys, and give the women a chance.

THE HOO-HOO WATCH CHARM.

The new design being alike on both sides, it will never hang "wrong side out." The edges are smooth, which is also a great advantage. We once had a most beautiful design, to which we thought there could be no possible objection. It had, however, some sharp points, and numerous kicks began to reach us from married brothers who said the charm "scratched the baby's legs all up." This watch charm is perfectly harmless, as well as very beautiful, besides being appropriately suggestive of Egypt, the birthplace of Hoo-Hoo.

PRICE $7.50 PREPAID.

That part of the design which looks like the top of a gate or door represents the "Propylon." The Propylon was the great gateway erected in front of the temple of Osiris. It was massive in proportion and rich in sculptural design and inscriptions. In shape it was like the Pylons of the temple, from which it took its name. It served as a kind of introduction to the temple, and beyond it was sacred ground. From beneath its portal, on account of its position, the temple in all its glory was seen. Leading from it was the sacred way, bordered on each side by the recumbent sphynx. Once a year, when the earth in its circuit around the sun had reached a certain point in the ecliptic, the rays of the rising sun, cutting across the desert, shone through the great Propylon down the avenue of sphynx into and down through the temple until it lighted up the place of the Most Holy and glittered on the gilded horns of the sacred bull—and the Egyptian new year had begun. The rest of the design is made up of a continuous border of the lotus, symbolical of the resurrection—the lotus sleeps and awakens. The Egyptians believed that their spirits would return to earth after a lengthy sojourn elsewhere and that they would inhabit their old bodies—hence mummies. (You don't have to remember all this, if you buy the charm, but ought to.)

Now, then, none of this Hoo-Hoo jewelry will be sold to other than members in good standing, and only for cash. There is a profit in it to the manufacturer, but none to Hoo-Hoo. It is handed for the accommodation of our members and the good of the Order. None of it will be sold without the buyer's number. Address all orders to J. H. BAIRD, Scrivener, Nashville, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, TENN., FEBRUARY, 1912.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

The important development of the past month is the sending of Supreme Representative Stephenson to the Pacific Coast for a stay of four to six weeks. Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower took the initiative in bringing about this arrangement. He has been very active, along with Brother J. M. Leiter, in working up a big series of concatenations to occur in various States on the Pacific Coast during the next six weeks.

At Spokane Wash.

The first meeting Brother Stephenson was scheduled to attend, and did attend, was that at Spokane. This was held on the night of the 8th and is reported on another page.

Then at Seattle.

The next stop in Brother Stephenson's schedule was at Seattle, where he attended the very important meeting held by Vicegerent L. R. Fifer on the night of February 16, in connection with a big lumber meeting. A telegram just received is to the effect that forty-seven men were initiated at this meeting.

In Prospect at Portland.

From Seattle Brother Stephenson has gone to Portland, where it is hoped a concatenation will be worked up to occur during the last ten days of this month. Arrangements for this meeting have been somewhat disrupted by the death of the wife of Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter, and by the calling away to Los Angeles of Vicegerent D. U. Davis. While at this writing definite information has not been received, it is believed that Brother Davis will have returned and that with the ample assistance he has had tendered him he will have arranged for this meeting.

One for the Coos Bay District.

In the meantime comes also a letter from Brother R. H. Rosa, Vicegerent for the Southern District of Oregon, at Bandon, Ore., saying that he will hold a large concatenation in May. He says he has already had the matter up and that every member in his district has promised assistance. Brother Rosa says further that they of Coos County have only water transportation and that their part of the Hoo-Hoo territory can be reached only from San Francisco or from Portland, both being distant about 700 miles. This explains why the coming meeting at Klamath Falls could not be handled by a Vicegerent at Bandon.

It is a sure thing that both these south Oregon concatenations will be highly successful.

Over in B. C.

Next in order geographically, but perhaps not chronologically, is the proposed meeting in the "Coast District" of British Columbia, for which Brother P. W. Fau-Vel, of Duthie, B. C., is Vicegerent. The matter has been taken up with Brother Fau-Vel and active efforts are under way to arrange for this meeting. The Bulletin is unable to announce the exact date, but it will occur during Stephenson's stay on the coast, strong effort being made to make it a "ringer" for the splendid meeting reported in this issue, held by Vicegerent E. T. McDonald, at Nelson, B. C., over in the "Mountain District" of British Columbia.

Then Down the Coast.

Chronologically, after the meetings at Seattle and Portland, will come the big meeting at San Francisco on March 2, upon which Brother Trower and Vicegerent F. S. Palmer have been at work for several weeks. This will likely be the biggest concatenation ever held at San Francisco.

One at Sacramento to Follow.

In turn, the San Francisco meeting will be followed by one at Sacramento upon which arrangements have been under way for a long time. The date for this is set for March 16. This meeting is certain to be both a large and enthusiastic one.

At Reno, You Know.

Just to keep Brother Stephenson from getting rusty in his "jints," Brother Trower is at work on a meeting which he hopes to arrange for at Reno, Nevada, to come between the meeting at San Francisco and the one at Sacramento. No more definite announcement can be made of this as yet.

Later—Brother Trower wires that Vicegerent Terwilliger has fixed March 9 as the date for this meeting.

Three More in California.

Returning to California, meetings are on the way at Los Angeles, San Diego and Fresno. Vicegerent Bate, at Los Angeles, has been at work on the preliminaries for a meeting there some time, several of the members having voluntarily taken hold to bring it about. It appears that quite a lot of new material has drifted into Los Angeles with the growth of the lumber business there. In this connection it will be recalled that Vicegerent Bate held a most successful concatenation at San Diego on December 22. It appears, however, that the new as well as the old members there have started a movement some time ago looking to another meeting as soon as it can be held.

Los Angeles Date Fixed.

Since the above was put in type advice has been received from Vicegerent J. T. Bate fixing the date for the meeting at Los Angeles as March 23. The concatenation and smoker will follow a big dinner to be given in honor of Supreme Representative W. M. Stephenson. The dinner will be given at the Alexandria Hotel, beginning at 6 p. m. Brother Bate got out his notices and invitations for this dinner on February 10, and wrote three days later that the responses were numerous and prompt and that the prospects are for a magnificent affair. The date has been selected for the reason that on March 23 there will be a meeting in Los Angeles of the leading lumber dealers of the San Gabriel Valley, a large number of whom it is expected will be initiated.

The Biggest Thing in Prospect.

In the meantime about the biggest thing in prospect on the coast is the meeting to be held at Klamath Falls, Ore. This, however, will not occur during Supreme Representative Stephenson's stay on the coast. It cannot be held until well along in April, when the snow has got out of the mountains. Klamath Falls is away down in southern Oregon, near the California line. The mountain ranges and railroads both run in such a way as to fence off Klamath Falls and make it difficult to handle a meeting there by Vicegerents located either at Bandon or Portland. Therefore, the Oregon Vicegerents have turned this meeting over to Brother Trower and a delegation from San Francisco. It is hoped, however, that both the Oregon Vicegerents and Brother Leiter will be able to attend, as all of them expect to do. The meeting, however, will be taken charge of by the San Francisco boys. It is going to be made a splendid affair, Brother Trower having been at work practically since the first of the year. In this connection Brother Trower sends in a good strong letter from Brother M. V. Geagan, No. 2780, now located at Weed, Cal. Brother Geagan was formerly at Denver for many years, where he served a term as Vicegerent and where he established the reputation of being one of the best Hoo-Hoo on the list. Brother Geagan writes to say that he will take up the matter of a meeting at Klamath Falls with lumbermen at McCloud, Igerna, Hilt and other points on the Klamath Falls branch of the Southern Pacific, and will deliver a sizable bunch of strictly eligible candidates. He promises at least five initiates from Weed alone, and expects to have not less than ten.

Fresno Date, March 19.

Later advice received fixes the date of the Fresno meeting for March 19.

In Some Other States.

In addition to all this, Vicegerent Trower is keeping up a regular Gatling gun fire of correspondence looking to meetings in Arizona and one or two in other of the far western States. Plans are also taking shape for at least two or three meetings to be taken in by Brother Stephenson on his return journey. These will probably be held in the Central Western States and the prairie provinces of Canada.

In West Virginia and Neighboring States.

To immediately follow Stephenson's return from the coast a big series of concatenations is being arranged in West Virginia and contiguous states. A highly successful concatenation at Charleston is reported in this issue. This leaves three other Vicegerencies in West Virginia to come along with concatenations. All these Vicegerents have been ready since the first of the year to get in action, and the West Virginia series of meetings was to immediately follow that at Charleston, but for the plans of Stephenson's trip to the West Coast being rather suddenly formulated. He left Charleston within an hour after the concatenation there, and, stopping only long enough at St. Paul to get a clean shirt and his other pair of socks, he has hurried on to Spokane.

In North Carolina, Virginia and Other States.

The starting of the series of meetings in West Virginia will be the signal for a collateral series to cover at least three concatenations in North Carolina, where we have four Vicegerents who have been asking for dates ever since the first of the year; probably two meetings in Western Maryland, one at Baltimore, and at least two in the Old Dominion. A meeting is certain at Norfolk, where active arrangements have been under way ever since the appointment a month ago of Vicegerent W. J. Woodward. He has had a great rally of the old membership at Norfolk and is ready to go ahead with a concatenation whenever a date can be assigned him. The other two Vicegerents in Virginia, Brother J. E. Walker, at Roanoke, and Brother R. Y. Johnson, at Staunton, are also ready to act. Brother J. E. Walker's meeting of last summer will be recalled as one of the most successful of last Hoo-Hoo year. He took in a large class, but, aided and abetted by Snark Boggess, whose business has required that he spend considerable of his time at Roanoke, Brother Walker has rounded up another good class of prospectives. Brother R. Y. Johnson, of the Northern District of Virginia, has been quietly at work on his prospective initiates ever since he was appointed, and says he purposes to initiate a good class of as high a character of lumbermen as ever joined Hoo-Hoo. Brother Johnson was an active participant in the meeting at Charleston on the 2d, going over with Snark Boggess to pick up such pointers as will assist him in his meeting.

Others in Boggess' Neck of Woods.

Even this does not cover all the doings that will occur in Snark Boggess' jurisdiction, and in the nearby districts of Brother Carroll's bailiwick. Brother Carroll is at work on a meeting to be held at Uniontown, Pa., that famous landmark on the old National Road. The concatenation Carroll held there two years ago will be recalled as a very delightful one.

Florida to the Front.

Earlier than all the above, however, are the two meetings scheduled to occur in Florida—at Tampa, by Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew, and at Pensacola by Vicegerent F. Rust Smith. Brother Bartholomew had his date set for February 17, but consented to postpone so as to have the meeting come soon after or soon before the one at Pensacola, so that the two can be attended by some prominent members of the Order whom he expects to have on hand. Date for the Pensacola meeting has not yet been definitely fixed. Vicegerent Smith went over to New Orleans to the big concatenation there to get pointers, and is now lining up his class of eligibles. As soon as he indicates a suitable date, date for the Tampa meeting will be fixed also. It is likely also that at about the same time Vicegerent T. G. Hutchison will hold a concatenation at Jacksonville, making three in quick succession in the State of Florida. It will be recalled that one excellent meeting in Florida has already been held this year—by Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew.

In South Georgia Next.

Then comes a little series of at least two and perhaps three meetings in South Georgia. One of them to be held by Vicegerent Coombs, of Tifton, Ga., and another by Vicegerent C. C. Vaughn, either at Brunswick or Savannah, or some other convenient point in that district.

Arcanoper O'Donnell's State.

Then comes Mississippi. A mighty good start here was made with a delightful concatenation held by Vicegerent Wilder at Gulfport on January 31, reported in this issue. There are two other Vicegerents in Mississippi, Brothers Schumann, of Jackson, and Daly, of Meridian, both of whom plan to hold concatenations within the next month or five weeks, and both of whom have only been waiting for a date when they could count on getting a trunk and having present Vicegerent Wilder, of Perkinston, and Supreme Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell. All three of the Vicegerents in Mississippi are working hand in hand on these concatenations, and Custocatian O'Donnell purposes to attend them all.

Postponed to March 9.

The concatenation announced by Vicegerent F. O. Snyder to occur on February 10 at Shreveport had to be postponed on account of conflict with other meetings, and is now announced to occur on March 9. Vicegerent Snyder has arrangements all made and the success of the meeting is assured.

Postponed on Account of Sickness.

Vicegerent Joseph Cowan, of the Northern District of Iowa, was to hold a concatenation at Waterloo on February 29, having arrangements all made, not only for a good class, but for the attendance of several of his brother Vicegerents in Iowa, Kansas and Missouri. Brother Cowan was taken seriously ill three weeks ago and was threatened with pneumonia. He is still confined to his room. On this account he has postponed the meeting, and will later set a new date. Vicegerent Cowan wanted the boys to go ahead and hold the concatenation ex parte as to him, but this did not meet with their wishes by any means, and very rightly they insisted that the meeting not be held until Brother Cowan can be on hand.

PERSONAL MENTION.

The Bulletin is in receipt of a copy of the Baltimore Sun showing a group picture of the new members of Governor Goldborough's staff. The best looking man in the bunch is Brother Wm. D. Gill, well known to all Hoo-Hoo and lumbermen along the "east coast" as an up-to-date lumberman, an active and loyal Hoo-Hoo, a bully good "Junior," and an all-round good fellow. Brother Gill is not shown in his regimentals, but we venture to affirm that this uniform will become him beautifully. He is a man of jolly face and portly figure.

Hamilton Wright, Federal opium commissioner, says that the United States uses 500,000 pounds of opium annually, which is several hundred-fold the amount prescribed by physicians. Mr. Wright also charges that one druggist in ten of those established in cities exists by means of profits derived from the sale of habit-forming drugs.

The smallest tree in the world is the Greenland birch. Its height is less than three inches, yet it covers a radius of from two to three feet.

If life were a series of great crises, almost any of us could see them through.

Balance at close of business, Feb- ruary 16, 1912	$4,988 08—$ 7,862 93

It will be seen that five claims have been paid since report in January Bulletin. One more claim has accrued—at a point in California—for which draft has been authorized by wire. This will make $1,500 in claims accruing January 6 to February 16, as against $258 trickling in as belated responses to the Third Call. If the present death rate continues, as it probably will, our balance will rapidly run down, requiring that the Fourth Call go out about April 1, the date predicted in December Bulletin.

The operation of this fund has now continued long enough to afford basis for very accurate calculations as to the future.

Evidently the experience of last year of a big jump in the death rate in the late winter and early spring months, is to be repeated this year. Only two claims were paid from December 15 to January 6, while six claims have accrued (five paid) from January 6 to February 16.

As for the period reported on in January Bulletin, so for the period now reported on, there has accrued a number of deaths among those who responded to the First and Second Calls, or to both, but who failed to come in on the Third Call. These claims, of course, have had to be declined. The disappointment in several instances has been very great and the circumstances truly pathetic. The man who is carrying no other death indemnity certainly owes it to his wife and children to keep up this Hoo-Hoo death fund. It is not easy to believe that any man is so poor as not to be able to spare $2.00, or that any is so friendless as not to have one friend who will not allow his participation to lapse. In every instance where claims have had to be declined, The Bulletin believes that failure to keep up the participation has been the result only of carelessness and neglect.

The Bulletin once more urges that every man who has not a card showing response to Third Call, to remit $2.00 now. It is again stated that subscriptions can be made at any time. There is no necessity of awaiting receipt of a formal call.

To the individual interested, The Bulletin says, look into your status right now; if you have neglected to remit, do it now.

The only other development to be reported is the excellent talk on the death fund made at the recent New Orleans concatenation by Mr. Leonard Bronson, manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, now located at Tacoma. It was Mr. Bronson who conceived the idea of the establishment of this fund, and he was a member of the committee which drafted the plan under which it operates. Mr. Bronson was formally requested at the concatenation to write an article for The Bulletin fully setting forth his ideas as to this fund and why it should have the hearty support of every member of the Order.

CONFERENCE OF NEBRASKA HOO-HOO.

In the write-up of the recent Lincoln, Neb., concatenation on another page, mention is made of a conference of Ho-Hoo held in connection with the concatenation, and in connection with the lumber meeting in progress coincidentally. There was a large attendance of Nebraska Hoo-Hoo at this conference, a large number of members being reinstated, and numerous plans for the future good of the Order were discussed. Vicegerent Mell Eaton writes of this conference:

Lincoln, Neb., February 6, 1912.—The business meeting had been very thoroughly discussed among the older members of the Order, quite a number of them having lapsed on account of the limited field of action covered and some errors in performance which were unfortunate. To revive the interest in the Order, obtain the cooperation of influential members, and be a more composite force of the interests banded together required a full discussion of any suggestion offered or plans advanced that would develop the potential energy within the membership along those lines of effort not accomplished in detail through association, yet of frequent and imperative need to the dealers.

On account of a condition purely local the discussion turned to a suggestion of greater activity in civic life, to develop sentiment making for the peace, prosperity and happiness of the members.

Not to move with undue haste in developing the ideas advanced, and to take some precaution with the details, the meeting elected a committee of three to take up the work, to be known as the "Clearance House for Ideas."

It was earnestly advocated that the members should communicate to the committee any suggestions looking for a better and wider activity of the Order along such lines of endeavor as would result in stronger ties, such as might exist from the mutual interests represented in the Order, and which would in no way be antagonistic to or beyond the intent of the founders, who placed few limitations to the pursuit of Health, Happiness and Long Life.

The opinion prevailed that any local membership could meet an emergency according to the best counsel and judgment of the members and could handle any expense they might incur by personal pledges, and otherwise take care of their affairs without necessarily consulting the Supreme Nine.

The proposition for a Hoo-Hoo Club Room was temporarily passed.

To the Order at large the results of the two and one-half hours' discussion would be of interest only if locally they faced similar conditions, or intended to take action to revive and solidify a deeper fraternal spirit.

One line of effort that deeply interested the local membership, for which a donation was given and which was left to the committee to develop, has been handled with a measure of success far beyond our expectations. The expense was assumed by others who are willing workers with an organization fitted to handle the work and who were as antagonistic to the principles we assailed as any of our members. The first week after the committee had found the avenue to the desired end, one lapsed member indicated his desire for reinstatement and a prominent candidate signed an application for membership, while those members who have been informed of the fruitful result of the committee's work are wearing a smile that will not come off.

The prompt response of assistance in this instance is so full of meaning and was so easy of accomplishment and the burden of the work so willingly taken off their hands that the members are solicited by the committee for further suggestions that they may push the good work while opportunity favors them.

The circular expected from the committee will reach your hands in confirmation of what you read in this report.

I find such awakened spirit in the Order that I must carry my book of temporary receipts to catch them while the mood is strong, and see to reinstating good men. May have further communications (briefer) from time to time.

Fraternally,

EATON.

A member who lives in St. John, New Brunswick, recently wrote a letter to this office in which he mentioned incidentally that he is the only Hoo-Hoo in the "Maritime Provinces." By this term is comprised the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The former does not border on the sea exactly, but on the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Nova Scotia stretches out into the Atlantic, a fact emphasized by the motto of its capital, Halifax, "E Mari Mercus," signifying that from the sea comes wealth. What a wonderful thing is language and how naturally one word brings on another! "Mercus" means reward, recompense, pay; hence, merchandise, mercenary, etc. From "Mari" (sea) comes marine, mariner, maritime; and, of course, "E" means out—it literally means a window, a place to get out at. It comes to us from the Latin, but it is far older than Rome. The Romans took it from the Greeks, who borrowed it from the Phoenicians, to whom it came from the Egyptians, whose written language was a form of picture writing. Thus from a crude drawing of an opening in the wall comes many "out" words—eliminate, emancipate, eject, eclipse, etc.

But to go back to the maritime provinces: That part of eastern Canada is of very great interest from the standpoint of historical association. Especially is this true of that portion of Nova Scotia immortalized by an American poet in the beautiful story of Evangeline. Longfellow has more than one monument, but nothing so distinctly attests his genius as the spectacle of the hundreds and hundreds of tourists who make a pilgrimage to the "Evangeline country" during the summer season. It is a delightful vacation trip, but it is wise to reserve in advance a room at the little hotel in Wolfville, near the site of the village of Grand Pre. You get off the train, the "flying blue nose," at Wolfville. Then you are in that romantic land which of old was called "Acadia." Aside from the glamour the beauty of Longfellow's poem throws over the land of Evangeline, the pages of Acadian story make strange and thrilling chapters of history; some indeed are deeply pathetic.

England and France are ancient enemies. The struggle for supremacy between the greatest of the Latin and the greatest of the Teutonic races, which made Europe a battlefield, also caused England and France to continue their strife in the forests of the New World. As everybody knows, the English were at last victorious. The struggle was a long and bitter one. Acadia was a French settlement; it was founded in 1605, and it continued for a hundred and fifty years until the closing scene took place at Grand Pre, when the Acadians were driven from their homes by the English.

The exiles went to Louisiana, and their descendants live there now, away up in the Bayou Teche country. Their women make wonderful "counterpanes," or bedspreeds, and do other old-fashioned hand-work. The country folks in Louisiana call these French people "Cajans," a corruption, of course, of "Acadians."

When the Acadians were expelled from the land where they had dwelt for more than a century, poor Evangeline became separated from her lover and soon lost sight of him completely. The poem tells the story of her long and hopeless search. Once, in a boat on a stream in Louisiana, she passed him in the dark, neither knowing of the other's presence. At last, after weary years, having become a Sister of Charity, she found him, as he lay dying in a hospital in a great city, far from home and friends. They are both supposed to be buried in Philadelphia, within sound of the city's tumult—in the midst of the rushing tide of life. It is a simple tale, but its appeal is universal. All the world loves a lover. Everybody sympathizes with the woes of romantic youth. The story of Evangeline is, in the main, a true story.

In New Brunswick also one runs across many historical and poetical associations, and at every turn the tourist is reminded that the country is British territory. In the hotel at St. John there is a big picture representing the wedding of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert; also a conspicuous painting illustrates a stanza from Tennyson's poem, "Locksley Hall"—the rejected lover, having moped and moaned for a long time, comes back and views the great mansion, scene of his happy youth ere "Amy," shallow-hearted, threw him down and married a common sort of man who had money.

'Tis the place, and all around it, as of old, the curlews call,
Dreary gleams about the moorland, flying over Locksley Hall.
Many a night from yonder ivied casement, ere I went to rest,
Did I look on great Orion, sloping slowly to the west.
Many a night I saw the Pleiads, rising thro' the mellow shade,
Glitter like a swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid."

Tennyson was a greater poet than Longfellow, but the lover in Locksley Hall is not so appealing as is the hero of Acadian romance. Tennyson's young man does much thinking! He turns his eyes inward; and anybody who does that will end by seeing nothing but himself. The words, "Look out!" hold much deep meaning.

The melancholy swain, gazing on Locksley Hall, reverts in memory to the joys of his courtship. It seems it happened in springtime, and he is thoughtful enough to explain that circumstance—he goes into the psychology of it, as you might say.

"In the spring a livelier iris gleams upon the burnished dove,
In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

Then he begins to feel a terrible grouch against the fickle Amy, and he prognosticates a dark future for her. He says she has married a common man, and she'll soon grow common herself. Hear him:

"As the husband is, the wife is. Thou art mated with a clown,
And the grossness of his nature will have weight to drag thee down.
He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force, Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse."

There is something almost uncanny about a young man who knows so much! It is all right for a poet to sense all this—a true poet is something of a seer. Tennyson was. In this poem he pictures the airship's part in the future battles of the world. But it seems unnatural for these prophetic words to issue from the lips of a man who is young enough to love so hard. One expects a lover to be something of a fool. Indeed, any woman would be justified in doubting the sincerity of an adorer whose words are clothed with the wisdom of the ages. The word "fond" originally meant foolish. This is a fact of far-reaching import. Knowing a word, you can sleuth an idea and, maybe, find the source of primal impulse and human emotion! Rightly viewed, the dictionary is of deep and thrilling interest.

Not poetry alone is suggested to the casual traveler in New Brunswick. With somewhat of grim force is brought to the mind of a tourist from the United States the fact that not quite all the people in the Thirteen Colonies wanted to "shake" King George the Third. St. John is often called the City of the Loyalists, because during the war of the American Revolution those people took refuge there who were not in sympathy with George Washington and his followers. American histories refer to these refugees as "tories," but they called themselves loyalists—they were loyal to Great Britain; and, in their eyes, Washington was an enemy to the king. It is pleasant to sit in the little park in St. John and ponder on all these things. History and legend are what make a place interesting—not skyscrapers or roaring mills and factories. The letter from the only member in the maritime provinces brought up pleasant recollections. It served, moreover, to emphasize the difference between eastern and western Canada as concerns scope and character of resources. Over toward the Pacific coast, prairie and forest yield greater riches than the sea. And in other than the maritime provinces, Hoo-Hoo has many members.

Speaking of recollections reminds me of a poem published recently in Harper's. It began thus:

Apple-green west and an orange bar,
And the crystal eye of a lone, one star,
And "Child, take the shears and cut what you will,
Frost tonight—so clear and dead still."

It was like looking out of a window—all at once arose, to the mind's eye, a gravel walk, leading from the front gate to the house, on either side borders of old-fashioned flowers. In the days when these flowers blossomed, children were made to "mind"—we would never have dreamed of plucking a flower without permission. But in the late fall, at the close of a clear, still day, everybody—children, servants and all, took shears and snipped the nodding blooms—armfuls were carried into the house and all the vases were filled. The little poem brought up a vision of chrysanthemums, not the blowy freaks the size of a cannon ball which the florists now sell for twenty-five cents apiece in November, but the real thing—those about the size of a dime, compact and of a mottled red and yellow, and the dark red ones, about as big as a silver dollar, velvety and fragrant. Alas, for all this tender sentiment! The poem attracted the attention of the funny writers all over the country. It seems a pity to parody a good poem, but it must be admitted that the following crazy verses are not without an element of wit:

Crushed pumpkin dawn and a lemon squeeze—
Child, lead your mother outdoors to freeze.
At stuff like this we could never fall,
But we'd never dare offer this stuff for sale.
—Houston Post.

Alice-blue cheese and a plate of tripe,
And fourteen Chinamen hitting the pipe,
Verses like this make a bosom throb—
I hope it won't cause me to lose my job.
—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Salmon-hued vests and a pale-blue tie,
Child, keep your fingers out of the pie;
Christmas is near. If I sell this, girle,
You can do some of your shopping early.
—Detroit Free Press.

Nobody would call the Hoot Mon a "fierce proposition" or insinuate that he is "stuck up." Still he is somewhat of a militant affair, and lately he has had a "rise." A paper published in Glasgow, Scotland, recently printed the following under the head of "Navy and Army Appointments":

ROYAL FIELD ARTILLERY—Third Lowland Brigade,
Royal Field Artillery—Captain James Lightbody to be Major.

If Brother Lightbody continues his upward course he will soon be a Colonel. And according to American standards that is a sufficiently high honor to satisfy the most ambitious. The Bulletin congratulates Brother Lightbody on his promotion. The Order is proud to have in its ranks an officer in the British army, especially when he happens to be a genial and hearty comrade like the Hoot Mon.

Cleveland, Texas.—I take pleasure in handing you herewith check for $3.65 to cover my dues and call to the Death Emergency Fund. Have been a participant to the Emergency Fund since same was first organized, and it is my fondest hope to always be. I never lose an opportunity to speak a good word for this fund, and urge every Hoo-Hoo that I meet, who is not a subscriber to same, to at once remit on the call.

With best wishes, I am,

Fraternally yours,
C. A. MILES (No. 20643).

Winona, W. Va., January 30, 1912.—I see by the paper that there has been a third call issued for subscriptions to the Death Emergency Fund. I did not get any notice, so send you my check for $2.00 as payment if I am not in good standing. I think this is what every Hoo-Hoo ought to do, especially those that this will be quite a help to their families in case of death, and those who are able ought to join in, too, to help his unfortunate brother, so as to make the burden light for all.

Yours truly,
M. F. BLAZER (No. 20367).

Carthage, Texas.—Dear Brother Baird: Herewith find $3.65, covering dues for 1912 and third call "Death Emergency Fund. Am always glad to contribute to the Death Emergency Fund; think it is by far the best thing that is going in the way of insurance—it is always ready money and the cost is low. I trust that a sufficient number will respond promptly that we may keep it going.

Fraternally,
A. C. BOYNTON, JR. (No. 17170).

Alderson, W. Va., January 25, 1912.—Inclosed find check for $2.00, for which please credit me in the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund.

I was not aware of another call being made until one of the Old Cats was telling me, as, on account of being away, did not get to read The Bulletin.

I think the Emergency Fund a fine thing. With kindest regards to yourself and Hoo-Hoo, I remain,

Yours fraternally,
CHARLES A. BRIGGS (No. 21113).

Elkins, W. Va., January 29, 1912.—I enclose herewith check for $3.65, being for 1912 dues and for third call in the Death Emergency Fund. I just read the January Bulletin. As you say, every member of Hoo-Hoo should contribute his mite to this fund, be he rich or poor, as it is a noble cause and one of which every member should be proud. Wishing you and Hoo-Hoo great success in 1912, I remain,

Yours very truly,
(No. 21133).

Buffalo, N. Y., January 27, 1912.—I am aware that a letter is unnecessary when enclosing a check for dues, but I want to take advantage of the opportunity to thank you for many hours' pleasant reading that The Bulletin has afforded. With kindest personal regards,

Sincerely yours,
(No. 5162).

Indianapolis, Ind., January 23, 1912.—Just received the Hoo-Hoo Bulletin and am enjoying many of the good things it contains, and note an item in regard to the third call for your Death Emergency Fund. In some way I failed to get any notice, and am enclosing check for $2.00 in payment for same. It is a good cause, and every loyal Hoo-Hoo should respond promptly, costing a very small amount; at the same time it swells your receipts and helps to keep the thing going.

Insurance Against Rain.

The bane of outdoor life in England is the excessive rainfall. Shows, pageants, garden parties, seaside outings, cricket matches, regattas and fetes of all kinds are to an uncommon degree at the mercy of the skies. The English have finally elaborated a systematic scheme to provide indemnity for disappointment or loss caused by wet weather. The new plan, which is associated with Lloyd's underwriters, will first be tried at the resorts on the south and east coasts from May to October. You may insure against rain, to a certain fraction of an inch, on any single day; or against rain during any one week; or, if planning a week-end party, against rain on four consecutive days.

Originally towns and warships fired off their guns on the approach of friendly strangers, to show that they had such faith in the visitors' peaceful intentions they didn't think it necessary to keep their guns loaded. Hence the naval salute.

Splendid Meeting at Indianapolis.

The concatenation held by Vicegerent J. G. Brannum at Indianapolis, on January 11, proved a big success and highly enjoyable. The formal report below will show number of initiates and who did the initiating. The meeting occurred in connection with the big retail lumber convention. The session-on-the-roof was held in the Palm Room of the Claypool Hotel and was "some" session. Ex-Vicegerent L. G. Buddenbaum acted as toastmaster and good speeches were made by Carroll L. Beck, Vicegerent for the Southern District of Indiana; L. M. Tully, ex-Vicegerent for the Southern District of Louisiana, but now located at Indianapolis, and who acted as Snark at the concatenation; J. H. Barclay, one of the kittens; Ransom Griffin, that time-tried and fire-tested Hoo-Hoo; Brother C. D. Meeker, No. 209, and Supreme Representative W. M. Stephenson. Besides the speeches there was a good time of story telling and informal sociability. Everything went as merry as a marriage bell, and was all over by 10:30 p. m., the initiation having begun at 4 p. m., so as to conflict as little as possible with the doings of the lumbermen.

As a matter of fact, there were two social sessions in connection with this concatenation, the Indianapolis lumbermen having got up a most delightful smoker at the Columbus Club for the night before for the entertainment of Hoo-Hoo and visiting lumbermen. The whole affair was most enjoyable.

Important Developments at Lincoln.

The concatenation at Lincoln proved a far more important affair than the number of initiates would indicate. The initiation was a mere incident of a get-together movement on the part of the Nebraska Hoo-Hoo, or at least a very goodly proportion of them in attendance at the lumber meeting at Lincoln. Something of the nature of the discussion, and something of the plans and purposes of Lincoln Hoo-Hoo, appears in a communication from Vicegerent Mell Eaton, appearing on another page, to which attention is here especially called.

- Snark, Mell Eaton; Senior Hoo-Hoo, Wm. Krotter; Junior Hoo-Hoo, Burt J. Wright; Bojum, Elmer Coates; Scrivenoter, Lew Wentworth; Jabberwock, T. E. Moss; Custocatian, P. R. Cook; Arcanoper, Fred D. James; Gurdon, J. A. Fellers.

Much Enjoyment at Cairo.

Cairo claims to be a sort of second home of Hoo-Hoo. There have been many splendid concatenations held there, but none more enjoyable than that occurring on January 18, during the retail lumber convention. "The concatenation was a great success in every way, and every one assisted in making it a success," is the summary, Brother Stephenson gives. He goes on to say that Vicegerent F. C. Cannon was unavoidably called away, but that he did a good job when he called on Vicegerent A. H. Ruth, of Chicago, to take his place. Vicegerent Ruth acquitted himself with credit, and added much to the success of the meeting. Great credit is also due to that good brother, Pete T. Langan, of Cairo, for the excellence of the preliminary arrangements. Brother Langan worked hard and to good purpose. He is an ex-Vicegerent, has attended many Annual Meetings, and has been an all-round good and loyal Hoo-Hoo ever since he was initiated, now some sixteen or eighteen years ago. Brother Langan had able assistants in Brothers H. H. Halliday, O. P. Hurd, Jr., and J. P. Schuh, all prominent and well-known lumbermen of Cairo.

The station of Junior was occupied by Brother E. W. Peters, who was assisted by Brothers J. B. Allen and J. D. Prevo, both of Centralia, Ill. The work of the Junior station was exceptionally good.

The regulation informal lunch was served after the concatenation, but as the hour was late no set speeches were made—just a good time with songs and stories—and not many songs.

The collection of dues at this meeting was exceptionally good, a goodly number being reinstated.

Small Class But Good Meeting.

Somewhat the same conditions existed at Dayton, Ohio, as at Lincoln, Neb., in connection with the lumber convention. The conditions for a satisfactory class of initiates were unfavorable in that the Vicegerent, Brother J. E. McNally, is located at Columbus, and could not get down to the meeting until the day of the meeting, and was then very busy in connection with the lumber association.

Nevertheless, the meeting was a good one. The initiation was preceded by a conference of a number of the old-time Ohio members in the assembly hall of the Algonquin Hotel, and the attendance of old members at the concatenation was good. Snark Boggess was present and acted in that capacity at the concatenation. The Senior Hoo-Hoo's station was filled by ex-Snark Ed M. Vietmeier. Ex-Vicegerents and ex-members of the Supreme Nine and old-time members of the Order in attendance were too numerous to be named in severalty. The meeting was notable for the number of reinstatements made and for the large amount of dues collected, and for the good feeling aroused—which will find expression in future concatenations in Central Ohio.

Brother Morris Hayward, of Columbus, deserves especial credit for good work done in connection with this meeting. In connection with the meeting he instituted a campaign for the reinstatement of many old-time members who have neglected their dues—a campaign that still goes on and still bears good fruit.

One of the Very Best.

The concatenation held at Salt Lake City, January 19, by Vicegerent W. P. Monson, assisted by the entire resident membership of that live Hoo-Hoo town, proved one of the most successful concatenations of this Hoo-Hoo year, and one of the most notable held at any time anywhere. The meeting cannot be better written up than in the brief words of Vicegerent Monson:

"We had one of the most successful Hoo-Hoo concatenations ever held in this district, there being twenty-one kittens initiated, with a splendid attendance of members—practically the whole Salt Lake membership, in fact, excepting a few men who were out of town. There were between sixty and seventy present. We were given free use of the grill room of the magnificent Hotel Utah, and I want to say that on this occasion all Hoo-Hoo were treated like kings."

Quite as good as anything else he says is the following from Brother Monson:

"We are counting on having another just such gathering as this at the Ogden Hermitage next summer, at which time a class of twenty or twenty-five will be brought in."

A glance at the formal report will show the excellent assistance Brother Monson had, resulting in the initiation going off very smoothly and impressively.

That Great Falls Meeting.

On account of Vicegerent H. M. Yaw's being called away on urgent business, the formal report of the concatenation at Great Falls, Mont., on December 15, had not come to hand when report of same was written for January issue of The Bulletin. A fairly good write-up of the meeting appeared in that issue, but the success of the meeting amply warrants this flare-back.

The formal report below shows that twenty-four men were initiated. The papers show that the attendance of members was good. The meeting occurred in connection with the retail lumbermen's convention. Vicegerent Yaw writes:

"Taken altogether I think we had the finest meeting that ever took place in this neck of the woods. All our members were very enthusiastic and gave me splendid support, as the number and character of our initiates will show. I really think that Montana has as lively a bunch of Hoo-Hoo as can be found in any part of the country. I trust that I may have the opportunity of reporting at least one more just such concatenation as this during my term, and I assure you that the details will have more of my personal attention than I was in position to give to the meeting just held. We have got things in mighty good shape here."

A few days after this letter was received from Vicegerent Yaw came the following letter from Brother B. J. Boorman, enclosing copy of the resolutions, which are also printed in full below:

Dear Sir: The following resolution was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted at the ceremonials held at Great Falls, December 14. The success of the ceremonial can be attributed largely to W. A. McCampbell, Vicegerent, and Mr. H. M. Yaw, Vice Snark.

There was a general expression of approval and favorable comments after this resolution had been passed. We feel as if it is a step in the right direction, and those of a kindred mind, we believe, will appreciate if you would give the proper editorial in this connection.

Very truly yours,

B. J. BOORMAN, No. 14775.

Great Falls, Mont.

Resolved, That we of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, in convention assembled at Great Falls, Montana, do most heartily endorse the splendid manner in which the ceremonial has been conducted. The amusement has been clean, entertaining and wholesome.

Be it further resolved, That we wish to go on record as favoring this advance move, and hope that Hoo-Hoo, wherever convened and at all ceremonials, will refrain from all reference to mother, wife and daughter, and will always hold in high reverence and respect the sanctity of mother, home and fireside.
Mr. J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

Would that we could so handle things as to call forth just such a resolution as this at every concatenation. In behalf of the whole Order The Bulletin's hat is off in thanks to Brother Yaw.

The Usual at Denver.

Never since The Bulletin was established has it failed to chronicle about this time of year a successful concatenation at Denver, Colo., and never anything but a most successful meeting. The concatenation on January 16 is about on schedule time, and fully sustained the high reputation established. Vicegerent Wm. R. McFarland is to be much commended for his good work and congratulated on the success of the meeting. He had the able assistance of all the old-time members at Denver, as the report shows.

This must be about the twentieth time the name of Brother J. E. Preston has appeared among the officers of a concatenation at Denver or somewhere in Colorado, and without stopping now to look up the musty archives, for I think it has several times appeared in reports of concatenations held in other States. He is Hoo-Hoo No. 51, but, like some other good things we know of, his Hoo-Hoolism gets better as it gets older.

The concatenation at Denver occurred in connection with the meeting of the Colorado association of retail lumbermen and has been already widely commented on in the lumber newspapers. It was most successful and thoroughly enjoyable. A large amount of dues was collected, and The Bulletin feels especially indebted to Brother H. W. Hanna, who acted as Scrivenoter, for a most business-like report. It is a model. There are no better Hoo-Hoo than those at Denver.

Somewhat Hurried, But—

The concatenation at Pittsburg, January 26, in connection with the lumber meeting there, was hurriedly decided on and arranged for, and was not as successful as it would otherwise have been. The meeting was taken charge of by Supreme Gurdon W. T. Carroll, who acted as Junior Hoo-Hoo in the initiation. He had the able assistance of Vicegerent R. E. Gannan and of Supreme Representative W. M. Stephenson, who attended. Eight men were initiated as appears.

 Concatenation No. 1752, Pittsburg, Pa., January 26, 1912.

Somewhat Similar at Buffalo.

The concatenation held at Buffalo on January 25 was held under conditions somewhat similar to those at Pittsburg. The meeting occurred in connection with a lumber meeting and it was not possible to devote sufficient time to the preliminary arrangements for the meeting. Nevertheless, ten good men were initiated at a meeting that passed off fairly well. The success of the meeting was due to the good work of Brothers I. N. Stewart, J. M. Briggs, F. A. Beyer and others of the members at Buffalo, the names of several of whom appear in the list of officers.

On account of the conflict with some of the features of the lumber meeting no session-on-the-roof followed the initiation, the "expense money" in the sum of about $50 being held over to be used in connection with a get-together meeting of the members at Buffalo to be held some time this spring or summer, at which effort will be made to re-establish the old-time interest at Buffalo, and in connection with which it is expected a first-class concatenation with a large class of initiates will be held.

Supreme Representative Stephenson attended this meeting and his efforts contributed in a marked degree to its success.

Had the Ladies Present.

Though only seven men were initiated at the concatenation held at Little Rock on January 27 by Vicegerent W. C. Norman, recently appointed, the meeting was both successful and enjoyable. The session-on-the-roof was notable, taking the form of an elaborate banquet, at which a hundred Hoo-Hoo and their wives and daughters sat down. This occurred at the Marion Hotel, which served an ample menu in elegant style. Brother J. C. McGrath acted as toastmaster and speeches were made by W. C. Norman, Vicegerent; J. F. Judd, of St. Louis, Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo; George R. Brown, Secretary of the Little Rock Board of Trade; J. H. Carmichael, an ex-Vicegerent; Vicegerent Wm. F. Ebbing, of St. Louis, and by Mrs. Mary Anne Smith, who has the distinction of being the only woman who is now and has ever been a member of Hoo-Hoo. Brothers J. B. Webster and C. N. Lemon, both of Little Rock, also made good speeches.

This concatenation reflects credit on Vicegerent Norman. Immediately on receiving his appointment he set about arranging for this concatenation, and throughout all the preliminary work and arrangements he had the able assistance of Brothers J. C. McGrath and A. W. Parke, whose names have figured in the reports of many good concatenations, and of numerous other local members, who have always been true and loyal Hoo-Hoo.

Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd made a hurried trip from Kansas City to be present at this meeting. He is making it a point to attend all the concatenations held in his jurisdiction, and has so far to his credit a perfect score. His presence was much appreciated at the Kansas City meeting, as it was also, of course, at Little Rock, which is one of Brother Judd's home towns, so to speak.

Calls it a "Humdinger."

The following account of the concatenation held at Kansas City on January 25 is furnished by one of the half-dozen or more Vicegerents of Kansas and Missouri who attended and took an active part:

Kansas City, Mo., January 29.—"The best ever" was the verdict of those who attended the Hoo-Hoo concatenation in this city last Thursday night. It was what Missourians call a "Humdinger." Owing to the ill-timed and unbecoming fight that had been made on the Order, Vicegerent N. H. Huey departed from the time-worn custom of beating the bushes to see how many purblind kittens could be captured to be fed at the feast of Hoo-Hoo. Instead, Vicegerent Huey organized a working force of some of Hoo-Hoo's most staunch supporters to put on a concatenation that would bring out the old members of the Order. To say that he succeeded would be putting it mildly. He was successful far beyond his most sanguine dreams. There were fully four hundred Hoo-Hoo assembled in the hall to witness the initiating ceremonies.

An unique and attractive program had been published, announcing the amusement features of the Session-on-the-Roof. The doors of the hall were thrown open to all visiting lumbermen and a bill consisting of four high-class vaudeville acts, two boxing bouts and a battle royal were given. At the conclusion of this program all adjourned to the banquet room of the Eagles' Club, where a Dutch lunch was given, at which the members of the "Sap and Bark Club" were hosts.

At 10:30 the initiation ceremonies started. The officers were: Snark of the Universe, Ed A. Horr; Senior Hoo-Hoo, C. D. Crane; Junior Hoo-Hoo, Ed Leech; Bojum, Fred W.
Schley; Scrivenoter, Homer P. Allen; Jabberwock, Louis
Hector; Custocatian, A. E. Cummings; Arcanoper, E. M.
Lockridge; Gurdon, G. C. Poole.

It will be seen from the formal report that Vicegerent
Ed A. Horr, of Atchison, Kas., whose splendid concatenation held on December 2 was one of the good things starting off this Hoo-Hoo year, acted as Snark, and that among the other officers were Vicegerents Ed Leech, of Salina, Kas., and ex-Vicegerent Homer P. Allen, of Kansas City.
As intimated above, there were numerous other Vice-gerents and ex-Vicegerents present, with several ex-members of the Supreme Nine. Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F.
Judd made a special trip from Texarkana to be present.
Supreme Scrivenoter J. H. Baird also attended.

Chief credit for this meeting, however, belongs to Vicegerent N. H. Huey, and the men whom he called to his assistance to serve on committees. These men did such good work that, notwithstanding the fact that these committees have before appeared in The Bulletin, they are reprinted herewith:

Entertainment, E. M. Lockridge, Chairman; L. Hector
and E. McLain, Program, Ed Leech, Chairman; R. J.
Oliver and L. Noll, Hall and Refreshments, N. H. Huey, Chairman; E. A. Cummings and F. C. Mariner.

The notable feature of this meeting was the large attendance of members, there being present close to four hundred at the initiation which took place in the magnificent lodge of the Eagles' Hall. The meeting was notable also in the big collection of dues, Brother Homer P.

Allen, who acted as Scrivenoter, being due high commendation for the way he handled the financial end of the meeting. Two old-time members of the Order whose presence was very much appreciated were Brothers Chas.
P. Ives, of Baldwin, Kas., ex-Gurdon on the Supreme Nine, and Brother E. M. Adams, the well-known veteran lumberman of Mound City, Kas.

The following is the registered attendance at this concatenation as reported, though this is very incomplete.
The crowd was simply so large and surged into the hall so rapidly that a complete registration was found impossible.

Concatenation No. 1755, Kansas City, Mo., January 25, 1912.

Highly Enjoyable at New Orleans.

In the judgment of every one of the more than one hundred members of the Order who were present, no better concatenation was ever held anywhere than that at New Orleans on February 6 in connection with the meeting of the Yellow Pine Manufacturers' Association. The register of attendance follows:

Both the initiation and the subsequent session-on-the-roof occurred in the splendid convention hall on the top floor of the Grunewald. The meeting promptly opened at 9:09 and concluded at midnight. However, the session-on-the-roof proving one of those old-time informal, good fellowship affairs, many lingered in the rooms an hour or more longer.

Brother Bolling Arthur Johnson, the founder of the Order, filled the station of Snark, and had to assist him
Supreme Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell and ex-Vicegerent
Edw. Schwartz, ex-member of the Supreme Nine Farley
Price, and such old-time and well-known members as John F. O'Neill and S. N. Acree. The station of Senior Hoo-Hoo was admirably filled by Brother J. B. Baker, of the Huie-Hodge Lumber Company, Hodge, La.

A feature of the session-on-the-roof was an address of Brother Leonard Bronson, manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, now located at Tacoma, Wash., who was in attendance on the lumber meeting. Brother Bronson is the man who conceived the idea of the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, and was a member of the committee which drafted the plan under which it has so successfully operated. He reviewed the inception and establishment of this fund and commended its operations, explaining, to the great interest of those present the details of its aims, purposes and management. Brother Bronson was listened to with deep interest and at the conclusion of his remarks a resolution was adopted requesting him to write out for The Bulletin a full expression of his views on the operations and benefits to the Order of this death fund.

In view of the large number of officers and ex-officers of the Order present at the meeting, Vicegerent George W. Wicks did not fill any of the stations at the initiation, but he is ill-advised who would imagine that the success of this meeting was not largely due to his good work. With the assistance of that good Hoo-Hoo, ex-Vicegerent N. R. Freeland, Brother Wicks got on the job early and had all arrangements carefully worked out. He took charge of the financial end of the proposition and handled the large sum of dues and other moneys collected. Owing to his good management, despite the large attendance, every expense was taken care of without a cent of assessment on any member. In short Vicegerent Wicks demonstrated that to hold a thoroughly successful and enjoyable concatenation at New Orleans it is not necessary to spend hundreds of dollars to provide an elaborate banquet. No banquet ever held was more enjoyable than the splendid midnight luncheon served by the Grunewald in connection with this session-on-the-roof.

Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd was present and participated, having made a special trip from Texarkana to be on hand.

Following Brother Bronson's address at the session-on-the-roof, a characteristic speech was made by Brother B. A. Johnson. He told of Hoo-Hoo's establishment, of the history it has created, and said that Hoo-Hoo has not only filled a distinct want in the lumber trade, as has been clearly demonstrated by its continued life and growth, but that it has resulted in similar fraternal orders in other lines of business. He especially cited the Rejuvenated Sons of Jove, in the electrical trade, and the Order of Kokoal, in the coal trade. Brother Johnson's remarks were well received. He was followed by one or two briefer speeches.

Fine Meeting at Charleston.

Certainly the Hoo-Hoo of his home state are rallying to the support of Snark Boggess' administration. "This was a fine meeting, and as you will note from the registered attendance it was a representative meeting; it will have a good effect throughout this whole part of the country." This is the concluding comment on the meeting made by Supreme Representative Stephenson, who filled the station of Junior Hoo-Hoo. Snark Boggess filled the station of Snark, among the other officers present being ex-Vicegerent O. F. Payne, of Charleston, and Vicegerent R. Y. Johnson, of Staunton, Va.

Ten men were reinstated at this meeting, several other reinstatements having been made in connection with the preliminary arrangements for the meeting. A big collection of dues was also made.

A handsome and tasteful program, menu card and toast list was got out by Vicegerent James Morrison, to whom the utmost credit for the success of this meeting is due. This program designated the meeting as a "mid-winter session of Hoo-Hoo to be held on Groundhog Day."

At the session-on-the-roof ex-Vicegerent O. F. Payne acted as toastmaster. The address of welcome was to have been delivered by Mayor Holley, of Charleston, but he was called away from town on business. In his absence the address was eloquently extended by the Exalted Ruler of the Elks. The toast, "A West Virginia Hoo-Hoo," was to have been responded to by Brother E. C. Colcord, the well-known lumberman of St. Albans, whose unavoidable absence was much regretted. Snark Boggess took his place and made a good talk. "The Kitten's Viewpoint" was explained by A. R. Tickner.

Besides those already named, Vicegerent Morrison had the able assistance of Brothers A. A. Rudy, ex-Vicegerent, and George A. Zeigler; George P. Franklin, ex-Vicegerent; Hugh Stewart and O. H. Michealson, who was made "medical examiner" at the initiation. A "good fellowship" committee was composed of the following, all of whom discharged the duties of their positions most admirably: Joseph Wehrle, E. J. Healy, C. M. Hawkins, C. T. Skidmore and W. H. Wells.

It is saying a whole lot, but no better concatenation ever occurred in West Virginia than this "Groundhog" meeting at Charleston.

Snark, E. Stringer Boggess; Senior Hoo-Hoo, O. F. Payne; Junior Hoo-Hoo, W. M. Stephenson; Bojum, R. Y. Johnson; Scribe-noter, W. H. Dacron; Jabberwock, J. V. Tully; Custocatian, G. A. Zeigler; Arcanoper, George P. Franklin; Gurdon, Hugh Stewart.

26318 Parill Parker Breece, Charleston, W. Va.; purchasing agent West Virginia Timber Company.

26319 John Francis Carroll, New York, N. Y.; traveling representative Winant Cooperage Company.

26320 Charles Lyman Chalmers, Bangor, Maine; president and treasurer Haynes & Chalmers Company.

26321 George Nathaniel Hancock, Charleston, W. Va.; general agent C. & O. Railway, Richmond, Va.

26322 John Henry Mahan, Charleston, W. Va.; vice-president Chesapeake Lumber Company.

26323 Ernest "Muldoon" Mitchell, Charleston, W. Va.; traveling representative Illingworth, Ingham & Co., Leeds, England.

26324 James Milton Porter, Swiss, W. Va.; stockholder Mountain City Lumber Company, Flynn Lumber Company.

26325 Thomas "Sport" Richardson, Charleston, W. Va.; city freight agent K. & M. R. R.

26326 I. V. Robinson, Charleston, W. Va.; superintendent Boom Timber Company

26327 Isaac Simpson Smith, Deepwater, W. Va.; assistant manager F. E. Roberts.

26328 Samuel Tobias Stine, Meadow Bluff, W. Va.; secretary Smith-Martin Lumber Company.

26329 Alanson Robert Ticknor, Ashland, Ky.; vice-president and manager W. J. Fell Company.

26330 Ira Oaks Willard, Charleston, W. Va.; buyer D. G. Courtney.

26331 Charles Edson Winant, Brooklyn, N. Y.; proprietor Winant Cooperage Company, New York, N. Y.

In the Mountains of British Columbia.

Vicegerent E. T. McDonald, of the Mountain District of British Columbia, held a concatenation at Nelson, B. C., on January 19. Vicegerent McDonald writes of the meeting as follows:

"While the conditions and circumstances surrounding this meeting were not the most favorable, we held such a meeting as will go a long way toward reviving the spirit of Hoo-Hoo, which has been allowed to lie dormant for nearly five years in this mountain section of British Columbia. In fact, we feel that we have now aroused a spirit of Hoo-Hoo so that we will be able to hold one good big concatenation in the near future, and should have in the neighborhood of fifty or more kittens. The concatenation we have just held, through the able assistance of Brother W. C. Birdsall and A. W. Mackenzie, was one of the cleanest little concatenations I have ever had the honor of attending, and I am in hopes that we will be able to give you a good report from the mountain district of British Columbia when you have your annual meeting next September. I also expect, personally, to be able to shake hands with you again, as I have not seen you now since our annual at Portland."

The Bulletin especially commends the unique and attractive bit of printing got out by Vicegerent McDonald for the menu used at the session-on-the-roof. He got hold of a real artist to work up the pictures used in this, the front page being especially attractive. It represents a typical British Columbia mountain saw mill, with a cat dressed up as a typical logger hurtling down the river carefully poised, pike pole in hand, on an immense saw log.

The session-on-the-roof occurred at the "Hume," which we judge to be the leading hotel of Nelson, and judging from the following unique carte there must have been quite a variety of good things to eat.

Pforeign Mail Fethers, DuBois
Anchouvey Sandwiches, Jewels
Grear Knotts, Poole
East Cootani Turke Hurded by Leach
Homes Kranbury Jellie
Kold Shampain Ham a la Stacy
Kold Gift of Gab, Koch
Irish Saalade Skid Greece, Sadler
Spuds Slivers, Anderson
Ascorted Shopp Slash, Brooks
Koffee Pirkelate, Pennock
Cheese It Krackers, No Jokes

Vicegerent McDonald deserves much credit for this meeting, and is to be congratulated on its pronounced success. The Bulletin has received letters from several lumbermen who attended. Vicegerent McDonald was fortunate in having among his other able assistants Brother W. C. Birdsall, of Vancouver, whose name has appeared on many reports of successful concatenations.

Mighty Good Time at Gulfport.

Those who think that the interest of representative lumbermen in Hoo-Hoo has died out, if there really be such who hold this honest belief or fear, they should have been present at the splendid little concatenation held at Gulfport, Miss., on January 31. It was held in connection with the meeting of the Mississippi Pine Manufacturers' Association. A glance at the officers who took part show the class and standing of the men who were present and initiating.

The session-on-the-roof, which was held at the Great Southern Hotel, was a truly notable affair—just about the most elaborate banquet that ever took place in any connection anywhere in the South. It was really a magnificent eight-course affair, the menu being as enjoyable as the speech-making which followed. No formal toast list has been furnished The Bulletin, but it is informed that Vicegerent Wilder, Supreme Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell and numerous others, including Brother James A. Kirby, of New Orleans, acquitted themselves admirably. There were many other speeches.

The whole thing was a most dignified and orderly affair, giving plenty of time for the speech-making and for what turned out to be a very interesting discussion of many things pertaining to the lumber business in Mississippi.

Joint Meeting at Spokane.

Just as the Bulletin goes to press comes report of the joint concatenation held at Spokane on February 8 by Vicegerent J. H. Ehrmantraut, of Spokane, Wash., and Vicegerent P. M. Lachmund, of the Northern District of Idaho. At this writing only the formal papers have come to hand, with nothing to show any of the side lights on the meeting. It appears to have been both a successful and enjoyable meeting. Nine men were initiated. A large amount of dues was collected. The Bulletin had expected to have from Supreme Representative Stephenson a good write-up of this meeting, but it has evidently been delayed by the poor mail service.

Best Ever at Nashville.

The best concatenation ever held in Nashville goes to the credit of Vicegerent S. Cecil Ewing, as a result of the meeting Saturday night, February 17. The initiation was held in the just completed Assembly Hall of the Maxwell House, on the ground floor, an admirable place. The session-on-the-roof followed at 10:30 in the Ladies' Ordinary on the second floor—one of the most beautiful dining halls in Nashville. The session-on-the-roof was certainly not second in enjoyableness to the initiation. Both were splendid. So many good speeches were made and so many good stories told that the meeting did not finally adjourn until nearly 2 o'clock in the morning, remarkable when it is considered that many of the lumbermen of Nashville live out on suburban lines on which the cars stop at 1 o'clock. They simply remained in town and made a night of it.

The chief speakers at the banquet were R. Houston Dudley, newly elected President of the Board of Trade, and an old member of Hoo-Hoo; Mr. H. H. Love, President of the Nashville Lumbermen's Club, and Olin White and Henderson Baker, recent candidates put up by the lumbermen of Nashville for the directory of the Board of Trade. Speeches were made also by Mr. C. M. Morford, Mr. C. E. Hunt, one of the initiates; Vicegerent Ewing, Sam K. Cowan and J. H. Baird. As a matter of fact, Mr. Ewing was the first speaker called on, the toastmaster paying him a high tribute for his splendid work both as Vicegerent of Hoo-Hoo and as Secretary of the Nashville Lumbermen's Club. In both capacities Mr. Ewing has greatly endeared himself to Nashville lumbermen.

The meeting was held just as every Hoo-Hoo concatenation should be held, with plenty of fun, but fun of the highest grade, and without any horse-play or disorderliness. A good collection was made of dues, and six or eight delinquent members were reinstated. It was a great getting-together of Nashville Hoo-Hoo.

This initiation pretty nearly brings in the eligible material at Nashville. There are, however, ten or a dozen lumbermen still lying outside the trenches. Several of these had been lined up for initiation at this meeting, but failed to show up for various reasons, several of them being in Florida, several others away on business trips, and two or three of them being ill.

A resolution was offered and adopted at the session-on-the-roof providing for another just such concatenation to be held here at some convenient date within the next sixty days, every man in the hall pledging himself to participate and to make it a personal matter to see these outers and bring them in with their blanks filled out.

Forty-Seven at Seattle.

Just as The Bulletin forms are closing for the press comes a telegram from Brother Stephenson saying that the concatenation at Seattle was the best ever. Forty-seven men were initiated. The Bulletin regrets not to be able to present a full report in this issue. Numerous telegrams have been received from men who participated to the effect that the meeting was a wonderful success. It certainly reflects great credit on Vicegerent L. R. Fifer, who has done splendid work. This meeting at Seattle was attended by Supreme Representative Stephenson, he having hurried on from the Spokane meeting to be present.

DON'T YOU WANT A COPY?

Those who took part in the Hoo-Hoo lake cruise last September will recall with pleasure Mr. Harold L. Frankenstein, the leader of the orchestra, who contributed so much pleasure to the trip. Mr. Frankenstein was not only tireless in playing over all the old popular airs for the Hoo-Hoo delegation, but he became so inspired with the spirit of the occasion that he composed a very lively song, called the Hoo-Hoo Song. Quite a number of copies of this piece of music were sold to those on board, and have since been supplied to many others. Brother Jeff B. Webb writes that Mr. Frankenstein has a limited number of copies of the song still on hand which he desires to sell at 25 cents per copy. The publication of this song was not a business venture, but as the composer went to considerable expense to have the song printed he would like to recoup himself by disposing of the copies now on hand. The piece of music is well worth the money. Orders (with 25 cents enclosed) can be sent either to the Scrivenoter or to Mr. Harold L. Frankenstein, 212 Avery Avenue, Detroit, Mich. The quickest action will be obtained by sending the orders direct to Detroit.

Every Siberian village is surrounded by a big stockade, some ten or fifteen feet in height. This erection is to prevent the sheep and cattle from wandering into the forests and so falling a prey to the wild animals which swarm therein. In addition to this, each village makes common property of an enormous number of dogs of the wolf-hound breed, which are kept for protection from the packs of wolves which in winter, desperate with hunger, descend upon the villages. Such dogs are rightly prized, and, though they belong to nobody in particular, are kept well fed and cared for. They are huge beasts, almost as savage as wolves themselves.

HYMENEAL.

Brother Frank N. Poe, No. 22893, was married on January 10 to Miss Elsie Margaret Knauer, at Philadelphia, Pa. Brother Poe lives at Mobile, Ala., where he is prominently connected with the Central Lumber Company.

Brother Chas. L. Gregg, No. 9181, was married on January 9 at Eureka Springs, Ark., to Miss Jane Elizabeth Choate, daughter of Mrs. M. S. Choate. Brother Gregg is prominently connected with the Granger-Kelley Lumber Company, of Eureka Springs, Ark.

Fast Trains in Europe.

Express speed in Great Britain and on the continent is high. In Great Britain there are eleven daily express trains making runs of from 50 to 118 1/2 miles without a stop, whose average speed is from 51 to 59.2 miles an hour. The fastest and longest non-stop run is 225 1/2 miles, from Paddington to Plymouth, made at 54.8 miles an hour. France has seven daily expresses that run from 77 1/2 to 147 1/2 miles without a stop, at speeds of from 51.1 to 61.8 miles an hour, and there are nine French trains that run from 102 to 147 1/2 miles without a stop, at speeds of from 50.4 to 59.3 miles an hour.

Limited Vocabulary.

Act I.

The infant 'tis who speaketh—
If speech 'tis may be called,
And yet mine ear can only hear
One syllable that's bawled—
"Wa-wa-wah!"

Act II.

He's grown in childish troubles
He makes a grievous fuss,
And comfort seeks in treble shrieks
In accents sounding thus—
"Ma! Ma-ma!"

Act III.

Now after graduation,
His intellect is grown,
We may suppose? Ah, heaven knows
He yowls in strident tone:
"Rah-rah-rah!"

Act IV.

Now, after graduation,
He's grown a humorist,
And at the jokes he tells to folks
He laughs himself—oh, list!
"Ha-ha-ha!"

Act V.

Last act of all: Grown aged,
A cynic now is he;
At all the mirth and tears of earth
He mutters savagely,
"Bah! Bah! Bah!"

OBITUARY.

George Scott Lacey (No. 42).

Brother George S. Lacey died very suddenly at Franklinton, La., on January 15. Capt. Lacey has been in feeble health for two years, but this winter appeared to have improved. He was much encouraged over his condition, as were all his friends, but he dropped dead while sitting at his desk.

News of this death will bring sorrow to hundreds of the older members of Hoo-Hoo and to many score of the older generation of lumbermen. Capt. Lacey was a forceful character and at one time a very prominent figure in the yellow pine industry. Brother Lacey was born at Laceyville, Pa., July 1, 1843, and has been in some branch of the lumber business nearly all his life. He leaves a widow who is in feeble health. Brother Lacey was a participant in the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund.

George Henry Anthony (No. 4666).

In November Bulletin was chronicled the death of the wife of Brother George H. Anthony, at Monrovia, Cal., on October 14, 1911. On February 15 Brother Anthony himself died suddenly, also at Monrovia, where he has resided for some time. No particulars of this death have as yet been received beyond the formal telegraphic notice incident to the claim accruing under the Death Emergency Fund.

Brother Anthony was born at Medina, N. Y., February 14, 1853. He became a member of Hoo-Hoo in 1897 at a concatenation held in St. Louis, Mo.

John A. Peterson (No. 22138).

Brother J. A. Peterson died at his home at Salt Lake City, January 22. Brother Peterson had been in poor health for some time, and while his death came as a blow to many friends and acquaintances, it was no surprise to his family.

Brother Peterson was born at Malmo, Sweden, November 19, 1875. No fuller particulars of his illness and death have been received. He was a participant in the Death Emergency Fund.

Robert B. Ways (No. 25067).

Brother Robert B. Ways died at his home in Baltimore, Md., February 6. For many years Brother Ways has been prominent in railroad circles, at the time of his death having held the position of foreign freight agent for several years of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company. He was born at Baltimore, Md., February 21, 1862. He was a participant in the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund.

William Henderson Boatman (No. 18237).

A peculiarly shocking death was that just reported of Brother W. H. Boatman, living at the time of his death at Webb, Okla. He met his death December 24 at Waterman, Texas, where he had recently accepted a position with the Waterman Lumber & Supply Company. He became involved in an altercation with a man named Holmes over a trivial matter. Holmes became enraged, but the disputants parted for the time without blows. Holmes, probably under the influence of liquor, returned a few hours later, and calling Brother Boatman to the door, shot him with a double-barrel shotgun, killing him instantly. The remains were embalmed at Timpson, Texas, and taken by his brother, S. J. Boatman, No. 21197, to Webb, Okla., where the interment took place.

Brother Boatman was born at West Plains, Mo., September 4, 1874. He leaves a wife and several small children in pecuniary distress. He was a subscriber in response to the First Call to the Death Emergency Fund, but failed to respond to either the Second or Third Calls.

Jerome Bonaparte Thomas (No. 207).

On December 29, after a short illness of pneumonia, there died at the home of his son at Sumter, S. C., a man well known throughout the entire Southern hardwood field—Brother Jerome B. Thomas. Brother Thomas was born at Hudson, Mich., November 13, 1845. The early part of his life was spent in the white pine trade at Toledo and Saginaw. He left Michigan in 1899 and located at Ford, Ky., where he was associated with the Asher Lumber Company, afterwards organized as the Burt & Brabb Lumber Company. This operation, under the two names given, was one of the largest and best known in the poplar trade. Brother Thomas remained with the Burt & Brabb Lumber Company until 1896, when he was employed in the interest of the Southern poplar manufacturers in an effort to organize that industry. This was one of the several early attempts made to organize the manufacturers. The effort was successful, and the organization formed was the direct progenitor of all the associations that have since existed in the poplar and hardwood trade. During this employment Brother Thomas had headquarters at Huntington, W. Va., and it was during this period that he became so widely acquainted and popular among southern manufacturers of lumber.

After a brief sojourn in New York City, Brother Thomas again came south, and associated himself with Wm. E. Uptegrove & Bro., of New York, in the organization of the American Cigar Box Lumber Company, at Johnson City, Tenn., where he operated a large plant for thirteen years. On account of ill-health he resigned to join his son, C. H. Thomas, in the manufacture of poplar lumber at Sumter, S. C. Besides this son, Brother Thomas leaves a widow, now residing at Sumter. The interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery, Toledo, Ohio.

Brother Thomas was a man of pleasing personality and of high competence. He was a loyal Hoo-Hoo throughout the period of his long membership.

Notice appeared in January Bulletin of the death of Brothers J. H. Bardwell, No. 5344, and Wm. Moore, No. 6771, both of Denver, Colo. At the recent concatenation held at Denver the following resolutions were adopted as part of the proceedings:

Resolved, 1. That in the removal from our midst of James H. Bardwell, every member of Hoo-Hoo here present feels a sense of personal loss.

His was a nature such as few of us are fortunate enough to possess, and few indeed could count so many friends as he.

His cheerful and sunny disposition was always in evidence regardless of the surroundings, and in his loss every one of us feels a heavy share.

His memory will always be pleasant and refreshing to every member of the lumber fraternity who was fortunate enough to know him.

2. That a copy of this resolution be furnished to his family, and that same shall also be forwarded to The Bulletin for publication in its next issue.

(Signed) B. COLDREN,
GEO. C. HILL,
R. M. HANDY,
Committee.

That "death loves a shining mark" has recently been brought home to the lumbermen and Hoo-Hoo of Colorado and adjoining states in the sad death of our brother, William Moore, of Denver.

On Christmas Eve, after making preparations for the morrow's festivities, with no premonition of the coming of the Grim Visitor, William Moore retired and entered his last long sleep.

His sudden passing inexpressibly shocked his large circle of friends.

As a tribute of love and respect for one who has long been an honored member of the lumber fraternity, and always a loyal friend, the members of the Order of Hoo-Hoo present tonight resolve:

"That in the death of our brother we have been grieved beyond the power of words to express. That we will ever cherish the memory of William Moore as that of a true man, a good citizen, and a loyal friend.

"That we hereby express our sympathy to the sorrowing family; that these resolutions be made a part of the record of this concatenation, and that a copy be sent to The Bulletin for publication."

(Signed) B. COLDREN,
R. M. HANDY,
G. C. HILL,
Committee.

John Thomas Eldred (No. 23656).

Brother J. T. Eldred died of scarlet fever at Madera, Chihuahua, Mexico, about three weeks ago. Brother M. V. Geagan, of Weed, Cal., advises of this death, but does not know the exact date. Brother Eldred had been working for Brother Geagan's company for two years past, but when that plant was closed down last fall he took a position with the Madera Company, of Chihuahua, and had barely reached that plant when he was taken ill. Brother Eldred was born at New Boston, Mich., on February 4, 1871. At the time of his initiation he was located at Kentwood, La., going west about two years ago. As he was practically unknown on the coast, Brother Geagan and M. A. Leech had some difficulty in locating his relatives and friends. They succeeded, however, in locating a brother at Los Angeles, Cal.

Thomas Shirley Kennedy (No. 5039).

The death of Brother Thomas S. Kennedy occurred January 24, 1912. He was born at Tarentum, Pa., February 28, 1868.

Brother Kennedy's home was at New Kensington, Pa., where he was manager of the Commercial Box Company. While on his way to Greensburg, Pa., in the interest of business, he became ill, was taken from the train at Irwin, Pa., and died soon after.

Brother Kennedy was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Pittsburg, Pa., July 19, 1897.

Henry Valentine Scholl (No. 17028).

Brother Henry V. Scholl, of Kerrville, Texas, died January 9, 1912. He was born at New Braunfels, Texas, May 22, 1862.

Brother Scholl became a member of Hoo-Hoo at San Antonio, Texas, April 12, 1906. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund, having responded to the three calls. At the time of his death Brother Scholl was manager of the Beitel Lumber Company of Kerrville, Texas.

Henry Franklin Ours (No. 25843).

Brother Henry F. Ours died at his home at Buckhannon, W. Va., January 29, 1912. The cause was typhoid-pneumonia. He was born at Sago, W. Va., November 27, 1865.

Brother Ours was quite a prominent citizen, serving as Sheriff of Upshur County, and as a member of the Legislature. He was also the Mayor-elect of the city of Buckhannon, W. Va.

As will be seen by Brother Ours' number, 25843, he had not long been a member of Hoo-Hoo. He joined at Buckhannon, W. Va., July 17, 1911.

Mrs. J. M. Leiter.

The many friends of Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter, of Portland, Oregon, will be grieved to learn of the death of his wife, which occurred February 2, at St. Vincent's Hospital, in Portland.

Mrs. Leiter had been seriously ill only a short while, but had not been really well for some months. She had been undergoing treatment for rheumatism, and spent several weeks at Mount Clemens, Michigan, last September. Recently symptoms of liver trouble developed. She became rapidly worse, and after a consultation of physicians an operation was resorted to, February 1, which revealed a malady of incurable nature.

Mrs. Leiter was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1858, removing with her parents when a young girl to Indianapolis. She came to Portland in 1892 and married J. M. Leiter, February 27, 1894. She was a member of the First Baptist Church and highly esteemed by a wide circle of friends. She is survived by her husband, J. M. Leiter; a daughter, Louise; two sons, R. A. Leiter and O. C. Leiter; three sisters, Mrs. W. H. Haslet, of Pittsburg, Miss Agnes Quigg, of Chicago, and Miss K. Alice Quigg, of Portland.

THE BULLETIN

VOL. XVIII.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH, 1912.

LEONARD "HEMLOCK" BRONSON, No. 145

In this issue appears a history of the operation of the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund from its inception to date, presented in connection with announcement of Fourth Call to be sent out April 1st. (See page 5.) It is most appropriate in this connection to present the picture of Brother Leonard Bronson, now located at Tacoma, Wash., as manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. He is the man who conceived the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund and who ably assisted in preparing the plan upon which it now operates.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MARCH, 1912.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

When this is written there are several concatenations scheduled which will have occurred, and probably have been reported, before The Bulletin will go to press. Only brief mention of these meetings will, therefore, be made.

March 16 at Sacramento, Cal.

This is the second in the series of California concatenations about which much appeared in the February Bulletin.

March 19 at Fresno.

The third of the California concatenations. Both this and the meeting at Sacramento are to be held by Vicegerent F. S. Palmer, of San Francisco, assisted by Brother Trower and others from San Francisco.

March 23 at Los Angeles.

Fourth of the California series. This meeting will be held by Vicegerent J. T. Bate. Brother Stephenson will attend, as will also Brother Trower, from San Francisco.

Other Early Ones.

Two concatenations will have been held in Florida by the time this Bulletin is got to press—at Pensacola, Fla., on March 21, by Vicegerent F. Rust Smith, assisted by the Supreme Scrivenoter, and at Tampa, Fla., on March 23, by Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew. Both these meetings have been duly ribbed up to be very successful. Both will be attended by many lumbermen from nearby points.

Two Others in March.

Two other meetings to occur in March are those at Battle Creek, Mich., on March 21, to be held by Vicegerent S. J. Rathbun, of Battle Creek, assisted by Vicegerent F. J. Verkerke, of Grand Rapids, in which will also participate and assist ex-Senior Hoo-Hoo Jeff B. Webb, of Detroit, and the meeting scheduled to occur about the end of March in the Coast District of British Columbia, by Vicegerent P. W. Fau-Vel. The Michigan meeting is to be quite a state affair, two Vicegerents and a distinguished "ex" being participants. Vicegerent Ruth, of Chicago, also expects to go over. The Bulletin feels impelled to pay a special compliment to Vicegerent Rathbun for the unique and attractive poster announcement he got out of this meeting, and it regrets only that he gave such short notice of his meeting as not to permit of its being properly promoted through publicity in The Bulletin. He will have a good attendance and a good class.

Not much definite information is yet to hand about the meeting in Vancouver. It may not be held at Vancouver, but at some other point in Brother Fau-Vel's district, and it may not be held until some time in April. West coast Vicegerents have their own trunks, and proceed on their own initiative in holding meetings. Under the lead of such men as Vicegerent Fau-Vel and the others he has called to his assistance, they are amply able to proceed ex parte as to all the balance of the work.

In Further Prospect.

April shows up with a good roster of meetings. The dates and places now in process of being definitely announced will be taken up in detail.

At Cumberland, Md.

This meeting will occur on April 12 and will be held by Vicegerent R. W. Oswald, who has a corps of able assistants, including Brother G. E. Emmert, of Cumberland, and Brother A. A. Rudy, of Elkins, W. Va. Snark Boggess plans to attend this meeting.

Second Meeting in Texas.

The second concatenation of this Hoo-Hoo year in Texas will occur at Fort Worth during the session of the big convention there of the Lumbermen's Association of Texas, April 9, 10 and 11.

This concatenation will be held by Vicegerent S. E. Carothers, of Waco, assisted by Supreme Arcanoper John C. Ray, of Waco. The meeting of this Texas association is always an immense affair. It is safe to say that Brothers Ray and Carothers will plan the concatenation on commensurate scale and that it will be a notable event of the Hoo-Hoo year.

One in the Old North State.

Three or more concatenations will occur during April or May in North Carolina. The only one for which date has so far been definitely fixed is that to be held at Hickory, N. C., on April 12, by Vicegerent R. A. Gaither, of Statesville. He expects to follow this meeting with one at Greensboro, on May 3; this latter date, however, may be changed backward or forward a few days to make it dovetail in with other meetings to be held near by.

At Asheville, N. C.

Vicegerent J. M. English, of Asheville, has been ready to hold a concatenation for a month past, but has awaited the working out of a proposed series of concatenations to occur in his state and West Virginia. More about this will be said later. It suffices now that Brother English is at work on his arrangements and is ready to hold a successful meeting whenever the date can be fixed.

The West Virginia Series.

Snark Boggess is actively in correspondence with all the Vicegerents throughout his jurisdiction arranging the series of concatenations to occur in April or early May. His tentative list of dates is as below. Probably several of these dates will be changed as local conditions and the convenience of the Vicegerent may demand. However, the schedule will be substantially complied with in that all the meetings named will be held.

Future announcement will be made through the lumber and local papers fixing the exact time and place. The tentative schedule is as follows:

Cumberland, Md., April 12, R. W. Oswald.
 Clarksburg, W. Va., April 13, G. P. Morgan.
 Huntington, W. Va., April 16, G. J. Dickerson.
 Pittsburg, Pa., April 18, R. E. Gannon.
 Columbus, Ohio, April 20, J. C. McNally.
 Norfolk, Va., April 21, W. J. Woodward.
 Asheville, N. C., April 26, J. M. English.
 Hickory, N. C., April 12, R. A. Gaither.
 Greensboro, N. C., May 3, R. A. Gaither.
 Marlinton, W. Va., April 26, A. D. Williams.
 Staunton, Va., April 26, R. Y. Johnson.
 Baltimore, Md., April 16 S. Robb Eccles.
 Ashland, Ky., May 10, A. T. Conley.
 Roanoke, Va., J. E. Walker.

Two More on the Pacific Coast.

Considerable mention has already been made of a big concatenation to be held at Portland, Ore., in June during the annual Rose Festival. This mention occurs in the notice of the banquet given in honor of Supreme Representative W. M. Stephenson, at which time a committee was appointed to hold another "get together" banquet of the Portland Hoo-Hoo, at which final arrangements for the June concatenation will be made.

The other meeting on the coast is one about which already a good deal has been said, and will be held at Klamath Falls, Ore., in May.

This is a meeting upon which the San Francisco members, under the lead of Brother Trower and Vicegerent Palmer, has been at work for some time. It will occur in May, probably the latter part of May, during a celebration to be given at Klamath Falls by the Elks' lodge. The Bulletin is not advised as to just what sort of a celebration this is to be, but Brother H. D. Mortenson, president of the Pelican Bay Lumber Company, at Klamath Falls, who is taking a deep interest in the proposed concatenations, says it will be a very remarkable three-days' exhibition of rough riding which will be a novel sight to some of our city members." He is alluding to Brother Trower's party from San Francisco.

In connection with this meeting Brother Trower is in correspondence with a number of prominent members throughout Northern California and Southern Oregon, having just received an enthusiastic letter from Brother J. F. Wise, of Dorris, Cal., who says he will "be on hand with a bunch of eligibles from my place." It is not at all unlikely that this Klamath Falls meeting will take the flag away from Brother Fifer, at Seattle, for number of initiates, which will be going some.

It should be explained that the railroad and the mountain ranges in Southern Oregon run in such way as to make Klamath Falls more of a California proposition in Hoo-Hoo than it is of Oregon. Nevertheless, the bulk of the initiates are expected from Oregon. On account of its location it is exceedingly difficult for the Vicegerent of Southern Oregon to get over with any candidates from his part. A high mountain chain intervenes. It has, therefore, been agreed that the meeting will be held by the Californians under lead of Brothers Trower and Palmer, the Oregon Vicegerents and members cooperating in every way they can. It is expected that both Vicegerents, from Oregon and perhaps Brother Leiter, Supreme Jabberwock, will be present at the meeting. More will appear about this meeting in The Bulletin.

In Still Further Prospect.

A series of two and probably three meetings is on the way in Mississippi, to occur the latter part of April or before the 15th of May. Supreme Custodian T. L. O'Donnell is leading in this movement, assisted by the three Mississippi Vicegerents. Two of these meetings will occur at Hattiesburg and Jackson, the third most likely at Meridian.

In Southern Georgia.

The series of two meetings in Southern Georgia, spoken of in last Bulletin, will probably not be held until May. Exceptionally bad weather has prevailed throughout the South and has put lumbermen badly behind with their work. Both the Vicegerents are closely watching chances, however, and will announce their concatenations to occur in close sequence.

In Louisiana.

A meeting is being worked up by Vicegerent G. R. Gloor to be held at the Hotel Bentley, Alexandria, La. This meeting also will probably occur in May.

In the meantime it will be recalled that Vicegerent F. G. Snyder postponed his meeting scheduled to occur at Shreveport on March 9 on account of bad weather. He will soon announce a later date for this meeting.

Two in Tennessee.

The follow-up concatenation at Nashville tentatively suggested to be held March 16, has been postponed by action of the Nashville Lumbermen's Club until night of March 30. This postponement was on account of continued bad weather and the continued absence in Florida of several leading lumbermen of the city.

Following his concatenation at Jackson, reported in this issue, Vicegerent George O. Friedel has begun work on a big "reunion concatenation" to be held at Memphis in May. There has not been a first-class concatenation held at Memphis for a year or two, and with rapid increase of lumber business there, there has accumulated a large amount of excellent material. The Memphis concatenation will probably set a mark for meetings this year in the South.

PERSONAL MENTION.

The Bulletin is indebted to Brother R. H. Zavitz, of Toronto, Ont., Canada, for a copy of the very handsome official call and invitation to the thirteenth annual convention of the Canadian Forestry Association, held at Ottawa, Canada, on February 7 and 8, 1912. The Bulletin is advised the meeting was largely attended by practical lumbermen and others interested in forestry. We think our Canadian neighbors have a little something on us in an early appreciation of the necessity for a definite and systematic forest policy.

Brother P. F. Ahrens has made a hazard of new fortune. Selling out his stock in the True & True Company, of Chicago, with which he has been connected for many years, when that concern sold out to the Cincinnati Door & Sash Company, he went over to Michigan City, Ind., and formed the firm of Ahrens & Schaffer, to succeed to the business of the Michigan City Sash & Door Company. The firm will do a wholesale manufacturing business in sash, doors, blinds, moulding, etc. Brother Ahrens is so far much pleased with his new business.

OUR NEXT ANNUAL MEETING.

When and Where Shall It Be Held? Expressions From Membership Will Be Appreciated.

Those who attended the last Annual Meeting will recall the discussion that took place on the subject of time and place for holding the 1912 Annual Meeting, and the action that was taken leaving it to the Supreme Nine to fix the time of meeting between June 15 and July 15. It will be recalled also that an urgent invitation was extended by Brother J. Newton Nind that the meeting be held at Ottawa Hotel, Ottawa Beach, Mich.

For the benefit of those who were not present at the meeting, and the information of the membership generally, the following excerpts from the proceedings of last Annual Meeting are appended.

In his annual address Snark Miller said:

Before the often visiting of so many communities, I did not realize what a revered anachronism, so far as its influence upon attendance at annuals is concerned, is our present date of meeting. If we wish to subscribe to our sacred tradition, and it is truly a significant one, we can yet let the Ninth day of the Ninth month be its beginning and end, but I firmly believe that if we had our meetings in July, held, as is this one, in some locality where those wishing a vacation could take the trip as all or a portion of theirs, we would easily triple the attendance. September is one of the worst months of the year for an absence from the coast. Brother Stephenson has an idea in regard to the fiscal year to present.

In his annual report Supreme Representative Stephenson recommended:

I would recommend that our Annual Meetings be held in either June or July, the Hoo-Hoo Year to remain as it is, from September 9 to September 9. This would give the newly elected officers a chance to become acquainted with the duties of their several offices and enable them to get the new Vicegerents appointed and ready for action on September 9. The meeting as it is now held, in September, is a bad month for lumbermen to get away, as fall business commences in September. Then members who have children who attend school cannot attend, as they have to remain at home to start children to school. Also, and a greater reason than all, September is late in the season and the larger part of our members have already been away on their vacation and do not feel that they can afford the time for another trip. If we select some date in either June or July and hold our meetings at some central attractive point, we will get a much larger attendance, as our members can arrange their vacations better earlier in the season.

The officers could make a partial report and the final reports for the year could be published in The Bulletin in September of each year.

The following report was made by the Committee on Good of the Order:

1. As suggested in address of Snark Miller, also advised by Supreme Representative Stephenson, we recommend that the Annual Meeting take place some week in July after the Fourth of July.

The following discussion ensued:

MR. NIND:—I want to extend an invitation to the Order to have the next meeting at a point on Lake Michigan where there is a hotel that will take care of 600 people, and to change the date to the last week in June or after the Fourth of July. I make this as a motion.

MR. HADLEY:—Do you make an amendment that the meeting be held the last week in June?

MR. NIND:—That the Supreme Nine determine whether it shall be held the last part of June or after July 4.

MR. DAVIES:—It seems to be the opinion of the Nine that September is too late in the season. I move that the Supreme Nine be authorized to fix the date any time between the 15th of June and the 15th of July.

MR. NIND:—I will accept that amendment.

THOMAS J. GAY (21811):—I move, as a substitute for the motion, that the date be left open, to be fixed by the Supreme Nine, as the place might be in the North, East, South or West, and it might be desired to have the meeting held a week or two earlier or later.

CHARLES P. WALKER (6806):—I second the motion. In future years there might be something held of national importance before or after these dates that we, as a body, would want to attend. Say that the Supreme Nine fix the date before the 15th of February, with the understanding that our meeting shall be held during the summer months.

MR. CORNELIUS:—Isn't the date provided for now by the constitution, and are we not making an amendment to the constitution?

MR. OXENFORD:—I move that all these motions be tabled, and that in substitution the Snark be empowered to fix the date of the annual meeting any time after the Fourth of July, according to the locality of the country which we are going to visit. We don't want to go to Oklahoma City or to Hot Springs in July or August. We don't want to go North in January or February.

(Mr. Oxenford's motion was not seconded.)

(Thereupon the amendment to the amendment was voted on and carried. The original motion was then carried.)

It will be seen that the adoption of Brother Nind's motion, as amended by Brother Davis, fixed the time of meeting between June 15 and July 15, the exact date to be determined and announced by the Supreme Nine.

Snark Boggess, under date of March 6, writes as follows:

Roanoke, Va., March 6, 1912.

Mr. J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville.

Dear Sir: Your favor 28th inst. regarding time and place of next Annual Meeting. I have carefully read the report of last Annual. I believe the earlier we can fix the date the larger attendance we will have. It will be a change of time of meeting. The members who have been regular attendants at Annuals would like to know the date as early as possible. On account of the change of date it is hoped the attendance will be much larger than heretofore. By fixing the date early it will afford those who take a vacation the time to make the Annual their vacation trip.

It occurs to me also that by fixing the date for the last week in June, immediately following the national Democratic and Republican conventions, we might secure the attendance of all members who might be delegates or visitors to these conventions. Those from the far West and South might remain over and then have time to get home for local Fourth of July celebrations.

I believe it would be well to ascertain the opinions of the other members of the Nine at as early date as possible.

This is my idea just as you asked for. I do not believe the fixing of the date will do anything but hurry up Vicegerents to hold their concatenations and have them all over by May.

Fraternally yours,

E. STRINGER BOGGESS, Snark.

Printed copies of all the above were mailed to each member of the Supreme Nine and House of Ancients on March 13, with the request that each man be heard from with whatever suggestion he has to make. Printed proof of this entire article has been mailed also to Brother J. Newton Nind, who requested that he be heard from further, whenever the matter was taken up, in advocacy of holding the meeting at Ottawa Beach. In this connection the following is printed from a letter from Brother Nind, dated January 29:

As I wrote you a short time ago, my invitation to meet at Ottawa Beach is still good. The management of the hotel has changed since I presented my invitation last fall and there has been added to possible attractions for that gathering the new boat "Grand Rapids," owned by the Graham-Morton Line, which will be ready for an initial trip on the lakes some time the latter part of June. The managers of the hotel at Ottawa Beach are to be A. I. Creamer and M. H. Turner, who are at present in charge of the hotel at Pinehurst, N. C. I have taken the liberty of addressing Mr. Creamer and asking him to get into communication with you.

The Bulletin is sure the Supreme Nine will be glad to have a full and free expression from the membership, both as to the place of meeting and the exact date. The Bulletin fully agrees with Snark Boggess that the sooner both the place and the exact date is settled the better it will be. It feels, however, that opportunity should be offered the membership in every part of the country to make itself heard. This need not involve serious delay. Let every man who has anything to say or suggest be heard from promptly.

Above is statement of the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund to date. Since last report it will be seen only a little more than $100 has been received as tardy responses to the Third Call, while four claims have been paid. As two other claims have accrued and will have to be paid as soon as administrators have been appointed, and as at least four, and probably more, deaths will occur before returns from Fourth Call will have been received, it has been decided to let that call go out April 1, along with second notice of Hoo-Hoo dues. This halves the expense for postage and envelopes, besides effecting a further saving in mailing the notices.

The issuance of the Fourth Call on April 1 will make it come at just the time the mid-year call was issued last year. The First Call was sent out in August, 1910, but hardly got before the members until September, and the initial fund necessary to raise was not in hand until a month or six weeks later. The Second Call came out April 1, 1911. The Third Call was issued October 1 last. The issuance of the Fourth Call on April 1 causes just six months to have elapsed since Third Call went out. It will be seen, therefore, that the fund continues to run just about as originally prophesied in The Bulletin, eight deaths per annum per thousand, making the insurance cost at the rate of $4.00 per annum per thousand of indemnity.

It should be stated that in view of the safe balance we have on hand, all subscriptions coming in since March 13 have been credited as advance payment on Fourth Call. In connection with recent concatenations much has been said about the Death Fund, and a good many of the new initiates have become subscribers. It looks hardly fair to these new men to tax them with $2.00 under the Third Call when so little time will elapse before they will be called on to respond to Fourth Call. It has, therefore, been deemed fair to credit remittances since March 14 as advance payment on Fourth Call.

In this connection it should be remembered also that a good deal of the money now represented in the balance on hand really belongs to the Fourth Call and even to succeeding calls, for the reason that a good many of our members came in on the initial call with remittances anywhere from $8 to $20, with the understanding that the amount overpaid would be carried forward from call to call. In fact, in response to all the calls there has been quite a sprinkling of men remitting in advance—that is to cover two or more calls. They have done this to guard against possibility of oversight and neglect.

There is one point that seems not yet quite understood. It is that a man can come in under any outstanding call. In other words, he can become a participant in the Death Fund any time the notion strikes him, and his remittance will be entered under whatever call is outstanding. He does not have to go back and pay for the antecedent calls. Recently the Death Fund has been brought to the attention of many members who have not heretofore considered it, and several of these have appeared to think that it is necessary for them to go back and pay up for all preceding calls, thereby putting themselves exactly on a level with those men who came in at the beginning. Even when this has been fully explained to them by letter, several have insisted upon remitting to cover all calls issued, insisting that they will not feel right about coming in now when they have not borne any part of the burden heretofore.

Of course this feeling does them credit, but nevertheless The Bulletin feels impelled to state that from the very beginning the plan provided that a man can come in any time. He can respond to two calls in succession, drop out on one or two calls or any number of calls, and then come in again, and have his remittance entered under whatever call is then outstanding.

Of course having become a subscriber he should continue a subscriber. He should take no chance on lapses.

The above is only to make clear the plan—the specific point that a man can come in now on this Fourth Call, to be issued April 1, without having to go back and remit $6.00 to cover First, Second and Third Calls. What we want is for these men who have not heretofore participated to come in. What we need is to swell the number of participants. This is all we need. The way to do it is for each man who is now a participant to personally induce his “next friend” to become a participant. Let all of us do this on this Fourth Call.

At the head of this appears facsimile reproduction of the last death claim check issued. Notice of this death came on March 18 by wire. Check went out on same day, copy of the letter enclosing the check being sent to Vicegerent A. H. Ruth, of Chicago, with request that he assist the beneficiary in properly filling out certificate on back of check and of securing money on the check.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 6, 1912.—Herewith my check for $2.00 to pay Call Number 4, and I hereby agree to pay Call Number 5 if made during my lifetime. If all Hoo-Hoo would make the same agreement when they remit, it would cause them no inconvenience, but would add stability to the plan and avoid accidental lapses, and subsequent hardship to the beneficiaries. If I have not paid all previous dues and calls let me know, and I will remit. Glad to note by February Bulletin a good, healthy growth and fraternal feeling in Hoo-Hoo. It is a pleasure to me to “chip in” at the death of a brother Hoo-Hoo, whether I ever die or not. As I read the names of our lamented friends it is a pleasure to know that I, even in a very small way, have joined in sending one ray of light or comfort into their sorrowing homes. Truly “it is more blessed to give than to receive.”

Fraternally and cordially yours,
A. L. ULRICH, No. 294.

The above is to the point. During the past three or four months nearly a dozen claims have had to be declined. The man had responded to either the First or Second Call, or to both, but had failed to respond to Third Call. In most instances this failure was due solely through neglect or oversight. To guard against this, on the Fourth Call, the responses as they come in will be carefully checked with responses to the preceding calls, and if after a reasonable time response has not come in, the man will be written a personal letter calling his attention to the oversight.

Chicago, Ill., March 4, 1912.—Enclosed you will find check for $3.65—$1.65 for dues and $2.00 covering the Third Call to the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. I consider this fund a great addition to our Order.

It is a grand and noble project, and I am pleased to identify myself with it. I am always ready and willing to do anything and everything I can to help you in the good work that you are doing for the Hoo-Hoo.

With best wishes and kind regards to you and yours,
Fraternally yours,
JOHN J. WILLIAMS.

HOO-HOO SOFA PILLOW.

About the handsomest thing ever put out in connection with Hoo-Hoo is the newly launched sofa pillow cover. During the past fifteen years The Bulletin has received several hundred requests from wives and daughters of

The Hoo-Hoo Sofa Pillow, Price $3.00

Hoo-Hoo for some sort of a print of the emblem which could be stenciled embroidered, transferred or, in some other way, got on the upper side of a pillow cover the good woman was making.

The Bulletin editor is handicapped when he comes to write of these things, but he was still more handicapped when he came on to fill some of the orders for sofa pillows that have come in. He has solved the latter difficulty by passing the matter up to the Kosmos-Art Company, of Cincinnati, the concern that gets out that pennant we are selling, and so many of which are being bought to adorn dens, cozy corners, nick-nack stands and things of that sort.

Now, then, to describe this sofa pillow cover: It is two feet square, inside measurement. Around this “inside measurement" is a three-inch fringe, made by slitting the felt out of which the thing is made, into pretty little strips three-quarter inches wide.

The thing is, of course, a two-ply affair, stitched around three sides so the thing can be stuffed and made soft and comfortable. The whole thing is made of black felt, thick, heavy and elegant. The back side is without adornment—simply a solid black.

The other side is the pretty thing. In the center appears the regulation emblem, 9 inches in diameter—black cat on white background, surrounded by the golden circle. Around this in a graceful outer circle is the Order's motto, "Health, Happiness and Long Life," the words "Hoo-Hoo" being split on the two sides of the emblem, all making a very graceful design.

Next around this central adornment comes an inch and a quarter border of yellow, laced in and out of the black piece—passing in for an inch and a quarter and then showing on the outside for three inches.

The fringe around the outside is a three-ply affair, there being inserted between the two black felts a strip of yellow felt, slitted just as the two pieces of black. This produces a particularly pretty effect, the edges of the yellow felt just showing in the slits.

You may not think it, from this crude description and the equally crude cut that accompanies this, but this thing solves the Hoo-Hoo sofa pillow problem. It is simply beautiful.

I forgot to say that the cat is fitted out with a couple of very green glass eyes. This is the only weak spot. These eyes protrude and are rather sharp and scratchy. We do not believe it will be altogether comfortable for a sleepy man to drag the burr of his ear across these little beads. However, this is a small matter. The eyes can be knocked off the cat without detracting much from the general appearance of the figure. If the bead eyes are found to be objected to, the manufacturers will substitute simply a green painted eye. It will not be as cat-like, but it will be smoother to sleep on.

The thing may be a little too elaborate and too expensive. The manufacturer's price, for the pillow cover complete, just as described above (without stuffing, of course) is $2.50. To cover cost of "doing business" and postage, the Scrivenoter's office will have to charge $3.00. It has been suggested that the top piece alone might be purchased. The manufacturer's price on this is $1.25 each, making cost to the purchaser through the Scrivenoter's office $1.50. This latter proposition would not seem to fit the bill. The finest effect of the fringe would be lost, and there would be a whole lot of work to do in fixing up a suitable back.

The editor of The Bulletin does not know whether $3.00 is too much or not. He knows only that if a person wants a sofa pillow cover that will be both handsome, unique and practically everlasting as to durability, this Hoo-Hoo cover will exactly fill the bill.

A limited number of the complete covers have been made up. We will await results and see what the ladies think of this proposition.

They Did Nothing But Live.

Seven brothers and seven sisters living in Foulsham and the adjacent parishes are receiving old age pensions (says the London Daily Mail). The oldest of the seven is eighty and the youngest seventy-one. Their united ages total 530 years. Their father was Phillip Lambert, a carrier between Foulsham and Norwich, who had a family of sixteen, all born in Foulsham, and of whom eleven are now alive.

OBITUARY.

George Henry Anthony (No. 4666).

A brief notice of the death of Brother Anthony appeared in the February issue of The Bulletin; later full particulars were sent in, and are as follows:

Brother George H. Anthony was born at Medina, N. Y., February 14, 1853, and when a mere child his parents removed to Kansas. He received his education at the Kansas Agricultural College. Although his father was prominent in political circles, being Governor and later State Insurance Commissioner, the son did not care for a political career and engaged in the railroad business, holding responsible positions with some of the largest railroads in this country.

About nine months ago Brother Anthony gave up business and removed his family to Monrovia, Cal., thinking the balmy climate would restore his health. Last October the death of his wife was a terrible shock and caused a rapid decline, which resulted in his death on February 15, 1912. Two daughters survive.

The remains of both Brother Anthony and his wife were interred at their former home, Topeka, Kans.

Brother Anthony joined the Order in 1897 at a concatenation held at St. Louis, Mo., and was also a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund. He was a member of the Elks. Brother Anthony was not only popular and well liked in business and fraternal circles, but by all with whom he came in contact.

Edmond Morgan Warn (No. 25488).

A telegram just received at the Scrivenoter's office announces the death of Brother E. M. Warn, of San Mateo, Cal., on March 11, 1912. He had been ill about two weeks and was operated on.

Brother Warn was born at Charles City, Iowa, February 11, 1862. For the past twenty-four years he has been identified with the lumber industry, and at the time of his death he was president and principal owner of the E. M. Warn Lumber Company.

Brother Warn joined the Order at the big concatenation held at San Francisco, Cal., last year. He was also a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Frederick Koss (No. 2753).

The death of Brother Fred Koss occurred February 7, 1912, at Fostoria, Ohio. He was born at Germania, Ohio, November 4, 1846.

For many years Brother Koss had been prominently identified with the lumber business, and was very well known. At the time of his death he was superintendent of the Koss & German Company, of Fostoria, Ohio.

Brother Koss was an old-time Hoo-Hoo. He joined the Order in 1895 at Texarkana, Texas.

John Taylor (No. 4930).

The sudden death of Brother John Taylor, a prominent citizen of Rayne, La., occurred February 28, 1912.

Thirty-nine years ago Brother Taylor was born at New Orleans, La., where he lived until a young man. Thirteen years ago he located at Rayne, La., and established a retail lumber business. He was quite active in civic circles as well as fraternal circles. He was a fine type of an American citizen. He belonged to the Masonic Order, the Knights of Pythias, and the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, joining at a concatenation held at Houston, Texas, April 8, 1897. He was also a participant in the Death Emergency Fund. A widow and three children survive.

Funeral services were in charge of the Masons.

NOTES & COMMENTS

Why does everybody talk about the weather? At first blush it might seem that it is because we cannot think of anything else to say—that to speak of the weather is an easy way to start conversation. To find that this is not the case at all is somewhat of a relief; for most of us have had the feeling, at times, that our remarks concerning the weather were flat and stupid, and we have regretted that there wasn't some other subject we could "start off on."

An English author, whose books are quite popular now, asserts in all seriousness: "There are very deep reasons for talking about the weather, reasons that are delicate as well as deep; they lie in layer upon layer of stratified sagacity. First of all, it is a gesture of primeval worship. The sky must be invoked; to begin everything with the weather is a sort of pagan way of beginning everything with prayer."

This is a charming idea. How pleasant to discover that when we say, "Isn't it a beautiful day!" we are not being trite and commonplace, but in reality are practicing a picturesque and interesting rite—a survival of a prehistoric era, an echo, so to speak, of the young world's appeal. Truly, we know that prayer is older than the church; the spirit of worship antedates all creeds; devotion preceded altars. It is not strange, therefore, that pagans should have "invoked" the sky. From the sky, apparently, came that which hindered or helped—what more natural than that the primitive man should call on, for aid or protection, that which seemed able to bestow blessings or to send disaster? It may be objected that this ancient "invocation" is changed into a malediction or at least into a growl, for we so often say, "Isn't this a perfectly dreadful day!" But this does not invalidate the argument. Men use the name of the Deity to swear by—curses and prayers alike call on the Most High. Man scarce had learned to implore aid for himself ere he began to plead that bane and blight be cast upon his foe!

There is another reason why talk of the weather is more than simply stale and trifling: It is a recognition of the principle of democracy, an expression of that elementary idea in politeness—equality. "All good manners must begin with the sharing of something in simple style."

Two persons should share an umbrella; if they have not an umbrella, they should at least share the rain, with all its rich potentialities of philosophy and wit! Then, too, when we talk about the weather, we touch on a subject that has been of pleasure and interest to master minds. Shakespeare and Milton and many other poets have talked about the weather. Dickens was fond of describing weather conditions. His story of Barnaby Rudge begins with depicting the twilight of a day in March—the wind howling dismally among the bare branches of the trees, the while the guests of the Maypole Inn, seated around the fire, drank ale and listened to the story of the murder which took place so many years before. "Little Dorrit" begins with the statement, "Thirty years ago, Marseilles lay burning in the sun one day;" and then follows a description of a blazing August day which constitutes one of the finest passages in literature. We are in very good company when we start to talk about the weather, though, to be sure, we cannot hope to say anything particularly sparkling or original.

Anybody who seeks to do justice to the weather we have had the past winter has a big task before him and one that he will hardly begin in prayerful mood. In years to come we can all tell wonderful stories of a terrible winter survived only by reason of our remarkable vigor and robust physique. "A white Christmas makes a lean graveyard;" but a white January and a white February make weary the spirit of those who live where snow is comparatively rare. A paragrapher on a Southern newspaper has added a pang to our affliction by, suggesting mournfully that there may be in store for us a "white Easter." In times past I have smiled to read, in a paper published in a little town in the Highlands of Scotland, the proud boast that there had been such-and-such number of hours of sunshine during the month—more, oh yes, several more hours than Edinburgh had, or Glasgow; and as for London—pish!

We do not count hours of winter sunshine, or days of winter sunshine, in our part of the world. The computation would be too tedious—that is to say, ordinarily speaking. The past winter has been exceptional, in fact, unprecedented. It must be remembered, however, that the continent of Europe lies far to the north. England is in about the same latitude as Labrador. The earth, as it spins around, is tilted so that the northern hemisphere is slanted away from the sun in winter time. The Gulf stream tempers the climate, so that the temperature is not so low in European countries as in countries on our continent which lie directly opposite, across the Atlantic. But the Gulf stream has no effect on the earth tilt. As a traveler once expressed it, "The sun never really rises in winter in Berlin; it merely climbs around on the roofs of the houses." In those far northern countries, daylight, in winter, lasts from nine in the morning till three in the afternoon. If the sky were cloudless all day, it would not be a very long stretch of sunshine.

A Chicago editor claims that civilization has scarcely taken two steps from savagery—that but yesterday our ancestors were barbarians. Even the ornamentation of civilized dress is a relic of past ages. For instance:

The origin of the two buttons on the backs of our coats recalls the days of chivalry when every gentleman wore his sword. But how about the buttons on the coat sleeves at the wrist? They were first worn in front of the sleeves, and were placed on uniforms to prevent soldiers from wiping their noses on their wrists.

"Lives of great men all remind us," etc. The rules that big financiers have followed are always of interest and sometimes of practical value. Rothschild ascribed his early success, in great degree, to the following rules:

"First: I combined three profits; I made the manufacturer my customer, and the one I bought of my customer—that is, I supplied the manufacturer with raw materials and dyes, on each of which I made a profit, and took his manufactured goods, which I sold at a profit, and thus combined three profits.

"Second: Make a bargain at once. Be an off-hand man.

"Third: Never have anything to do with an unlucky man or place. I have seen many clever men who had not shoes to their feet. I never act with them; their advice sounds very well, but fate is against them—they cannot get on themselves—how can they do me good?"

That third rule has a hard ring to it, but so has the Scriptural passage, "The destruction of the poor is their poverty." Here is another hard saying: "Never hire a man because he needs the job; get the man that the job needs." This is a difficult proposition in more ways than one. The man the job needs is likely to be at work at something that pays him more than you can afford to give. It is like trying to hire a colored cook in blackberry time; all the "wuckin'" negroes are employed at good wages, and the shiftless ones can't be enticed into the kitchen as long as they can live on blackberries.

The last and perhaps the hardest of Rothschild's rules is this:

"Fourth: Be cautious and bold. It requires a great deal of boldness and a great deal of caution to make a great fortune; and when you have got it, it requires ten times as much wit to keep it."

We hear a great deal nowadays about the stress and strain of modern life and of the wear and tear on the nerves induced by the twin demons—worry and hurry. No doubt there is a great deal in it. But some of the wear, and a whole lot of the tear, is superfluous and could be cut out. Unnecessary excitement can be avoided by grown-ups; and surely children can be kept away from scenes of strife and hazard. A recent press despatch from New Orleans contained the news of the death of a five-year-old boy as the result of excitement at a moving picture show:

Three weeks ago the boy's parents took him to a cinematograph exhibit, where the subject was a battle between Indians and cowboys. It was a blood-curdling battle, and the child watched it with intense interest. At the end, however, he screamed and fell unconscious into his mother's arms. Since then, until his death, he had been unconscious most of the time.

Schopenhauer, the German philosopher, set forth some vigorous ideas on the subject of noise. "I have ever been of the opinion," he wrote, "that the amount of noise a man can support with equanimity is in reverse proportion to his mental powers and may be taken, therefore, as a measure of intellect generally. If I hear a dog barking for hours on the threshold of a house, I know well enough what kind of brains I may expect from the people who live there."

Schopenhauer has been dead a long time. If he could return to earth, he would have a poor opinion of city people who endure day after day, and night after night, the bang and rattle of innumerable automatic pianos, the squawking of countless phonographs, the jangle of "chimes" that are always out of tune, to say nothing of those foolish clocks that add to the general din and clangor of the streets by striking the quarter hours.

Thought is the highest form of human energy, which is the reason why head-work is better paid than hand-work. This truth is embodied in the old adage, "Make your head save your heels"—that is to say, "By taking thought you can reduce the number of steps that otherwise would be necessary for you to take." But a tired brain cannot evolve profitable ideas. It seems a pity, therefore, to expend, in enduring noise, the human energy that might be conserved and transmuted into thought.

The love of poetry is far more general than some people suppose it to be, a fact made manifest in the number of poems received by newspapers and other publications. The following, submitted by Hoo-Hoo No. 23427, of Hot Springs, Ark., was evidently written in a spirit of earnestness and sincerity, and its sentiment no doubt will appeal to many:

Good-bye, God Bless You!

I like the Anglo-Saxon speech,
With its direct revealings,
It takes a hold and seems to reach
Way down into our feelings.
That some folks deem it rude, I know,
And therefore they abuse it,
But I have never found it so—
Before all else I choose it.
I don't object that men should air
The Gallic they have paid for,
With "Au Revoir" and "Adieu Ma Chere,"
For that's what French was made for.
But when a crony takes your hand
At parting, to address you,
He drops all foreign lingo and,
He says, "Good-bye, God Bless You."

It seems to me a sacred phrase,
With reverence impassioned;
A thing come down from righteous days
Quaintly, but nobly fashioned.
It well becomes an honest face,
A voice that's round and cheerful,
It stays the sturdy in his place
And soothes the weak and fearful.
Into the portals of the ear
It steals with subtle unction,
And in your heart it e'en appears
To work its gracious function.
And all day long, with pleasing song,
It lingers to caress you—
I'm sure no human heart goes wrong
That's told, "Good-bye, God Bless You."

I love the words, perhaps because,
When I was leaving mother
Standing at last in solemn pause
We looked at one another,
And I—I saw in mother's eyes
The love she could not tell me—
A love eternal as the skies
Whatever fate befell me;
She put her arms around my neck
And soothed the pain of leaving,
And though her heart was nigh to break
She spoke no word of grieving,
She let no tear bedim her eye
For fear she might distress me,
But kissing me, she said, "Good-bye,"
And asked our God to bless me.

Windside, Nebr., March 4, 1912.—Enclosed find my check for $2.00 covering payment of the Third Call to the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. I did not know that a Third Call had been issued until I got the February Bulletin.

The Death Emergency Fund is certainly a fine thing, and every brother ought to feel it his duty to help keep it up. It may not mean much to some of us just at present, but we can never tell when the tide will turn.

With best regards to yourself and Hoo-Hoo, I remain,
Yours fraternally,
A. W. STOCKHAM (No. 25185).

Credit Due Vicegerent Ruth.

Much credit is due Vicegerent A. H. Ruth, Vicegerent, of Chicago, for the successful meeting held there on February 14. Brother Ruth had to go up against all the difficulties of holding a concatenation in a big city in connection with a big lumber association meeting. His meeting occurred in connection with the annual meeting of the Illinois Retail Lumber Dealers' Association. He initiated a good class of six and had present over fifty members of the Order. The session-on-the-roof was a pleasant affair.

It will be observed that Brother Ruth was assisted by ex-Snark of the Universe C. D. Rourke, of Urbana, Ill., who did the Junlor work as only Brother Rourke can do it. It will be observed also that Brother Ruth had the assistance of two other ex-members of the Supreme Nine in Brothers F. L. Johnson, Jr., and E. H. Dalbey. He had also to assist him Brothers H. B. Darlington and J. D. Pease, both of the American Lumberman, of Chicago. Brother Tom Moore, who will be remembered as one of the best Vicegerents over at St. Louis some years ago, and Brothers F. M. Baker and F. A. Johnson filled the other stations.

Snark, A. H. Ruth; Senior Hoo-Hoo, H. B. Darlington; Junior Hoo-Hoo, C. D. Rourke; Bojum, F. L. Johnson, Jr.; Scrivenoter, Jno. D. Pease; Jabberwock, E. H. Dalbey; Custocatian, Tom A. Moore; Arcanoper, S C Bennett; Gurdon, F. A. Johnson.

Fifer's Fine Meeting at Seattle.

So far the flag must certainly be turned over to Vicegerent L. R. Fifer for concatenations held this year. His meeting at Seattle on February 16 was a hummer. He had about 250 members present and initiated forty candidates. The number present is Brother Stephenson's estimate. He said they crowded in so fast it was impossible to get an accurate register.

The Bulletin cannot do better in writing up this meeting than to quote liberally from the splendid account in the American Lumberman, written by Brother Fred Gilman, Pacific Coast representative of that paper, who was present and took a very notable part in the proceedings. Brother Gilman says:

If any member of the Order of Hoo-Hoo east of the Rocky Mountains has any doubt about the life of Hoo-Hoo on the North Pacific Coast he should have been present at the Hoo-Hoo concatenation Friday afternoon and evening following the adjournment of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association convention in Seattle. The concatenation was held in the convention hall on the fourteenth floor of the Washington Hotel, beginning immediately following the adjournment of the convention at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The concatenation was conducted by Vicegerent L. R. Fifer, of the eastern district of Washington, under the general supervision of W. M. Stephenson, St. Paul, representing the Supreme Nine of Hoo-Hoo. Local committees had been working for weeks devising ways and means for perfecting the arrangements for the affair and it surely was "some concatenation. Jim Moorehead, of Lexington, Mo., said it reminded him of the way things were done down in the Southwest, and John W. Barry said it had been a long time since he had seen such lively Hoo-Hoo doings. A sort of "ring tailed snorter" poster announcement of the concatenation had been sent out by Vicegerent Fifer some days previous, and there was a large gathering of the faithful

L. R. FIFER, of Seattle,
Vicegerent Western District of Washington.

An innovation was a Hoo-Hoo parade of the candidates from the White-Henry Buildings, the lumbermen's headquarters, five blocks through the business part of Seattle at 5 o'clock in the afternoon to the New Washington Hotel. The parade was led by a large hay rack right from the farm drawn by a span of horses and on the hay rack were a small brass band and several wooden cages in which were held captive several of the candidates. Following the strangely loaded vehicle were the rest of the 40 candidates attired in Hoo-Hoo robes, each candidate attached to a chain, and alongside were a number of old Hoo-Hoo on guard. The band played lively airs and the public observed.

Arriving at the Washington the victims were taken up the freight elevator to the fourteenth floor, where was held probably the highest concatenation, as far as the distance from the ground is concerned, that was ever held in Hoo-Hoo.

Much of the success of the concatenation was due to Ed Heiser, who had charge of the "stunts," and had perfected a choice assortment of them. The 40 kittens enjoyed it immensely no doubt, as did the spectators. Among the star initiates were Col. Henry "Shingle" Stine, president of the Pacific Coast Shippers' Association and a prominent shingle wholesaler of Seattle; Frederick "Terrier" Statterford, in charge of the export lumber department of the Lester W. David Co., Seattle; Walter "Hi-Gill" Metzbaum, counsel for the Pacific Coast Shippers' Association; John Edwin Matthews, purchasing agent of the Burlington Railroad at Seattle; and several others who might be mentioned.

Getting to the session-on-the-roof, Brother Gilman continues:

Vicegerent Fifer at the conclusion of the repast stated that the dinner was given by the Hoo-Hoo and lumbermen of Seattle to the Hoo-Hoo and visiting lumbermen. He then introduced Thomas J. Claffey, of Seattle, one of the old-time Hoo-Hoo of the Coast and former member of the Supreme Nine, as toastmaster. Mr. Claffey then started the "fireworks" by a little talk on his own account. He then introduced W. M. Stephenson, of St. Paul, representative of the Supreme Nine, who thanked the Hoo-Hoo of the Coast for the reception given him, which he did not take as a personal matter but as given to the Order itself. He then spoke of the Hoo-Hoo death fund, describing it for the benefit of the newer members, and saying it perpetuated Hoo-Hoo beyond the grave. He also told of the good done by the imminent distress fund in helping Hoo-Hoo in need of financial assistance.

Hoo-Hoo, he declared, was peculiar in many ways. Though there are many organizations in the lumber trade, Hoo-Hoo is the only one that brings all together, that each may find that the other is a good fellow.

"We have heard a good deal about Hoo-Hoo," said he, "of late, but Hoo-Hoo is all right, and it is going to continue all right."

The old Puget Sound war horse of Hoo-Hoo, E. Clark Evans, then discoursed in good old Hoo-Hoo style, telling some of his good stories. "We have just learned," said he, "that we haven't been running Hoo-Hoo right all these years and a bunch has resigned. But I guess we will get along all right anyway."

Harry J. Miller, past Snark of the Universe and Hoo-Hoo poet laureate, was given an ovation, when he was introduced. "The King is dead—long live the King! It looks to me tonight like a pretty lively corpse," he declared at the outset, and then recited one of his poems and then another and still another, for his admiring Hoo-Hoo friends repeatedly encored him.

Tom Shields, of Seattle, an old time favorite at Puget Sound concatenations, entertained with several of his interesting stories.

J. B. Moorehead, of Lexington, Mo., when called upon said the gathering reminded him of the Hoo-Hoo meetings at the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association meetings in Kansas City. He then told some new stories from down in the Southwest. Roland H. Hartley, former mayor of Everett, Wash., who was mayor when it was a "wet" town, told the visitors something about the resources of the western country and deprecated the agitation of the demagog.

Col. Cal Welbon, a veteran in a military as well as a Hoo-Hoo way, spoke briefly and entertainingly.

L. R. Fifer, the Vicegerent, when introduced was warmly applauded. He declared that the success for the big concatenation was due to the excellent work of all the faithful of the rank and file of Hoo-Hoo. It was not dead, and all it needed was a little enthusiasm, and that had been shown this evening.

It was eleven o'clock when the "On the Roof" was concluded, and as the diners retired from the banquet hall they sang the following song, which had been whipped into shape by Vicegerent Fifer, and of which "every word," as Brother Gilman says, "had a meaning all its own."

THE SEATTLE HOO-HOO SPIRIT.

(Air—Mo. Dawg Song.)

A few sore heads, as we've heard tell,
Been knocking on Hoo-Hoo just like—well.
But we serve notice in this here town
They've gotto quit kicking old Hoo-Hoo aroun'.

Chorus.

They gotta quit kickin' my dog aroun',
Makes no difference if he is a houn';
Every time I come to town,
The boys keep kickin' my dog aroun'.

Old Jim Baird, the good old scout,
We won't stand for kicking him out,
He's made the Order what it is—
Now don't forget that we mean biz.

Chorus.

As Hoo-Hoo we don't stand for kicks,
For Hoo-Hoo don't play politics;
We won't let anyone call us down;
They gotta quit kickin' our dog aroun'.

Chorus.

No matter what the knockers say
Old Hoo-Hoo's here and bound to stay;
Just put that in your old cob pipe,
When it comes to quitting, we ain't that stripe.

Chorus.

For by the tail of the great black cat
The Hoo-Hoo all know where they're at,
And with this modest little boast
We'll all arise and sing this toast.

Chorus.

They gotta quit kickin' my dog aroun',
Makes no difference if he is a houn';
Every time I come to town,
The boys keep kickin' my dog aroun'.

Brother Stephenson also writes a long account of this meeting, enclosing a bale of clippings from Seattle papers, showing to what extent Vicegerent Fifer secured local publicity of a high order.

Supplemental to what Brother Gilman says, Brother Stephenson says that especial credit for good work is due to Brothers George E. Youle, ex-member of Supreme Nine; W. P. Lockwood, ex-Vicegerent; Ed. Heisser, Fred England, Fred Gilman, Harry Hayes, and those two well remembered ex-Vicegerents, Tom M. Shields and Tom H. Claffey. Brother Stephenson, continuing, says: "Allen and Gilman turned in and simply did everything possible for two men to do to make the meeting the success it was."

Brother Stephenson then proceeds to pay the highest tribute to Vicegerent Fifer, whose own modest comment on the meeting is all about the way the boys helped him and the way the lumber concerns at Seattle chipped in on the entertainment fund. The following list of these Seattle supporters of the Hoo-Hoo meeting is sent by Brother Stephenson, who is not quite sure that he has it exactly correct:

United States Lumber Co., Alexander Page Lumber Co., M. F. Gilmer, M. W. Judd Lumber Co., B. R. Lewis, Pioneer Lumber Co., R. S. Wilson, Kilpsun Lumber Co., Long Bell Lumber Co., Fred Gilman, American Lumberman, E. L. Fairbanks, H. L. Sissler, Lester W. David, Hartman Neubert Lumber Co., Puget Sound Lumber Co., Fred A. England, Chinook Lumber & Shingle Co., Roy & Roy, Jacobson Hemphill Lumber Co., V. O. Baker, J. P. Austin, D. Melville, F. D. Becker, S. A. Woods Co., Geo. E. Youle, H. Disston & Sons, Meese & Gottfried, Puget Sound Machinery Depot, Carstens & Earles, Alaska Lumber Co., Menz Lumber Co., R. A. Brown, Canal Lumber Co., Geo. B. Adair & Son, Fairbanks, Morse & Co., Graton & Knight Machinery Co., Roebing & Sons, C. D. Morehead, Pacific Coast Shippers' Association, Union Machinery Supply Co., Allis Chalmers Co., Simonds Saw Co., Pine Fir Co., Stetson Ross Machine Works, A. E. Knaupp, Berlin Machine Works, Mill & Mine Supply Co., Inc., Hugh M. Hague, Perine & Co., Garham Revere Co., Robert B. Allen, Pacific Lumber Trade Journal, Micks Bros., E. C. Atkins & Co.

Returning to Brother Fifer's own part of the meeting, Brother Stephenson says: "Fifer was simply an old wheel horse. He worked hard and kept it up, and then turned in and worked more; Fifer certainly has the confidence and the highest esteem of all the Hoo-Hoo and lumbermen here."

Then Brother Stephenson skates on thin ice, seeing he is writing for publication, when he says: "That shooting stunt put on by Fifer was a tremendous success; we did not intend to let anything of this get out, but it was so good that the boys could not keep it quiet, and the press got hold of it and you can see what they have done."

But the Bulletin is going to skate on no thin ice. It is going to say simply that if there is a Hoo-Hoo who has never witnessed this shooting scrape suddenly precipitated under the guiding hand of the Junior, he has something to live for. It was once pulled off down in Mississippi a year or two ago, and the boys are still going off in blocks of twos and fives behind the gin house to tell about it all over again.

A pleasing thing about the meeting was the large amount of dues collected, among the number paying up being a goodly bunch of those who felt impelled under one feeling or another to at one time consider dropping out of Hoo-Hoo. They have no such feeling now.

As bearing on this the following letter written ex-Snark Ed. M. Vietmeier by one of his friends now prominently engaged in the lumber business in Seattle is enlightening. Incidentally it may be said that scores of letters have been received by the Scrivenoter from men who attended this Seattle meeting.

Seattle, Wash., February 17, 1912.

Mr. Ed. Vietmeier, care Sandusky Sash, Door & Lbr. Co., Sandusky, O.

My Dear Ed: Today is the last of the convention of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association, and I want to say that we have been having a very fine time. . . . Last night I witnessed one of the best concatenations of my experience as a Hoo-Hoo for twelve years. It was supervised by your old friend Stephenson, Supreme Representative from Minneapolis. I had him out to lunch the other day, and in conversation mentioned your name. He informed me that you and he were old friends, that he had visited your home.

I certainly am glad that I took your advice and stuck with the Hoo-Hoo bunch. A number of those who resigned out here have come back to the fold, recognizing that the controversy was brought on mainly by newspaper men. As they stated in some of the informal speeches, if there is anything wrong with Hoo-Hoo it is our business to correct it and not throw it down. Am enclosing herewith one of the songs we sang at the banquet last night. . . .

Yours very truly,

THOS. T. VAN SWEARINGEN.

Nice Little Meeting at Jackson, Tenn.

In connection with a meeting of retail lumbermen at Jackson, Tenn., Vicegerent George O. Friedel, of Memphis, was solicited to hold a concatenation there. He did so and it turned out to be both successful and enjoyable. Brother Friedel was assisted by Vicegerent S. Cecil Ewing, of Nashville, and had also to assist him, among other good ones who filled official stations, Brother Douglas Malloch, of the American Lumberman, of Chicago, who acted as Junior, Brother W. K. Hall, president of the association, and Brother S. B. Enochs, the well-known lumberman, of Jackson.

A pleasant feature of the meeting of lumbermen and Hoo-Hoo was a luncheon given by Brother Henry Wiggs, the Jackson representative of the Cole Manufacturing Company, of Memphis, at which Mrs. Wiggs presided at a table handsomely decorated for the occasion. Those present at this luncheon in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Wiggs, were: O. Dierks, Union City, Tenn.; W. K. Hall, Fulton, Ky.; V. K. Smith, Memphis; B. G. Powell, Memphis; Douglas Malloch, Chicago, Ill.; F. S. Council, Jackson, Miss.; George O. Friedel, Memphis; C. O. Summitt, Nashville.

In Brother Trower's Town.

The concatenation at San Francisco, on March 2, being the third of the series on the west coast, was an elegant affair. After the initiation adjournment was had to the dining hall in the B. B. Hall. There were present upward of 125. Brother Peter B. Kyne, No. 1739, acted as toastmaster. Brother Kyne will be recalled as a young man who has made high reputation as a story writer. Some of his stories of the San Francisco waterfront and of adventures in the Alaskan seas have been among the very best of the stories appearing in the Saturday Evening Post. Those who attended the San Francisco Annual Meeting had the pleasure of meeting Brother Kyne and of expressing to him the pleasure they have had from reading his stories.

Responses to the toasts were made by Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower, ex-Vicegerent R. A. Hiscox and Supreme Representative W. M. Stephenson. A graceful talk on the Good of Hoo-Hoo and the pleasure he has extracted from it through the acquaintances he has formed was made by Brother Hugh W. Hogan, ex-member of the Supreme Nine. Brother Trower spoke at length of the concatenations to follow in the series he has planned, dwelling at length on the big meeting in May at Klamath Falls, Ore. Brother Stephenson made a good talk on the Death Emergency Fund, and was asked many questions by those present.

In his talk Brother Hogan made a graceful reference to the presence of Brother Stephenson, and to his being a native of the South. He said:

"Kipling says in one of his poems, 'The East is East, and the West is West, and never the twain shall meet.' I think we might amend that without criticising Kipling to read, 'The West is West and the South is South, and often the twain shall meet.' We remember with pleasure the visit of the party of Southerners here at the time of the Annual Meeting, and it is certainly with extreme pleasure that I remember my visit to the Southland in connection with the Hot Springs Annual Meeting. The Southland will always be dear to me through song and story, and now so through memory, as in recollection I see the cotton fields, the little negro cabins, and the omnipresent negro with his mule. No less do I remember those good fellows, and best of all the beautiful women—those roses of the South.

"Do not mistake me to mean, however, that Brother Stephenson is representing only the South. He comes to us representing the whole Order, which is nation-wide and world-wide, but its home office is in the South, and Brother Stephenson is a native of the South, and so I propose the toast, 'The West is West and the South is South, and may that twain meet often.'"

It is difficult to give in type the full meed due Brother Trower for his splendid work for Hoo-Hoo. This meeting at San Francisco was notable in the interest taken by the entire membership of Hoo-Hoo. There were present many old-timers who have not been seen at recent concatenations. But Brother Trower's work in connection with this concatenation was only a part of his larger work. He is the man who conceived and has admirably put through that whole series of concatenations in California and Nevada. There will be more said about this latter when others of the series have been reported. Some of them are not to come until May. Brother Trower writes:

"I feel well satisfied with our meeting here and believe it will materially aid in working up interest in the Sacramento and Fresno meetings. I know it has given a big boost to the proposed big meeting at Klamath Falls."

Brother Trower has just a little complaint to make of February Bulletin for the slip made in speaking of the San Francisco meeting as likely to be one of a large class. This was never expected nor possible. The big meeting at San Francisco last winter during the lumber convention, when sixty members were initiated, pretty well worked up the material there. Brother Trower never expected nor intended to have announced that there would be an exceptionally large class at San Francisco.

In all this work, not only in connection with the San Francisco meeting, but in connection with all the other meetings of the series, Brother Trower has had the splendid support and efficient aid of Vicegerent F. S. Palmer. That he should be mentioned last is only to pave the way for saying that his part in the good work is a long way from being least. Brother Palmer was much gratified with the outcome of the San Francisco meeting, and is enthusiastic over the prospect for the meetings at Sacramento and Fresno. He has taken equal interest in the meetings at Reno and Los Angeles, though these are, of course, outside his district. The San Francisco boys have aided in all these meetings, and in all they have done they have found a capable leader in Vicegerent Palmer.

Good Meeting at Albuquerque, N. ^{aa}

No better report can be written of the concatenation held at Albuquerque, N. M., on March 13, than that contained in Vicegerent Cavin's letter. He writes as follows:

Albuquerque, N. M., March 14, 1912.—I am pleased to report a fine concatenation at Albuquerque, N. Mex., on March 13, 1912—in connection with the annual meeting of the Lumbermen's Association of New Mexico and Arizona. Nine, fine, healthy kittens were carefully guided through the breakers and brought safely to a full realization of the beauty and sublime nature of Hoo-Hoo and a more representative bunch could hardly be gathered together in any part of the country.

Hoo-Hoo will be proud of their new initiates for they all bear the stamp of the true patriot and they are made of the right kind of mud. G. E. CAVIN, V. S.

The following additional brief "grapevine" has reached the Scrivenoter's office about this meeting:

Albuquerque, N. M., March 13, 1912.—Geo. W. Frengers, No. 2647, is some good Junior; he was there tonight forty ways. R. A. WHITLOCK, No. 21391.

Albuquerque, N. M., March 13, 1912.—Jim: We had a great concatenation. We are waking Hoo-Hoo up out here. E. L. BARRO, No. 15892.

In the men sending the two above messages will be recognized our perpetual Vicegerent at El Paso and our splendid Vicegerent for New Mexico.

There is nothing more to say except to hand out the highest credit to Brother Cavin for his good work and to congratulate him upon his good luck in having such men to help him as Barrow, Whitlock and Brother Geo. W. Frengers. The latter has come to be recognized as the sine qua non for Junior, out in the chaparral.

That Meeting at Spokane.

The concatenation held at Spokane, February 8, by Vicegerent J. H. Ehrmantraut, of Spokane, ably assisted

J. H. EHRMANTRAUT, of Spokane,
Vicegerent for Eastern District of Washington

by Vicegerent P. M. Lachmund, of the Northern District of Idaho, was briefly written up in February Bulletin. Since that time a full account of the meeting has been received from Supreme Representative Stephenson, who attended and took part, and from numerous other members who participated in the festivities.

A great deal of credit is due Brother Ehrmantraut for this excellent meeting. He was only recently appointed Vicegerent and set at once to work. He had able assistance from Vicegerent Lachmund, who went up especially to take part.

Brother Ehrmantraut writes that he is mightily indebted also to Brother George W. Hoag, former Vicegerent, and Brothers T. H. Koerner, E. E. Engdahl, the latter being also an ex-Vicegerent at Spokane; Fred Gilman, of the American Lumberman, at Seattle, and George M. Cornwall, editor of the Timberman, at Portland. Both these latter distinguished visitors from the coast country rendered splendid assistance. This is true also of Brother George E. Youle, of Seattle, who assisted in the preliminary work, but who was called away before the concatenation was concluded.

That the initiation was admirably conducted and a proper impression made upon the initiates is shown by several of these writing the Scrivenoter to tell of the enjoyment of the occasion, their high regard for Hoo-Hoo, etc. Two of them wrote in to inquire about the Death Emergency Fund and have become contributors. Altogether the meeting was a complete success. Brother Ehrmantraut expects to hold another concatenation before his term of office expires.

IN HONOR OF BROTHER STEPHENSON.

Pleasant features of Supreme Representative Stephenson's trip to the coast have been the entertainments given him at Portland, Ore., and at San Francisco, Cal., quite apart from the receptions accorded him in connection with concatenations. At Portland an elaborate banquet was tendered him at which the following were present: M. C. Dickinson, R. A. Stewart, A. Whisnant, John Thompson, George Luders, A. H. Potter, C. B. Potter, David Davis, Miles Jameson, A. J. Capron, E. L. Fifield, F. G. Donaldson, Graham Griswold, Charles Weber, E. J. Munnell, J. Clark, Fred Gilman, George E. Youle, George Downey, Jay Hamilton, D. Ellery, A. J. Russell, R. R. Dingle, Frank Barringer.

GEO. M. CORNWALL,
Editor The Timberman, Portland, Ore.

Ex-Vicegerent Jay Hamilton, of Portland, acted as toastmaster, and the following spoke: W. M. Stephenson, George E. Youle, A. H. Potter, ex-Vicegerent of Norfolk, Va., years ago, and an ex-member of the Supreme Nine who will be most pleasantly recalled through his prominent connection with the Norfolk Annual Meeting; ex-Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo, G. A. Griswold; F. H. Gilman; David U. Davis, present Vicegerent at Portland; G. P. Downey; ex-Vicegerent M. D. Jameson; A. J. Capron; ex-Supreme Bojum A. J. Russell, of San Francisco; C. R. Weber; ex-Vicegerent E. Clark Evans; D. Ellery and M. C. Dickinson. Several others joined in the general discussion that ensued for the good of the Order.

A committee consisting of Brother Jay Hamilton, G. A. Griswold, A. J. Capron, M. D. Jameson and A. H. Potter was appointed to arrange for another banquet in connection with a "get together" meeting to be held in May. At this May banquet arrangements will be concluded for holding a big concatenation at Portland in June, during the famous Rose Carnival, held annually at that place. All the men present at this banquet tendered Brother Stephenson pledged themselves to hard work in the interest of the Order, especially in connection with the June concatenation.

It was regrettable that on account of the recent death of his wife, Brother J. M. Leiter, Supreme Jabberwock, was unable to take part in this most enjoyable affair.

At San Francisco the special reception tendered Brother Stephenson took the form of a luncheon to be given him on his arrival, by Brother Trower at the San Francisco Commercial Club. The following were present: F. W. Trower, F. S. Palmer, W. W. Everett, A. J. Russell O. J. Beyfuss, R. Hendrickson, F. W. Burgers, Thomas Degen, W. I. Clark, R. A. Hiscox, C. A. Geirrine and George M. Cornwall, Portland, Ore.

This proved a most delightful affair, at which final arrangements were made for the San Francisco concatenation.

Good Meetings at Sacramento and Fresno.

Just as The Bulletin goes to press comes a night letter from Supreme Representative Stephenson saying that the concatenation at Sacramento on the 16th and at Fresno on the 19th were both splendid meetings; that at Sacramento were initiated eleven men and that at Fresno twenty were initiated. Brother Stephenson adds that he is off for Los Angeles. Another good meeting will be reported from that place.

The Stuart Lumber Company, of Brinson, Ga., at the head of which is Brother H. M. Graham, needs a first-class stenographer and office man, capable of keeping the time, making invoices and bills of lading, figuring log scales, etc. In short, he needs a first-class all-around office man, with knowledge of and experience in the lumber business, who is also a good stenographer. The young man who held the position died a short time ago, and at the time of his death was receiving a salary of $100 per month. This gives an idea of what the job is and what it will pay. The man who gets it will have to be of the highest character and fully competent.

A thin skin is as great a handicap as a thick head. The bear that is afraid of bees never gets the honey.

20th ANNUAL MEETING.

WHERE AND WHEN SHALL IT BE HELD?

- ¶ AT LAST ANNUAL MEETING it was left to the Supreme Nine to fix time and place of the 1912 Annual Meeting, a resolution being adopted that the time of the meeting be fixed between June 15 and July 15.
- ¶ The suggested date seems to give general satisfaction, but the place for the meeting has called forth much discussion. At last Annual Meeting a cordial invitation was extended by Brother J. Newton Nind, of Grand Rapids, Mich., for the meeting to be held at Ottawa Beach, Mich. In addition to this formal invitations have now been submitted to have meetings held at Waycross, Ga., and at Asheville, N. C.
- ¶ Other places have been tentatively suggested—St. Louis, Kansas City, Memphis and Chattanooga.
- ¶ Attention is called to the fact that the matter will be decided by formal vote of the Supreme Nine on May 15, so that announcement can be made in The Bulletin for that month. Every member of the Order who desires to be heard is invited to express his views. He can write the nearest member of the Supreme Nine, coincidentally to all members of Supreme Nine, or he can send formal communication to the Supreme Scrivenoter to be manifolded and put before members of the Nine.
- ¶ The Supreme Nine has no other desire than to fix the place of meeting at that point most convenient and satisfactory to the largest number of members. To this end it invites suggestions from all members.
- ¶ See fuller discussion of this matter on inside pages.

NASHVILLE, TENN., APRIL, 1912.

WHERE DO YOU WANT IT HELD?

Members will recall the article in March Bulletin about time and place of holding our next Annual Meeting, both matters having been left to decision of the Supreme Nine. At the time March Bulletin went to press the Supreme Nine had before it no other definite proposal than that made by Brother J. Newton Nind at the last Annual Meeting, that the 1912 meeting be held at Ottawa Beach, Mich., between June 15 and July 15.

The date suggested seems to be all right, most of those who have expressed themselves preferring a date early in July. The place of meeting has evoked much correspondence, from which extended excerpts are made below. Some of the letters received have been quite critical of what the writers seemed to regard as a disposition on the part of the officers of the Order in past years to fix the place of meeting to suit their own personal or selfish convenience. It is the emphatic judgment of The Bulletin that there is absolutely no grounds for this. The Bulletin is perfectly sincere when it says it has never known a single man to advocate the fixing of place for any one of our Annual Meetings from any but an unselfish desire to have the meeting held where it would be most satisfactory to the largest number of those likely to attend.

The meetings held have been well distributed geographically, two being held on the Atlantic Coast—at Norfolk and Atlantic City; five in the region of the Great Lakes—at Buffalo, Cleveland, two at Detroit, Chicago and Milwaukee; three in the Central South—at St. Louis, Nashville and Little Rock; two in the Southwest—at Dallas and Oklahoma City; one in the Central West—at Denver; and two on the Pacific Coast—at Portland and San Francisco. None has been held in the far South, but the reason for this is that the sentiment has been general that if the meetings were to be held September 9 the heat would be uncomfortable at any far southern point. None has been held in Canada, though the membership of the Order there is very considerable.

No man can read the above and say that any portion of the country has been unduly favored. If more meetings have been held at points on the Great Lakes than anywhere else, it has been only because the sentiment has been general that these points are more nearly central for the whole country than any other, and that weather conditions would be apt to be more favorable.

However this may be, the difference of opinion existing is fairly disclosed in the communications printed in whole or part below. It is hoped that these expressions will be carefully read by every man who feels an interest in the matter, and that when he has read them, if he desires to be heard on the subject, that he will immediately write one or more members of the Supreme Nine. He can if he chooses write one member of the Supreme Nine, the one located nearest to him, and express his views fully; or he can write each member of the Supreme Nine; or if he desires to put before the Supreme Nine a formal communication, he can write it to the Scrivenoter and manifold copies will be made for each member of the Nine.

This is the only way the Supreme Nine knows in which to get an expression of sentiment. The matter must be decided soon to the end that the meeting may be properly advertised, and that our members may make their arrangements to attend.

Therefore, notice is hereby given to every member of the Order that the matter will be decided by formal vote of the Supreme Nine on May 15, in time to have result announced in May Bulletin. This gives practically a month in which to hear from the membership. Let every member who has anything to say be heard now.

Six places have been suggested for the meeting, as follows:

Ottawa Beach, Mich.	St. Louis, Mo.
Waycross, Ga.	Kansas City, Mo.
Asheville, N. C.	Chattanooga, Tenn.

Other places have been tentatively suggested, and it may be that still other places will be suggested. Every suggestion made will be considered by each member of the Supreme Nine in casting his vote.

Favors Asheville.

Now, the only way we can make a success out of Hoo-Hoo is to insist that each and every member has the same privilege that all of us have, and if we are going to spot out some summer resort away up towards Canada for a meeting we are taking away from the members the privileges they are entitled to have. By this I mean that the Hoo-Hoo Annuals should be held more centrally. If we do not intend doing this then have one on the North Coast, one on the South Coast, one on the East Coast, one on the West Coast, and one in the Central part of the United States. Now that would be fair. Why should these great, big, rich fellows tell us where to have the meetings, when they have lots of money and can charter trains or steamboats, or anything they want, get up their select crowd and come to the meeting?

I do not know what action has been taken by the members of the Supreme Nine or the House of Ancients about the next Annual Meeting. I have not talked with anyone except a lot of good, straight Hoo-Hoo that want to have a meeting so they can attend it, to get a little profit out of it as well as pleasure. I am satisfied that any city that is centrally located in the United States would be glad to try to do something to help entertain the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, and possibly we could have a meeting in this way.

Couldn't we have this meeting in some of our mountains, in Tennessee or North Carolina? Asheville would be a good place. When it comes down to cool weather, it wouldn't make any difference what time of summer it was. Asheville would be cool. We could have a meeting there, see plenty of nice people, view beautiful mountain scenery, and I am satisfied that in our good Southern atmosphere some of our Northern friends would smooth down a little bit, and realize that Southern people have as much right to live in Hoo-Hoo Land as our Northern friends have to live in Hoo-Hoo Land.

This is just an expression of mine. As said before—each and every member has as much to do with the Order as any member of the Supreme Nine, the House of Ancients, or anyone else, and we should have our Annual Meeting where more of us could go to it, instead of sneaking off to the sea coast, or to some inland spot in the North that we could not reach. It is about time to divide this thing up—every member of Hoo-Hoo should have an opportunity to attend an Annual Meeting.

Fraternally yours,

JNO. C. RAY, Arcanoper.

Thinks Well of Ottawa Beach.

I acknowledge your letter of the 14th inst. with enclosures regarding the next Annual Meeting. I do not know anything about Ottawa Beach, but a glance at the map shows it has the advantage of being on Lake Michigan within a few hours ride by both boat and train from such centers as Chicago, Milwaukee, Grand Rapids, Detroit, etc. Unless a better place offers I believe Ottawa Beach would be a good location, providing the local arrangements are satisfactory. Being on the lake, cool weather would doubtless be assured.

I would suggest that the Annual convene on Thursday, July 4, and continue through Saturday, July 6. This would give the opportunity to a great many members in the large cities within half a day's ride to take advantage of the holiday on the 4th, and most of them could remain over during the Annual and return home on Sunday, the 7th, thus making the fullest use of both Thursday and Sunday.

I do not think we can expect much attendance from visitors to the National Republican Convention at Chicago, as suggested by the Snark. Nor do I believe local Fourth of July celebrations would keep many members at home who might otherwise be able to attend the Annual.

If Ottawa Beach is a good resort, doubtless many members would spend a week or two there, making it their usual summer vacation. Of course, we ought to secure from the hotel people a definite pledge as to rates, and the rates should be reduced for such a large crowd. All these matters of detail can doubtless be handled to good advantage by the official of the Order having charge of that district, or by the local committee which may be selected.

It might be better to have the meeting begin on Friday, July 5, and close the next day. Being some distance from a large city, there would not be so much running around for various entertainments, and the business sessions could be wound up in two days. This would give members from distant points all day Thursday, the 4th, to travel.

F. W. TROWER, Junior Hoo-Hoo.

Suggests Chattanooga.

I notice in the March Bulletin you say, "Where shall our next meeting be held?" That should be easily settled. It should be Chattanooga by all means. Chattanooga is the Convention City of the South. We have adequate hotel facilities, and all the scenery one could ask for. We who are here would be very glad indeed to have the next meeting here. We think the meeting should be in the summer time, if possible, as that is the time when most people take their vacations.

With best wishes, and success for the Order, I am

Faternally yours, W. P. McBROOM.

Waycross Wants It.

I have read with interest the letter of Snark Boggess, and it would appear to me the sooner the date and place were decided on the larger the attendance would be.

I have been intending writing you for some time in regard to having the next Annual at Waycross. You know we have never had an Annual in the South since the Order has been in existence, and as almost all of the Annuals have been held so far away, but very few of our Georgia Hoo-Hoo have felt able to make the trip, and for that reason they have never attended one.

If we could have the Annual at Waycross we could and would arrange a seashore trip, either to St. Simons, Georgia, or Atlantic Beach, Florida, which would be absolutely free, including lunch, while at the seashore. We would arrange a special train to leave Waycross early in the morning and returning at night, giving at least six hours at the coast. I have intended taking this up with you before now, but have been so busy have not done so.

On our trip at our last Annual I talked with most of the Supreme Nine and most of the ones that I talked to assured me that they would be quite willing to come to Georgia for our next Annual, and if you think there is any probability of getting them to come will write them all and see what could be done. I am quite sure that we could have a better attendance here than almost anywhere else, as the members of Georgia and Florida have not had the opportunities of attending an Annual as the members of almost all the other States.

Think the matter over and let me hear from you at your earliest convenience.

Yours fraternally, T. H. CALHOUN.

Wants It at Asheville.

Fayetteville, N. C., April 12, 1912.—I am addressing you and through you the Supreme Nine, relative to the selection of the place for holding the next Annual Convention of the Order of Hoo-Hoo the coming summer. I understand you will shortly meet for the purpose of making the selection, and among the various invitations that will probably reach you, one will be extended by the City of Asheville, N. C., and the Hoo-Hoo of that city and this section, with the request that you give that point your very thoughtful consideration before announcing your choice.

Asheville is so widely and favorably known as both a summer and winter resort, that it is hardly necessary to attempt to further boost its general attractiveness and convenience as a convention point, and as a place for spending the summer vacation, for it is generally recognized as the most popular and most largely visited mountain resort in the Southeast, it being the Mecca of pleasure and health seekers from all over the South Atlantic, Gulf, and East Central States. In addition, the numerous and easily accessible other nearby resorts make this point an ideal one to the Hoo-Hoo or lumberman who wishes to bring his family along and spend a week or so in the most beautiful and lovable country east of the Rockies. Asheville is abundantly supplied with excellent commercial and tourist hotels, and is easily accessible from all parts of the country; and during the season very low railway rates are effective from all points at all times, and on special occasions exceptionally low 5 to 10-day limit tickets are sold from state and other reasonably nearby points. It is safe to assume that such low rates could be made effective at the time of holding our convention.

Aside from its general attractiveness and convenience as a convention point, it offers peculiar advantages as a point for a Hoo-Hoo convention, in that its geographical location makes it the most logical point at which to assemble the members of our Order living in the Atlantic, Gulf, and East Central States. I do not recall that a meeting has been held in this section of the country for a long while, if ever, and it is only fair to ask that this section be favored with the 1912 Annual Convention. The more Northern and Western points will probably claim the convention for the next year or so, and the Pacific Coast should have it in 1915, and it appears therefore that this year is the most available one for holding the convention in the Southeast. From the standpoint of convenience of a majority of the Supreme Nine, and with the good of the Order at heart—a point always to be considered—no wiser selection than Asheville could be made, for it will give the members of the Order of this section of the country an opportunity to take an active part in the proceedings of the convention, and thus arouse the much needed interest and enthusiasm now somewhat lacking through this section.

If we are favored, I feel quite sure the Vicegerents and active members of the Order throughout our section will make a special effort to have the largest attendance on record, as well as provide a large class for the Annual Concatenation.

Trusting our appeal will receive your most earnest consideration, and that we may have the opportunity of entertaining you and the Hoo-Hoo membership in our mountain metropolis, I am,

Yours very truly,
C. B. RUSSELL, Vicegerent.

St. Louis Suggested.

Now, in regard to the Annual Meeting I really don't know what to say. Mr. Caruthers, at Waco, thinks by all means we should have it in St. Louis, as it would be the most centrally located place; and that most all mill men had business in St. Louis, and the same with those from the West going East—and the East going West. I am for the best of the Hoo-Hoo, and if they think that St. Louis is the place, all right.

You know we have had these meetings right in the heart of where most of our members are, and the attendance was the smallest. Take Hot Springs, for instance. There were few people from the State there. Then we went to the extreme East, Atlantic City; while the attendance was good, there was not a single member from the State attended.

The Oklahoma meeting, you will remember, was well attended, so I really believe if we had it anywhere centrally located, say Kansas City, St. Louis, Memphis, or Cincinnati, that we would have the largest attendance. I am anxious to hear what some of the others have to say on this subject.

Yours truly,
J. F. JUDD, Senior Hoo-Hoo.

Suggests Kansas City.

Norborne, Mo., April 1, 1912.—Why not hold the next Annual at Kansas City, Mo., the most central place in the universe and the greatest city on earth. Come to Kansas City.

Above is statement of receipts and disbursements under First, Second and Third Calls, in totals only for the first two Calls, but in detail for Third Call. In addition to the deaths shown, three other deaths have been reported under Third Call, as follows:

Marshall Chambers, No. 6412, North Yakima, Wash.

Edwin Wallace Houghton, No. 2957, Chicago, Ill.

Elias William Culver, No. 115, Long Beach, Cal.

For two of these, drafts have been authorized by wire, but until the drafts come in and are paid by check, the disbursements cannot be included in published statement. Payment of these three claims will reduce the balance to be brought forward from Third Call to Fourth Call to $2,975.03. It is probable that other death claims to be paid under Third Call will accrue prior to May 1st, (end of the extension period on Third Call), the payment of which will still further reduce the balance finally to be brought forward to Fourth Call.

In the meantime responses to Fourth Call which were sent out under date of April 1st, have so far been prompt and numerous. Up to close of business April 20, there has been received on Fourth Call $2,805.60. This money is not included in the balance on hand as named above, but added to that balance makes the sum total now on hand to the credit of the Death Fund $6,532.18, at close of business, April 20.

Detailed statement of receipts and disbursements under Fourth Call will begin in May Bulletin, by which time the "extension period" on Third Call (now fixed by administrative ruling at thirty days instead of fifteen days, as provided in original plan), will have elapsed, making it possible to know just how many claims accrued under Third Call, and just what balance finally remains to be brought forward to Fourth Call. By the time the May Bulletin goes to press the printing bills and other expenditures made in connection with getting out Fourth Call will also have been approved and paid, so that those expenses can be covered in detailed statement.

The Bulletin is gratified to note responses to Fourth Call from quite a sprinkling of members not responding to preceding calls. We hope this indicates that our death fund is coming to be favorably looked on by more and more of the members, and that under Fourth Call will be enrolled a greater number of participants than ever before. Certainly there is no lack of commendatory expressions coming in with the remittances to Fourth Call. There must be something like ten per cent of the subscribers who take occasion to say a little something, of which excerpts printed below are fairly typical.

Early in May, after there has been time for every man to respond to the Fourth Call without the expenditure of more postage to call his attention to the matter, responses to that Call will be carefully checked by each of the preceding Calls, and to every man who has responded to either of preceding Calls, but has not responded to the Fourth Call, a personal letter will be sent. It is recognized that with these notices sent out on a mailing machine many are inadequately addressed and go astray. If returned every effort is made to remail to proper address. In the case, however, of a considerable percentage, the address, which the machine pastes on, is pulled off entirely, making it impossible to determine for whom the communication was intended. There is no doubt also that the tendency is great to regard any communication received under printed address as a "circular" of little importance, and to throw it in the waste basket without reading. However, the mailing machine is so much cheaper than to address the notices by hand or on the typewriter, that it has not been deemed advisable to attempt the latter method.

The matter is here briefly alluded to in the hope that some who either have not received the Fourth Call or who, having received it, have not given it prompt attention, will be now apprised that the Fourth Call went out April 1st, and that the participant in the Death Fund who fails to respond to that call prior to May 1st—the end of the thirty-day "extension period"—will be "out" in case of death, even though he responded to the first three Calls. During the past six months there have been at least a dozen claims presented of men who responded to the First or Second Call, but who did not respond to Third Call. These claims have, of course, had to be declined, though in several instances the situation created has been a sore disappointment.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

Approaching concatenations for which definite dates have at this writing been fixed, are as below:

April 19, at Milwaukee, Wis.—Vicegerent W. R. Anderson, assisted by Vicegerent R. S. Kellogg, of Wausau, Wis.

April 26, at Staunton, Va.—Vicegerent R. Y. Johnson, assisted by Snark Boggess and Supreme Representative Stephenson.

April 26, at Vancouver, B. C., Canada—Vicegerent P. W. Fau-Vel, assisted by Brother W. C. Birdsall.

April 26, at Asheville, N. C.—Vicegerent J. M. English, assisted by Supreme Scrivenoter.

April 26, at Grand Rapids, Mich.—Vicegerent F. J. Verkerke, assisted by Vicegerent S. J. Rathbun, of Battle Creek, and ex-Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo Jeff B. Webb, of Detroit.

May 10, at Clarksburg, W. Va.—Joint meeting by Vicegerents Geo. P. Morgan, of Parkersburg, and J. R. Davis, of Weston, assisted by Snark Boggess.

May 4, at Shreveport, La.—Vicegerent F. G. Snyder, assisted by Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd.

May 18, at Alexandria, La.—Vicegerent G. R. Gloor, assisted by Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd and Supreme Scrivenoter.

May 25, at Pensacola, Fla.—Vicegerent F. Rust Smith, assisted by Brother E. L. More, of River Falls, Ala., and Supreme Scrivenoter.

May 31, at Klamath Falls, Ore.—See extended notice below.

Other Meetings.

A goodly number of other meetings for which definite dates have not yet been fixed, awaiting the working out of a schedule to have the meetings come somewhat in sequence, are well under way. Most notable among these are the big meeting at Memphis to be held in May or June by Vicegerent Geo. O. Friedel, assisted by a committee from the Lumbermen's Club of Memphis; at Nashville, by Vicegerent S. C. Ewing, assisted by committee from Nashville Lumbermen's Club; at Bristol, Tenn., by Brothers Irving Whaley and H. W. Chandlee, assisted by numerous others; Portland, Ore., by Vicegerent D. U. Davis, assisted by Geo. M. Cornwall and numerous others appointed a committee at recent banquet given by Portland Hoo-Hoo to Supreme Representative Stephenson; Decatur, Ala., by Vicegerent R. W. Douglas, of Birmingham, assisted by Brothers E. W. F. Himes and James Adair; Lake Charles, La., by Brothers M. M. Wood and A. R. Mitchell, Life Member No. 32; Marlinton, W. Va., by Vicegerent A. D. Williams, this meeting to occur in connection with opening of big new hotel at Marlinton; Baltimore, Md., by Vicegerent S. Robb Eccles, to occur about May 15; Newport, Ark., by ex-Vicegerent V. E. Pierson, assisted by Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd; two concatenations in Georgia, one in southeastern district by Vicegerent C. C. Vaughn, and the other in southwestern district by Vicegerent W. W. Coombs, of Tifton; Columbus, O., by Vicegerent J. E. McNally, assisted by Brother Morris Hayward, to occur in the early summer in connection with the lumbermen's picnic annually given at Columbus.

Commenting upon the above, it may be said that the concatenation at Memphis is to be made a rousing affair, and will be held as soon as the lumbermen there get straightened out a bit from the serious disaster of the floods. The meeting at Nashville has been twice postponed on account of repeated absence from the city of the Supreme Scrivenoter. This meeting will be held some time during May, the blanks for a large class of initiates having been written up weeks ago, and everything being in readiness to have the meeting come off some Saturday night whenever most convenient.

The meeting at Portland, Ore., will be a notable affair. Vicegerent Davis is actively at work and has able assistants in the committee appointed at the Stephenson banquet. This meeting will probably occur in June during the celebrated Rose Carnival.

The meeting at Decatur, Ala., will be the result of a voluntary movement on part of two of the members there. Several new lumber operations have gone up at Decatur, resulting in accumulation of a large class of eligibles. Vicegerent Douglas, of Birmingham, will be officially in charge, and hopes to be present and participate. He is, by the way, beginning to lay plans for the third concatenation at Birmingham, two very successful meetings having been held there in October and December last, the latter by Vicegerent Douglas and the former by his predecessor, Brother H. B. Wood.

For the other of these approaching meetings, for which dates have not been fixed, it suffices to say that preliminary work is well in hand. Several of them would have been held in April except for the great number of concatenations scheduled for that month. Practically all will be held prior to June 10.

Meetings for Which Dates Have Been Fixed.

One or two of these meetings will have been held before The Bulletin can reach its readers, certainly the one at Milwaukee by Vicegerents W. R. Anderson and R. S. Kellogg. This meeting occurs in connection with the meeting of the Northern Hemlock and Hardwood Manufacturers' Association, of which Brother Kellogg is Secretary.

It will be seen that April 26 is the red letter day for April in Hoo-Hoo, four concatenations being scheduled to occur on that date. A pleasing feature of the incident will be an exchange of telegrams among the four meetings. A fifth meeting was scheduled for this date—at Clarksburg, W. Va.—being the joint meeting now announced for May 10. This meeting was postponed so that Snark Boggess can attend the Staunton, Va., meeting, and also be present at Clarksburg. Right here it may be said that Snark Boggess, in addition to his routine official duties as Snark, has proved himself a veritable Frank Trower in arranging series of concatenations.

Pressure on The Bulletin space this issue prevents as full notice of approaching meetings as would otherwise be given. Nevertheless some of these meetings call for further comment. The meeting at Staunton, Va., will be a notable affair. Vicegerent Johnson is a practical lumberman of large operations and wide acquaintance. His candidates are the leading lumbermen of his section. He has interested the very best men of his district, and every step in his arrangements has been taken with eye singled to making the meeting the most high-class affair that has occurred in Hoo-Hoo for a long time.

The next meeting in point of date that calls for special notice is that to be held at the Hotel Bentley, Alexandria, La., on May 18, by Vicegerent G. R. Gloor, connected with the Tremont Lumber Company of Winnfield, La. Vicegerent Gloor is working hard, and has called to his assistance a large number of the members throughout Louisiana, who have made Hoo-Hoo what it is. There has not been much activity in his part of the state for some time, and he has found hard work necessary to revive interest. Brother Gloor is a man of standing and influence, and he ought to have the staunch support of every member in his state. He will have an able assistant in Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd, and despite the fact that the meeting is to come at a time when the lumbermen will be exceedingly busy, the meeting will be a success.

The meeting at Pensacola, Fla., is the result of the splendid meeting held there on March 23, reported in this issue. Vicegerent Smith did exceptionally good work, and held such an enjoyable concatenation that a movement at once started to have the affair repeated. He is holding the trunk and has everything well in hand to make this second meeting an even greater success than the first.

The meeting at Klamath Falls, Ore., to be held by a delegation of San Francisco Hoo-Hoo, led by Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower and Vicegerent F. S. Palmer, was mentioned at some length in last month's Bulletin, and as it does not occur until May 31, so that The Bulletin will have another whack at it in next issue, no comment will be made here, further than to say that a wonderful interest has been worked up among the most prominent lumbermen of Southern Oregon. Brother H. D. Mortenson, president of the Pelican Bay Lumber Company, is at the head of local arrangements and is being assisted by all members within a radius of a couple of hundred miles. Mr. Mortenson has become very much interested in the outcome of this affair. He has sent The Bulletin some exceedingly attractive literature about the Klamath Falls region. The concatenation is to occur in connection with what Brother Mortenson calls a "rodeo," to be given by the Elks during the week ending Saturday, June 1. We do not know exactly what a rodeo is, but it is some sort of a horse show, or riding exhibition, or something of that nature. The windup of the "rodeo" is really to be on Sunday, June 2. The concatenation will occur on Friday night, and Brother Mortenson has suggested as a part of the program that his company will take the whole delegation of Hoo-Hoo as its guests for a trip on the upper Klamath Lake on the company's steamer "Klamath." This is a very beautiful trip, the upper portions of this lake being famous for its scenery.

Just as the press starts comes the following telegram from Brother Trower:

Klamath Committee has fixed date of concatenation evening of May 31. Next day visitors will be given 40-mile steamboat ride on Klamath Lake and banquet in evening at White Pelican Hotel. June 2, big closing events three days' Elks' Rodeo-Wild West broncho busting. Frisco crowd leaves here on special through Pullman car Thursday night, May 30. Fortunate married brothers will take wives. Several will continue outing with 60-mile automobile trip from Klamath to Wonderful Crater Lake. Others will stop at Shasta Springs on return. Railroad makes round trip special rate Frisco to Klamath, $17.90. Everybody working for big success. Insert good notice April Bulletin.

FRANK W. TROWER, Junior Hoo-Hoo.

Hymeneal.

Brother John Dennett Guthrie, No. 14499, of Springerville, Ariz., was married on March 25 at Greer, Ariz., to Miss Susan R. Pratt-Church, daughter of Mrs. Calvin E. Pratt, of Greer. Brother Guthrie is connected with the United States Forest Service, and we believe is one of the men in charge of the National Forest in Arizona.

French brier pipes are not made from the roots of the brier, but from the root of a white heath which attains a considerable size in the south of France, where it is sedulously cultivated for pipe-making purposes. The name is derived from the French bruyere, the dialect form of which is briere, meaning heath.

OBITUARY.

William Easton Dixon (No. 10454).

After a protracted illness of several years, Brother W. E. Dixon died March 15, 1912, at Austin, Tex.

Brother Dixon was born near Marlin, Tex., August 4, 1870. For the past twenty years he lived at Houston, Tex., and was engaged as traveling salesman for the Bonner Oil Company until ill health caused him to give up active business, when he became a stockholder in that company.

Brother Dixon was a member of Holland Lodge No. 1, A. F. and A. M.; El Mina Temple, Chapter of Rose Croix, No. 3; Lodge of Perfection, Lamar Lodge No. 189, Knights of Pythias; Sons of Jove, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at New Iberia, Louisiana, March 21, 1903.

The funeral services were under the auspices of Holland Lodge. The interment took place at Hollywood Cemetery, Houston, Tex.

Brother Dixon had a wide circle of friends over the state of Texas. A widow survives him.

Robert Lee Riggs (No. 7021).

Brother Lee Riggs died suddenly of paralysis on March 28, 1912, at his home, New Orleans, La. He was born in the Parish of Iberia, La., October 11, 1865.

Brother Riggs was actively engaged in the lumber business at New Orleans, La., under the firm name of Riggs & Terrell Lumber Company. He was well known to the lumber trade. He joined the Order at New Iberia, La., January 20, 1900.

Marshall Chambers (No. 6412).

Brother Marshall Chambers, a participant in the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, died at North Yakima, Wash., April 1. Brother Chambers had been ill for some weeks, having undergone a serious operation. He died in the hospital at North Yakima, aged 67 years. His illness was due to Bright's disease.

Marshall Chambers was a native of Muscatine, Iowa, and it was there that he received his first training in lumber. His father, William Chambers, was a member of the firm of Chambers Bros., who operated a mill at Iowa City. Marshall Chambers was afterwards associated with J. S. Keator Lumber Company, at Moline, Ill. Later he was with the C. H. Nelson Lumber Company, at Lakeland, Minn., and afterwards ran the mill on contract on his own account. Later he built a mill at Plummer, Wis. Several years ago he went west to become superintendent of the mill of the Page Lumber Company at Buckley, Wash. He then went to Portland, Ore., and organized the Chambers Shingle Company. Poor health compelled him to give up this business, and he sold out, and for the past several months has been associated with the Cascade Lumber Company of North Yakima, operating one of their retail yards.

The body of Mr. Chambers was shipped east and the funeral held at the old home at Muscatine, Saturday, April 6.

Brother Chambers is survived by two sons, Scott W. Chambers, of the Northwestern Lumber Company, of Stanley, Wis.; Roy Chambers, in the lumber business in Washington; a brother, George Chambers, Minneapolis agent for the United States Gypsum Company, and two sisters, Mrs. S. A. Shook and Mrs. J. C. Perry, both of Minneapolis.

Edwin Wallace Houghton (No. 2957)

The death of Brother E. W. Houghton, which occurred February 6, 1912, was reported recently to the Scrivener's office.

Brother Houghton was born at Houghton, N. Y., July 28, 1834. For many years past he made his home at Chicago, Ill. He was a Hoo-Hoo of long standing, joining the order at a concatenation held at New Orleans, La., March 2, 1895, and was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

NOTES & COMMENTS

He who strives desperately to be broad-minded usually ends by being funny; advanced thinkers sometimes exhibit an almost comical disregard of facts. A recent issue of the "Truth Seeker," official organ of those who have no belief except the belief that everybody else's belief is wrong, contained this withering paragraph:

We should not be too hard on the priests. A man who has to wear woman's clothes deserves pity.

Are we called upon, then, to pity the members of the Supreme Court, the Lord Mayor of London, the King of England and others whose exalted positions are symbolized by the robes of authority? From time immemorial men have worn robes when they wished to be impressive.

Skirts symbolize dignity, not submission or inferiority. Trousers are strictly utilitarian; they came into use when changed economic conditions made it necessary for men to hurry in order to keep up with the procession—when the struggle for existence impelled folks to lay aside dignity and impressiveness and to "keep on the jump." The patriarchs wore robes; and perhaps even truth seekers, bereft of sense of humor as most of them seem to be, would perceive something ludicrously incongruous in the spectacle of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob clad in sack suits. Who indeed can imagine the Greek philosophers in swallow-tails?

Trousers do not mean an increase of dignity—they merely indicate that in order to cope with the high cost of living the average man must stay on the job. In a sense, also, trousers represent the advance of democracy. Knee breeches and silk stockings used to differentiate the aristocrat from the workingman. The garment of the present style, which renders it impossible to distinguish a silk stocking on sight, came in with the guillotine and other devices of the French Revolution which were calculated to put the poor man more nearly on a level with the rich. Far from signifying an access of honor, the "long trousers" merely concealed the quality of hosfery! But the trailing robe meant, and still means, eminence and authority.

The history of costume is in large measure the history of mankind. The changes in fashion of raiment were not always whimsical or trivial; sometimes the cause of the change took hold on the basic principles of the development of the race. A fashion passed away because the conditions had passed that made it practicable or desirable.

Warriors of old wore armor—heavy metal coats and helmets. But when gunpowder was invented, coats of mail were no longer useful. Gunpowder was a great leveler; it put the man on foot on the same plane with the man on horseback. Hence gunpowder, as well as long trousers, represent the "advance of democracy"—gunpowder equalized the people, so to speak. Armor and the equipment of a war horse cost a lot of money. Poor folks couldn't do much fighting in those days because they could not afford the trappings and accoutrements of war. The rich went forth to war, made conquests and took much loot, while the poor were oppressed and grievously taxed. The invention of gunpowder marked an epoch in the history of the world. The downtrodden peasant could and did rise and assert his rights. The man on horseback no longer dominated. The helmet and the chain armor accumulated rust—they were no longer the symbols of power.

It is interesting to note the changes in our mental attitude toward certain articles of attire. A little more than a hundred years ago a man was prosecuted for wearing a silk hat. It was a first offense—the first time that a silk hat had been worn, and the court was perplexed as to what sentence to impose. It ended by the requiring of the culprit to give a bond for future good behavior. The man's name was John Hetherington, and he was a London haberdasher. An old work on costumes has this to say of him:

The result of wearing such a startling novelty in headgear was that a large crowd of spectators gathered round the haberdasher before he had proceeded far along the street. Hetherington was arraigned before the Lord Mayor on a charge of breach of the peace, and was required to give bonds in the sum of 500 pounds. The evidence produced went to show that Mr. Hetherington, who was well connected, appeared on the public highway wearing upon his head what he called a silk hat (which was produced), a tall structure having a shiny lustre, and calculated to frighten timid people. The officers of the crown stated that several women fainted at the unusual sight, while children screamed, dogs yelped, and a young son of Cordiwiner Thomas was thrown down by the crowd which had collected, and had his arm broken.

According to recent press dispatches, China has decided to adopt the silk hat—in fact the change from pig tail to silk hat has been made compulsory among the official classes and the members of foreign embassies. As everybody knows, there are many Chinese on our Pacific Coast. A San Francisco paper is doubtful as to how the change of headgear will be received: "If our yellow brother should be so ill-advised as to appear on the streets in a silk hat, it is to be feared that we might witness the birth of a new Oriental problem. We can stand a great deal, but not a Chinaman in a topper."

We are always hearing and reading something about the "strenuous life" which Americans alone are supposed to lead—the English and the Scotch are commonly believed to maintain a fishlike attitude of unblinking calm. But this is all a mistake. A Glasgow newspaper, sent to The Bulletin by Bro. James Hoot Mon Lightbody, is so full of bubbling enthusiasm that to read it is quite an exciting experience. The leading feature of the paper is a write-up of the "international" football game—English players against Scotland. The result of the game was a draw; there were present 127,307 people, and the total receipts amounted to over thirty thousand dollars. And this in the face of the fact that there was in progress at the time the greatest strike the United Kingdom has ever known!

The English players (from the Scotch viewpoint at least) were a little "pithless" throughout. One of the half-backs "was not so nippy as he had been in past years"—how many past years, one wonders? Somehow we are not accustomed to thinking of many past years in connection with football players. However, despite the lack of nip and pith, the English made some good plays; it appears that their champion half-back, who answers to the singular name of Wedlock, "was ubiquitous in defence," and his opportuneness saved certain goals; another player "seemed in the parlor instead of on the grass." But the people were wrought up to the highest pitch:

The great carnival undoubtedly quickened the pulse of the whole city. The streets were feverish; the face of everything verged on the hysterical. An old woman fainted at a corner because she could not bear to see so many thousands moving.

It seems odd to an American that the populace should become so feverish over a football match, which we associate largely with college students and the "society" element. If it had been baseball now—that's different, of course. But this difference between countries is what makes any foreign newspaper so intensely interesting to anybody who likes to study human nature and who sees in the panorama of current events the greatest game of all.

In a jubilant note, written on the margin of the Glasgow paper, the Hoot Mon says: "Quite a bunch was present at the game—as many as the whole population of Richmond, Va., and more than the population of Nashville by about twenty thousand."

The latest freak rule of the Simplified Spelling Board concerns the word "prove"—the new spelling is "pruuv." Surely absurdity can go no farther, at least not much farther; logically, according to this rule, the word "move" should be spelled "muuv," and "shoe" should be "shuu."

But it is hard to get a line on simplified spellers. In the first place, the changes they make do not simplify but merely confuse spelling; and in the second place, the tendency toward simplification is one of the dangerous signs of the times. The muscles of the body grow flabby if not exercised, and the brain also loses tone and firmness if there is nothing to fling it down hard on. A daily drill in spelling is beneficial exercise for young minds. An eminent nerve specialist asserts that the present popular "absorbent method" of education leads to various forms of mental inefficiency. By the phrase "absorbent method" is meant that method of education which lets the mind follow its interests and take the line of least resistance—instead of hammering hard on whatever is necessary to be learned (whether it is interesting or not) and thus acquiring the habit of voluntary concentration. Many a man with a brilliant mind has been a failure in life because of inability to focus his attention on matters which did not interest him. Anybody can concentrate on the particular subject which appeals to him most forcefully; but life is largely made up of dull, tiresome, monotonous routine, and the sort of training that makes for success is that which enables the mind to clinch down on whatever comes in the day's work. Otherwise the mental life is approximated to the conditions of dreaming. The object of education is not to show us a short cut, but to teach us how to think.

The Bulletin has been very much crowded for space lately, and on several occasions has been compelled to omit, at the last moment, matter that otherwise would have been published. This accounts for the fact that now and then a letter appears bearing a date of several weeks back. The volume of correspondence at this office has been uncommonly large for months past—a fact which has been mentioned before in these columns. Many of the letters received have been truly inspiring in their expressions of cordial good will and in their assurances of hearty cooperation in the work for the Order's welfare.

The following communication is from a man who has been a member of Hoo-Hoo since 1897:

Middlesborough, Ky., Feb. 12, 1912.

J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter:

I am in recent receipt of my October Bulletin, having left Alaska just at the close of navigation last fall, and very much regret to see that there is some little, or has been some little, friction among the members.

But as I gather the reason for it is all wrong; certainly in years of constant reading of The Bulletin I have yet to notice any reference from which I could even infer that our Scrivenoter had other means of livelihood than his duties as such, and as to his using his position as our officer to advance his other business, all the evidence is directly to the contrary. He has boomed the Order in his Southern Lumberman; he has never boomed either his paper or himself in The Bulletin.

And now I will say what I have often felt that I should say: The Bulletin is the best edited fraternal or lodge paper in the United States, and I speak from a fair acquaintance of the field. The nearest approach to it is another Bulletin—that of Palestine Lodge, of Detroit, Michigan. I never have less than a half dozen of the leading magazines upon the reading table, and when The Bulletin comes in I devour it before taking up anything else.

By birth, education, and environment I am at variance with the editor of The Bulletin, and probably not half the time would agree to the conclusions of its articles (when any opinion is expressed), but I have never seen an article in it to which I could take exception, nor one but that was so well written that it was thoroughly enjoyable, no matter how much I might disagree.

Fraternally,

GEO. W. ALBRECHT, 4721.

The fourth annual meeting of the Southern Commercial Congress convened in Nashville, April 8, for a three days' session. It was a very notable gathering, for the congress was by no means sectional in its scope. The question of waterways improvement, for instance, includes the whole country, especially the Mississippi Valley, and is of general interest throughout the nation; other subjects discussed were of world-wide importance.

Among the many distinguished men who came to Nashville to attend this congress was Mr. D. C. Collier, of San Diego, California, President of the Panama-California Exposition, which will open its doors January 1, 1915; United States Chief Forester Graves; Minister Maurice Francis Egan, of Denmark; Hon. David Lubin, American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome; Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia; W. K. Kavanaugh, President of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Waterway Association, and many others. Visitors who attracted much interest were a number of boys who had won prizes in their several states for the biggest crop of corn raised on a single acre.

The sessions of the congress were rapped to order each day with a gavel made from a hickory tree which grew at "The Hermitage," the historic home of Andrew Jackson, nine miles from the city. Nashville, as everybody knows, has the distinction of having been the home of two presidents of the United States—James K. Polk and Andrew Jackson. The latter is affectionately known as "Old Hickory," and is revered as the hero of the battle of New Orleans, the memory of which event is kept alive in Tennessee and among Tennesseans everywhere in the world, by the observing of "Jackson Day," the 8th of January.

Rousing Affair at Reno.

The Bulletin wishes it had room for all Brothers Trower and Stephenson write about this meeting. It is easy to see that these two men had the time of their lives and that if heretofore Reno has had few Hoo-Hoo, it has Hoo-Hoo of the highest type. Vicegerent Terwilliger and Brother "Billie" Virgin make a pair hard to beat even with a royal flush. Hear Brother Trower in part:

It was a great success and the 15 initiates were all fine men. One of them came 250 miles from Tonopah to join; a couple came 75 miles. The arrangements were handled by Vicegerent Terwilliger, who is a quiet, strong, resourceful young man. He is manager of the biggest lumber concern in the State, the Verdi Lumber Co., having several branch yards. He was ably assisted by Brother W. T. Virgin. Virgin is known to everyone in Nevada as "Billie Virgin." He is one of those oval-faced, jovial chaps, whom everybody is glad to know and who gives the lie to the expression that "nobody loves a fat man." He ordered the banquet which followed the concatenation, and it would have done credit to any city in the country. The table was beautifully decorated with flowers and ferns, from beneath which gleamed vari-colored electric lights encased in bulbs shaped to represent various flowers.

The whole affair, including the initiation, was clean-cut and up to the highest standard. Every candidate was given a run for his money and every man present thoroughly enjoyed the whole affair.

Stephenson and I stayed up until past midnight Sunday listening to Billie Virgin telling some of his experiences in the Nevada mining camps at Goldfield and Tonopah, where he was engaged both in the mining and banking business. If the "Saturday Evening Post" could discover Billie Virgin he would prove a veritable mine of interesting stories.

These two men, Terwilliger and Virgin, are an invincible team. These Nevada boys are a strong, free-hearted bunch of fellows, and they gave us visitors a sample of real western hospitality. I am sure Stephenson and I will never forget the good time we had nor the good fellows we met.

If possible Brother Stephenson is even more glowing.

After the concatenation we adjourned to Thomas Cafe, where a magnificent banquet was served, consisting of 12 courses. It was one of the finest banquets I ever attended. The table was decorated with roses, lilies of the valley and ferns, and hidden beneath the flowers were electric lights in the forms of flowers and fruits. No menu was printed, but if you put in everything that you ever heard of you will miss something we had. Short talks were made by Vicegerent Snark Terwilliger, W. T. Virgin, F. W. Trower, Jacob Sidney Simon and W. M. Stephenson. Music was furnished by a selected orchestra, and was above anything I have had the pleasure of listening to for a long time.

Vicegerent Snark Terwilliger, with the able assistance of Brother Virgin, had all arrangements made and they were perfect in every way. These Nevada men certainly know how to do things and spare no expense in the doing.

Brother Trower went over with me from San Francisco.

Brothers Terwilliger and Virgin met us at the train with an auto and did everything that two human beings could do to make our visit pleasant, and we are certainly greatly in their debt for their great kindness.

The concatenation was held promptly on time, and we were out of the hall and seated at the banquet table at 11 o'clock. I will not tell you when we left the banquet table as this would be telling tales out of school. I will say, however, that the five old members and the entire class of fifteen kittens were there at the finish.

You have got to hand it to Brothers Terwilliger and Virgin for their good work, and I believe that this concatenation will put good life and interest in the Order in the State of Nevada, and it should not take much work to work up another concatenation in the near future. The class taken in was a very high grade lot of men and men that will honor the Order in every way.

It seems that not content even with all this splendid entertainment, Brother Terwilliger took Trower and Stephenson out to see about one of the finest saw mills and woodworking plants in the West. This is what Stephenson says about that part of the entertainment.

Monday morning, March 11, Brother C. D. Terwilliger, Vicegerent Snark, met Brother Trower and myself at Reno, at 6:30 a. m. and took us in his auto to Verdi, 11 miles from Reno. It was a beautiful morning, and the road was fine, and we certainly enjoyed our ride along the foothills of the mountains. Arriving at Verdi we inspected the office and general store of the company, and then went through the big saw mill, the planing mill and the box factory of the company, and believe me, Jim, they certainly have some plant. They operate now 16 miles of standard railroad of their own and expect to extend it 15 miles this year.

They have no waste whatever at their mill, using up everything. They have a good market for their wood and even sell all their sawdust. The mill is run by electricity. It is a model plant in every way, and Brother Trower and I certainly enjoyed visiting the plant.

This is a great country, Jim, and wonderful men are here, and they certainly know how to do things and how to entertain.

Brother Terwilliger is a fine man and has large interests to take care of, but is fully capable of doing it, and we certainly were most fortunate in getting him to accept appointment as Vicegerent Snark.

All in all this Reno meeting proved a delightful occasion, and stands out as a bright spot in that galaxy of bright spots constituted by the "California" series of concatenations, which Brother Trower and the other San Francisco boys did so much good work to "put over."

Concatenation No. 1767, Reno, Nev., March 9, 1912.

Small Class But Good Meeting.

Vicegerent F. J. Rathbun's concatenation at Battle Creek, Mich., on March 21 is not to be judged by the number of initiates. He had a good attendance of members of the Order and a delightful time. He had to assist him Supreme ex-Senior Hoo-Hoo Jeff B. Webb, of Detroit; ex-Snark of the Universe W. A. Hadley, of Chatham, Ont.; Vicegerent F. J. Verkerke, of Grand Rapids, and other equally good ones. Bad weather had a whole lot to do with cutting down both the size of the class and the attendance of members. Following the initiation the session-on-the-roof was held at the Elks' Club, the use of which was donated for the occasion. Brother Webb acted as toastmaster, among others, calling on ex-Snark Hadley, Vicegerent Frank Spangler, of Toledo, Ohio, and Vicegerent Verkerke, of Grand Rapids.

Snark, S. J. Rathbun; Senior Hoo-Hoo, Carl H. Schneider; Junior Hoo-Hoo, Jeff B. Webb; Bojum, John Wood; Scrivenoter, F. J. Verkerke; Jabberwock, Frank Spangler; Custocatian, C. J. Ashton; Arcanoper, F. H. Emery; Gurdon, Archie Fisher.

26474 Joy Chauncey Hubbard, Battle Creek, Mich.; treasurer and manager American Column Co.

Brother Stephenson is far from willing to let such a delightful meeting go with so short a notice. He says:

This concatenation was held in connection with the monthly meeting of the San Joaquin Valley Lumbermen's Club, and they served a lunch to all visiting Hoo-Hoo at noon at the Hotel Hughes. President Martin, of the Club, a good Hoo-Hoo, presided.

All arrangements for the concatenation were in the hands of Brother F. Dean Prescott, 17690, and they could not have been in better hands. We had twenty candidates, and every one was pleased. They had a street parade before the concatenation.

After the concatenation we had our session on the roof at the Sequoia Rathskeller, and F. Dean Prescott acted as toastmaster, and the following responded: Roy Stanley, G. L. Sloan, W. K. Kendrick, W. J. Ripley, L. J. Woodson, A. J. Young, A. R. MacKinnon, H. M. Mahannah, A. J. Russell, F. S. Palmer, G. A. Cottrell, W. H. Falconbury, J. G. Ferguson, J. C. Ahrens, A. M. Loper, J. C. Ferger, and W. M. Stephenson. The session on the roof was good, and all seemed to enjoy it very much. On Tuesday Brother C. S. Pierce, 17687, took me for an auto ride, and on Wednesday Brother Prescott took me for an auto ride, so you will see that I had a fine opportunity to see all of Fresno and the Twenty at Fresno.

The concatenation at Fresno was fully up to the level of the other three meetings held in California and compares for delightfulness and success with any meeting ever held anywhere. Vicegerent F. S. Palmer modestly reports the meeting as follows:

After the concatenation, a session "on the roof" was held at the Sequoia Rathskeller. There were present seventy members. Mr. F. Dean Prescott, to whom, with Brother F. F. Minard, is due the credit for making the Fresno concat a wonderful success, acted as toastmaster. Responses were made by Brothers Stephenson, Ferger, Trower and many others.

The preliminary work done by Brother Prescott and Minard and arrangements made by them looking to the success of this meeting certainly merit the thanks of all California Hoo-Hoo.

surrounding country, and Jim. It is a great country, and I will never forget the kindness shown me by the good Hoo-Hoo of California. In writing up these concatenations in The Bulletin please make full mention of the many acts of kindness shown the "hired man." I will write you a letter for The Bulletin of my trip as soon as I get time. They have kept me on the go all the time, and I have not had time to write yet. I am full of good things to tell the Hoo-Hoo of, and I want to do it, and will just as soon as I get time.

In this concatenation The Bulletin truly wishes it had room for the unique account of this concatenation and the one at Reno which appeared in the Pioneer Western Lumberman of March 15, of which paper Brother Wallace Everett, known to many Hoo-Hoo, is editor and proprietor. Brother Everett is a literary genius and when he turns loose to tell what he saw and thinks he saw he handles the English language in a way all his own. In lieu of this we make brief excerpts from Trower's almost equally luminous comments on what must have been some doings:

At noon the San Joaquin Valley Lumbermen's Club held their luncheon, to which all visitors were invited. About 100 men were at the table, and after the dinner President J. G. Martin called on Stephenson, who made a good talk. After luncheon the visitors were taken on a 50-mile automobile trip around the wonderfully rich and beautiful orchard and vineyard country surrounding Fresno. The automobiles were furnished by Brothers Prescott, Ferger, Pierce, and Nicewonger.

A new feature for California concatenations was introduced at the Fresno meeting. The 20 candidates were properly etaoin shrdlu cmfwyp vbgkqj xsifffm ...; ? ("!!!! -).* 123456 78905$. . ETAOIN 7890$. . 123456 -).* -).* '??

Brother A. W. Heavenrich, of the Madera Sugar Pine Co., brought three candidates from Madera, and he, with Brothers Prescott and Minard, put over the coach and band stunt, which was a howling success. It would have stirred anyone's enthusiasm to see men like Brothers Ferger, Landram, and Ferguson tooting away to beat the band. On their return to the hall the concatenation was pulled off in fine shape. The Junior work was very well done under the direction of Stephenson. Candidate Gotshall, who was born in Minneapolis, had a hard time explaining to Stephenson, of St. Paul, which of these two cities was a suburb of the other.

The banquet at the Sequoia Rathskellar was very enjoyable, and the courses were interspersed with good music. Brother Prescott won his usual success as a toastmaster, and the responses were good. About half the candidates were called on.

Vicegerent Palmer conducted the initiation most excellently, and full credit for all the preliminaries for this Fresno meeting should be given to Brothers F. Dean Prescott and Frank F. Minard, of Fresno.

Reference was made in some of the banquet speeches to the securing of the 1915 Annual for San Francisco, and to the projected Hoo-Hoo headquarters at the Exposition grounds. I took occasion to give a little talk on the matter of a separate district for the San Joaquin Valley, and appointed a committee consisting of Brothers Ferger, Martin, and Prescott, to report on the advisability of the proposition, and if agreeable to recommend a vicegerent.

Altogether I am greatly pleased with the Fresno meeting, and feel sure it not only made a good impression on the members, but has stirred up renewed interest in the Order in that section of the State.

Smoking 'em Out at Tampa.

Saturday night, March 23, was the time selected by Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew for his Tampa concatenation, and the selection of that day of the week was a wise one for the busy lumbermen who attended. The festivities began at 8 o'clock and lasted until nearly 4 in the morning—the gray streaks of dawn were on the horizon before the cats and kittens reached their homes.

The initiation ceremonies were held in the Elks' Hall, and be it to the credit of Vicegerent Bartholomew that no better planned concatenation has been held this Hoo-Hoo year than this one. The electrical effects in the Elks' Hall were used to admirable advantage. The Junior's work was unusually clever and those present in the hall that night will long remember the picture of the "Advancing Statue of Liberty" portrayed by one of the kittens of the evening. Eleven were initiated. The parts of the ceremony that were to be solemn were very impressive, and the hall echoed with laughter while the kittens wandered in the "Garden on the Left." Hon. D. B. McKay, Mayor of Tampa, and one of Southern Florida's most prominent Hoo-Hoo, acted as Junlor.

The session-on-the-roof was held at Garcia's. Whosoever "Carried the Message to Garcia" must have told him to do more than the right thing by his guests that evening, for the spread was an unusual one. The appetizers, fixed up of noted Spanish tempters, were almost a banquet in themselves, and it was well that Garcia had provided "99 seconds to change saws" before the real spread that came afterward. The menu cards, printed in black and gold, were the fanciful imaginings of Brother Marcus E. Sperry, the Scrivenoter of the evening:

At the conclusion of this feast the "fireworks" began. Mayor McKay acted as toastmaster. First he had a set program which was carried out, then under the heading "General Discussion" nearly everyone around the board was made to tell a story, sing a song or show his talents in some way. Sam K. Cowan, of Nashville, the first speaker, responded to the toast "The Future of the Order." To Willis B. Powell was assigned "Tampa as a Lumber Port." Charles H. Brown responded to "The Advantages of Being a Black Cat After Dark." "Hoo-Hoo and Why" was admirably presented by F. J. O'Hara, and R. T. Muncaster told "Why a Cat Has Nine Lives." "Black Cat Specifications" was reviewed by Frank E. Waymer, and M. E. Sperry had to explain the difference between "The Waterwagon and Catnip Tea." "Little Journeys Into Hoo-Hoo Land" were related by Geo. McKean and the wail of "Mutilated Kittens" was rendered by R. J. Ripper. Then the bridle was taken off, Toastmaster McKay relinquishing the call for speakers to the banqueters themselves, and so nearly everyone about the table was made to appear in the spot light. It was after 3 o'clock before taps were sounded on this enjoyable occasion.

Much credit is due to Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew and Brother Marcus E. Sperry for the way they handled the meeting. They were at work upon this several weeks before the appointed time and everything was well in readiness.

Some Meeting at Sacramento.

Here again The Bulletin can do no better than to quote from Brother Trower's letters. He says:

At noon the Sacramento Valley Lumbermen's Club gave their usual luncheon, and in the evening the concatenation was held in Odd Fellows' Hall. There were nearly forty members present, twenty-five of whom were visitors from San Francisco and Oakland. These included Hiscox, Hogan, Beyfuss, Olson, Hendrickson, and many of the other local men you know. We all thoroughly enjoyed the outing.

The ceremonies were conducted along just the right lines, there being plenty of clean fun, and the Junior work in charge of Stephenson was very enjoyable. Many old-time members said it was the best meeting they had ever attended, and the work done was of the highest standard.

After the initiation we all adjourned to the Capitol Hotel, where a very fine banquet was served. I acted as toastmaster, and we had some good talks from old as well as new Hoo-Hoo. Hugh Hogan made an especially good speech about the Black Cat, and I am going to ask him to send you a copy of it. The best of good feeling prevailed, and the speeches and stories were all of the right sort. Several members told me they had not been to concatenations for some time, but that if we were going to have more meetings like that at Sacramento they wanted to be in at each one of them.

Vicegerent Palmer conducted the work in fine shape, and is certainly a fine officer.

Credit for the success of this meeting is also due to President H. S. Williamson and Secretary E. T. Roble, of the Sacramento Valley Lumbermen's Club.

I broached the matter of a separate district for the Sacramento Valley to several of the leading members, and they all agreed it was a good idea. I expect to notify you of the selection of a Vicegerent within the next week.

Brother Stephenson backs Trower up as follows:

The concatenation was held in the Odd Fellows' Hall, a most beautiful hall, and everything moved along nicely and we were all through and out by 11 o'clock. Every officer was on to his job, and the initiation was very neatly handled and seemed to please not only the candidates but all the old members present.

All the officers did the work simply fine, Brother McDonald making the best Jabberwock I ever saw.

After the concatenation we adjourned to the Capitol Hotel, where the session on the roof was held. There were present forty-nine. Frank W. Trower acted as toastmaster, and the following responded: H. S. Williamson, 24119, President Sacramento Valley Lumbermen's Club; E. T. Roble, 25478, Secretary Sacramento Valley Lumbermen's Club; F. V. Paramino, 14889; J. H. Brown, 19009; S. D. Pine, 7863; R. A. Hiscox, 14423; H. W. Hogan, 13893; W. M. Stephenson, 2676; F. S. Palmer, 17610; O. H. Miller (kitten); L. D. McDonald, 5200, Chief Priest of the Osirian Cloister.

This concatenation was held in connection with the monthly meeting of the Sacramento Valley Lumbermen's Club. Lunch was served by the Club to all visiting Hoo-Hoo at the Hotel Sacramento at noon, and Trower and I made short talks regarding Hoo-Hoo. Both President Williamson and Secretary Roble are good Hoo-Hoo and assisted us ably.

"See Venice and Die."

Some old European traveler, probably unduly exhilarated with his entertainment there, said "See Venice and die." Supreme Representative Stephenson has no such feeling as a result of his attendance on Vicegerent J. T. Bate's concatenation at Venice, California. He is hoping to live to see just such another meeting at Venice. Venice, by the way, is a magnificent suburban resort on the bay-side near Los Angeles. They have there a wonderful pavilion and a still more wonderful thing, called the "Ship Cafe." We are unable to make out from Brother Stephenson's description whether it is a real ship that has been appropriated for cafe purposes or a building put up in the similitude of a mammoth Pacific steamer. At any rate it bears a famous name—"Cabrillo." Without stopping now to search any musty tomes we recall this man as one of the most valiant but unfortunate of the famous Portuguese navigators, the man who first "put California on the map." If we mistake not, Cabrillo was first to view the beauties of Catalina Island, named that island, and died in the harbor of Avalon—where they have those glass-bottom boats, and from which port you go out with a certain tackle-rig and catch a "tuna," the Pacific congener of our gulf "tarpon," and an even more survigorous fighter of a fish—and then put on some sort of button, badge, or amulet of some sort, and go around all the balance of your life blowing about the size of that fish. Oh, we know all about it; but the only two times we ever had a chance to take a try at the tunas they absolutely declined to bite. It was ever thus, from childhood's hour. Whenever we have wanted to dance the fiddle was out of tune. But we did catch a boatload of albercores, another pretty good specimen of the mackerel family, by the way, and a whole lot of bonitos, cousin to the skipjack of the Atlantic. Yes, oh yes, we know something of that country out there, past and present, something of fish and fishing, and something of circulating around for a day or two with such men as Bate, Goodrich, Capt. Meginn, and the others who took part in this meeting—at least a plenty to make us envy this Supreme Representative of Hoo-Hoo in his visit there.

But to get back to our mutton. Stephenson serves it up like this, and we can do no better:

Vicegerent Snark Bate had arranged a dinner in my honor which was served at the Ship Cafe at 6 o'clock. Vicegerent Bate acted as toastmaster, and responses were made by J. E. Meginn, 33, and W. M. Stephenson, 2676. There were present at the dinner just fifty persons. And a more delightful dinner I never sat down to.

At 9 o'clock we adjourned to the Auditorium, where the concatenation was held. After which we went back to the Ship Cafe where the session on the roof was held, and it was some session. Vicegerent Snark Bate again acted as toastmaster, and the following responded: C. L. Miller, 23464; Frank L. Bartells, kitten; E. A. Goodrich, 12137; J. E. Meginn, 33; W. M. Stephenson, 2676; E. F. Heldemann, 23460; and others. Stories were told and we had good music.

We are certainly in debt to Vicegerent Snark Bate for the success of this concatenation.

The San Gabriel Valley Lumbermen Dealers' Association will hold a meeting soon in Los Angeles, and Vicegerent Bate will hold a concatenation during the meeting. He will hold the Hoo-Hoo trunk there until after this, and then return same to Brother Trower, San Francisco. If Brother Bate should fall in this he will hold a midsummer concatenation in Los Angeles.

You will note that our old friend J. E. Meginn, 33, of the City of Mexico, was present. Captain Meginn has bought him an orange plantation and winter home, and is located at Vendome Hotel, Covina, Cal. He sends his best wishes to you. He is enjoying very good health, and is going to try and attend the Annual Meeting.

Hoo-Hoo Revival at Pensacola.

On the evening of March 21, Vicegerent F. Rust Smith held the first concatenation that has taken place in the city of Pensacola in several years. It was a big success. Twelve were initiated, all of them Pensacola men—men who meet daily in the transactions of Pensacola's big export business. Among the kittens were the Harbor Master of Pensacola and the Hoo-Hoo in that district have had the net out for him for a long time.

The initiation ceremonies were held in the ball room of the beautiful San Carlos Hotel. Gus Eitzen acted as Junior, and an unusually good one he made. The daily contact of these men at Pensacola gave Mr. Eitzen a big advantage in the handling of his class. Trick questions of inspection were put up to them. Irregularities in sales they were made to explain, and Brother Eitzen kept the hall in a roar of laughter during all of the Junior work.

The session-on-the-roof was held in the main dining room of the hotel, this having been turned over to Vicegerent Smith for this occasion. Instead of postprandial speeches a musical program was rendered by a lady orchestra, part of the program being vocal numbers. The session-on-the-roof was in reality an elaborate banquet, which Vicegerent Smith gave to Hoo-Hoo and lumbermen of Pensacola.

So enjoyable was the occasion that when the banquet was completed Brother Smith was surrounded, congratulated and made to pledge himself to see that another concatenation was held in a short while, and already more kittens have been rounded up than were put through at the concatenation on the evening of March 21.

HOO-HOO ON THE WEST COAST.

Brother Frank Trower is mightily well pleased with the outcome of the series of concatenations in California and over the impetus that has been given to Hoo-Hoo generally on the Pacific Coast. In this feeling he is heartily joined by Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter, of Portland, with whom Brother Stephenson had several conferences during his Western trip. On account of the recent death of his wife Brother Leiter has not been in position to take any active part in Hoo-Hoo matters, but he has extended a helping hand in every undertaking. He is especially interested in the big concatenation at Portland in June, which will follow as one of the results of Brother Stephenson's visit.

Summing the thing up at the close of a month of strenuous activity, Brother Trower writes:

It has also been a very enjoyable period for me and I think Stephenson has reason to pleasantly remember his California trip. He has made friends everywhere, and leaves a good impression.

We in California have been made to feel by Stephenson's presence a closer connecting tie with the Order. General interest in the Order has been renewed, and Stephenson has met personally a very large number of our members. Within the three weeks from March 2 to 23 we have had four concatenations in California and one in Nevada as follows:

March 2.	San Francisco	15 initiates
March 9.	Reno	15 initiates
March 16.	Sacramento	11 initiates
March 19.	Fresno	20 initiates
March 23.	Venice	11 initiates
		72 initiates

Four concatenations in one state, three of them in Palmer's district, all within three weeks, is going some.

In San Francisco and Los Angeles there is enough available new timber for another concatenation in the near future.

I am especially pleased over the Reno meeting and also that at Fresno. At most of these meetings Stephenson has conducted the Junior work, and it has been along the right lines, and is an improvement over anything we have had here in the past. He has gone in more for the play of the wits in creating fun rather than so much "rough house." At the same time, our meetings have been no mollycoddle affairs, but it has all been clean fun. I have heard a lot of favorable comments on Stephenson's way of conducting the Junior work, and our members will want more of that system hereafter.

I believe Stephenson will report to you that he finds the Order in good shape here. In fact, I believe it has never been in a more healthy condition. These various meetings have stirred up a lot of interest in the coming Klamath Falls concatenation, and there will be a lot of visitors in the delegation going up there.

As a result of this campaign and the special letters I got out we have brought back several delinquents and have secured a more active interest on the part of many old time members.

The addition of three new districts in California is also going to greatly benefit the Order in this State.

In conclusion I simply want to say that Stephenson's visit to the Coast, and especially to California, has been, in my opinion, a very good investment for Hoo-Hoo.

The new districts in California to which Brother Trower refers in the above are three new vicegerencies which he purposes to establish, one of which he has already established—the Sacramento Valley District, for which has been appointed Vicegerent E. T. Robie, of East Auburn, California. The other two districts will probably be called the "Humboldt District" and the "San Joaquin Valley District." The first named comprises all that region in which is centered the celebrated redwood industry. Throughout this region Hoo-Hoo already has a good membership, but on account of its remoteness from the rest of the state, so far as connection by rail is concerned, not many concatenations have been held there, most of our members having been initiated at meetings held from time to time in other parts of the state. It is a field in which Brother Trower believes several good concatenations can be held as soon as a Vicegerent to take charge has been appointed.

The proposed San Joaquin Valley District will include all that valley as far south as Bakersfield, another fruitful field in which several good concatenations can be held.

In the proposal to establish these three new vicegerencies Brother Trower has the hearty concurrence of both Vicegerent Palmer of San Francisco and Vicegerent Bate at Los Angeles, both men recognizing that the state is so large that two vicegerents cannot possibly cover it as it should be covered.

Brother Trower is confident that at least one good concatenation can be held in each of the three new districts. If this is done it will give California seven concatenations for this Hoo-Hoo year, a record seldom established in any one state in any year.

In Other States.

It is not only in California that Brother Stephenson's visit to the Coast has accomplished good. His presence was much appreciated at the big concatenations at Spokane and Seattle, reported in March Bulletin, and these, as is elsewhere noted, will be followed by a big concatenation April 31, at Vancouver, B. C., and one in June at Portland. On his return trip Brother Stephenson stopped at Vancouver, where he had a conference at length with Vicegerent Fau-Vel, and that good private in the ranks of Hoo-Hoo, Brother W. C. Birdsall, of E. C. Atkins & Co. Still further along on his trip east Brother Stephenson stopped at Winnipeg, reaching home Sunday, April 7, having spent a few days more than two months on this trip.

There is no doubt but that the trip has been of great value to Hoo-Hoo, resulting in a general and widespread awakening of interest. Concatenations have been held, vicegerents have been visited and brought into closer touch with the governing body than ever before, new plans for the future have been discussed and put under way, and a goodly bunch of old members re-established on rolls.

Incidentally, Brother Stephenson has proved a good "walking delegate" for the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, having never failed to effectively bring this to attention at every point he has visited, and each of the almost innumerable speeches he has been called upon to make. Everywhere Brother Stephenson was received with enthusiastic hospitality, and was made the recipient of many honors.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Some time ago Brother L. R. Fifer, Vicegerent at Seattle, whose picture was published in March issue of Bulletin in connection with report of his big concatenation at Seattle, February 16, wrote in to say that he might have to resign the Vicegerency on account of removal from Seattle. The Bulletin will please all members at Seattle and its readers throughout the West generally when it announces that while Brother Fifer has made an important business change he will continue to reside at Seattle, and to be Vicegerent there. The series of business changes in which Brother Fifer is concerned, and in which is also involved two other well-known Hoo-Hoo of Seattle, is thus recounted in a recent dispatch from Seattle to the lumber papers:

Announcement was made last week by H. B. Waite, president of the H. B. Waite Lumber Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., who has been spending a few days at the Seattle office of the company, that E. I. Conner, manager of the Pacific Coast end of the business and his brother, J. I. C. Conner, who has been on the road for the company, will retire April 1, to engage in the wholesale lumber business for themselves. E. I. Conner is succeeded as manager by L. R. Fifer, who will take charge of the western end of the H. B. Waite Lumber Co.'s affairs on April 1. Mr. Fifer has been in charge of the Long-Bell Lumber Co.'s Seattle office and its western business for the last two years and a half. His concern since the first of the year has been closing out its business in the jobbing of western lumber and with the retirement of Mr. Fifer will close its Seattle office and discontinue the handling of western lumber and shingles. Mr. Fifer is an experienced lumberman and had been with the Long-Bell Company in the East for a number of years before coming to the Coast, where he has made many friends who will be glad to learn that he is to remain in the West.

Brother Wm. S. Aumen, No. 17295, of Baltimore, Md., has severed his connection with Aumen Machinery & Supply Co., which will go out of existence on May 1, and has organized the Aumen Machinery Company, 107 E. Lombard Street, Baltimore, of which he becomes president and treasurer. The new company will manufacture wood and woodworking machinery, engines, boilers, heaters, pumps, etc.

The Bulletin in due time received marked copy of the March 9 issue of Baltimore News, announcing the advent of spring even at that early date, and proving the announcement with the publication of excellent likenesses of Geo. E. Waters and W. D. Gill, well-known Hoo-Hoo of Baltimore. Both men are prominently connected with the Mt. Washington Club, a social organization which does all sorts of things all during the year. It appears that the early spring stunt of the club this year was a theater party which occurred on March 11.

Brother Hugh W. Hogan, of Oakland, Cal., Supreme Bojum in 1910, has been a willing and efficient worker in putting through the series of California concatenations. He is secretary of the Hogan Lumber Company, one of the big lumber concerns of Oakland. Brother Hogan everlastingly endeared himself to a large party of those attending the San Francisco Annual Meeting by putting at their disposal literally a flock of automobiles belonging to his company, for a dash through the famous Santa Clara valley to the Mission of San Jose, a trip that concluded with an equally delightful dinner at the quaint old village of San Leandro, now one of the popular nearby resorts of San Francisco and Oakland automobilists—and then another swift dash by moonlight back to the city. Brother Hogan, by the way, though a most capable and successful business man, is a great student. He is a talker and a writer, too. At several of the recent sessions-on-the-roof he has added notably to the pleasure of the occasion by his exceptionally graceful after-dinner speeches.

Vicegerent Joseph Cowan, of Cedar Falls, Iowa, has taken two of the most momentous steps of his life. On March 1 he went into business for himself by becoming president of the Connell-Cowan Lumber Company, of Cedar Falls. On March 17 he was married to Miss Florence Bellamy, at Perry, Iowa. If this is not going some for a young man we would like to be informed. The Bulletin hastened to extend its congratulations, and to wish Brother Cowan and his wife a life full of happiness. In his new business connection Brother Cowan is associated with John H. Robinson and Charles J. Connell, vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the new company, which succeeds to the business of the C. W. Chapman Lumber Co.

Brother N. H. Huey, of Kansas City, Mo., has made a radical change. Heretofore he has been a yellow pine man, having represented in this territory some of the biggest manufacturers in the Southwest. He has now switched over to California white and sugar pine. Effective April the 15th he became connected with the California Sugar & White Pine Co., of San Francisco, at the head of which is that good Hoo-Hoo, Brother F. F. Sayre. Brother Huey will continue to make his headquarters at Kansas City, and cover Southern Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas and Eastern Colorado. This is his old stamping ground, throughout which he is widely acquainted with all the lumber dealers.

Brother J. D. Bolton, Hoo-Hoo 904, has established himself in the wholesale hardwood and pine business at Chicago, and will have offices in the People's Gas Building. Brother Bolton has long been a most successful buyer for others, and no doubt will meet with a full measure of success, now that he has gone into business on his own hook. He knows the business, and has a wide acquaintance with both the dealers and consumers.

Lucky Scots.

California fruits easily find their way into Scottish markets. Recently a consignment of plums from that state was shipped to Dumfermline, arriving in splendid condition. The lot was sold in less than a week.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE.

The men whose Hoo-Hoo names appear in the notices below are out of work and want employment. This is intended as a permanent department of The Bulletin, through which to make these facts known. It is, or should be, read by several thousand business men who employ labor in many varied forms, and it can be made of great value in giving practical application to Hoo-Hoo's central theme of helping one another. It is hoped the department will receive very careful attention each issue.

Some of our members advertising in The Bulletin fail to advise me when they have secured positions, so an old ad keeps running for months and months. To avoid this I have adopted the plan of running the ads as long as three months and then if I have heard nothing from the advertiser I will cut his ad out. If at the end of the three months he still wishes me to continue it, he must advise me.

JULY 18, 19, 20, 1912

¶ AS ANNOUNCED IN APRIL BULLETIN time and place for holding the next Annual Meeting was formally voted on by the Supreme Nine.

¶ Asheville, won five to four over Ottawa Beach, Mich., the only other point upon which vote was cast, though Waycross, Ga., and several other places were given careful consideration.

¶ Detailed statement of the vote and views submitted by the different members in connection with votes appears on inside pages.

On inside pages appears also much about the beautiful little city on the crest of the Appalachians, and its unsurpassed hotel accommodations.

¶ Full program of the business and entertainment sessions with comprehensive announcement as to railroad rates, etc., will appear in June issue of The Bulletin.

¶ Everything appertaining to the meeting will be given wide publicity in the lumber and daily press.

A MONTHLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF HOO-HOO

J. H. BAIRD, Scrivenoter, Editor.

Published Monthly by the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, at Nashville, Tennessee.

Entered at the Postoffice at Nashville, Tennessee, as second class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year.....66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

THE BULLETIN is the only official medium of Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo recognized by the Supreme Nine, and all other publications are unauthentic and unauthorized.

NASHVILLE, TENN., MAY, 1912.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

On account of limited space announcements of concatenations will have to be made very brief.

Klamath Falls, Ore., May 31.

The first of prospective concatenations, chronologically speaking, is that at Klamath Falls on May 31, to be held by Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower, Vicegerent F. S. Palmer and others from San Francisco, assisted by strong committees of local members, headed by Brother H. D. Mortenson, President of the Pelican Bay Lumber Company; W. I. Clarke, both of Klamath Falls, and Brother M. V. Geagan, of Weed, Cal. Brother Geagan will be recalled to many of our old members as a former Vicegerent for the State of Colorado. He has been located at Weed for quite a long time, and is prominently engaged in the lumber business there.

Orange, Texas, June 8.

Following close on the heels of the big concatenation held at Lake Charles, La., on May 25, Vicegerent E. V. Folsom, assisted by strong committees, has got actively to work on a concatenation to be held at Orange on Saturday, June 8. No concatenation has been held at Orange or in that part of the country until the one at Lake Charles for a long time. An abundance of first-class material has accumulated. Brother Folsom wires that he already has twenty candidates lined up, and expects to considerably increase this number. Vicegerent Folsom will be assisted among others by Brother E. W. Anderson, formerly of Monroe, La., who recently removed to Orange, where he has become Secretary of the Orange Commercial Club.

Little Rock, Ark., June 11.

This concatenation will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the Arkansas Association of Lumber Dealers, the president of which is that good man and good Hoo-Hoo brother, L. R. Putman, and of which Brother J. B. Webster is Secretary. Brother Webster has taken the initiative in holding this concatenation, ably assisted by Brother C. N. Lemon, Brother J. C. McGrath, ex-Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo, and Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd, all working under the guiding hand and instructions of Vicegerent W. C. Norman, whose good concatenation, held January 27, will be recalled. This meeting is an assured success.

Albany, Ga., June 19.

This meeting will be held by Vicegerent H. H. Coombs, of Tifton, where he is the representative of the H. H. Hetler Lumber Company, of Chicago. Brother Coombs is a very prominent lumberman and widely acquainted all over the state. He has called to his assistance strong committees and has all arrangements well in hand for a successful meeting.

Shreveport, La., June 22.

This is the "return engagement" spoken of in connection with the big concatenation held at Shreveport on May 4 by Vicegerent F. G. Snyder. As there stated, the best evidence of a good concatenation is the prompt starting of a movement for another concatenation. Vicegerent Snyder is determined on making this concatenation even more successful than that of May 4—which will be going some.

Charlotte, N. C., June 28.

This will be the second concatenation held by Vicegerent R. A. Gaither. In a sense what is said above about the situation at Shreveport applies here. This Charlotte concatenation is not exactly a "return engagement," but it grows directly out of the success of the concatenation recently held by Vicegerent Gaither at Hickory, N. C. At the Hickory meeting was initiated Brother A. F. Black, of the Carolina Manufacturing Company, of Charlotte. Brother Black had no sooner got home than he set about the work of arranging for a concatenation to be held at his home town. He has enlisted the cooperation and assistance of the members there, and the meeting will be strictly in a class with those at Hickory and at Asheville.

Waco, Texas, July 4.

This concatenation will be held by Vicegerent S. E. Carothers and Supreme Arcanoper John C. Ray. In writing of this meeting, Brother Ray says: "We will have a nice big time of this, just the same as we have always been having in Waco on the Fourth of July." Further announcement of this meeting will be made in June issue of The Bulletin.

Other Meetings.

In addition to the above meetings numerous others are scheduled to occur between now and July 15, but for which definite dates have not been fixed. Only brief mention can be made of these.

A meeting will be held at Merryville, La., some time in June. Definite date for this will be set following the meeting held on May 25 at Lake Charles, La.

The big meeting at Memphis will be held probably about the 20th of June. Vicegerent Friedel has awaited only the passing away of effects of the disastrous floods.

The meeting at Nashville, postponed from a date in April, will occur some time during the month of June.

The big concatenation to occur at Portland during the annual rose festival is being diligently worked up by Vicegerent Davis, with the assistance of Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter. Announcement of the exact date of this meeting will probably come to hand before this Bulletin has gone to press.

Vicegerent J. W. Douglas, who has just held a splendid meeting at Decatur, Ala., is nearly on the point of announcing exact date for the third meeting of this Hoo-Hoo year at Birmingham.

Supreme Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell is in active correspondence with Vicegerent Schumann, of Jackson, Miss., about a concatenation to be held at Vicksburg as soon as flood conditions improve.

Announcement will soon be made of exact date of the concatenation in Southeastern Georgia, to be held either at Savannah or Brunswick.

The meeting is to be held at Marlinton, W. Va., by Vicegerent A. D. Williams, is awaiting completion of the big new hotel at that point. It will be held either in June or early in July.

In addition to all the above, concatenations are being worked on at Columbus, Ohio; Fayetteville, N. C.; Newport, Ark.; Pittsburg, Pa.; Washington, D. C.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Ashland, Ky.; Meridian, Miss., and at two points in Oklahoma. It is expected that definite dates for all these meetings can be announced in June Bulletin.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

Asheville, N. C., the Place and July 18, 19 and 20 the Dates—Asheville in the "Land of the Sky"—Best of Hotel Accommodations
 Arrange Now to Attend.

In accordance with the announcement made in April issue of Bulletin, the Supreme Nine voted on place of holding the next Annual Meeting on May 15, having had put before each of its members copies of all formal communications sent the Scrivenoter and considerable of the casual correspondence evoked from members. Vote from seven members of the Supreme Nine came in by wire promptly on the 15th. The eighth vote was received on the day following and decision hung in the balance—four votes for Asheville and four for Ottawa Beach. Several days elapsed before vote from the ninth member was received, he being away from home on a business trip. His vote was the deciding one and was cast for Asheville. Below is appended telegraphic vote from each member of the Supreme Nine:

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 15.—I feel bound by the vote of the last Annual; please record me officially in favor of Ottawa Beach, Mich., first choice.

E. STRINGER BOGGESS, Snark.

Bearden, Ark., May 15.—I vote to hold Annual Meeting at Ottawa Beach, Mich.

J. F. JUDD, Senior Hoo-Hoo.

dates in July. Various ideas were expressed by these men, the general concensus of opinion seeming to be that some time about the middle of the month would be most satisfactory. Several suggested that few lumbermen take their vacations until after the first of July, the end of the first half of the year; that many concerns take inventory at that period, and that it is usually a week or ten days before leave of absence can be secured; that many persons desire to be at home on the Fourth of July to take part in local entertainments and celebrations. With these various suggestions in mind the Scrivenoter suggested by wire the dates as above mentioned, asking approval or contrary suggestions. The communications from the Supreme Nine on this proposition are appended below:

Roanoke, Va., May 21.—July 18 to 20 for meeting; Asheville preferred.

E. STRINGER BOGGESS, Snark

San Francisco, Cal., May 21.—July 18 to 20 satisfactory; will give more time to promote meeting.

FRANK W. TROWER, Junior Hoo-Hoo.

Hamilton, Ont., Can., May 22.—July 18 to 20 acceptable.

THOS. PATTERSON, Bojum.

OVERLOOKING FRENCH BROAD RIVER AND RIVERSIDE PARK, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

San Francisco, Cal., May 15.—I vote for Asheville first choice; Ottawa Beach second choice.

FRANK W. TROWER, Junior Hoo-Hoo.

Hamilton, Ont., Can., May 16.—Ottawa Beach.

THOS. PATTERSON.

Nashville, Tenn., May 15.—My vote is for Asheville.

J. H. BAIRD, Scrivenoter.

Portland, Ore., May 14.—Assemble Chicago; Ottawa Beach first choice, provided rates are satisfactory; Asheville second choice, also considering rates.

J. M. LEITER.

Sanford, Miss., May 13.—I hereby cast my vote for the place of next Annual Meeting as follows: Asheville, N. C., first choice; Chicago, Ill., second choice.

T. L. O'DONNELL, Custocatian.

Waco, Tex., May 20.—My opinion is that the best place for our Annual this year would be Asheville, as I have already mentioned this in previous letters and wires; hope this will be best for Hoo-Hoo and satisfactory to all parties concerned.

JOHN C. RAY, Arcanoper.

Uniontown, Pa., May 15.—Cast my vote for Asheville for annual convention.

W. T. CARROLL, Gurdon.

On receipt of the last vote on place of meeting vote was taken on a tentative suggestion of dates—Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 18, 19 and 20. This suggestion was made by the Scrivenoter, who in the meantime had gone on a long trip to Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida, during which he attended two concatenations, and talked with many members of the Order as to the most satisfactory

Nashville, Tenn., May 20.—July 18 to 20.

J. H. BAIRD, Scrivenoter.

Portland, Ore., May 21.—July 9 to 18, or any date between, will be agreeable.

J. M. LEITER, Jabberwock.

Sanford, Miss., May 21.—Suggest July 15 date Annual Meeting.

T. L. O'DONNELL, Custocatian.

At the hour this is written only six members of the Nine have been heard from, five of whom approve the suggested dates. No doubt Brothers Judd, Ray and Carroll will be heard from before this Bulletin is got to press, in which event a proper comment will be added.

In the meantime our members at Asheville have been communicated with and are greatly elated at the outcome of the vote. Vicegerent English, who is at the head of arrangements for the meeting, has suggested in a letter that while the date proposed is entirely satisfactory to the Hoo-Hoo and lumbermen of Asheville and vicinity, it might possibly be better to make the meeting a little earlier. He says that after the Fourth of July many visitors from the North and East begin to pour into Asheville, and that by the last of the month the hotels are pretty full up. Brother English makes no definite suggestion, but merely states the facts for whatever action the Supreme Nine sees fit to take. It is, therefore, just barely possible that further consideration along this line will result in the date being moved back one week, to have the meeting occur on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 11, 12 and 13. If such change is decided on, there will be ample time in which to make announcement through The Bulletin and the lumber papers. In the judgment of The Bulletin the change is not likely to be made, as with the numerous and very large hotels at Asheville there is not the slightest doubt but that every person who attends the meeting will get just the accommodations he wants. The matter is only mentioned to the end that thus early it may be suggested that hotel reservations should be made promptly by those who expect to attend.

Headquarters at Battery Park Hotel.

Present tentative arrangements are that headquarters will be at the Battery Park, the largest hotel at Asheville. Nearly everybody knows about the Battery Park. It is a famous hostelry, high up on an eminence almost in the heart of the city, and affording from its spacious balconies and verandas the most wonderful view of the "Land of the Sky" to be had anywhere.

If any change is made in the matter of headquarters it will be promptly announced in the daily and trade papers and in June issue of The Bulletin. As a matter of fact, all the matter here written about the Annual Meeting is dictated by the editor of The Bulletin within an hour after his return from a three weeks' trip, during much of which he has been in but limited communication with the office. No opportunity has, therefore, been had to thrash out all the details of arrangements with our members at Asheville.

However, it suffices for the present that the twenty-first Annual Meeting of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo will be held at Asheville, N. C., most likely on July 18-20, both inclusive, with headquarters for the meeting at the famous Battery Park Hotel, and last, but not least, that it is going to be the biggest, best, most orderly, intelligent and business-like Annual Meeting the Order ever held.

It may be that a meeting at Asheville, on the crest of the Alleghenies, the Alps of the western world, at one of the most beautiful spots in America or any other country, will not offer sufficient attraction to toll down a large attendance of our members from the lake states, or many of those residing in other states who have summer cottages on the Great Lakes and sail boats and steam launches and all such things—these men naturally would prefer to have the meeting held nearby—but there is no sort of doubt in the mind of The Bulletin that the Supreme Nine has fixed on Asheville as the place that will be most attractive to the largest number of members. The meeting held anywhere else would be a disadvantage to the majority of numerous lake and Southwest, and Southwest, bringing all the way from the lake region, holding the meeting in the lake region.

Following is some descriptive matter of Asheville, with numerous views of the city and its surroundings. Other matter and other illustrations will appear in June issue of The Bulletin.

The thing to do now is for every member of the Supreme Nine, every Vicegerent and every loyal member to make his plans right now to attend the meeting, and to induce every member possible to come along with him; in short, to contribute faithfully, loyally and promptly his best efforts in making this meeting a success. The Bulletin invites communications from members who expect to attend the meeting and who will volunteer their services in helping to work up attendance. We hope to present a number of such communications.

Asheville is the capital of the historic county of Buncombe. This county is situated in the Blue Ridge plateau at an elevation of 2,250 feet above sea level, bounded on the east and south by the Blue Ridge and on the north and west by the foothills of the Unakas and Great Smoky Mountains. Buncombe County was formed in 1791, and derives its name from Colonel Edward Buncombe, a native of St. Kitts, of the East India Islands, who at an early age cast his lot with the good people of North Carolina.

Asheville has appropriated for its motto the little distich which was placed over the doorway of the spacious mansion of Colonel Edward Buncombe:

"To Buncombe Hall, Welcome all."

Asheville is the social and geographical center of the Great Western North Carolina plateau, justly termed "America's Beauty Spot in the Land of the Sky," containing about 2,000,000 acres, of which about sixty per cent is in forest.

It is a busy, modern, energetic city with thirty-eight miles of paved streets; fifty-eight miles of paved sidewalks; best gravity water system in America; twenty-six churches; Young Men's Christian Association; Young Woman's Christian Association; public library, with 11,500 volumes; various book and reading clubs; a fine system of graded schools; Board of Trade; Good Roads Association; Merchants' Association; social clubs; gun clubs; country club; fraternities; medical society; bar association; law library; hospitals and charitable institutions; military companies; military band; four banks; nineteen hotels; eighteen-hole golf course; large number private boarding houses; telephone exchange, with 2,300 subscribers, with long distance connections with every important point east of Denver; an auditorium; opera house; two daily newspapers; numerous weekly, church, school and society publications; city parks; pleasure parks; Turkish baths; fire department (holding world's records); electric street car system; interurban car lines; sixty miles sanitary and storm sewers; city hall and market; government weather bureau; county courthouse; federal court and postoffice building; excellent liveries and garages; cotton mills, quilt mills; ice factories; foundries and machine shops; cold storage; box factory; woodworking and veneer factories; mattress factory; player piano factory; wagon factory; mica factories; furniture finishing plant; dairies; greenhouses; water power plants; three hydro-electric power plants; flour mill; cereal factory; plant of the National Casket Company; Hans Rees' Sons Tannery; American Furniture Manufacturing Company; twenty wholesale, retail and manufacturing lumber firms, and other manufacturing establishments.

It is a city set on a hill, in the midst of the most beautiful mountain country on this continent—a modern city of 31,000 population, including suburbs—cosmopolitan in its make-up, progressive, liberal and given to hospitality.

Hotels and Boarding Houses.

The excellence of the Asheville hotels has received the seal of approval from the thousands who throng this popular resort in winter and summer; the requirements of people seeking health and rest at resorts bountifully blessed with natural advantages are fully supplied and in addition to the ample provision for comfort made by the hotels and boarding houses, have the unstinted support of the citizens here in diligent regard for the pleasure of the guest.

The hotel and boarding house capacity approaches an aggregate of 12,000 to 15,000. Asheville has entertained the Southern Baptist Convention and the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in a manner in every way acceptable to such discriminating assemblies.

The leading hotels, with rates, are as follows:

Battery Park Hotel—400; $4 to $5 per day; $21 and up $14 and up per week.

The North State (fireproof)—400.

The Manor—125; $3 and up per day; $15 and up per week.

Margo Terrace Hotel—60; $2.50 per day; $14 and up per week.

Swannanoa-Berkeley Hotel—150; $2.50 and up per day; $14 and up per week.

Glen Rock Hotel—125; $2 to $3 per day; $10 to $18 per week.

Cherokee Inn—150; $2 per day; $10.50 and up per week.

The Florence Hotel—25; $2 per day; $8 to $10 per week.

The Western Hotel—35; $1.50 per day; $7 to $10.50 per week.

The Paxton Hotel (rooms)—40; 50 cents to 75 cents per day; $2.50 to $4 per week.

The Gladstone, European—50; 75 cents and $1 per day.

In addition to the above there are innumerable boarding houses, a list of which, with street address and rates, is furnished on application to the Asheville Board of Trade. This is mentioned as several letters have been received from members saying that if the meeting was held at Asheville they expected to take their families there to spend the entire period of their vacation. To the comfortable location of all such Vicegerent J. M. English and his committee will give especial attention.

The Climate.

South and north, west and east, Asheville, with its surrounding mountain region, holds a unique position in the popular estimation. By reason of its southern latitude (35 degrees, 37 latitude north) the rigors of winter are much tempered, and by reason of its altitude (2,250 feet above sea-level) very high summer temperatures do not prevail.

High above humid, sultry and less favored sections, insulation is intense during the day and radiation active at night, producing a constant air circulation, with cool nights, conducive to sound, restful sleep. Close, oppressive conditions so common during the heated period in many portions of the country are absolutely unknown here.

The absolute freedom from malaria, due largely to the great fall of the French Broad River, which acts as a natural drain to this part of the country, and the situation between the extreme cold of the North and the enervating heat of the South, gives Asheville the right to be called the best "all-the-year-round resort" on the continent.

When compared with the most renowned resorts of the Old World it ranks among the first, as will be seen by the following table:

	Spring.	Summer.	Autumn.	Winter.	M. yearly
Asheville	56.5	70.9	56.1	35.0	55.0
Genoa	52.2	70.3	55.2	34.0	52.7
Turin	53.7	71.5	53.8	33.5	53.1
Milan	54.9	72.8	55.0	36.1	54.9
Vienna	56.2	71.8	54.6	38.7	55.3

The prominence of Asheville as a resort gives particular interest to the climatic records compiled by the United States Weather Bureau, the local office of which was established here in 1902. The following data are from official records.

The annual mean temperature is 55 degrees. The warmest months are July and August, each with an average maximum temperature of 71.9 degrees, and the coldest month is February, with a mean of 37.1 degrees. There is little variation in the mean temperature of the winter months. The highest mean temperature since the establishment of the station was 74.1 degrees, in August, 1906, and the lowest mean was 31.0 degrees in February 1905.

The highest temperature in the history of the station was 91 degrees, July 9, 1907, and in this connection, also, it is to be observed that the absolute humidity—the amount of watery vapor in the atmosphere—is quite low and the highest temperatures occurring are not accompanied by the oppressive, enervating conditions accompanying warm weather at lower altitudes.

Asheville, situated to the westward of the crest of the Blue Ridge, culminating with Mount Mitchell, 6,711 feet above sea-level, the highest peak east of the Rocky Mountains, about eighteen miles away, has a comparatively small rainfall, its situation being closely analogous to enclosed valleys in the west. The mean annual rainfall up to and including the year 1909, is 41.25 inches. The greatest annual amount was 48.72 in 1909, and the least 30.7, in 1904.

Asheville's Wonderful Water Supply.

Here is where Asheville literally looks down on all competitors. The Asheville water system is without doubt the finest gravity line of waterworks in this country, if not in the world. For immediate needs, fire and reserve purposes, the city reservoir has five million gallons capacity at an elevation of 210 feet.

The gravity line consists of twenty miles of sixteen-inch pipe laid deep in the ground over valley and ridge to the north fork of the Swannanoa River, whose source is a thousand springs far up toward the top of Mount Mitchell (the highest peak east of the Rockies), altitude 6,711 feet. The intake to the pipe line is situated at an elevation of nearly 500 feet above Pack Square, the center of the city.

The city owns the watershed of approximately 10,000 acres—an unbroken forest untouched by the hands of man—covered with a virgin growth of laurel, azalea, rhododendron, balsam, oak, chestnut, poplar, gum, walnut, hickory and many other varieties of woods and shrubs; abounding in waterfalls, alive with speckled trout, which thrive only in the clearest water. There are forests where the sunlight never penetrates; crags seamed and scarred by wind and storm, and the waters come leaping and dashing down the rocky sides of the mountain, 3,000 feet.

Recreation.

The Asheville Club, Elks' Club and Country Club have homes that are equipped with conveniences of modern social enjoyment and for all requirements for club recreation; the life at these organizations is a source of engrossing pleasure to many visitors here.

The Country Club has a club-house and splendid 18-hole golf links covering a course of 5,575 yards, and one of the finest courses in the country. It is ideally located on the western slopes of Sunset Mountain, at the end of the Charlotte Street car line, and affords a most picturesque eighty-mile panoramic view of the mountains which encircle the city to the west. Links easily accessible to visitors.

Further recreation is offered at Riverside Park, down by the swiftly-flowing French Broad River, with its lakes for boating, shady walks, the bear pit, big easy swings, moving pictures, fireworks and music—in fact, a veritable playground for youth and age.

The livery and garage accommodations are ample in every way, and the demand for fine saddle and carriage horses, vehicles and motor cars is easily met.

There are hundreds of miles of fine macadam and hard surfaced roads leading out of Asheville in all directions, the county keeping two large forces constantly macadamizing additional stretches of road, while still another force makes repairs to these macadam roads as needed.

The Buncombe County Good Roads Association organized at Asheville in 1899, has the distinction of being the first good roads association established in the South, and has been a great factor in the construction of the splendid highways throughout this section.

Asheville has probably the only exclusive automobile road in the South, if not the entire country. It extends from the terminus of Charlotte Street, near the eastern boundary of the 18-hole golf course, to the summit of Sunset Mountain, at an elevation of 3,119 feet above sea-level, and nearly a thousand feet above the city. From the center of the city to the summit of the mountain is five and a half miles. The surface of the road is laid with macadam and rolled until its surface is as smooth as a floor. The grade is nearly all 3 per cent, at no point exceeding 5 per cent. From the summit of the mountain is spread a scene of vernal beauty that encompasses rare delights of valleys and summits, while in the full look across the Asheville plateau there is a world of grandeur and loveliness of setting that stretches away to the far-off mountains in the west, where the majestic peaks of Pisgah, Richland, Balsam, Cold Mountain and the Bald pierce the sky at altitudes of 5,749, 6,540, 6,000 and 5,400 feet, respectively, with a dozen others ranging in height from 3,100 to 5,000 feet.

Many of the mountain driveways are kept in order by the Good Roads Association while bridle paths course this entire region, making all points of interest easily accessible by motor or horse.

Practically all of the automobile highways projected throughout the South have Asheville as the objective point, making Asheville easy of access by the autolst, and the central point in the good roads movement in the South.

Formerly all roads led to Rome; all good roads in the South and East lead to Asheville.

Rapid Transit.

Electric street cars encompass all points of interest within the city and to West Asheville, radiating from Pack Square as a common center, with fifteen and seven-and-a-half minute schedules maintained throughout the year. There are seventeen miles of track, with through transfers to all points.

The Asheville & East Tennessee Railroad (electric), from Asheville to Weaverville, a distance of nine miles, passes through a most attractive country district dotted with beautiful homes and productive farms. Frequent and convenient daily schedules are regularly maintained.

As a matter of fact, Asheville was the second city in the country to operate electric cars, and the system now in operation is second to none in the country for any city of its size.

The Famous Vanderbilt Estate.

An evidence of the permanent nature of Asheville's prosperity, the value of its climate, and the beauty of its scenery, is afforded by the magnificent home—established just outside of the city by George W. Vanderbilt, of New York. With a vast fortune and with a whole world to choose from, he selected Asheville as the one place for creating the splendid house and beautiful park which his architects and engineers constructed under the direction of Frederick Law Olmsted, the landscape architect who gave New York its Central Park. The house was built under the direction of the eminent architect, the late Richard M. Hunt, and is a chateau of the French Renaissance, 375 feet long and 150 feet wide, and in some features not unlike the famous chateau at Blois, France.

The Biltmore Estate contains about 12,000 acres; and the Pink Beds and adjacent tract of Mr. Vanderbilt's hunting preserve, comprise about 120,000 acres; this is known as Pisgah Forest.

On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays of each week drives are permitted over this famed estate (probably the finest private park in the country), where forty miles of beautiful roads with marvelous landscape and lovely vistas can be enjoyed. Visits to the immense model dairy, its barns and the large herd of imported Jerseys, and other features, are full of interest.

A Convention City.

Asheville as a convention city gratifies that chiefest of convention needs—the climatic influence for refreshing comfort—whether the hours are spent in the business sessions of the occasion or are enjoyed in recreation as the individual may desire. The sunshine temperature does not fatigue, the nights are always cool, and the tonic of the mountain breezes is in it all.

With an unsurpassed situation in its accessibility, an environment of great natural beauty, numerous points of interest for outings in side trips, abundant hotel and boarding house accommodations for pleasing all classes of people and all varieties of taste, and the overflowing hospitality of its citizens, a convention visit is always an occasion of absolute enjoyment.

In its provision for conventions the city has the Auditorium, a structure seating 2,500 people, well lighted, heated and ventilated, admirable in acoustics, and having every modern requirement of committee rooms and other conveniences, for use without cost.

Railroad Rates and Routes.

It is in the center of a circle embracing the territory bounded by the Mississippi River, Gulf of Mexico, the Atlantic Ocean and the Great Lakes. It is within the area of densest population in the States, and has special tourists' rates from leading railroads of this country. Stop-over privileges allowed on all the year-round tourist tickets, winter tourist tickets and summer tourist tickets, all directions. Trains arriving at Asheville have through Pullman cars from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Nashville, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Jacksonville, connecting at these points with through Pullman car lines from Boston and the East; New Orleans, Mobile, Tampa and St. Augustine; South, and with the West at Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Memphis and New Orleans.

There is now in effect to Asheville a rate of two cents per mile. This applies from every coupon ticket station in the United States and Canada. It is a rate that is unhedged about with troublesome restrictions, validation, certification of tickets, etc. It is a straight round-trip rate at the reduced fare, good for months, and permitting stop-off practically at will, both going and returning. It is the same rate as prevails to all the resorts on the Great Lakes and to all the big resorts on the north Atlantic coast.

Application has, however, been made to the Southeastern Passenger Association for an even better rate. The Montreat Chautauqua and Religious Assemblies have built a fine hotel at Black Mountain, N. C., sixteen miles east of Asheville, at which place the assemblies hold a series of meetings annually from July 7 to August 31. For these assemblies the Southeastern Passenger Association makes a special rate to Black Mountain and return, but the reduction from the regular tourist rate above referred to as prevailing to Asheville is too slight to justify those attending the Hoo-Hoo meeting in going on to Black Mountain to have their ticket requirements complied with. The application made on behalf of Hoo-Hoo is that this Black Mountain rate be put into effect to Asheville for the Hoo-Hoo meeting. There is not a glowing prospect that this application will be granted, as Hoo-Hoo, though predicated upon a singularly high ethical plane, can hardly be classed as a religious organization such as the railroads have always been prone to make exceptional concessions for. With this application for the Black Mountain rate denied we will have to Asheville as good a rate as could be had to any winter or summer resort in the United States.

NOTES & COMMENTS

Laugh and the world laughs with you; grouch and you flock by yourself. The "play spirit" never dies in the hearts of men; the tendency toward joyous make-believe is universal.

All this is brought to mind by the receipt at this office of a number of letters from members who enclose clippings from various newspapers quoting an article on Hoo-Hoo, which appeared in the April number of Hampton's magazine. The article was reprinted, in part, by newspapers all over the country, the following paragraphs having particularly hit the public fancy:

"If you see two Hoo Hoos together, it's a sign that the closed season for gloom has begun."

"Thrice blessed the man who possesses the bubbling exuberance of human vitality that must find an outlet in play and make believe."

The following is one of the many letters from members who saw in the newspapers the excerpts from the magazine article:

Office of Merrick Lumber Company,
Westfield, Mass., April 29, 1912.

Dear Jim: Enclosed is clipping from the New York Sun, April 21, which gives a little truth, a little history and some free advertising.

That pat remark about "closed season for gloom" caught two or three friends of mine who know I wear the Black Cat, and they came around inquiring. Perhaps you have already seen this item.

Cordially yours,
E. S. ROCKWOOD, No. 8271.

Other members sent clippings from the Washington Post and from numerous other papers. The magazine article was written by Mr. Frank L. Nelson, who has the catchy style in favor with magazines that appeal to the popular taste. He refers to the members as "Hoo-Hoos," apparently never having heard that saying of the founder of the Order, "The singular is plural and the plural very singular." Concerning the name of the Order Mr. Nelson says:

To the Order of Hoo-Hoo, the Black Cat of America's secret-society zoo, is to be credited the salvage from the scrap heap of Latin derivatives and the furbishing up for everyday use of the verb "to concatenate." Webster gives "concatenate from con and catenare from catena, a chain. To link together." Follows naturally, of course, the "concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo," which is the official title of the organization.

The verb, "to concatenate," was never in the "scrap heap" of Latin derivatives, although, of course, it is derived from the Latin as stated by Mr. Nelson—and Mr. Webster. "Concatenation" and "concatenated" are perfectly good English words. They are used by such writers as Oliver Wendell Holmes and Washington Irving, and are seen occasionally in the literature of the day. "Concatenation" appeared recently in an editorial in the Louisville Courier Journal, in the phrase, "concatenation of causes." Mr. Nelson says: "The genesis of the concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo is due to a concatenation of events," which is true; and "concatenation of events" is good English. There is no scrap heap flavor to it.

The article in Hampton's is of genuine interest, as shown by the fact that it has attracted so much attention and has been so widely copied. The "play spirit" referred to by Mr. Nelson has been a great factor in the development of the human race. Its origin lies far back beyond the stone age. In the middle ages, as Mr. Nelson observes, the same play spirit ran riot in jousts and tournaments and in the wandering search for dragons and enchantments. This thing of make-believe is a big subject, so big that books have been written on it. The faculty of believing what we know "isn't so" tends to preserve one's mental balance; it has saved the race from lunacy. In one of Mr. G. K. Chesterton's entertaining books is this: "The ordinary man has always been sane because the ordinary man has always had one foot on earth and one in fairyland." The boy that plays Indian is the healthy, normal boy. Poets don't go mad but mathematicians do!

A newspaper joke sometimes contains more truth than wit. The following is a case in point.

"What do you consider the most important event in the history of Paris?" "Well," replied the tourist who had grown weary of distributing tips, "so far as financial prosperity is concerned, I should say the discovery of America was the making of this town."

Just now there is in Europe much anxiety as to whether this summer's crop of tourists will come up to the average yield. Millions of American dollars go to Europe every summer, and anything that interferes with the tourist season is a blight worse than pestilence or drought. It is feared that the wreck of the Titanic will diminish the volume of travel to the old world, for a time at least. As is well known, many of the passengers that were lost were Americans. Whether the great disaster will intimidate many who otherwise might have planned a trip to Europe this summer is doubtful—we forget so quickly in this fast age. But it is certain that the American people are vitally interested in everything that pertains to the safety of trans-oceanic travel. They consider that they "had a right" to know all the details of the Titanic wreck, and all the causes that led up to it. Our people have the idea that the discovery of America was a great thing for the White Star Line and for all the other big steamship lines, inasmuch as when an American goes abroad, he not only spends his money in foreign lands after he arrives there, but he pays his passage money to a British, French or German steamship company. It may be argued that the United States should have some ships of her own, but as long as Americans must cross the water on foreign ships, it is inevitable that they should feel privileged to "agitate" the matter of the loss of the Titanic. And so at every cross-roads store the subject was discussed, argued, sifted—every item of news concerning the wreck was eagerly devoured; columns, in fact, reams of editorials have been written; innumerable poems were published; and it is safe to say that every preacher in the United States, regardless of creed or doctrine, delivered a sermon on a text having reference to the great sea tragedy. Never before in the history of the world was so wide a publicity given any disaster. Perhaps it would be well for us if we would investigate more thoroughly some of the calamities that are of weekly and daily occurrence in our own country—preventable railroad accidents, deaths by fire because of closed exits, etc. There is that in a sea disaster, however, that is peculiarly appalling to the human mind. In the Book of Common Prayer there is a special petition for protection to "those that go down to the sea in ships"; and in the Bible it is written, concerning the time when all enemies shall have been conquered, "There shall be no more sea."

The terror the sea inspires is due no doubt to the instinctive dread that goes back to the time when primitive man, but little higher in intelligence than the wild beasts about him, viewed with horror and dismay the vast expanse of waves that seemed to threaten and defy him. He seemed so small and powerless compared to that mighty force! In his shivering dread he pictured some evil demon as hovering above the raging waters, urging the lashing waves to their work of destruction. As time passed and generation after generation struggled with the forces of nature and the hardships of life, the human brain grew and developed. That is, the front part of it enlarged. The forehead of the man of today is higher than that of the primeval savage, but in the back of our heads, as it were, are still lurking all the old fears, the old beliefs, the old wild longings and instincts; and now and then something happens that brings them to the front. That is why our interest in the story of the wreck was paramount—that is why for a brief space we turned away our eyes from the awful spectacle of the eight aspirants for the Presidential nominations madly racing over the country, haranguing their fellow citizens night and day; that is why we forgot for a little while the havoc wrought by breaking levees and rivers on the rampage. The magnitude of the sea disaster overwhelmed and stupefied us; and then was quickened into consciousness the old horror of the deep, the age-long terror that was not destroyed nor cast out but only lulled to sleep.

Among the many magazine articles on the Titanic wreck was one by James H. Williams, who is vouched for by the editor of the magazine in which the article appeared as "an able seaman who has all his life followed the sea." Mr. Williams says that in his youth they had wooden ships and iron men, but now they have iron ships and wooden men. This is no reflection on the courage of the Titanic's men; it is merely a plain statement that the so-called seamen of today are not trained as were those of old—the crews of ocean liners are usually enlisted on the supposition that nothing is going to happen; therefore, according to Mr. Williams, "any man who can swab paint and holystone decks will do." The survivors of the Titanic were fortunate in having fine weather and a smooth sea to facilitate their escape from the sinking ship—and a rescuing ship was close at hand. It appeared from the reports that most of the boats were mishandled. Mr. Williams says:

The Titanic, like all other first-class ships of her line, flew the blue ensign of the Royal Naval Reserve, signifying that a certain percentage of her crew belonged to the Royal Naval Militia. This fact does not, however, tend to elevate the nautical practice or naval standing of her crew one iota, except in the eyes of an easy-to-be-beguiled public; it is useful only for dress parade and advertising purposes. I have sailed with many Naval Reserve men and I know whereof I speak. As seamen they are as a rule perfectly useless, while as boatmen they are positively dangerous. About one year and a half ago I was shipmate with a British boatswain who has sailed for years in both the White Star and Cunard lines. He told me that on one occasion when a new crew was mustered on board one of the White Star ships at Liverpool, the chief officer ordered: "All you Naval Reserve men who have never been to sea before, stand over." In response to the order, ninety men left the line and shambled over to starboard as an acknowledgment that they had never been to sea. Yet they were all rated as seamen!

These remarks of Mr Williams' are of interest in view of the fact that new legislation on the subject of lifeboats, etc., seems certain. A lifeboat is of no avail unless the man at the oar is capable and experienced.

"A true sailor is born with an oar in his fist," declares Mr. Williams. The idea is that a real sailor's knowledge of boatmanship is an inward sense developed and perfected by external physical practice. Far from fearing the wind and sea, he often utilizes their power to his own purpose. He trims his sheets and boards his tacks on the weather roll and tautens his braces when the wind "sends aft." In all his actions he cheats the wind and sea, and handles a twenty-foot steering oar with as much grace and sureness of stroke as a musician handles a fiddle-bow. Such men, Mr. Williams asserts, are seldom found on liners. Yet even a land lubber can readily understand that in leaving a ship's side in heavy weather one sweep of a twenty-foot steering oar in skilful hands will sometimes work wonders for mortal salvation. Most people, whether globe-trotters or stay-at-homes, will heartily concur in the statement:

"Every ocean liner should be required by law to carry, in addition to the regular crew of roustabouts and paint swabbers, a specially selected life-saving crew, composed of practical sailors and boatmen of known (not merely certified) ability and experience.

The world has gone mad on bigness and speed. "Man-kind in this present generation," a thoughtful writer observes, "has cared supremely for two achievements that have fascinated us and distorted our judgment because of their mere novelty and crude impressiveness. To build the tallest skyscrapers, to float the heaviest battleships, to create gigantic locomotives, to run railroad trains and automobiles at breathless speed, to amass monstrous fortunes, to create trade combinations more powerful than ancient empires—these things have fired imagination and stirred men to an insane fury of effort."

This carries the mind back to the cowering savage of primeval times. Perhaps the most acute sense of impression that poor creature had was littleness and fixity—he knew he was small, compared to the mountains, the rivers and the sea; and he knew he couldn't get about very well. There was so much to hinder his movements—the darkness of night, the streams, the towering mountains, the tangled wilderness, the sea. Little by little he triumphed over the things that at first forced him to stay put; the darkness was dispelled by a torch, until after many years, some bright and ambitious mind conceived the idea of a candle; a lantern was a great invention, and an oil lamp seemed the limit of luxury. And so in other ways, step by step, man increased his size, so to speak—that is, he rose superior to the things that had seemed so much bigger and more powerful than himself. And the larger he grew the faster he went. As long as he was the smallest object in sight, he had to stay in the same place pretty much all the time; speed became possible in proportion as the apparent size of obstacles dwindled and faded away. As soon as man ceased to be afraid of Nature, he fell in love with himself. And now scientific knowledge of the physical universe, applied through ingenious inventions, has increased man's power until the feeling of it has intoxicated him. This is deplorable, indeed; but it was inevitable.

Everybody knows now that the big ship was wrecked because it was going too fast, it was trying to break the record. Other calamities will befall and for the same reason. And still there is something in humanity besides speed mania. There is comfort in this prophecy:

Nothing but calamity, perhaps nothing but calamity over and over repeated, can break the spell of the demons that we worship now. But calamity, sooner or later, will break it. For the worship will bring calamity repeated and repeated, until we turn to other gods. The other gods are clearly enough revealed. He is indeed a dull clod who has caught no vision of them from the behavior of the men and women who quietly chose "the better part" when the "Titanic" went down.

Last year Europe did a travel business of five hundred million dollars. Of this huge sum three hundred and fifty millions was spent by Americans. A recent magazine writer claims that America has scenic resources superior to those of Europe and that we have but to exploit these resources in order to have a more productive travel industry than that of Europe:

Switzerland is an excellent illustration in this connection. It had an array of attractive scenery. This scenery was made pleasantly accessible by means of good roads. The traveler came. He was graciously received and comfortably entertained. The following year he returned, accompanied by a number of friends. Thus in a few years Switzerland, with an area of only fifteen thousand square miles, by exploiting its scenery built up a travel industry that brings it two hundred million dollars annually.

In the nature of things the United States should have a travel industry of vast economic importance. We have numerous and extensive scenic areas of unexcelled attractiveness, together with a majority of the world's greatest scenic wonders and wonderlands.

We are hearing a great deal about red flags nowadays. A red flag is calculated to stir up trouble almost anywhere in America, but the English police proceed on the principle that agitators and anarchists are harmless so long as they are allowed to talk. Suppress their talk and they become explosive. The officers are always on hand when frenzied orators hold forth in Hyde Park, but they are there to protect the shouters and not to assail them. A thoughtful writer remarks: "The orators in Hyde Park use an extraordinary violence of language, and the police see to it that the safety valves are kept open."

John Bull is very calm and reposeful; he is not easily disturbed. His climate is a bit soggy and is more restful to the nerves than is our electrical atmosphere. North-bridge once said: "A man who has India at arms' length and Ireland squealing at his feet, must needs be robust and matter-of-fact, rather than nervous and an idealist, if he is to sleep o' nights." And so John Bull doesn't pester much about anarchists and other red-flag fliers; he simply lets them talk themselves to death. Carlyle spoke derisively of the "pot-bellied equanimity of the Englishman," but Carlyle was a dyspeptic and had sour moods. An American writer, Mr. Price Collier, in one of his travel books, declares: "The English know how to take care of themselves as do no other people." The pictures of John Bull and of Uncle Sam show very clearly the difference in temperament of the people of the two nations. But John Bull is much the older; perhaps Uncle Sam will take on flesh by and by, and become matter-of-fact, less nervous and less of an idealist!

In the meantime, the red flag has caused great excitement in several places in the United States lately. The self-styled "Industrial Workers of the World" were driven from the city boundaries of San Diego, California, and compelled to kiss the United States flag, and to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner." The result, asserts the San Francisco Argonaut, was a foregone conclusion:

Thousands of these mis-called Workers started for San Diego from all parts of the country, under pretence of defending free speech and the right of the citizen to live where he pleases. And they will have their way because they have nothing to lose. They cannot be excluded from the city, and prison has no terrors for them so long as the meals are regular.

It seems incredible that Socialists or any others wishing to popularize a "cause" would adopt the red flag with all its sinister suggestions; the red flag has always been the symbol of terrorism and defiance. Those who wave it must surely know that such an act will, in this country, precipitate trouble. Probably the western editor was right who said of a recent "demonstration" on part of these red-flag fanatics: "What these sorry scare-crowns want is advertising."

So many good concatenations are to be reported in this issue of The Bulletin and so much space has of necessity to be given to announcements of the Annual Meeting, it is necessary to make comments on concatenations very brief. The Bulletin regrets lack of space to give as full comment as is deserved by the splendid concatenations held during the past thirty days.

In Maryland My Maryland.

The first concatenation held since those reported in April Bulletin is that held by Vicegerent R. W. Oswald at Cumberland, Md., on April 12. It was a splendid meeting despite the fact that only five candidates were initiated. Vicegerent Oswald had to assist him those two good workers, ex-Vicegerent A. A. Rudy, of Elkins, W. Va., and Brother F. H. Whaley, of Cumberland, besides six other men equally good. The initiatory ceremonies were administered with impressiveness, following which was an elegant little banquet at the Olympia Hotel. "Nice, clean work, and all of it well done," is the terse but comprehensive comment made on this meeting by one of the old Hoo-Hoo who attended.

Snark, R. W. Oswald; Senior Hoo-Hoo, E. O. Abernethy; Junior Hoo-Hoo, Alf. A. Rudy; Bojum, A. H. Billmeyer; Scrivenoter, G. E. Emmert; Jaberwock, F. H. Whaley; Custocatian, L. W. Van Horn; Arcanoper, R. L. Yonker; Gurdon, R. H. Willison.
 26541 Lincoln Hamlin Boody, Rupert, Pa.; owner L. H. Boody.
 26542 William Edward Buchanan, Cumberland, Md.; partner Howard Buchanan & Sons.
 26543 Walter Benson Goad, Cumberland, Md.; buyer Billmeyer Lumber Company.
 26544 James Elder Humbird, Cumberland, Md.; manager Humbird Supply Company.
 26545 Boyd Armstrong Reinhart, Cumberland, Md.; owner Boyd A. Reinhart.
 Concatenation No. 1774, Cumberland, Md., April 12, 1912.

One for Brother Galther.

Vicegerent R. A. Gaither, of the West-Central District of North Carolina, held the first of a series of three or four concatenations he purposes to hold between now and the Annual Meeting. This first meeting occurred at Hickory, N. C., April 12. Eight men were initiated as appears below. Vicegerent Gaither rounded up a good list of officers to administer the ceremonies, having to assist him Vicegerent J. M. English, of Asheville. The session-on-the-roof was exceedingly enjoyable—just one, such an occasion should be in Hoo-Hoo.

The next concatenation Vicegerent Gaither will hold will be at Charlotte, N. C., on June 28. In the elaborate arrangements being made for this meeting Vicegerent Gaither is being assisted by Brother A. F. Black, one of the initiates at the Hickory meeting. Without stopping now to look back through the records, The Bulletin believes that this will be the first meeting ever held at Charlotte.

Snark, R. A. Gaither; Senior Hoo-Hoo, C. R. Moore; Junior Hoo-Hoo, J. M. English; Bojum, D. Clark; Scrivenoter, N. J. Warner; Jaberwock, R. P. Anderson; Custocatian, J. F. Lentz; Arcanoper, C. H. Turner; Gurdon, J. M. Bernhardt.
 26546 Robert Alton Atkinson, Lenoir, N. C.; yard manager J. B. Atkinson.
 26547 Ernest Andrew Beaman, Marion, N. C.; senior member Beaman Lumber Company.
 26548 Arthur Freyland Black, Charlotte, N. C.; sales manager Carolina Manufacturing Company.
 26549 Joseph Telesphore Miller, Hickory, N. C.; manager purchasing department Hutton & Bourbonnair Co.
 26550 Jacob Sherman Ramsey, Statesville, N. C.; secretary and treasurer and general manager North State Veneer Company.
 26551 Nelson Russell Triplett, Lenoir, N. C.; buyer and shipper of lumber department, Lenoir Chair Mfg. Co.
 26552 Jasper Newton Waddell, Lenoir, N. C.; buyer and inspector J. M. Bernhardt.
 26553 Claude Francis Williams, Lenoir, N. C.; sales manager J. M. Bernhardt.
 Concatenation No. 1775, Hickory, N. C., April 12, 1912.

Six at Milwaukee.

Vicegerent W. R. Anderson, despite numerous difficulties, held a most successful concatenation at Milwaukee on April 17. He had to assist him B. A. Johnson, founder of the Order and Seer of the House of Ancients; W. M. Stephenson, Supreme Representative, and Brothers Darlington and Wellmuth, of the American Lumberman, of Chicago. The other official stations were filled by well-known Milwaukee members, one of whom—Brother L. E. Meyer—furnishes The Bulletin the following good story of the meeting:

The liveliest concatenation Milwaukee Hoo-Hoo have seen since the annual was held in the city of breweries, etc., was that of April 17, when six kittens were sent over the hot sands into the joyful land of the Great Black Cat. The event was one of more than usual interest, for the occasion was graced by the presence of Bolling Arthur Johnson, No. 2, Chicago, and Supreme Organizer W. M. Stephenson, of Minneapolis.

The concatenation followed the session of the Northern Hemlock and Hardwood Association, the secretary of which, R. S. Kellogg, Vicegerent for the Northern District of Wisconsin, was unable to remain because of an urgent trip to Detroit. However, Warren R. Anderson, Vicegerent for the Southern District, ran off the affair in grand style.

With Mr. Johnson as Snark, Mr. Anderson as Senior, Mr. Stephenson occupying the Junior's chair, and the other offices capably filled, little was left to be desired in the way of a rousing initiation. And it proved to be "some" undertaking, for the trunk did not arrive and the work was done faultlessly without the official paraphernalia. It was agreed that one of the seven hardest tasks in the world is to conduct a Hoo-Hoo concatenation without the trunk, but in spite of the non-arrival of that important package, "Packages" Anderson went through with the work as if everything was fit and complete.

An enjoyable feature of the concatenation was the "On-the-roof" session in the Fern Room of the Hotel Pfister following the initiation and instruction work. The work was done in the Red Room on the seventh floor of the Pfister, on which floor also is located the beautiful Fern Room. The kittens were brought in to eat on stretchers and with the aid of crutches after the rough trip to Hoo-Hoo land.

Snark, B. A. Johnson; Senior Hoo-Hoo, W. R. Anderson; Junior Hoo-Hoo, W. M. Stephenson; Bojum, M. C. Moore; Scrivenoter, Leonard Meyer; Jaberwock, H. B. Darlington; Custocatian, W. C. Jacobs; Arcanoper, E. J. Wellmuth; Gurdon, G. N. Harder.
 26554 Warren Benedict Bullock, Milwaukee, Wis.; manager Bullock Company.
 26555 Bearnard "Cairo" Cannon, Milwaukee, Wis.; stockholder, etc. Cannon Box Company, Cairo, Ill.
 26556 Marcus Claud Hanna, Milwaukee, Wis.; president Progress Publishing Company.
 26557 Edward Herbert Hickey, Milwaukee, Wis.; editor, assistant manager and publisher Packages Publishing Company.
 26558 John William Kaye, Westboro, Wis.; secretary Westboro Lumber Company.
 26559 Wilfred Cedric Parker, Milwaukee, Wis.; secretary Mueller & Son Company.
 Concatenation No. 1776, Milwaukee, Wis., April 17, 1912.

Second for Brother Wilder.

Vicegerent J. F. Wilder, of the Southern District of Mississippi, held his second concatenation at Hattiesburg, Miss., on April 9, in connection with the meeting of the Mississippi Yellow Pine Manufacturers' Association. Brother Wilder's first concatenation, a most elegant affair, was held at Gulfport early in February. This Hattiesburg meeting was fully up to the standard set at Gulfport, the session-on-the-roof being exceptionally enjoyable. It will be seen that Brother Wilder initiated a class of sixteen, composed of excellent material.

Snark, John F. Wilder; Senior Hoo-Hoo, E. J. Doran; Junior Hoo-Hoo, J. B. Nalty; Bojum, J. W. Tranum; Scrivenoter, W. T. Cosby; Jaberwock, N. M. Cudabac; Custocatian, P. H. Sadler; Arcanoper, W. P. Haynes; Gurdon, L. T. McDonnell.
 26560 George Graham Autrey, Hattiesburg, Miss.; buyer Mercantile Lumber & Supply Company, Kansas City, Mo.
 26561 Edward L. Dent, Collins, Miss.; timber buyer Ship Island Lumber Company, Sanford, Miss.
 26562 John Mowbray Des Rochers, Mobile, Ala.; general manager Hirsch Lumber Company.
 26563 John Bryant Franklin, Meridian, Miss.; traveling inspector Oden Elliott, Birmingham, Ala.
 26564 Don W. Giles, Prentiss, Miss.; inspector of mill Trexler Lumber Company.
 26565 Guy Gray, Cleveland, Ohio; president The Gray Lumber Company.
 26566 Allan Douglas Harper, Prentiss, Miss.; saw mill Trexler Lumber Company.
 26567 Alphas Baker Jarman, Prentiss, Miss.; planer foreman Trexler Lumber Company.
 26568 Walter F. Jones, Hattiesburg, Miss.; treasurer The McLeod Lumber Company.
 26569 William W. Jones, Toledo, Ohio; passenger agent Q. & C. Railway.

26570 George William McEwen, Cleveland, Ohio; salesman Strong, Carlisle & Hammond Company.
 26571 Leonidas Hamilton Martin, Hattiesburg, Miss.; L. & S. I. Railroad.
 26572 William Thomas Martin, Memphis, Tenn.; salesman C. L. Gray Lumber Company, Meridian, Miss.
 26573 Robert N. Miller, Hazlehurst, Miss.; agent and attorney Hazlehurst Lumber Company.
 26574 Ike A. Rosenbaum, Meridian, Miss.; salesman A. J. Lyon & Co.
 26575 Eber Jay Wilder, Perkinston, Miss.; secretary J. F. Wilder Lumber Company.
 Concatenation No. 1777, Hattiesburg, Miss., April 9, 1912.

Second in Michigan.

The second concatenation of this Hoo-Hoo year in Michigan was held at Grand Rapids on April 26 by Vicegerent F. J. Verkerke, assisted officially by ex-Senior Hoo-Hoo Jeff B. Webb and seven other good men and true. The meeting was a notable success, fourteen men being initiated, and the session-on-the-roof being one of the most enjoyable that ever occurred in the state. The first concatenation of this Hoo-Hoo year in Michigan was that held by Vicegerent Steve J. Rathbun, at Battle Creek, Mich. Ex-Senior Hoo-Hoo Jeff B. Webb is working hand in hand with all the Michigan Vicegerents, and has been a very active and able assistant at both the meetings so far held.

Snark, Fred J. Verkerke; Senior Hoo-Hoo, Carl A. Schneider; Junior Hoo-Hoo, Jeff B. Webb; Bojum, John Wood; Scrivenoter, Will H. Kittle; Jabberwock, A. V. Wright; Custocatian, W. C. Cowlshaw; Arcanoper, Geo. E. Covill; Gurdon, Archie Fisher.
 26576 Willis Judson Barnhart, Grand Rapids, Mich.; salesman Valley City Lumber Company.
 26577 Don Robinson Binns, Grand Rapids, Mich.; salesman Skillman Lumber Company.
 26578 William Bush, Muskegon, Mich.; salesman Muskegon Lumber & Furniture Company.
 26579 Ray Louis Byers, Grand Rapids, Mich.; salesman Marquette Lumber Company.
 26580 Archibald St. John Downey, Grand Rapids, Mich.; salesman Cream City Sash & Door Company, Milwaukee, Wis.
 26581 Albert Adam Eisen, Grand Rapids, Mich.; traveling salesman Sawyer Goodman Company, Marietta, Wis.
 26582 William Lewis Fassett, Grand Rapids, Mich.; sales manager Filger Lumber & Timber Company.
 26583 Martin John Silvers Geerling, Grand Rapids, Mich.; yard superintendent and salesman Grand Rapids Lumber Company.
 26584 Edward Gottferd Heiss, Grand Rapids, Mich.; salesman Stiles Bros. Company.
 26585 William Henry Icenogle, Chicago, Ill.; traveling salesman Long-Bell Lumber Company, Kansas City, Mo.
 26586 John Lesperate Desmond Murray, Grand Rapids, Mich.; retail salesman Grand Rapids Lumber Company.
 26587 Mack Albert Sharpsteen, Muskegon, Mich.; secretary Robert K. Mann Lumber Company.
 26588 Irving Ellis Vogelsang, Grand Rapids, Mich.; salesman Grand Rapids Lumber Company.
 26589 Joseph Zoet, Grand Rapids, Mich.; salesman Grand Rapids Lumber Company.
 Concatenation No. 1778, Grand Rapids, Mich., April 26, 1912.

Second for Vicegerent Dickerson.

Vicegerent G. J. Dickerson, of the Western District of West Virginia, held his second concatenation at Huntington on April 19, initiating ten men of the highest class. Brother Dickerson's first concatenation was at Huntington last fall, at which he initiated a class of eleven.

Vicegerent Dickerson is justly proud of the high class of his initiates at this last meeting, as well as at the former meeting. In the class initiated April 19 appears the name of Mr. Edward K. Mahan, one of the large stockholders in the Peytona Lumber Company and one of the most important lumbering operations of the Huntington district. Mr. W. E. Minter, who is financially interested with several large lumber operations in West Virginia, was another of the initiates. Mr. Barney Kidd, one of the younger men initiated, is the son of one of our old-time West Virginia Hoo-Hoo, who has long been a prominent figure in the lumber business. Mr. H. A. Zeller, at the head of the Steel Rail Mills, and Mr. Frank Jones, a college-bred lumber salesman, well-known and very popular throughout West Virginia, were among the other high-class men initiated.

Both Snark Boggess and Supreme Representative Stephenson attended this meeting and took official part in the proceedings. The session-on-the-roof was held in the Elks' Club and was a most enjoyable affair.

Snark, E. Stringer Boggess; Senior Hoo-Hoo, G. J. Dickerson; Junior Hoo-Hoo, W. M. Stephenson; Bojum, H.

G. Burns; Scrivenoter, Q. E. Callaway; Jabberwock, H. K. Eutsler; Custocatian, W. A. Snyder; Arcanoper, B. B. Burns; Gurdon, J. W. Brazier.

26590 Andrew William Ackerman, Huntington, W. Va.; owner Ackerman Lumber & Manufacturing Company, West Huntington, W. Va.
 26591 Frank "Maud" Hall, Huntington, W. Va.; salesman Peytona Lumber Company.
 26592 Frank Long Leaf Jones, Roanoke, Va.; traveling salesman Daugherty, McKey & Co., Birmingham, Ala.
 26593 Barney "Also" Kidd, Clothier, W. Va.; assistant superintendent and salesman Boone Timber Company.
 26594 Edward Kenna Mahan, Huntington, W. Va.; secretary Peytona Lumber Company.
 26595 William Edwin Minter, Kenova, W. Va.; general manager Kenova Lumber & Supply Company.
 26596 John M. Nichols, Charleston, W. Va.; stockholder Peytona Lumber Company, Huntington, W. Va.
 26597 Lloyd Francis Quesenberry, Huntington, W. Va.; salesman The Carolina Pine Lumber Company.
 26598 Charles Lacy Rice, Kenova, W. Va.; treasurer Kenova Lumber & Supply Company.
 26599 Harry Arthur Zeller, Huntington, W. Va.; general manager W. Va. Rail Co.
 Concatenation No. 1779, Huntington, W. Va., April 19, 1912.

Snark Boggess Very Active.

Snark Boggess filled the position of Snark at Vicegerent R. Y. Johnson's concatenation held at Staunton, Va., on April 26, Vicegerent Johnson himself taking the station of Bojum. Supreme Representative Stephenson also attended and filled the station of Junior, while Brother John L. Alcock, that old-time worker in the ranks, held down the chair of Senior. The meeting was an exceedingly high class affair, no better class of initiates ever being initiated anywhere. Brother Stephenson writes: "The class of men initiated has never been excelled and to the best of my belief cannot be excelled anywhere—this both from the standpoint of the business occupied by the men initiated and their high standing as citizens."

Continuing, Brother Stephenson writes: "We were through with the initiation by 11 p. m., and adjourned to the Elks' Club hall for the session-on-the-roof; believe me it was some session."

Continuing, Brother Stephenson says of this session-on-the-roof and of the speech-making which followed:

In the absence of Brother O. F. Payne, Kitten Ralph Duane Lusk acted as toastmaster. Col. H. H. Wayt (kitten), Mayor of Staunton and owner of the Despatch and News, gave a most excellent and hearty address of welcome. This was extended as only a Virginia gentleman can do it, and I wish we had a stenographer present to take his address in full. On account of the absence of Brother J. E. Walker I was called upon to respond to the address of welcome, and while I did the best I could, it was not equal to the demand. Snark of the Universe E. Stringer Boggess responded to the toast "John Bull's Disposition of Our Export," and Brother (Kitten) E. K. Mercereau gave in his own style, and believe me it was some style, "A Kitten's Opinion of Hoo-Hoo." This concluded the regular list, but Toastmaster Lusk thought the occasion demanded more, and he called upon Brother John L. Alcock, of Baltimore, Md. Brother Alcock responded in his usual happy and able manner and gave one of the best talks on Hoo-Hoo I have had the pleasure of listening to for a long time. After this, Brother Lusk called on all present, and all had to get up and make a little talk. Brother Lusk was perfectly at home as toastmaster and acted the part to perfection. Every one did his part to make this concatenation and session-on-the-roof what it was, a great success in every way. You will note from the menu that we had a most delightful banquet, and I would call your especial attention to the manner in which the menu is printed. This is the work of Brother Johnson, most ably assisted by one of the best Hoo-Hoo who has never been initiated, Mrs. Johnson.

Vicegerent James Morrison, of Hinton, W. Va., was present at this meeting and contributed notably to its success. His recent meeting at Charleston, W. Va., will be pleasantly recalled. Snark Boggess, in writing of this meeting, says that he was "well pleased," and that nothing that could be said about the good work done by Vicegerent Johnson would be undeserved.

Snark, E. Stringer Boggess; Senior Hoo-Hoo, John L. Alcock; Junior Hoo-Hoo, W. M. Stephenson; Bojum, R. Y. Johnson; Scrivenoter, E. C. Headley; Jabberwock, John L. Alcock; Custocatian, James Morrison; Arcanoper, R. Y. Johnson; Gurdon, W. M. Stephenson.
 26600 Ralph Duane Lusk, Staunton, Va.; treasurer Valley Tie & Lumber Company.
 26601 Edward Keeler Mercereau, Staunton, Va.; owner Valley Tie & Lumber Company.
 26602 David William Taylor, Aqua, Va.; owner D. W. Taylor.
 26603 Hampton Heskell Wayt, Staunton, Va.; owner Despatch and News.

Splendid Meeting at Asheville.

No better concatenation has ever been held anywhere than that at Asheville, N. C., by Vicegerent J. M. English, assisted by eight other good Asheville Hoo-Hoo. This meeting was held in the Assembly Hall of the Battery Park Hotel, at which famous hostelry the session-on-the-roof also was held. Eighteen men, practically all lumbermen, were initiated, and a big list of dues was collected. A big saw mill machinery "job" about to be let at Asheville brought to the concatenation a number of old and prominent Hoo-Hoo from far distant States, among the number being Brothers Frank McDonough, No. 3513, of Eau Claire, Wis.; H. W. Sloan, the well-known Southern representative of the Prescott Company, Menominee, Wis., and Brother John P. Carey, No. 2621, of Mobile, representing The Wheland Company, of Chattanooga. It is sad to chronicle that the last named died at his home in Mobile only a short time after the concatenation at Asheville.

Brother English had present more than sixty members of the Order. He had practically every member now resident at Asheville and a dozen or more from outside points. Vicegerent R. A. Gaither was on hand and made himself very useful. He was carrying out his part of the trade made with Brother English, whereby each was to help out the other in his concatenation, Brother English being one of the officers at Gaither's concatenation at Hickory.

The session-on-the-roof was exceptionally fine. After a splendid menu had been disposed of, Judge H. B. Stevens, one of the leading lawyers of Western North Carolina, was introduced as the toastmaster. Judge Stevens is a Hoo-Hoo, being extensively engaged in the timber land business as a member of the firm of Stevens & Anderson. He called on Brothers George A. Murray, S. F. Chapman, Lewis Carr, R. A. Gaither, Frank L. Winchester and Supreme Scrivenoter J. H. Baird. Much was said at this session-on-the-roof about the Annual Meeting, and the Asheville members made it unmistakable that they want the meeting held at Asheville and were going to put forth vigorous arguments to accomplish that end. Other pages of this Bulletin indicate that their efforts were successful.

Vicegerent J. M. English feels himself especially indebted to Brothers Norman J. Warner, T. E. Blackstock, W. C. Britt and J. W. Rutherford. These men put their shoulders to the wheel, as Vicegerent English phrases it, and "pushed the concatenation to a notable success." In their efforts and in everything pertaining to the concatenation they had the counsel and assistance of that veteran Hoo-Hoo and lumberman, Brother G. A. Murray. Brother Murray is a lumberman of large operations throughout Western North Carolina, but he never lacks the time to turn in and do his part and more in pushing along anything for the good of Hoo-Hoo.

In giving credit, however, for this meeting, Vicegerent J. M. English himself must not be overlooked. He took the lead in everything and proved himself an energetic and capable worker.

Joint Meeting in West Virginia.

The joint concatenation at Clarksburg, W. Va., on May 10, held by Vicegerents George P. Morgan, of Parkersburg, and J. R. Davis, of Weston, was altogether successful. Snark Boggess presided as Snark, while all the other stations were filled by capable men. Credit for local arrangements must be given ex-Vicegerent L. O. Smith, and the success of the meeting was in no small part due to the thoroughness with which these arrangements had been made.

Ten men were initiated, after which came the session-on-the-roof. There was nothing short of an elegant banquet with all the delicacies of the season spread out on the board. Brother H. B. Curtin, of Pardee & Curtin Lumber Company, was toastmaster. After expressing his appreciation of the general good accomplished by Hoo-Hoo, and advancing his belief in its continued activity in greater usefulness, Brother Curtin proceeded to discharge the remaining duties of his position in a way that has seldom been equalled. He is a graceful and forceful speaker. Supreme Gurdon W. T. Carroll was present and was down on the formal toast list to respond to the text, "The Relation of Hoo-Hoo to the Lumber Business." Brother Carroll's talk was entertaining and inspiring. He paid a high tribute to his brother officers of the Order, and expressed in the highest terms the pleasure he has had from his connection with them. The other formal address scheduled was that on "The Future of Hoo-Hoo," by Snark Boggess. Snark Boggess makes no pretense of being a silver-tongue, but when he gets up to talk he leaves no doubt as to what his feelings are of what he has to say. The Bulletin has it that he was in a particularly fit humor for talking at this Clarksburg concatenation. Clarksburg is Brother Boggess' home town, as is well known, but much of his time in recent months has been put in over at Roanoke, Va., where he has lumber interests.

Ex-Vicegerent A. A. Rudy made an effective talk on the Emergency Fund, while ex-Vicegerent C. E. Howard spoke briefly on the fraternal aspects of Hoo-Hoo. Brother John O. Tate, of E. C. Atkins & Co., added some forceful words to what Brother Rudy had said on the Emergency Fund, and spoke in the highest terms of his appreciation of the Order. Brother W. D. Smith, of Parkersburg, spoke of the improved conditions that have been brought about in Hoo-Hoo, and he, too, took occasion to say some forceful things about the good work being done through the death fund. Paul W. Lang, one of the initiates, made a good talk, expressing his regret that he had not become a member of the Order long ago.

Among the other speakers were Vicegerents George P. Morgan, J. R. Davis and James Morrison, and ex-Vicegerents L. O. Smith and M. B. Sprigg. It is doubtful if more Vicegerents and ex-Vicegerents ever took part in a concatenation. The toastmaster called also on Brother J. C. Roane, of Weston, W. Va., who brought charges against the toastmaster of using his position for political purposes, whereby, in passing, it may be stated that Brother Roane got himself "cried down" by those present. Brother George Stephan, of Wheeling, W. Va., in his speech urged the attendance of all at the next Hoo-Hoo Annual, speaking at length of the great pleasure he had in being present at the last Annual Meeting.

The vaudeville features which followed the speech-making were of high class and were greatly enjoyed, and everything in connection with the session-on-the-roof passed off with much enthusiasm. Brother Tate, of E. C. Atkins & Co., presented each man with an attractive little souvenir of his firm, "dropping back," as Snark Boggess says, "into the custom of his firm of remembering West Virginia concatenations."

Snark Boggess concludes his report of this meeting to The Bulletin by saying, "You cannot say too much for the good work done by Vicegerents Davis and Morgan, and the assistance that was given them by other Vicegerents, ex-Vicegerents and the numerous old members who attended." Snark Boggess adds that great regret was expressed at the unavoidable absence of Brother John L. Alcock, of Baltimore, who had counted on attending.

Great Meeting at Shreveport.

Nothing speaks more eloquently of the success of a concatenation than that a movement is started right at once for a "return engagement." This is what happened at Vicegerent Snyder's concatenation at Shreveport on May 4. This concatenation, it will be recalled, was once or twice postponed on account of continued bad weather, but it certainly lost nothing by postponement. The success and pleasure of the meeting is best told in Vicegerent Snyder's own words. He fairly bubbles with the telling of it. Hear him:

"The concatenation was a huge success and we had about the most willing bunch of neophytes to put through it has ever been my good fortune to handle. Every one of these candidates, and every one of those present, seemed inspired with the desire to make this occasion one long to be remembered. We certainly did that thing.

"After the concatenation a regular old-fashion on-the-roof was held at the Caddo Hotel, where my good friend Long, manager, just naturally tore himself loose on a Dutch lunch that was a scream."

Brother Snyder goes on to relate that not all the enthusiasm had been expended even when the session-on-the-roof adjourned at a late hour. On the way home a little bunch of the members proceeded to give the Hoo-Hoo yell in a way that startled out of a deep sleep one of the newest additions to the municipal constabulary of Shreveport. As Brother Snyder tells of this incident and the chagrin to the disturbed officer when he discovered what he had bumped into, is a story too good to print.

Along with the report of the outcome of this concatenation comes the printed announcement that Vicegerent Snyder and his acting Scrivenoter, Brother F. H. Ford, have got out of the "return engagement." This is to be held on June 22. This concatenation will also be held at the Caddo Hotel, and is expected, as Vicegerent Snyder says, "to eclipse all previous Hoo-Hoo records in Shreveport."

Brother Snyder had a big attendance of members, having rounded up in the hall practically all the old-time members who have ever been active in Hoo-Hoo work. He collected a goodly bunch of dues and generally handled everything in a way mightily remindful of Hoo-Hoo in Louisiana in the old days.

Another in Louisiana.

It is a little difficult to write of two concatenations occurring in the same state, and at nearby points, without setting up invidious comparisons. This difficulty is easily got over, however, in the case of the concatenation at Shreveport, on May 4, and that at Alexandria, on May 18. Both were first-class. Both had all the old-time fun and go, but were nevertheless conducted on a high plane, with all objectionable features eliminated.

The concatenation at Alexandria was held by Vicegerent G. R. Gloor, assistant sales manager of the Tremont Lumber Company, Winnfield, La., whose wide announcement of the meeting attracted general attention. He initiated fourteen men, falling behind Vicegerent Snyder by only one initiate. But for interrupted railroad connection, due to the floods, he would have had at least a half-dozen more, and instead of the seventy-five or eighty members present, he would have had at least a hundred. However, there was no disappointment felt either at the size of the class or of the attendance. It was a brilliant scene when at midnight these seventy-five members and fourteen newly initiated sat down to a splendid lunch, served in the best style of the Hotel Bentley. Vicegerent Gloor acted as toastmaster, and a brief but good speech was made by Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd. Brother J. C. McGrath, that well-known Hoo-Hoo and ex-Junior Hoo-Hoo, of Little Rock, was also called on and responded briefly, as did several others, including one of the newly initiated. Supreme Scrivenoter J. H. Baird was called on and spoke at some length of what Hoo-Hoo has attempted and what it has accomplished.

Each man present at the meeting was presented with a handsome and useful souvenir by the representative of E. C. Atkins & Co., the "silver steel saw" people of Indianapolis.

Vicegerent Gloor deserves the greatest credit for the manner in which he and his assistants conducted all arrangements for this meeting, which will go down in the archives as one of the cleanest and most wholesome concatenations ever held anywhere.

Good Meeting at Bristol.

Vicegerent Irving Whaley, appointed only a few weeks ago, held a successful and enjoyable concatenation at Bristol, Va.-Tenn., on the 17th, initiating nine men at what was probably the smoothest-running and high grade concatenation ever held in that part of the country. Vicegerent Whaley says:

"We had a fair size class and a good attendance of old members. I believe the whole thing was thoroughly enjoyed by both members and initiates. Everything was perfectly orderly; in fact, it passed off more pleasantly than any concatenation I have ever attended heretofore."

Vicegerent Whaley was ably assisted in working up this meeting by Brother H. W. Chandler and all the other Bristol members whose names appear in the list of officers. In connection with the meeting a goodly amount of dues was collected and several reinstatements of delinquent members were effected. In short, this meeting at Bristol was an all-round first-class affair and will bear good fruit.

Snark, Irving Whaley; Senior Hoo-Hoo, H. P. Wyman; Junior Hoo-Hoo, H. M. Hoskins; Bojum, W. H. Beckner; Scrivenoter, John C. Adams; Jabberwock, H. W. Chandler; Custocatian, Frank J. Murphy; Arcanoper, T. G. Caldwell; Gurdon, D. Thurman Smith.

An Awakening at Baltimore.

The following good account of the concatenation held at Baltimore by Vicegerent S. Robb Eccles is furnished The Bulletin by ex-Vicegerent Wm. T. Kuhns. It will be observed that Brother Eccles had to assist him such old-time Baltimore Hoo-Hoo as Brothers "Billy" Gill, George Schumacher, W. J. Crowell and several others. The meeting was a thorough success and most enjoyable, as appears from what Brother Kuhns writes:

At last Hoo-Hoo has had an awakening in Baltimore. After slumbering for more than a year, the newly-appointed Vicegerent Snark, Brother S. Robb Eccles, has stirred things up, just as might have been expected of a man of his ability and energy, by holding one of the best concatenations ever held in Baltimore.

The affair was "pulled off" at the Merchants' Club, which has become the regular place for all gatherings of lumbermen in Baltimore, on Saturday, May 18, at 4 p. m. The third floor of the club was used for the concatenation proper, and is excellently adapted to the purpose. There were five "kittens," and when the world-famous Junior Hoo-Hoo "Billy" Gill took them in hand they must have realized that the way into the land of Hoo-Hoo was not a rose-strewn path, but they stuck nobly to the task, and once having been permitted to enter the portals of the land of Health, Long Life and Happiness, they expressed themselves as more than delighted.

The ceremony of the concatenation was followed by an "on-the-roof" in the main dining-room of the club, where about forty old cats welcomed to full membership the kittens while partaking of one of the buffet luncheons for which the Merchants' Club is famous. The evening was enlivened by Fisher's Orchestra, while the famous Hoo-Hoo song and other popular airs were sung with a will by all present.

When cigars were reached, General Wm. D. Gill, acting as toastmaster, called on a number of gentlemen for sepeches, all of which were short and informal, the real enjoyment of this part of the affair being derived from the witty and laughprovoking introductions of the toastmaster, who admitted that in each case he had made a longer and better speech than the gentleman called on.

The whole affair reflected great credit on Brother Eccles, the newly-appointed Vicegerent Snark, and if Hoo-Hoo does not go ahead in Baltimore under his administration it will be most surprising.

Snark, S. Robb Eccles; Senior Hoo-Hoo, Wm. S. Aumen; Junior Hoo-Hoo, Wm. D. Gill; Bojum, George Schumacher; Scrivenoter, George B. Hunting; Jabberwock, J. D. Verdin; Custocatian, W. J. Cromwell; Arcanoper, W. T. Lawton; Gurdon, John J. Duffy, Jr.

Spring Session at Decatur.

A concatenation that rocked with its rollicking was held at Decatur, Ala., on the evening of May 24, with Vicegerent J. W. Douglas, of Birmingham, in charge. While, in a way, this was Decatur's concatenation, when the time came for it to be held, it was found to belong to all of Northern Alabama, for there were a number of members of the Order from all of the nearby towns, with quite a delegation coming up from Birmingham with Vicegerent Douglas.

It was twelve hours of fun. The frolic started at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, as soon as the north-bound train arrived. With the quaint old town of Decatur resounding with the Hoo-Hoo battle-cry, a march was made to the wharf, where the party boarded the steamboat "America," a large Tennessee River packet, owned by the H. H. Hitt Lumber Company. For three hours the cats, the kittens of the evening, and a number of Decatur's prominent citizens were the guests of Mr. H. H. Hitt on a boat trip up the beautiful Tennessee River. A stop was made on the voyage for an inspection of the mammoth new band mill being erected by the H. H. Hitt Lumber Company at Decatur.

After returning to the city the party assembled at the Knights of Pythias Hall, where the concatenation was to be held. Here preparations were made for the street parade, which was a novel and an interesting one. Upon request of Brother William F. Bixby, who so ably planned the concatenation, the Supreme Scrivenoter had forwarded to Decatur a number of extra Hoo-Hoo robes. In addition to these, Mrs. Wm. F. Bixby and Mrs. F. R. Seely had made many "quaint and curious" costumes that embodied all of the colors of the rainbow, and then some. At the head of the parade went a band, followed by a wooden cage in which were confined two would-be obstreperous novices. Then came a small donkey, draped in streamers of many colors, and in lock-step line moved the kittens. After these marched the members of the Order in black robes. To see the parade there had turned out a goodly portion of Decatur's citizenship, and the uptown sections of the city were lined with spectators, standing on the sidewalks, sitting in vehicles and in automobiles, and they cheered the Hoo-Hoo party as it passed.

It was just midnight when the concatenation ended and the thirty-one kittens were amply satisfied with the division of Hoo-Hoo knowledge that had been meted out to them.

The banquet at the Hotel Bismarck was an elaborate spread, which the Decatur Hoo-Hoo were giving to the visitors, as the following menu will show:

"It is Better to Smoke Here than Hereafter."

"The Top o' the Marnin'—the Rist o' the Night."

, Brother F. R. Seeley, of the H. H. Hitt Lumber Company, acted as toastmaster, and the post-prandial speeches sparkled with wit and humor. The address of welcome was made by Mayor H. H. Skeggs, of Decatur, and then to make the welcome still more binding, Mr. John Patterson, Mayor of New Decatur, followed, and the guests were doubly welcomed to the twin city. Response was made by Vicegerent Douglas, and following him short talks were made by Judge William E. Skeggs, C. L. Lewellen, Sam K. Cowan, E. L. Mountfort, H. B. Rox, H. H. Hitt, William F. Bixby and George H. Evans. It was truly the "top of the morning" when the banqueters began to search for downy couches. To be exact, it was 4 a. m., just twelve hours after the festivities began.

The success of the concatenation is due to the good work done by Brother Wm. F. Bixby, assisted by Brother E. W. F. Himes. They had everything in readiness and well thought out in advance of the coming of the visitors. So interested were the people of Decatur in the success of the meeting that the ladies took a prominent part, insuring the moving spirits that everything would go well. As stated above, Mrs. Bixby and Mrs. Seeley made robes for the parade, and Miss Olivia Knight, a niece of Brother Wm. F. Bixby, secured a number of kittens who were duly initiated. Another noticeable thing about the occasion was that of the thirty-one men initiated, twenty-one were young men from the working force of the H. H. Hitt Lumber Company.

Other Meetings.

At the hour this is written two other good meetings have been held of which formal reports have not come to hand. These are the meetings at Lake Charles, La., and Pensacola, Fla., both held Saturday night, May 25. The Supreme Scrivenoter attended at Pensacola, where eleven candidates of high standing were initiated, with a goodly attendance of old members, and with a number present from Florida and Alabama points.

The meeting at Lake Charles was held by Brother M. M. Wood and A. R. Mitchell, assisted by strong committees of old-time Louisiana members. No advice of the outcome has been received at this hour, but Brother Wood attended Vicegerent Gloor's concatenation at Alexandria to pick up such points as would be of assistance to him, he being fully determined to make the Lake Charles meeting not least in the series of meetings occurring in the Pelican State.

CHRISTENING A BATTLESHIP.

The launching of a battleship is always an inspiring event, but when the christening ceremony is performed by the daughter of a Hoo-Hoo, the affair takes on additional interest to those who love the Order. Newspaper clippings similar to the following have been sent in by quite a number of our members:

Newport News, Va., May 18.—With a precision and smoothness said by experts never before to have been equaled, more than 11,000 tons of steel was given life today as a battleship glided gracefully into the waters of the James River from the yards of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, after being christened "Texas." It was the infant battleship of the United States Navy, but the largest and most powerful war vessel in the world.

A daughter of the biggest state in the Union, favored with a perfect Sunny South day, broke over the prow of this great hulk a bottle of champagne, and as it crashed and splashed away, pronounced in distinct tones, "I christen thee Texas." This daughter of the South, who acted as sponsor, was Miss Claudia Lyon, ten-year-old daughter of Colonel Cecil Lyon, Republican National Committeeman from Texas. Crowded on the launching stand built at the vessel's prow was a notable gathering, which included Senators and Representatives, army officers, officers of the Navy Building Corps, the Secretary of the Navy, the representatives of foreign powers, and thousands of spectators.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Brother E. W. Anderson, No. 5742, who for eighteen years has been located at Monroe, La., and during much of which time he has been at the head of a very active and energetic business and commercial organization there, has recently removed to Orange, Texas, where he has become secretary of the Orange Commercial Club. Brother Anderson is a good Hoo-Hoo, and no sooner had he landed at Orange than he took steps to get in touch with Vicegerent E. V. Folsom to make tender of his services to work up the big concatenation to be held there June 8.

Charles W. Tomlinson, Hoo-Hoo No. 5444, heretofore Commercial Freight Agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, of Chicago, has been promoted to General Eastern Freight Agent of his line, the appointment becoming effective May 1. He is now located at 379 Broadway, New York City, where he will be glad to see any of his old-time Hoo-Hoo or lumbermen friends.

The Oldest Settler.

When Horace Greeley was in California, a generation ago, he paid a visit to a grove of big trees. Leaning against the largest tree, he figured out the quantity of lumber it would cut and also that stable-room for thirty horses could be made in its stump! This noble tree monument, a heritage of the ages and one of the world's most inspiring wonders, interested Greeley in only a material way.

Some time after Greeley's visit, John Muir came to the grove. Muir stood beneath this monarch of the forest a long time, rapt in reverent and reflective thought. The tree towered in calm magnificence far above him. Splendidly this living, heroic tree appealed to his imagination; in it he caught glimpses of "yesterday's seven thousand years." Here was the oldest, largest living object upon the earth—the oldest settler!

Plans were being completed to cut and lumber this veteran, but Muir declared the tree must not be felled. He made eloquent appeals for its life; he had peppery arguments, and in one of his discussions with some practical people he made the following assertion and prediction: "Let it live on; and every year the travelers who will come to see it will bring into the state more gold than the total you will receive for its entire sliced carcass." The long laugh which greeted this assertion has ceased. The prediction has come true.—Saturday Evening Post.

OUR VICEGERENTS.

Granville Rudolph Gloor, No. 10178.

The accompanying portrait is that of Vicegerent G. R. Gloor, of the Central District of Louisiana, located at Winnfield, La., where he is assistant sales manager of the big Tremont Lumber Company, whose successful concatenation at Alexandria is reported on another page. Brother Gloor entered the lumber business as an employee of the Swartz Lumber Company, of which he became Treasurer in 1901, immediately on graduating from college. When the Swartz business was liquidated he became associated with Mr. Swartz in the Eau Claire-St. Louis Lumber Company, becoming Treasurer of that concern. This concern subsequently became the St. Louis Lumber Company, of which Brother Gloor was credit manager until he resigned take his present position at Winnfield.

George James Dickerson, No. 18574.

Brother G. J. Dickerson, Vicegerent for Western District of West Virginia, whose successful concatenation at Huntington, on May 19, is reported on another page, is one of those lumbermen who has literally come up from the bottom. He was born and raised in Fayette County, West Virginia, and is now 34 years old. He was a farmer boy almost without advantages of education until twenty years of age. He then got a job driving a team for a coal company, and later became teamster in a logging operation. Determining to lift himself to a higher occupation than that, Brother Dickerson saved up his money and took a general business course in the Valparaiso College, Valparaiso, Ind., fitting himself to do stenography and general office work. He did stenography work for about a year and then secured the position of assistant cashier of the bank of Mt. Hope, at Mt. Hope, W. Va. From that position, which he held for several years, he stepped up to that of treasurer and general manager of the Carolina Pine Lumber Company, a wholesale and retail lumber operation of Huntington, W. Va., which has had and still enjoys a most successful career.

Marcus Elliott Sperry, No. 22871.

Brother Marcus E. Sperry is not a Vicegerent, but he has done as much work as almost any Vicegerent and a great deal more work than many who have worn that title. He is located at Tampa, Fla., where he is engaged in the lumber and timber land business.

MARCUS E. SPERRY, Tampa, Fla.

Brother Sperry has been Vicegerent L. A. Bartholomew's right hand man in both the splendid concatenations held at Tampa this Hoo-Hoo year. Brother Sperry lent particularly energetic and effective assistance in the concatenation held March 23 and reported in April Bulletin. Brother Sperry is well known among lumbermen all over the Southeast, particularly in Georgia and Florida.

OBITUARY.

Andrew Lee Fiser (No. 19771).

Brother A. L. Fiser, No. 19771, manager of the Mart Lumber Company, Mart, Texas, died at the Provident Sanitarium, Waco, Texas, March 29. Brother Fiser was a popular man and a successful lumberman. He was well acquainted all over northern and eastern Texas, and his death will be painful news to many members of the Order.

Brother Fiser was born at Moorville, Texas, March 22, 1874. He was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at concatenation No. 1379, held at Waco, Texas, July 4, 1907.

Albert Sidney Grayson (No. 7134).

Brother A. S. Grayson, No. 7134, died at Blair Hospital, Elma, Wash., on Friday, May 10. No particulars of his illness and death have yet reached The Bulletin. Brother Grayson was born at Liberty, Ark., September 22, 1867. He became a Hoo-Hoo at Camden, Ark., February 17, 1900.

William Preston Jones (No. 19980).

Brother Wm. P. Jones died at Colfax, La., April 8, of heart failure, after a very brief illness. Brother Jones leaves a wife and two small children. He was a high class, Christian gentleman, a good and loyal Hoo-Hoo, a competent business man, and a devoted husband and father.

Brother Jones was born at Alto, La., March 19, 1878. He was married December 12, 1900, to Mrs. Susie Callam, nee Christensen. He was taken to his old home at Alto for burial.

William Hamar (No. 23759).

Brother William Hamar, No. 23759, died at his home, 423 East Walnut Street, Indianapolis, Ind., on May 27. He was a subscriber to the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, the only notice of his death so far received being a telegram from Brother John Oxenford, formally reporting claim.

Brother Hamar was born near Lafayette, Ind., October 15, 1850, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo January 12, 1910, at Indianapolis, Ind.

John Patrick Carey (No. 2621).

Brother John P. Carey, No. 2621, widely known all over the South as a saw mill machinery salesman, died at his home in Mobile, Ala., on May 11, after a brief illness from acute Bright's disease. Brother Carey was present at Asheville concatenation, held April 26, and was then complaining of feeling rather unwell, though he took part in the initiatory ceremonies. About a week later he consulted a physician, who diagnosed his condition as serious and advised his immediate return to his home. He reached Mobile, May 3, and after consulting his family physician there, who diagnosed his ailment as acute Bright's disease, and his illness as very serious, he took to his bed. In spite of the most skillful medical attention and the most devoted nursing, his condition gradually grew worse. He lapsed into unconsciousness on Friday following and died at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. He was buried Monday at St. Mary's Catholic Church, at Mobile. Besides his widow, Brother Carey is survived by two daughters, Margaret E. and Frances M.; two sons, James J. Carey, of Mobile, and W. J. Carey, of Milwaukee; by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Carey, and a sister of the same name, residing at Chicago, and by one brother, Thomas J. Carey, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Brother Carey was born at Chicago, Ill., April 7, 1854. He became a Hoo-Hoo at Mobile, Ala., January 9, 1895. All his life Brother Carey was a consistent member of the Catholic Church.

Brother Carey was well known all over the South, having represented during the past fifteen years some of the best known machinery manufacturers. He was successively connected with the Allis-Chalmers Company and Clark Brothers. At the time of his death he was representing The Wheland Company, the well-known machinery manufacturers of Chattanooga.

It may be said of Brother Carey that literally every man who knew him was his friend.

Entered at the Postoffice at Nashville, Tennessee, as second class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year.....66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

THE BULLETIN is the only official medium of Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo recognized by the Supreme Nine, and all other publications are unauthentic and unauthorized.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JUNE, 1912.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

On account of pressure on its space. The Bulletin again can scarcely do more than give date and place of the numerous approaching concatenations. Several of the meetings, it will be observed, will occur before The Bulletin reaches its readers.

Charlotte, N. C.—The meeting here will occur on June 28, and be held by Vicegerent R. A. Gaither, assisted by A. F. Black, one of the initiates of Brother Gaither's recent concatenation at Hickory, N. C. This will be the second concatenation held by Vicegerent Gaither this year.

Jackson, Miss.—This meeting will occur on June 25 and will be held by Vicegerent C. A. Schumann. It will be the third concatenation to be held in southern Mississippi this year, the other two having been held by Vicegerent J. F. Wilder at Gulfport and at Hattiesburg, respectively.

Marlinton, W. Va.—This concatenation will be held by Vicegerent A. D. Williams on July 4. It has been on the way some time, and has only awaited the opening of the big new hotel at Marlinton.

Memphis, Tenn.—This meeting will occur on July 2 and is to be held by Vicegerent George O. Friedel. Several mentions of this concatenation have been made in The Bulletin. It would have been held two months ago but for the floods in the Mississippi Valley. The meeting will be a very enjoyable one.

Birmingham, Ala.—This meeting will occur on July 12 and will be held by Vicegerent J. W. Douglas. This will be the third concatenation held by Vicegerent Douglas since his appointment last fall, and the fourth concatenation to occur in this vicegerency this year, Brother H. B. Wood, Vicegerent Douglas' predecessor, having started this splendid little series of meetings with a concatenation at Birmingham, held October 12 last.

Meridian, Miss.—This meeting will be held by Vicegerent J. G. Daly and will probably occur on July 3. The exact date has not yet been named.

Waco, Texas.—This concatenation will be held by Vicegerent S. E. Carothers, assisted by Supreme Arcanoper John C. Ray. This meeting was first fixed for July 4, but has been postponed to occur simultaneously with some big celebration that is to accompany the opening of a large new lumber operation by the Cameron interests at Waco.

DeRidder, La.—This concatenation will occur on night of August 3, and will be held by Vicegerent M. M. Wood, of Lake Charles, assisted by Brother W. H. Jellison, of Merryville. The concatenation grows out of a movement started by Brother Jellison. He has wanted a meeting at Merryville, but later decided that on account of the hotel accommodations it would be best to have the meeting over at DeRidder and take the Merryville crowd of initiates over there. Vicegerent Wood has just been over to Merryville to confer with Brother Jellison, and advises that our members at both Merryville and DeRidder are very enthusiastic over the meeting, and that he expects to put it over on the Klamath Falls concatenation in number of initiates. Fifty were initiated at Klamath Falls and Vicegerent Wood writes that he expects to have at least sixty at DeRidder.

Two or three other concatenations are scheduled to come between now and the Annual Meeting at Asheville, a notably big one at Chattanooga where a Vicegerent in the person of Brother Harry Wise has just been appointed.

Still other meetings are to come later on in the summer, but probably not before the Annual Meeting. To occur simultaneously with the Annual Meeting on July 18 will be a notable meeting at Seattle, Wash. A special mention of this meeting will be found on another page.

Two Notable Concatenations.

Two of the most notable concatenations of the year will be those to occur at Memphis, Tenn., and Seattle, Wash., the meeting at Memphis, on July 2, will occur almost before The Bulletin can reach its readers. Vicegerent Friedel is making unusually comprehensive arrangements for this meeting, having appointed strong committees on general arrangements and initiates. He has also appointed in advance his officers to administer the ceremonies.

The meeting at Seattle will be held by Vicegerent L. R. Fifer, whose splendid concatenation of February 16 will be well remembered as one of the bright lights in the remarkable galaxy of concatenations held out on the Pacific Coast this spring. Vicegerent Fifer wires as follows: "Begin preparation today for concatenation Thursday, July 18, to be held at Seattle during the civil celebration. Boys are all enthusiastic for big time. Can you lend us 100 or more costumes for the occasion? Send large supply application blanks, not preliminary blanks."

Ogden, Utah.—This concatenation will occur July 26 and will be held by Vicegerent W. P. Monson, who expects to initiate at least fifteen men, and hopes to have twenty. Brother Monson, it will be recalled, held a splendid meeting at Salt Lake City on January 19.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—This meeting is to occur on the night of July 5, following close after the big concatenation at Memphis on July 2. The meeting at Chattanooga will be held by Harry Wise, editor of The Tradesman, only recently appointed Vicegerent. Brother Wise has a good class in sight.

THE DEATH EMERGENCY FUND.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

Below is program for the Annual Meeting at Asheville. The Bulletin has no hesitation in saying that it spreads before us as fine a schedule of entertainment as was ever furnished Hoo-Hoo. Of course, some slight changes may be made in details of this program, but they will be of very minor nature. Substantially as it stands it will be carried out:

Program.

- Wednesday, July 17—"Osirian Cloister Day"—Forenoon: Arrival of Osirian officers and members and informal reception.
 Afternoon: Annual Assembly Osirian Cloister.
 Evening: Osirian Cloister initiation.
- Thursday, July 18—First business session of Hoo-Hoo Annual Meeting, called to order at 9:09. Officers' reports and addresses; appointment of committees.
 Afternoon: Automobile and carriage trip to Overlook Park and top of Sunset Mountain, where refreshments will be served.
 Evening: Annual concatenation (to be made the finest ever held in the history of the Order).
 Evening: Reception and card party for ladies at Langren Hotel.
- Friday, July 19—Business session 9:09 to 1:00 p.m. Committee reports, routine and new business. (Trolley ride over city for the ladies at 10 a.m.)
 Afternoon: Visit (carriages and automobiles) to Biltmore Estate, George Vanderbilt's famous farm and summer home, three miles from Asheville.
 Evening: Dance and musical program in ball room and on roof garden of Langren Hotel.
- Saturday, July 20—Business session to 1:00 p.m.
 Afternoon: Election of officers (informal entertainment of men at club after final conclusion of business session).
 Evening: Ball at Battery Park Hotel and get-together meeting of all in attendance.
- Sunday, July 21—Trip to Lake Toxaway (sixty-two miles from Asheville through the "Sapphire Country") for all who care to make this delightful trip to one of the beautiful mountain resorts in America. (It is expected that many will desire to remain a day or two at Lake Toxaway, where there is a splendid hotel, and all the comforts of a great resort, including fishing in Lake Toxaway.)

It will be seen that the ladies are particularly well cared for. They are to have for their especial edification one trolley ride and two dances. Of course, we men expect to take our part in the two dances, but at the time of the trolley ride we will be engaged in a business session. The ladies will, of course, be expected to be along in force on the carriage and automobile trips to Overlook Park and Sunset Mountain and out to Biltmore.

The trip to Biltmore will be a delight to every one. The editor of The Bulletin was at Asheville two months ago and took a three-hours' drive through this magnificent estate. The day he was there visitors were not allowed to approach very near the palatial residence. The committee at Asheville hopes to so arrange matters that we will be permitted to drive right up to the house and perhaps be "received." Whether we are or not, the trip will be a delight to live in one's memory.

Quite as much can be said of the trip up to the top of Sunset Mountain. They are going to give us a little spread up there—something in the way of a picnic dinner. It will be a "picnic" to partake of this hospitality of our North Carolina brethren.

BATTERY PARK HOTEL, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

A particularly delightful feature of this meeting will be that "hang over" trip out to Lake Toxaway. Strictly speaking, this is not a part of the Hoo-Hoo Annual Meeting. We close up all our business at Asheville Saturday afternoon and we have a dance that night. The trip to Lake Toxaway is planned to occur the next morning for so many as are ready to go. The others can come on over Sunday night, or Monday, or any old time. The idea is that so many as feel the need of a few days' rest and a desire to see this wonderfully beautiful spot will simply go over there at their own instance and enjoy themselves as they see fit.

Lake Toxaway is one of the most picturesque and interesting spots in all the Appalachian region. There is a first-class hotel there and the fishing in the lake is splendid. The lake covers about thirty acres and is picturesque and singular from the fact that it is located right up on top of a mountain—no doubt the last remaining "dimple" marking the bottom of what was once the crater of some ancient volcano. It may be that we will organize an impromptu dance over there. Lake Toxaway is sixty-two miles from Asheville. The morning train leaves Asheville at 9:05, reaching the lake at 12:20; train returning to Asheville leaves Lake Toxaway at 3 p. m., arriving at Asheville at 6:15.

A Great Concatenation.

A special feature of the program at Asheville will be the concatenation on Thursday night. It is the purpose to make this concatenation a model one, and the best and most impressive ever held. Vicegerent English warrants a class of at least twenty mountain lumbermen. He expects a half-dozen more from among the visitors.

Great Cloister Meeting.

Another feature of interest will be the meeting of the Osirian Cloister on Wednesday, preceding the opening of the Hoo-Hoo Annual proper. No meeting of the Cloister was held at the last Annual Meeting. There are a number of ex-Supreme Nine members and ex-Vicegerents who are eligible ex-officio to the Cloister. Many of these will be present to be initiated. In addition, it will be remembered, each member of the Cloister has the right to nominate each year one member of Hoo-Hoo for election to the Cloister. The Scrivenoter will have supplied himself with a sufficient number of proxies from members of the Cloister to take care of all those who present themselves at Asheville desiring to enter the Cloister. These proxies will convey to the Scrivenoter the right to nominate.

The Hotels.

In May issue of Bulletin was given a long list of the hotels at Asheville. All these hotels are good and all are conveniently located. No matter what accommodation one requires for his party it can be had at any of these hotels. However, the following hotels have fallen right in with arrangements for the meeting at Asheville and will make unusual efforts for our entertainment. It is hoped, therefore, that reservations will be made at the following of the Asheville hotels:

Battery Park.—This hotel will be headquarters in the sense that the business sessions of the meeting will be held here, an ample hall having been provided. As our meeting will occur at the height of the season, however, it may be that this hotel will be crowded and that not very many of our people can secure accommodations there. As stated, the other three hotels named below are located nearby and are just as good.

Langren.—This is the big, new hotel just completed. As a matter of fact, The Bulletin believes it has not yet had its formal opening, but this will occur two weeks or more before our meeting comes off. This is a magnificent hotel, fireproof, and with all the latest and most up-to-date equipment.

He is very much interested in the Annual Meeting at Asheville and highly elated at this writing over the prospects for one of the most delightful Annual Meetings the Order has ever held:

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 14, 1912—As soon as advised that Asheville would be the place of our next Annual Meeting, even before the date was fixed, I wrote every member of the Supreme Nine, asking them to assist in securing a large representative attendance, particularly urging that they have their Vicegerents of their respective jurisdictions to be present, and to assist them in every way possible to this end, remembering reciprocal assurances given as we were leaving Detroit last year, I am confident that this has, or will be done by every member of the Supreme Nine.

Every Vicegerent has some silent, active, interested Hoo-Hoo, who has been close to him in his work, helped him at every turn, and I believe will take pleasure in accompanying him to the annual, and continue to help by his presence and advice.

Asheville, the beautiful city in the "Land of the Sky," is most admirably located, and of easy access to a great number of our members, particularly those of the East and the South. The many who have visited this city in the past, and enjoyed the well known hospitality of that section, will be glad indeed to come again, and induce others to accompany them; they will unhesitatingly assure those who have never visited North Carolina of a most cordial welcome indeed, by our brethren, and particularly of the citizens of Asheville.

I would particularly urge those of our Order who an-

Swannanoa-Berkley.—One of the famous hotels of Asheville, popular for years with both summer and winter visitors. It will have accommodation for 100 or more of our people, and is conveniently and beautifully situated.

Margo Terrace.—This hotel is within the same grounds as the Battery Park and located only a few hundred feet away. This also is a splendid hostelry.

Railroad Rates.

As stated in the May issue of The Bulletin, there is in effect to Asheville from practically every railroad station in the United States the regular summer tourist rate of two cents per mile. This rate is coupled with no troublesome restrictions in the way of ticket validation, etc. The ticket is simply a straight round-trip ticket at the reduced rate, and all that is necessary to do is to sign the return portion of the ticket in the presence of the agent at Asheville.

More Elsewhere in This Issue.

In Notes and Comments on other pages of this Bulletin will be found much of interest about Asheville, about North Carolina and about the Hoo-Hoo Annual Meeting. It should be carefully read by every person who contemplates attending.

Snark Boggess on the Annual Meeting.

The following inspiring letter is from Snark Boggess.

nually take vacations to arrange to be with us on the 18th of July, as this annual has been fixed for that time for their particular benefit, believing that it would be easier for those to attend than on Hoo-Hoo day, which occurs at the commencement of the fall business and after summer vacation time.

That there will be a large attendance I already feel assured, on account of the number of successful concatenations that have been held this year, with such a good average of initiates and the enthusiasm that has been shown by the old members who have attended.

Our Order has taken its place among fraternal orders. It is a permanent organization. It grew long ago far beyond most sanguine expectations. It has done much for its members. It is capable of doing much more. To accomplish this, and to bring about the desired results more speedily, will, I believe, bring more members to our next annual, than for years, and with the idea of working hard and harmoniously to this end. Pleasant memories and the satisfaction of having aided in the plans for the future which will make Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo larger and stronger, will accompany them home.

It is hardly proper to refer to the many suggestions for the good of the Order just now. They indicate the great interest our members have, and the hope for a brighter future after the hard work that is expected at the Asheville annual. The members were never in a better frame of mind to do everything in their power for Hoo-Hoo than now.

I fully expect to meet a representative from every section of Hoo-Hoo land in Asheville on the 18th of July.

Fraternally yours,

E STRINGER BOGGESS,
Snark of the Universe.

NOTES & COMMENTS

In the matter of the annual meeting this year, Hoo-Hoo departs from its usual custom in two particulars—the date and the nature of the place. For years the Great Black Cat has shown a preference for water, and the meetings have been held on or near some great waterway—at St. Louis, Atlantic City, Portland, Chicago, San Francisco, the "City of Cleveland." So far the annual has never been held on top of a mountain range. Hot Springs, to be sure, is considered to be in the Ozarks, but assuredly the town is not built on the heights. Asheville is high in the world, in the midst of the most beautiful mountain country on this continent.

It is well to ascend sometimes to the high places of the earth. The mountain lends itself alike to enjoyment and to deliberation. In olden times the temple of worship was always set upon the loftiest point; the ancient leaders of men withdrew into the mountains when they wished to meditate.

Literature and legend abound with references to mountains. A very famous mountain was the one that failed to obey Mahomet when he told it to come to him; another was the mountain that travelled and brought forth a mouse. Although both these are mythical, they seem more real than Pike's Peak or Mount McKinley. In the glow of that vivid truth, which is called fable, the mountain that surprised Mahomet by not following, and the mountain that was so pathetically disappointed in the insignificant character of its offspring—these tower in solemn majesty forever. No earthquake disrupts them, no process of erosion wears them away! They are as old as human weakness and self-conceit, and they stand as an eternal warning. Mountains indeed throughout the ages have been the teachers of men. Not all the lessons have been heeded, but this was not the mountains' fault.

From the high vantage-point of Asheville, Hoo-Hoo will look back upon a year which in some respects has been the most inspiring period of its existence. The superb vitality of the Great Black Cat has justified his claim to the possession of nine lives. He stands, as it were, with feet firmly planted upon the mountain that moves not. This does not imply that he is a mountain cat or catamount; he is the same, yesterday, today and forever, and from the high place he has attained he views with satisfaction the backward trail and the road that lies ahead—casting an exultant glance perhaps at that other mountain famed in legend!

The meeting at Asheville will be the twenty-first annual, the celebration of Hoo-Hoo's coming of age.

Though small in the beginning, the Order was a very healthy infant, and it soon gave evidence of much energy and strength. Gaining force with each year's growth, the organization, like everything else that is truly alive, soon began to exert a strong influence in several directions, and soon it came into a field of usefulness that was wholly unforeseen by those present at its christening. Who can look into the future two score years! The real object of Hoo-Hoo, as is well known, is to bring together, in fraternal and social relation, lumbermen and those with whom lumbermen have dealings in a business way, thus promoting acquaintance and furthering the interests of all concerned. But development always involves diversity, variety; it is so in nature—life evolves from a single cell, proceeding from that simple form to a highly complex group of cells which compose the individual. And now, having attained its majority, the Order finds itself to be not a simple but a complex proposition, the ramifications of which embrace several lines of industry that at first glance do not seem so closely related as they really are.

For instance, there is the publishing business. The Bulletin is quite an enterprise in itself; it has a big circulation, a great many readers. Circulation does not always imply readers—some publishers at times resort to the method of sending marked copy of their paper under two-cent cover in order to insure perusal. The members of Hoo-Hoo have always manifested a genuine interest in the official organ, and the paper has served in some measure as a lodge room, a monthly meeting place, as well as a chronicle of the formal doings of the Order. Printers, pressmen, binders, operators of mailing machines and others are necessary to the getting out of a paper. It was not surmised, in the beginning, that Hoo-Hoo would impress into its service all these people, to say nothing of postal clerks, carriers, etc.

Then there is the jewelry business. In the early days of Hoo-Hoo a stick pin, bearing the official emblem, was devised for the ladies—friends and relatives of members. The pin proved to be popular, but it became evident, from correspondence received at the Scrivenoter's office, that some ladies prefer a brooch to a stick pin. Some designs were roughly sketched in the office and submitted to a manufacturing jeweler, with the result that a line of brooches, of different designs, was soon ready to be offered. A series of advertisements then was published in the Bulletin, written in more or less jovial strain, and the answer was a flood of orders for brooches—a retail jewelry business was established almost before any one realized what was happening. Afterward a Hoo-Hoo souvenir spoon was added to the "stock" of brooches and watch charms; and from time to time special orders were executed for Hoo-Hoo rings, belt buckles, etc.

This jewelry business then led to another development undreamed of by the designer of the brooches. Truly a wide door sometimes turns on a small hinge! One day there appeared, among the jewelry orders, a letter from a member urging haste in getting a brooch to him; he said that he and his sweetheart had quarreled, but that he was trying to make up and thought he stood some show of success in that line. The young lady was going to give a "tug party," and had expressed a wish for a "black cat" brooch to wear on that occasion; if she should be disappointed in this he thought he could see his finish. Hence, the hurry. The rule requiring that all jewelry shall be sent by registered mail was temporarily suspended, as registered mail travels a bit slowly. The party took place all right and so did the reconciliation—invitation to the wedding was received a few months later.

Quite a number of similar incidents occurred from time to time. And so Hoo-Hoo makes bold to claim that during its long and honorable career it has been not only a factor in the business world, but has also met with distinguished success as Cupid's deputy. No doubt there are people in the world today who would not be living but for some apparently trivial incident that turned the tide of fate! In one of his quaint and delightful poems, Oliver Wendell Holmes pictures himself as standing in front of his great-grandmother's portrait, painted in her youth, and wondering where he would have been if she had said "no" to his great-grandfather and "yes" to somebody else:

"Should I be I, or would it be One-tenth another, to nine-tenths me?"

One of the fundamental principles of Hoo-Hoo is cheerfulness, unflinching optimism. At the start this was embodied in the motto, "Health, Happiness and Long Life." This motto holds a deeper meaning than appears on the surface. "Solemnity flows out of men naturally," declares a philosopher, "but laughter is a leap."

The Infinite gives no man happiness, but only the raw material out of which happiness can be made. Happiness cannot be found by searching; it must be manufactured. Manufacture includes cooperation—a cheerful helpfulness. Optimism is as oil on the machinery in the factory, whereas pessimism is like sand in the bearings. Hoo-Hoo will have fulfilled a high purpose if it encourages the cultivation of cheerfulness and helpfulness, for such qualities promote the material as well as the spiritual welfare of individuals. Pessimism has no "going strength."

And now Hoo-Hoo has lived through all the minor ills of infancy and childhood; it has not perished of inanition nor been stricken with blight. It is here; and it is twenty-one years old.

Every member is invited and urged to be present at the Asheville meeting. It will be a great occasion. It will be worth while to attend. The meeting is to be held at a time when the average man is ready to take his vacation, and at a place where one cannot but be invigorated and refreshed.

"There is a waking on the mighty hills,
A kindling with the spirit of the morn!"

Regardless of the date of the annual meeting, the Hoo-Hoo year begins and ends September 9. Any figures, therefore, that could be given now regarding the work since September 9 last would fall short of covering the past Hoo-Hoo year. At this writing the Hoo-Hoo year has nearly three months to run and concatenations in various parts of the country are in prospect. Some of these concatenations will occur before the annual meeting.

In last issue of The Bulletin more than five pages were filled with reports of concatenations held, and even at that, the comments on concatenations had to be made very brief in the Order that I must carry my book of temporary receipts (for dues) to catch them while the mood is strong, and see to reinstating good men."

At a concatenation in Virginia ten men were reinstated; and in numerous cases men sought reinstatement in order to attend concatenations.

The Death Emergency Fund is in good shape. In order to keep it so, a great deal of work is necessary to be done in the Scrivenoter's office. January issue of The Bulletin contained a somewhat lengthy article on the subject of the maintenance of the fund, in the course of which was the following paragraph:

"The whole proposition of participation in this death fund is purely voluntary. There can be no dunning for renewal of subscriptions. However, from now on, realizing that in nearly every case failure to respond to the succeeding call is through pure negligence or oversight, a careful checking will be made of the responses to each call, checking with the responses to the previous call, and to every man who has not responded after a reasonable time to the outstanding call, a personal letter will be sent. This will involve considerable work and expense, but in the judgment of The Bulletin it is well worth doing. It will put the proposition squarely up to the man. It will at least make it a little less trying on the feelings to turn down these claims that always urge that the man was a good Hoo-Hoo and that death came on him unawares when he intended all the time to keep up his subscription."

because so much space was necessarily given up to announcements and data concerning the annual meeting. So far during this Hoo-Hoo year upwards of sixty concatenations have been held and nearly a thousand new members added.

Some of the concatenations have been extraordinarily good ones—constituting, indeed, real events in the history of the Order. The Puget Sound region has distinguished itself by the number and high character of initiates. As for the Pacific Coast country, it is safe to say that the Order is in better condition there than ever before. On the Atlantic seaboard also Hoo-Hoo has prospered. In the two Virginias and in North Carolina very fine meetings have been held. In the Southern States a very gratifying degree of enthusiasm has been manifested; a number of excellent concatenations have occurred, some of them having made such a hit that an encore was received—at several points a second concatenation was arranged as soon as the first was completed. In the Rocky Mountain States and in the Middle West the membership has increased, and this is also true of New York state and the surrounding territory. In Canada the western portion has shown more activity than the eastern districts. In British Columbia good concatenations have been held. In Ontario the work was unavoidably delayed in getting started, the Vicegerent having been appointed late in the year.

During the year a number of members who had dropped out have returned to the fold. Last February one of the western Vicegerents wrote: "I find such awakened spirit

For months every issue of The Bulletin has contained a lot about the Death Emergency Fund; columns—whole pages, in fact, have been written about it. There is no doubt that this plan of insurance has aroused a great deal of interest; the fund unquestionably has accomplished a great deal of good. It has so far been a very successful feature of an Order which is different from all others in the world.

The foregoing is but an outline of the work of the Hoo-Hoo year now drawing to a close. It shows the Order to have had a steady and solid growth throughout the country, and this in the face of the fact that the past winter was the coldest ever experienced in America; that disastrous floods came in the springtime and that political agitation incident to a presidential-election year reached a point never known since time began. All these things were calculated to disorganize business conditions. There have been great strikes in the United States and elsewhere, revolution in some countries, anarchy in others. But through it all, business has survived and so has Hoo-Hoo.

And now Hoo-Hoo asks, as a testimonial of appreciation for its twenty-one years of usefulness, a full attendance at the Asheville annual. If you have helped to bear the heat and burden of the day, come and rest where the cooling breezes will refresh you; if your faith has wavered and grown weak, let the heights inspire to renewed confidence and a stronger will. If you are a new member, come and enjoy your first annual. If you have been present on many such occasions, you will have the opportunity to renew old acquaintance and to make new friends.

Good Meeting in Oregon.

The two communications below fully chronicle the success of the concatenation held at Marshfield, Ore., on May 24, by our Vicegerent, Col. R. H. Rosa, of Bandon, Ore. Vicegerent Rosa writes as follows:

Mr. A. H. Potter, of the Atkins Saw Co., and who has been honored by being one of the Supreme Nine, was with us, and to whom is due much for the successful concatenation.

Mr. A. E. Guyton, who was one of the kittens and who is special correspondent of several lumber publications, has promised to write you a full account of the proceedings.

The excellent account of the meeting written by Brother Jack Guyton, one of the initiates, is appended:

The concatenation of Hoo-Hoo called by Col. R. H. Rosa, the Vicegerent Snark, was held at Marshfield, Ore., Friday, May 24. The meeting was held in the Masonic Hall. Sixteen new members were initiated, as shown below.

The "junior degree" in its fullest exemplification was conferred upon the following six: Henry Huggins, E. K. Jones, M. C. Maloney, Ross Smith, J. W. Gardiner, and W. J. Conrad.

Those who assisted in conferring the junior work were L. W. B. Holmberg, B. B. Ostlind, F. W. Woods, L. J. Simpson, Fred Hollister, P. N. Reiberg, F. E. Glazier, and C. H. Brouillard.

At 11 o'clock the new and old members present, numbering in all about forty, went to the Chandler Hotel, where a banquet was served. Col. R. H. Rosa acted as toastmaster, and responses were made by A. H. Potter, A. H. Powers, M. C. Maloney, Henry Huggins, E. K. Jones and Lee Webster. In responding, Mr. Webster read an original poem written by himself for the occasion. An expression of appreciation to Colonel Rosa for his good management of the concatenation was expressed before the gathering disbanded.

Genuine Revival at Norfolk.

In several respects the concatenation held at Norfolk, on May 28, by Vicegerent W. J. Woodward was the most notable of recent years. It marked a genuine revival of Hoo-Hoo interest at a place where no concatenation has been held for ten years, at which there were very few of the Nottingham & Wrenn Co., Norfolk, Va., to whose good work we are indebted for the great Hoo-Hoo revival at Norfolk.

members and on exceptional amount of material from which to draw. Nevertheless, the concatenation was, as Snark Boggess says, "a great big success." Ten old members were reinstated and fourteen new members of the highest class and standing were initiated. The Bulletin feels that the whole Order is indebted to Vicegerent Woodward and Brothers Dickson, Martin, Tolleth and all the others who assisted, which practically includes all the members in good standing in Norfolk. In writing of the meeting, Snark Boggess says:

The meeting held last night was a great big success. Full report of it will give you pleasure I know. You can easily imagine the satisfaction it gave me to be present, and you will readily see the good results that are bound to follow. . . . The class initiated was most representative in every respect, many of them you will know on account of their prominence in long established business. You will note that there are in the handbook but nine or ten members in good standing here, but nevertheless we had more than twice this number of old Hoo-Hoo present. I say old Hoo-Hoo advisedly, as their numbers will bear me out. This meeting is a revival of the old-time spirit in old-time Hoo-Hoo.

You cannot give too much credit to Brother Woodward or say too much about the assistance given him by Brother Harvey M. Dickson, President of the National Exporters' Association, and president of almost every other association about Norfolk; and Brother Watt Martin, and in fact every man whose name appears in the list of officers. They all turned in from the very beginning and worked hand in hand with Vicegerent Woodward.

You will be supplied with the nine elected from the floor to work for the interest of the Order as a local organization; most likely another concatenation will be held in the near future.

I think you will be sent some sort of a picture of Brothers George "Timber" Lanz and Wm. Van Ostrom, the "long" and "short" of the class (see personal description on application blanks) or "Mutt" and "Jeff," as Toastmaster Dickerson referred to them at the session-on-the-roof.

At the session-on-the-roof short but excellent speeches on the general good of Hoo-Hoo were made by Vicegerent Woodward, Brother W. H. Wales, Vicegerent S. Robb Eccles, of Baltimore, and one or two others.

While Snark Boggess is too modest to mention the fact, The Bulletin is informed that he also made a speech; was, in fact, the first speaker at the session-on-the-roof, and that he made a mighty good talk.

The following full account of the meeting is furnished by one of those "old members" as referred to by Snark Boggess:

The 27th of May was a red-letter day in the history of Virginia Hoo-Hoo; it marked a new epoch and inaugurated a new era. Hoo-Hoo has been in a state of inactivity in the Tidewater section of the State for some time, although quite a number of the brothers have maintained their membership without a break since their initiation. These brothers recognized the state of affairs, and while regretting it were for a long time unable to do anything to bring the Order to life again. In the early part of the year, however, a few of the faithful got together and made a concerted effort with triumphant success culminating in a concatenation at the Lynnhaven Hotel in Norfolk, on Monday, the 27th day of May aforesaid. It was a howling success both as to the enjoyment of those present and for the large class of kittens who took the degree. Several lapsed members came back in the fold and fourteen kittens were initiated. It speaks well for Vicegerent Woodward and Brothers

FRANK E. ROGERS,

One of the prominent lumbermen of Norfolk, who assisted in Hoo-Hoo revival there.

Harvey Dickson and Frank Rogers, who were in the head and front of the movement that the Norfolk Hoo-Hoo got so well together and pulled off a concatenation, the first since March, 1902, and started off under such favorable auspices. The fourteen kittens by no means exhaust the available material in Tidewater, and we are promised a concatenation to take in the rest or as much of it as can get to the scene of activities, sometime in the next sixty days so that Norfolk can be well represented at Asheville at the Annual.

One very commendable action at the Norfolk meeting was the formation of a permanent organization of Hoo-Hoo, composed of the nine officers, headed by Vicegerent Woodward, and a degree team headed by Junior Hoo-Hoo Walker Truxtun. By this means it will be possible to carry on concatenations smoothly, and the degree work will not be slighted as is apt to occur when the men on the floor are unfamiliar with the work. It is pleasing to know that four of the officers are, or were, kittens, and the infusion of new blood will go far to making the organization worth while and the degree team is composed of old cats who have attended concatenations whenever they had a chance and know the work.

Speaking of the concatenation itself, it was honored by the presence of the Supreme Snark E. Stringer Boggess and Vicegerent S. Robt. Eccles, from Baltimore, Md., and a ref-

"Long" and "Short" of the Hoo-Hoo class initiated at Norfolk, or the "Mutt" and "Jeff" of toastmaster Dickson's witty speech—Brother George Lanz, height 7 ft. in his stocking feet; W. M. Van Ostrom, of Berlin Machine Works, height 5 ft. and 4 inches without the heavy grip.

ference to the Hoo-Hoo names of those present will divulge the fact that some have been in the Order for a long time. The Junior Hoo-Hoo was Brother Walker Truxtun, who was assisted by Brothers Tolleth and Watts Martin, and the work was carried on in perfect Order and thoroughly enjoyed by the cats and kittens. There was a total absence of the rowdyism and horseplay that has marred so many meetings and goes to show that a body of men can get together and enjoy themselves in a perfectly legitimate and gentlemanly way. One feature of the work was the attachment of a card to each candidate which had a large black cat in a circle with the words, "I'm an innocent kitten." One of the kittens took umbrage at the assertion and declared himself a kitten, pure and simple, and in the meeting brought down the house by his method of taking the political oath, himself a politician of no mean degree but in no way in sympathy with the party with which he finally allied himself, with a mental reservation of course.

Norfolk also contrived, very enterprisingly, to acquire two characters, more or less in the public eye, "Mut" and

"Jeff," who in the flesh are our new brothers, George (Timber) Lanz, seven feet tall, and W. M. Van Ostrom, of the Berlin Machine Works, who is some five feet four inches short. These two are close friends and they hung together in their poor blinded way, and their kittenish ways was the hit of the evening. In the permanent organization, Brother Van Ostrom is Arcanoper and Brother Lanz is Gurdon. Can you beat that?

At the on-the-roof, in the main dining-room of the Lynnhaven, they entertained the balance of the crowd with several German ballads, and while the words of the songs were a mystery to most of the auditors, the execution was applauded to the echo. Altogether, our Norfolk brothers have done themselves proud and got in this time a very representative body of men and the very class of men that Hoo-Hoo is anxious to number in its membership. The menu was very attractive and was as follows:

Radishes.	Queen Olives.
Clam Broth.
Broiled Salmon Trout, Lemon Butter.
Long Branch Potatoes.
Creamed Chicken on Toast.	Stuffed Bull Peppers.
Breaded Veal Cutlets, Tomato Sauce.
Asparagus Tips.
Combination Salad.
Chocolate Ice Cream.	Assorted Cakes.
Rochefort Cheese and Crackers.
Coffee.

Revival Also at Lake Charles.

Lake Charles, La., is another place where in the old days we had a large and very enthusiastic membership, but where in recent years, owing to one circumstance and another, no concatenation has been held. It remained for Brother M. M. Wood, of the Material Department of the M., K. & T. R. R., and Brother A. R. Mitchell, Life Member No. 32, to voluntarily take hold of the situation and work up a splendid concatenation.

Just prior to the concatenation Brother Wood was appointed Vicegerent for the Southwestern District of Louisiana, and has further signalized his appreciation of the honor by starting active operations for a very large concatenation over at DeRidder, La., at which meeting he expects to initiate a large number of yellow pine men.

Brothers Wood and Mitchell fully expected to initiate at least thirty men at the Lake Charles meeting, but the very night of the meeting railroad connection was practically suspended on account of the flood conditions. This was on the Southern Pacific. This in itself would not have been so bad, as the majority of the candidates were expected from the Bon Ami, DeRidder and Longville neighborhoods. As a matter of fact, quite fifty initiates had been duly signed up from this territory, but practically all of them were unable to make the trip to Lake Charles on account of the excitement over the doings of the Brotherhood of Timber Workers. The men were required to stay at the saw mill plants to guard against possible lawlessness, one or two small saw mills in that neighborhood having recently been burned in a way suggesting incendiarism.

Nevertheless, ten men were initiated in the presence of fifty or more members of the Order. The concatenation was preceded by a unique parade of which one of the local papers speaks as follows:

Headed by the First Regiment Band, L. S. N. G., Prof. Hugo H. See, chief musician, the parade was formed on Pujo Street, in front of the Majestic, and moved down Pujo to Ryan, up Ryan to Lawrence, back to Pujo and thence to the hotel. The streets were lined with people who saw the parade, with the 100 or more in line, including the kittens, and it created a great deal of amusement to the onlookers.

Following the parade, the initiatory ceremonies were carried out, and proved very interesting, moving along nicely and without a hitch.

The session-on-the-roof was notably enjoyable, the only disappointment being that covers had been laid for a much larger number than showed up.

On the whole, however, Brothers Wood and Mitchell have nothing to repent of. The concatenation was both successful and enjoyable, and, as stated, has had the good effect of calling forth another big meeting soon to occur

M. M. Wood, of the Material Department, M. K. & T. R. R., Vicegerent at Lake Charles, La., who has just held a big concatenation at Lake Charles and will hold another at DeRidder, La., August 3.

No. 2 for Pensacola.

The splendid concatenation held by Vicegerent F. Rust Smith, on March 21, will be recalled by readers of The Bulletin. Like the meetings above referred to, this meeting at Pensacola marked the end of a long era of inactivity in western Florida, though good meetings have been held right along at Jacksonville and in the southern part of the state. Just as in the case of other good meetings held this year, the meeting at Pensacola on March 21 had the effect of so awakening interest as to create a demand for another meeting. This second meeting was held by Vicegerent Smith on May 25. It was quite as successful and notable as was the first meeting, eleven first-class men, practically all lumbermen, being initiated. Vicegerent Smith was assisted by ex-Vicegerent Gus Eitzen, who established Hoo-Hoo at Pensacola ten or twelve years ago, and who has never ceased to be a loyal and efficient worker. The Supreme Scrivenoter was present at this concatenation.

The session-on-the-roof occurred in the main dining-room of the San Carlos Hotel, the splendid new hostelry that is such a conspicuous feature of the new Pensacola. The menu was unusually elaborate. Vicegerent Smith, who is a very prominent and successful lumberman, simply took it on himself to regard all present as his personal guests and to treat them accordingly. He certainly gave them a banquet to be remembered.

Lack Data for Full Report.

The Bulletin regrets not to be able to give in this issue full account of the splendid concatenation held at Vancouver, B. C., on April 26 by Vicegerent P. W. Fau-Vel. Owing to some misadventure the formal application blanks have not yet reached the Scrivenoter's office. However, enough data is to hand to show that nineteen men were initiated in the presence of nearly 100 members of the Order; that the meeting was highly successful and enjoyable, and that the session-on-the-roof which followed was exceptionally fine. The Bulletin hopes to make fuller report of this meeting later.

Great Meeting at Klamath Falls.

Now comes the banner meeting of this Hoo-Hoo year, and in many respects the most remarkable ever held at any time. This was a meeting at Klamath Falls, that wonderful saw mill town up in the mountains of southern Oregon. Frequent mention of the approach of this meeting has appeared in The Bulletin. Arrangements for it were carried out under the supervision of Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower and Vicegerent F. S. Palmer, of San Francisco. It has been explained that the railroads and the mountain ranges run in such a way out in southern Oregon as to make Klamath Falls geographically more tributary to San Francisco than to any point in Oregon at which we have a Vicegerent. Nevertheless, it will be seen that Vicegerent David Davis, of Portland, was present and filled one of the official stations. The meeting was planned as one of the features of the great Elks Rodea, a sort of glorified horse show which occurred at Klamath Falls on May 31, June 1 and 2. The concatenation came on the evening of the first day, May 31. The whole story of the meeting is best told in Brother Trower's letter:

Reporting the Klamath Falls concatenation is no easy task, for so many pleasant features of that most successful meeting spring to mind that it is hard to know where to begin. Our special Pullman left San Francisco on Thursday night, May 30, with the following jolly party: Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hiscox, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Trower, W. W. Everett, J. W. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Neighbor, E. C. Nutter, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Horsford, Thomas P. Hogan, F. W. Burgers, also Candidate D. O. Williams, of Klamath Falls, and Candidate A. Cant, of Buffalo, N. Y., with Mrs. Cant. This party of sixteen showed a live interest in Hoo-Hoo when we consider they were embarking on a run of 436 miles to attend a concatenation. The ride through the beautiful canyon of the Sacramento River next morning was greatly enjoyed and of course everyone on the train alighted at Shasta Springs for a drink of its famous mineral water.

The sort of sport Teddy says he likes.

Arriving at Weed about noon our car was coupled to the train on the branch road for the 86-mile run to its terminal at Klamath Falls, Ore., just over the California line. At Weed we met a most dejected-looking black cat, an imitation of one of Hearst's Glooms. This was our good old Hoo-Hoo, Matt V. Geagan, who had been counting on making this trip for months, but who found at the last moment that most important business would prevent his attendance, as well as that of three kittens he had rounded up. However, he put three other good candidates aboard our car with instructions to treat them as tenderly or gingerly (the more ginger the better) as he would have done himself. By the way, Brother Geagan wants us to hold a concatenation at Weed in a couple of months, promising from nine to twelve kittens from that vicinity, and he is a Hoo-Hoo who always makes good. This will be a good introductory meeting for Vicegerent E. T. Robie, of the new Sacramento Valley District, and will give some of the new members from Klamath Falls and vicinity a chance to see from the inside what the dry-kiln looks like when tried on the other fellow.

Leaving Weed our route was around the base of Mt. Shasta, rearing its great snow-crowned head over 14,400 feet above sea-level and standing out in majestic loneliness above the surrounding plain. At Dorris, Brother John F. Wise joined us with more candidates. We arrived at Klamath Falls about 5 p. m., and were met at the depot by Brothers W. I. Clarke and George Clark, who decorated us with badges and took us to the White Pelican Hotel. The lobby soon was as animated as a political convention, and when we adjourned to Odd Fellows Hall for the concatenation we were astounded to find just fifty kittens lined up for initiation. There were twenty-one members present and we had our hands full; in fact, I thought at one time the big crowd of candidates would swamp us. The Klamath Falls committee had asked me for this year's record concatenation, and when I told them Seattle held it with her great meeting and forty kittens, they said they would take the banner away from Lew Fifer, and they did.

In fact, they had several more applications signed up by first-class men who were unable to attend at the last minute.

Much to our regret Vicegerent Palmer was unable to come up from San Francisco on account of the illness of his wife, and we also missed Brother Peter B. Kyne, who has been filling the Junior station this year, and who was detained at the eleventh hour. However, that "old reliable" Brother R. A. Hiscox took the Snark's office and it looked like old times in California to see Wallace W. Everett serving again as Junior. We were mighty glad to have Vicegerent Davis, of Portland, on hand and filling the station of the Senior Hoo-Hoo. So with this volunteer crew of officers, ably assisted by the other members, we gave the kittens a lively time, although a lot of the work had to be cut out. The dry-kiln was the best I have ever seen, and by the time the fifty men had gone through it they didn't know whether they had shot the chutes, rolled from port to starboard on a ship in a stormy sea, or been dropped into the town of "Bedlam-let-loose." About midnight we adjourned to the banquet room, where the on-the-roof session was held and light refreshments served.

The following telegram from George M. Cornwall, of Portland, editor of the Timberman, was read, being addressed to Snark Palmer: "My heartiest congratulations and good wishes for a rousing and successful concatenation are herewith extended. May the echoes of Health, Happiness and Long Life reverberate in Klamath Falls tonight. I am with you in spirit."

Next morning at 8 o'clock the visitors were taken in automobiles two miles to the shore of Upper Klamath Lake, where we boarded the steamer Klamath for a trip on the lake as guests of the Pelican Bay Lumber Company, of which Brothers H. D. Mortenson and George D. Hauptman are president and secretary, respectively, both being former San Franciscans. The weather was ideal and the trip one to be long treasured as a delightful memory. This beautiful lake, about forty miles long and twenty miles wide, lies at an elevation of over 4,000 feet above the sea and is surrounded by great forests topped by snow-clad peaks, some being 10,000 feet high. We were told by several in our party who had been to Switzerland that there was no finer scenery in the old world than that in this Klamath country. Our first stop was at Eagle Ridge Tavern, situated on a point of land jutting far out into the lake, and from the spacious veranda was obtained a fine view of the whole matchless panorama. The disciples of is now humming with the saw mill industry, which draws on the 26,000,000,000 feet of timber tributary. And since Uncle Sam spent nearly $5,000,000 on the irrigation project, with its canal twenty-five miles or more long, farming is one of the wealth-creating resources springing from this fruitful soil.

Klamath Falls is to a large extent a San Francisco town in feeling and by connecting ties. Most of its lumbermen are former Californians, and its biggest development projects are promoted by San Franciscans. It is nearer to San Francisco by about eighty-five miles than to Portland, and the Oregonians have to travel around the intervening mountain range about 100 miles into California and out again in order to reach Klamath. These are the reasons this meeting was first promoted and finally pulled off by California Hoo-Hoo. When the Southern Pacific connects its easy grade extension from Klamath Falls north to the main line this region will be on the main artery of travel north and south and its development will be phenomenal. You see, that I, like all the other visitors, came away full of the Klamath Falls "boom spirit." An example of how they do things up there is the new class A four-story White Pelican Hotel, costing $250,000, which is not only a gem for this little city of 6,000 people, but would do credit to any city in the land. Its furniture is all of Circasian walnut of special design, and the main floor woodwork is Eucalyptus. In the basement is a magnificent Hamman bath equipment. It is interesting to know that this hotel has no coal bills for heating, the radiators being supplied from a nearby hot spring which arises from the ground at a temperature of 190 degrees.

I came near forgetting to mention an extra item of entertainment furnished us, this being a boxing contest at a local club after the banquet. This was enjoyed by the sports, or rather by those who could get away. The toastmaster announced this little event as a suffragette meeting, but it was noted that the suffragettes (and their husbands) did not go.

On the following afternoon the Hoo-Hoo were guests at the final events of the three-day Elks Rodeo or Wild West exhibition. Some exciting races and broncho-busting were seen, and all these contests were especially enjoyed by the people of this section, which until so recently was itself the frontier.

In closing this account of this most successful meeting of Hoo-Hoo, I want to express the warm appreciation and thanks of all visitors to Brothers W. I. Clarke, Herbert J. Savidge and H. D. Mortenson, who, as the Klamath Falls Committee of Arrangements put up an entertainment that would have done credit to an Annual Meeting of the Order. It is difficult to single out any one member for special praise, but Brother Savidge surely did his full share by attending to many of the small details faithfully, details which are always so necessary to a complete success. Brother Clarke is the first man who proposed this meeting to me, and he takes a merited pride in its great success. These three men made up a team that could not be beaten anywhere, and they brought into the Order a high-class lot of men. And Brother Mortenson was untiring in his efforts to aid the cause. By his personal attention to his guests on the steamer provided by his company for the lake excursion, he gave us all a day of unalloyed pleasure.

And they are already planning for another concatenation in August of 1913, this being the season of the year when the snow is off the ground and the road to wonderful Crater Lake is open to autos. This trip will attract many members to the next meeting.

On Sunday night and Monday nearly all the Californians turned their faces homeward reluctantly, but glad they had been fortunate enough to share the enjoyment of this red-letter Klamath Falls meeting.

The parade which opened the great Elk's Rodeo at Klamath Falls, of which a Hoo-Hoo concatenation was a leading feature.

Izaak Walton were thrilled by a sight of a ten-pound trout which had just been caught, and by a photograph of one weighing twenty-one pounds caught last year.

We were interested in watching the great white pelicans flying over the lake, this bird with its large pouch bill and black-tipped wings being a favored creature in this vicinity, President Roosevelt having created a reserve for the wild game around the shores of the lower lake, where are now great breeding grounds for these fowls may be seen.

A stop was made at Pelican Lodge, the former summer home of the late E. H. Harriman, the railroad magnate. I need hardly describe this wonderfully beautiful spot, for with all the country to choose from, this was the one place Mr. Harriman selected. It is a sad commentary on the slavery to his business of the average American financier when we learn that Mr. Harriman promptly had telegraph and telephone wires run to the lodge, and with its its attractions to lure him he was never able to spare more than three days at a time at this enchanting haven.

The party enjoyed a dainty al fresco luncheon on the steamer, after which a visit was made to the woods camp and logging operations of the Pelican Bay Lumber Company, the excursionists riding on improvised benches placed on flat cars. In Pelican Creek we noted one of the numerous hot springs in this section, this one rising like a geyser two or three feet above the surface of the creek.

After other interesting stops, including one at the new plant of the Algoma Lumber Company, we arrived back at Klamath Falls about 8 p. m. and hurriedly prepared for the splendid banquet which was served in the large dining-room of the White Pelican Hotel. About sixty were present. Judge Baldwin was toastmaster, and between musical numbers by a good orchestra, speeches were listened to from Brothers Gilman, Trower, Everett, Davis, Clarke, Cant, W. P. Johnson and H. D. Mortenson. Good feeling reigned and many tributes were paid to the local committee for its splendid handling of the whole affair, as well as to the wonderful Klamath country.

This section has taken on new life since the railroad came through; formerly devoted largely to cattle-raising, it

Another at Little Rock.

Our members at Little Rock keep on holding good concatenations. The latest is that held June 11, as a conspicuous feature of the annual meeting of the Arkansas Retail Lumber Dealers' Association. Ten men were initiated, all of high standing and coming from pretty much all over the state. The session-on-the-roof was delightful, and more especially so on account of the presence of many ladies. The Bulletin is not sure but that this idea of having the ladies present at Hoo-Hoo banquets originated at Little Rock. At any rate, the practice has long been followed there, especially in connection with the concatenation held in connection with this association, practically all the members of which are active and loyal Hoo-Hoo.

At the concatenation of June 11 a special ladies' reception committee was appointed, consisting of the following nine Little Rock matrons: Mrs. W. P. Grace, Chairman; Mrs. J. C. McGrath, Mrs. H. F. Rieff, Mrs. Gus K. Jones, Mrs. U. Nolin, Mrs. E. L. Rodgers, Mrs. A. C. Webb, Mrs. A. B. Cox and Mrs. T. J. Gay.

Eighty-five members and initiates were present at the banquet. Brother Carl J. Baer was toastmaster and proved an excellent man on that job. There were several responses from different members, after which the whole crowd adjourned to the dance hall, where that delightful amusement was indulged in until a late hour. The meeting from beginning to end was most highly enjoyable.

"Humdinger" at Portland.

Very little data has reached The Bulletin beyond the formal report of the concatenation held at Portland, Ore., on June 12 by Vicegerent David Davis. The approach of this meeting has been several times mentioned in The Bulletin. It occurred as one of the features of the annual Rose Festival at Portland. In writing of this meeting, Vicegerent Davis says:

We had a humdinger of a concatenation here last night at Multonamah Hotel. We reversed the order of things, and had the banquet at 6:30. About 140 members were present, including the eleven initiates. The ritualistic work was put and completed before we began the junior work, which consisted of a kangaroo court . . . and which was well received by the brethren and the initiates.

At this concatenation ex-Snark R. D. Inman acted as Snark and Vicegerent Davis had to assist him as officers the following well-known members: George M. Cornwall, editor of the Timberman, with which publication Vicegerent Davis is also connected; ex-Junior Hoo-Hoo G. A. Griswold, and ex-Vicegerents Jay S. Hamilton and M. D. Jameson.

The Bulletin cannot pass this concatenation without a special notice of the artistic and attractive souvenir program got out. This was a booklet of some twelve pages, beautifully printed in two colors and filled from "kiver to kiver" with bright and witty matter referring more or less directly to Hoo-Hoo and the concatenation, but very frequently to the splendid city of Portland and its phenomenally rapid growth. The Rose Festival, it appears, holds a whole week at Portland, and judging from this program it must be a delightful affair.

The success of the meeting was due in no small point to the work of the five or six committees appointed long in advance to look after every feature of the work. One committee new in Hoo-Hoo annals appears in this concatenation. It was the "Stunts Committee"—and they do say the nine members who composed it discharged their duties with energy and originality. Doubters are referred to any one of the eleven initiates.

Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter was Chairman of one of the committees on arrangements and took active part in working up this notable meeting.

Revival Also at Orange.

The concatenation held at Orange, Texas, on June 8 by Vicegerent E. V. Folsom was another "revival" meeting. Hear him tell of it as below. He had some bad luck, as appears, but nevertheless this meeting was a tremendous success.

We had a most successful concatenation here in some respects, and not as great as we had expected to have in others. In the first place, we had prepared for something over a hundred visitors alone, and had made all arrangements accordingly, and I had every reason to believe that this many would be with us, from the cards I got in answer to my query sent out all over this territory, but at the last minute the Southern Pacific Railroad cut off trains from both east and west, owing to the flood situation in Louisiana, and I am confident that this alone shut off over fifty cats from the feast. However, the expense went on just the same. I might add that there were some items of expense that I have not charged against the Order, for we Hoo-Hoo here chipped in and held down the cost against the Order as much as we could. Also we had promise of more than thirty kittens to be at the meeting, but more than half of them fell down on the promise, and we had to get along with fourteen, but we tried to see that these fourteen got justice, and I believe they will agree with me that they had their eyes opened. I had to purchase quite a bit of supplies for the trunks, but that, of course, did not run up very much. We really could have taken care of as many more cats and kittens at the same expense that we were put for some fifty-five or sixty, but I guess you have been through all this yourself, and know how it is. I have cut my eye teeth now, and will know how to run the machine next time to make things pan out better.

I am enclosing a copy of our daily paper, which will give you all the necessary "dope" for The Bulletin. The editor of the Leader, Mr. Walthall, took the initiation, and as he says, "believe him, he knows."

I am quite sure that the enthusiasm evinced at our meeting last Saturday will last until early this fall, when we are going to try and work up a "real" concatenation. We are going to take plenty of time for it, work out the details in advance, and then get busy. This last one was so hurried that we really didn't have time for any real work.

The sprightly account of the meeting written by Brother Walthall, one of the initiates, follows:

The performance enacted by the old cats and the young last Saturday night will make an epoch in the history of fourteen men—a period which will forever remain as one right spot on the horizon of their existence.

Between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock a large number of the wise and unwise assembled in the rooms of the Orange Commercial Club, where they received the welcome hand of friendship from the congenial secretary of that organization, and E. V. Folsom, Vicegerent Snark (whatever that may mean), you were then treated to a good cigar, encouraged by words and friendly pats on the back for the trying ordeal through which the ignorant and blind kittens were about to pass. Then the uninitiated were blindfolded and peremptorily ordered to fall in line, lock step, as regular state convicts are forced to march.

The short march was completed when the "bunch" arrived in front of the new Stark Building; then the actual fun commenced in earnest.

A division was made, the old cats—not spitefully spoken—marched to the lodge room and the poor, weak kittens were ordered to another department to await preparations for their proper reception, and believe one who saw it, that prince of entertainers, chairman of the annihilating committee, past master at fun-making and whirlwind of originality when it comes to new obligations to impose on the blind kittens seeking light, J. S. Bonner has Al. G. Field looking like swiveled paint on an old box car. If you do not believe it, ask Preston Perkins Butler; also ask him if he has any particular inclination towards certain canine tendencies. Further evidence of the versatility of the aforesaid J. S. Bonner may be secured from the new white hope, John Tracy.

There were twelve others who had sufficient experience to corroborate everything revealed so far, but for the sake of space it will be impossible to enlarge on their particular attractiveness or qualifications.

As is well known, it takes kittens nine days to open their eyes, but it may be said with impunity that a kitten undergoing the operation by directions of J. S. Bonner and his able lieutenants, J. C. Dionne, E. V. Folsom et als. will rather see clearly the light of day in a much shorter space of time or they will forever remain blind.

The initiatory work concluded, the aggregation, numbering about fifty, adjourned to the Holland Hotel, where a banquet had been arranged by Frank Patin, the most hospitable and capable manager of that hostelry. To his careful attention and thorough knowledge of the whimsical wishes of each and every guest may be attributed the success of this important part of the proceedings.

After making the tables look like lightning had struck them Mr. Sherwood was asked to render a few selections on the piano, which he did in such an entertaining manner as to draw continual applause. Mr. Folsom sang, "Asleep in the Deep," "Home, Sweet Home" and several other well-known and beautiful numbers. Mr. Anderson rendered a little diddy—or did-d—which was highly entertaining and created much mirth. The best story ever told—really told—was in response to a call for J. C. Dionne, editor of the Southwest Lumber Journal. It was much regretted that Mr. Dionne was so hoarse as to prevent him singing a song or two, as he is better known in song than in story.

The next to produce a story was George Call, and he had a new one which was certainly appreciated by some and enjoyed by all—ask Tom Cox.

The visitors report the meeting one of the best and most successful ever attended by them and appeared loath to leave the meeting where good fellowship made the controlling sentiment.

We congratulate E. V. Folsom, E. W. Anderson and all resident members of the black cats on their unqualified and perfect success.

No. 2 for Brother Whitlock.

The concatenation at El Paso, Texas, on June 15, was the second to be held by our perpetual Vicegerent R. A. Whitlock. Brother Whitlock has been trying to turn the job over to some one else for the last four or five years, but he has never been able to find a man satisfactory to the higher officers, and his resignation has been regularly and persistently turned down—and with good results for Hoo-Hoo, as shown by the outcome of this concatenation.

Vicegerent Whitlock calls this the "Pearson Special" concatenation, the reason for which appears in the newspaper clipping reprinted. Before we get to that newspaper clipping, however, The Bulletin excerpts from Brother Whitlock's characteristic letter:

Baird, this was the best ever at El Paso. Think of it, twenty men. When you get the application blanks I want you to notice the character of the men making up this class. They are men of means and position out here in the west. I am satisfied with myself now, and am ready to turn this job over if you want me to, but for the good of the Order will keep it up if you say so. I have two applications left over from this class of twenty—two men who did not get in time to be initiated. I am holding them as a starter for another meeting to come some time. I am really proud of this class, when you think of the sparse material I have to draw from and taking into consideration the population of this part of the country—no town closer than 600 miles of population of anything like El Paso; Denver on the north, Ft. Worth east, Los Angeles on the west, and not a town of any size to the south of me in Mexico. . . . Everything went along as smoothly as a clock, but we were a little rushed for time, as we did not get started until 9:15, when I had planned to start at 8 o'clock sharp. This put us at the session-on-the-roof at 11 o'clock, but we all went home by 1 o'clock.

The Bulletin is further advised that with one or two exceptions every Hoo-Hoo in the El Paso district was present at this concatenation, with every man highly pleased with the outcome and warm in congratulations extended Brother Whitlock. Brother Whitlock is secretary-treasurer of one of the big lumber concerns of El Paso, El Paso Lumber Company, and a very busy man, but he is never too busy to turn in and do work for Hoo-Hoo, and seems to possess to a peculiar degree the power of enlisting the efforts of high-class men to assist him. He was particularly gratified at this last concatenation to have as Junior Hoo-Hoo Brother George W. Frenger.

The local paper, in speaking of this concatenation, had the following to say:

Hoo-Hoo had a big time Saturday night in celebrating the formal opening of the new Pearson lumber plant. The Hoo-Hoo is an organization of lumbermen, and the officers of the El Paso Milling Company were the guests of honor at the concatenation and banquet. P. C. Thede, general manager of the Pearson plant, spoke for the new company at the banquet at which R. A. Whitlock was toastmaster. George W. Frenger, Junior Hoo-Hoo from Las Cruces, attended from out of the city. The ceremonial session was held at the Chamber of Commerce Building and the banquet at the Sheldon.

In closing his letter, Brother Whitlock says: "Think on the second Tuesday in March I will hold another concatenation, provided I am Vicegerent then. I think I can figure on about twenty men for that date. This is taking a long shot at guessing, but we will see."

The only note of disappointment of Brother Whitlock's enthusiastic letter is in a postscript. "Billy Black could not come over and help us out." He is referring to Brother William E. Black, No. 12527.

A plumber was sent to the house of a wealthy stockbroker to make repairs. He was taken by the butler into the dining-room, and was beginning his work when the lady of the house entered. "John," said she, with a suspicious glance toward the plumber, "remove the silver from the sideboard at once and lock it up." But the man of lead was in no wise disconcerted. "Tom," he said to his assistant, "take my watch and chain and these few coppers to my missus at once."—Argonaut.

SWANNANOA-BERKLEY HOTEL, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

A BIT OF HOO-HOO CHARITY.

The following communication is sent The Bulletin from Indianapolis by Mr. George S. Cottman, Publicity Secretary of the Charity Organization Society of that city. It will be recalled that Brother John Oxenford, No. 1346, of Indianapolis, took a leading part in having the Order make this little donation. It is doubtful if Hoo-Hoo ever did a better piece of work or one more appreciated by a larger number of good people:

Looking over a copy of The Bulletin, and noting the diverse items of information therein, I am moved to put on public record one good deed of the Hoo-Hoo fraternity for which we of Indianapolis feel grateful. This was the donation, three years ago, of a building to what is here known as Fairview Settlement and the Summer Mission for Sick Children.

Fairview Settlement, be it explained, is a colony or country home easily accessible to the city, designed as a philanthropy for widowed mothers who are obliged to support themselves and families. The homes are furnished rent free, and, with the aid of a free kindergarten and day nursery, the women are put in a position to earn their livings without handicap.

The Summer Mission for Sick Children is what the name implies—a fresh air mission for the heated term when fresh air is indispensable to the health of many a child. These two establishments, while separate in their functions, are both under the management of the Indianapolis Charity Organization Society and located on adjacent grounds, and for the service of both the Order of Hoo-Hoo erected a sixteen-room house at the cost of $3,500. During the winter months it is occupied by widows' families and by the workers of the settlement, and during the summer it is used by the mission. It is the most serviceable all-round building on the grounds and it will perpetuate the name of Hoo-Hoo on this spot for years to come. G. S. C.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Brother F. E. Slutman, who will be pleasantly recalled by those who attended the San Francisco Annual Meeting as one of the most active in our entertainment, has been for a year or more located at Brentwood, Cal., as manager of the Brentwood Lumber Company. Within the past few months Brother Slutman has bloomed out as a full-fledged inventor, having been granted letters patent both in Canada and in this country on a traveling hoist and crane for handling lumber in bundles. The Bulletin has no room for a full description, but it suffices to say that the device has attracted much attention among lumbermen. Brother Slutman has been patiently at work on perfecting his ideas on such a device for several years, but his patents have just been granted. His crane is peculiarly adapted for loading lumber on shipboard, but it is not limited to handling lumber alone, but will handle all bulky and heavy commodities. Brother Slutman has many friends among the lumbermen on the coast, who wish him much success as the outcome of his invention.

Brother F. H. Harmon, No. 22154, of Scooba, Miss., left home about June 1 on an automobile tour to the Pacific Coast, to be gone all summer. He took his entire family with him, and while he may occasionally patronize a real good hotel, he expects to "camp out" during most of the trip. He will take in Colorado Springs, Denver, Cheyenne, Portland and then all points down the coast as far as San Diego. He is driving a sixty horsepower Premier. Brother Harmon operates a yellow pine saw mill plant at Scooba.

Jed was describing, at a dorcas, his recent visit to New York. "An' we went to a big department shop," said "an' we got inter one o' them 'ere things wot whizz ye clean up to the top—wot in tarnation is their name" "Shop-lifters, Jedediar," Mrs. Shucks replied.

HYMENEAL.

Brother Herbert E. Stiles, No. 22782, and an initiate of the concatenation held at Grand Rapids, Mich., February 10, 1909, was married June 8 to Miss Anita Walker, of Grand Rapids. The announcement card makes known that the young couple will be at home after September 1 at Sparta, Mich. Brother Stiles has a wide acquaintance among lumbermen throughout Michigan and other states who will rejoice in his good fortune.

OBITUARY.

William Hamar (No. 23759.)

Brother William Hamar died at his home at Indianapolis, Ind., on May 27. He was buried in Crown Hill Cemetery.

Brother Hamar was born October 15, 1850, in Kansas, removing to Indiana in 1875. He was located first in Michigan City, in the lumber business, but later removed to Indianapolis, where he was connected with the E. H. Eldredge Lumber Company for several years before going with the Buddenbaum Lumber Company in 1904. With this latter company he remained until his death.

Brother Buddenbaum, in writing of his death, says: "Through the kind offices of Brother John Oxenford, and the promptness of the Supreme Scrivenoter, the family of Brother Hamar was in receipt of the much-appreciated $250 Hoo-Hoo death benefit the day following his death." Brother Buddenbaum adds that the most conspicuous of the more than a score of handsome floral offerings was a blanket of flowers sent by resident Hoo-Hoo. Brother Buddenbaum writes, "Surely Hoo-Hoo is worth while."

Clarence Theodore Wendell (No. 24850).

The following particulars of the death of Brother C. T. Wendell are furnished by Brother M. V. Geagan, of Weed, Cal. It will be noted that this death occurred some months ago:

Weed, Cal., May 25, 1912—Yours of the 20th, addressed to the Weed Lumber Company, was duly received, and I am taking it upon myself to answer this personally. Now, I blame myself in a great measure for not long before now having notified you of the death of Clarence T. Wendell, but it entirely slipped my mind that he was a member of our organization, and in the surprise and deep grief we all felt for his loss, we really had no thought for anything but his widow, whom we all knew intimately, and for whom our deepest sympathy went out. We received a cablegram from her, dated September 6, reading: "Clarence dead. Pneumonia. Cremated."

And later received written advices giving us full particulars of his death. He was sick but a few days, but died from an acute attack of bronchial pneumonia.

About a month ago his wife returned to the United States with his ashes, and we understand is now on her way to Troy, New York, to lay them beside the bodies of his father and mother. She will then make a short visit to his brother, who is postmaster at Aberdeen, South Dakota, but what her movements thereafter will be is undecided.

No one who knew Clarence Wendell but loved him, and his loss, even at this late date, is severely felt by his legion of friends on the Pacific Coast.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a prominent member of the Knights Templar and Shriners, and received many honors from the Masonic fraternity, his funeral being conducted by that order at Manila, P. I.

This, we believe, gives you all the information desired, and I must again apologize for not having before furnished it to you.

Charles Franklin Warren (No. 11386).

Brother C. F. Warren died in Judge Mercy Hospital, Salt Lake City, on May 27, after an illness of two years, from diabetes. Brother Warren was born in Boston fifty-four years ago. He started in railroad work as a telegraph operator in 1876 on the Eastern Railway, which is now known as the Boston & Maine. He later went to the Santa Fe and he worked as ticket clerk, agent and operator until 1893.

He was then appointed station agent at Salt Lake City for the Denver & Rio Grande, which position he held for one year, and then left to again enter the service of the Santa Fe, this time as traveling agent, with headquarters in Salt Lake City. After five years of traveling he was made general agent for the Santa Fe in 1899, which position he held at the time of his death.

So far as is known, Mr. Warren has no living relatives. He made a will about two years ago, the contents and nature of which are set forth in the following excerpt from the Salt Lake Tribune of a date of about a week following his death:

The will of Charles F. Warren, of the Santa Fe Railroad, who died in Judge Mercy Hospital Sunday afternoon, was opened in the cashier's office of the National Copper Bank Monday in the presence of Leon Engstrom, Fred Worsley, R. W. Flandro and R. V. Pinney. The articles of the will designated the officers of the local lodge of Elks as administrators of the estate and were to the effect that the Elks were to receive all that he possessed. Mr. Warren was not known to have any living relatives and no heirs were mentioned in the will. There is some speculation as to the amount of property and money that Mr. Warren possessed. He is known to have had a bank account and some mining stock. A few years ago he is said to have put about $15,000 in mining stock. He had been ill a great deal in the last two years, however, and this had cost him much. His possessions are variously estimated at from $10,000 to $20,000. According to the terms of the will, this is to be left with the Elks, who are requested to establish a charity fund with it.

Mr. Warren requested in his will that his body be cremated in the nearest crematory, and these instructions will be carried out. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Thursday in the Elks' temple, after which the body probably will be taken to Denver for cremation. The funeral services will be under the auspices of the local Elks lodge.

Wallace Lee Hensley (No. 24842).

The following letter from Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower, following an inquiry to know whether or not Brother Hensley was a subscriber to the death fund, is all the particulars The Bulletin has of this death:

I acknowledge your letter of the 1st inst. and regret to note that our late Brother W. L. Hensley was not a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund. This is just the case where $250.00 would have been a Godsend.

This man has been playing in hard luck for the past two years, and recently his nine-year-old son was injured so that a leg had to be amputated.

I did not know Brother Hensley personally, but he was well spoken of. He was formerly employed by the C. A. Smith Lumber Co. here, but more recently was associated in business with Brother Bruce Fair in San Francisco. Brother Hensley was taken suddenly ill on the Oakland Ferryboat and was rushed to the hospital, where it was found he was suffering from tumor of the liver. He passed away after a week's illness May 29.

Brother Hensley was born at Sacramento, Cal., June 30, 1866.

John Henry Chapman (No. 9240).

The only particulars The Bulletin has of this death is that contained in a brief telegram from his widow saying that he died on the afternoon of June 20. Brother Chapman was a subscriber to the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. Draft for payment of his claim was immediately authorized.

Brother Chapman was born at New Baltimore, Mich., October 13, 1856. At the time of his death he was connected with the New Dominion Lumber Company, of Diana, W. Va.

The New Snark of the Universe

THIS ISSUE contains full report of 21st Annual Meeting at Asheville, N. C., July 18-20, 1912. Read it carefully. Bear in mind, however, that the Hoo-Hoo year does not end until Sept. 9, at which time it is hoped we will round out as good a record for dues collected as for concatenations held since July 1. Many members have not yet paid. See if you have 1912 card. If you have not, remit $1.65 and help to swell the record for the year.

NASHVILLE, TENN., JULY, 1912.

THE ANNUAL AT ASHEVILLE.

Full stenographic report of the twenty-first Hoo-Hoo Annual appears on the following pages, with such full account of entertainment features and incidental happenings as space will permit.

The salient feature of the meeting, above all others, was the enthusiasm and earnestness manifested. This enthusiasm manifested itself on the first roll-call and persisted throughout the meeting, which ended in an era of the most genuine good feeling and fellowship. The "after-math session," following final adjournment, held on at the Battery Park Hotel until long past midnight Saturday night.

The business sessions of the meeting were attended by practically every man present. Throughout a business session Saturday that lasted five hours not a man left the hall, even to go to luncheon. Nothing like this was ever seen at a previous Annual Meeting. Every man attending the meeting participated in the business, and interests of the Order received a thoughtful and careful discussion. The result of the meeting will be to start a boom in Hoo-Hoo all over the country.

Practically no changes were made in the Constitution and By-Laws further than to fix permanent headquarters and provide for the salaries of the new Supreme Scrivenoter and his assistant, both of whom are to give their full time to the work of the Order. Headquarters for the Order were fixed at St. Louis after a spirited contest with Chicago. W. M. Stephenson was elected Supreme Scrivenoter.

The concatenation was the best ever held at an Annual Meeting. Thirty-three were initiated, men of the highest class and standing, in the presence of nearly 200 members. The session-on-the-roof following, though only an informal luncheon, was a genuine love feast, which held on until midnight. It was a great concatenation.

Many members present at the Annual Meeting did not hesitate to say that it was the best and most enjoyable Annual Meeting the Order ever held.

The Ostrian Cloister, after a stagnation of nearly two years, held a splendid business session and initiation, fully reported on another page. It was the best Cloister meeting held for years.

The entertainment by the Asheville Hoo-Hoo and lumbermen has never been surpassed. These men were present in numbers from roll-call to final adjournment, wearing badges "Ask Me." They never failed to respond to whatever was called for.

The meeting was a treat to every man and woman who attended.

HOO-HOO DEATH EMERGENCY FUND.

Following is the report of the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund submitted at the Annual Meeting. The concatenation, at which was present the largest attendance of the meeting, was selected as the place to which to present to the assembled membership the matter of this Death Emergency Fund, together with a brief review of how it has worked during the nearly three years of its existence.

The Supreme Scrivenoter presented the matter in a speech that was enthusiastically received. No member of the Order who attended this concatenation can doubt either the splendid work the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund is doing or the enthusiastic endorsements it has of the rank and file of the membership. An invitation for those present who had not participated to come in and participate was responded to by more than a score.

There is no doubt that the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund was given a great impetus at this Asheville Annual Concatenation.

Death Emergency Fund.

The following is statement of receipts and disbursements of Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund up to close of business July 16, 1912. This statement is condensed as to First, Second, and Third Calls, both as to receipts and disbursements, but is given in detail, both as to receipts and disbursements, so far as we have proceeded under Fourth Call. Statements of this fund have been regularly published from month to month in The Bulletin and in various lumber newspapers. This fund is working admirably, and it will be noticed that up to this date sixty death claims have been paid.

Since the above report was put in type three other claims have accrued and been paid, as follows:

July 23—Claim of Alfred L. Jaquith... $250.00

July 23—Claim of James Robert Slone... 250.00

July 23—Claim of D. A. Brown..... 250.00

One other claim has accrued, but has not been paid, awaiting appointment and qualification of executors of estate of deceased. This makes a total of four claims accruing since the above report was submitted, and when all four are paid the balance will be reduced by $1,000.

It was decided by the Supreme Nine that the Fifth Call for the Death Fund shall go out immediately after September 9, along with notice for dues for next Hoo-Hoo year. This call, as well as the notice for dues, will be sent out over the signature of the new Scrivenoter, Brother W. M. Stephenson, whose address at St. Louis will be given.

OFFICIAL STENOGRAPHIC REPORT.

Proceedings of Twenty-first Annual Held at Asheville, N. C., July 18-20, 1912.

First Session Thursday, July 18.

(The meeting was called to order by Snark E. Stringer Boggess at 9 o'clock a.m., Thursday, July 18, at the Battery Park Hotel.)

THE SNARK:—Ladies and Gentlemen, Brother Hoo-Hoo: This is the twenty-first annual meeting of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, and I now declare the meeting called to order and ready for business. I am certainly delighted to see so many representative members of Hoo-Hoo present, even from the far-distant parts of Hoo-Hoo Land, as far West as California, from Northwestern and Central Canada, as well as from the far South. I am sure that we are delighted over being here, on this beautiful spot of our continent, in the "Land of the Sky." (Applause.) We will hear from the representative of the Mayor of Asheville, who is unable to be present, Mr. P. C. Cocke, who will deliver an address of welcome on behalf of the city of Asheville. (Applause.)

MR. COCKE'S WELCOME.

P. C. COCKE:—Snark of the Universe and other members of Hoo-Hoo, ladies and gentlemen: Asheville is proud to have as her guests a convention of some of the most representative business men of the nation. At this first opportunity, gentlemen, while you are sojourning in Asheville, I wish to announce that we are laboring strenuously here under the operation of a prohibition law (Laughter); but, gentlemen, I assure you in all candor that we have anticipated your needs (laughter and applause), and should any of you get snake-bit—and we must remember that this is the snake time of the year—and need the services of a physician, I assure you that the Buncombe County Medical Society has amended its laws to fit this occasion and prescriptions shall cost you only fifty cents. (Laughter and applause). If, perchance, you are unable to find a physician, then call on me and I will fix you up (laughter), and I will take pleasure in leading you to a cellar which contains many things that have never been brought to light. (Laughter).

Gentlemen, the city of Asheville is yours. (Applause). I wish to say that our patrol wagon is laid up for repairs. Our city judge has gone on an extended vacation, and I am commissioned by the mayor himself to deputize each and every one of you as special policemen; and if in your wanderings you encounter any of our blue coats on the street and they give you offense, it shall at once become your duty to make arrests, with all the power given you by authority of law. In Western North Carolina, with all of its life-giving qualities, we do not pretend to be the place where the proverbial man was killed in order to start a graveyard, but we do, gentlemen, in all seriousness, say this morning that we have here some of the oldest inhabitants on the American continent. (Applause). On the right, behind our hills, lives an old man that is reported to be the oldest man in Christendom! he is 125 years of age—

J. M. ENGLISH (13523):—He was a Hoo-Hoo, too! (Laughter).

JUDGE COCKE:—And my reliable information is that he was a Hoo-Hoo. But his fame extended throughout the land; an agent of Barnum & Bailey's circus came into Western North Carolina for the purpose of inducing the old gentleman to become an exhibit in their side-show. After repeated propositions and efforts to get him to join the circus, the agent found his way one night into the crevasses of the mountains, and there found the old man in sorrow, his long white hair streaming down his back, and he was leaning heavily on his staff. "Well," said the show man, "Uncle Henry, are you ready to go?" The old man, in tears, answered: "Yes, but I hate so bad to leave father." (Laughter).

I welcome you, gentlemen, to this, the gem city of the mountains. Here we have the finest water supply in America. For twenty miles iron arteries convey this crystal fluid from the home of the speckled trout, through meadows and fields of waving corn and golden grain to the homes of our people. Our paved streets and sidewalks of more than fifty miles afford easy and convenient travel to the public, and our parks and lakes lend attraction to our town. Stand on the summit of yon lofty mountain, and from its peak, in the purple twilight, look upon the majesty of the towering mountains on the one hand, and the fertile plains and valleys beneath on the other. How awe-inspiring it is, how grand a scenic effect! And while some may prefer the low lands on which to live, as for me, let my habitat be on the hills and within the range of these grand old mountains, whose summits lift themselves heavenward as if to proclaim the glory of God who created them. (Applause). And when at last I am laid to rest I would sleep forever here, guarded by the grand old sentinels of the "Land of the Sky."

The purpose, gentlemen, of the Order of Hoo-Hoo is to cement more firmly the social and fraternal relations that exist among all business men. Your motto is "Health, Happiness and Long Life." You have no lengthy ritual or ceremonial. Hoo-Hoo is founded on comradeship among business men. You have no state nor local lodges; and no degrees of membership. All members are in one and the same organization. The word "Concatenated" means a linking together, and is essential in your name, for your membership is composed of persons not only directly engaged in the lumber business, but includes foresters, officers of lumber organizations, officers of lumber insurance companies, newspaper owners, publishers, editors and reporters; persons engaged in the sale of saw mill machinery, and all others whose business brings them into active relations with lumbermen. Twenty years ago, I read, that at Gurdon, Ark., there was held a meeting of the Yellow Pine Manufacturers' Association; there was a banquet on the last night of this meeting, and in the early hours following that night many boarded the trains for their homes. This party encountered a wreck three miles out and remained for three days at Gurdon. It was here that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo was given birth. Bolling Arthur Johnson, George K. Smith, and others of like kind, while thus delayed, conceived the idea of fraternizing the lumbermen and those who do business with lumbermen. It was first proposed that the order be called the Ancient Order of Camp Followers. Later, however, in the parlor of the Hotel Hall, at Gurdon, the name Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo was adopted in the presence of the six charter members. No organization in America is composed of a set of men representing a more permanent part in the industrial make-up and the commercial activity of our time.

I bid you, gentlemen, this morning thrice welcome to our city; and when you return to your homes I trust you may find your families comfortable and secure, and that your recollections of your visit to the "Land of the Sky" will always elicit from you the most cordial and pleasing emotions.

Mr. Snark and gentlemen, that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo may increase in membership and much be added to its usefulness is the sincere wish of the speaker and your many friends in this part of the country. (Applause).

BROTHER G. A. MURRAY'S WELCOME.

THE SNARK:—Brother Hoo-Hoo, I now have pleasure in introducing to you Mr. G. A. Murray, of Asheville, one of our prominent lumbermen of this state, well known to many of you and favorably known throughout this whole section. (Applause).

G. A. MURRAY (4189):—Most Worthy Snark and brother Hoo-Hoo and ladies: The honor and pleasure of bidding you welcome to our midst in the name of the local Hoo-Hoo has been conferred upon me, and I wish I was able to welcome you in language adequate and befitting the time, place and occasion, but as I never made a speech in my life, I fear I will fall short in this, and will have to ask you to excuse our local Snark, who, knowing that I had been a Hoo-Hoo for many years, naturally concluded that I could make a speech, but in this he was mistaken, therefore, you will please excuse him.

But, gentlemen, we are glad you are with us, and by the Tail of the Great Supreme Black Cat we welcome you to the city of Asheville, to the county of Buncombe, to the State of North Carolina, and especially do we welcome you to this little country all its own, all our own, known as the "Land of the Sky."

Where the mountains are the tallest,
The water the clearest,
Where the sun shines brightest,
Where the skies are the bluest,
Where the red headed girls' hair is the reddest,
And where fair women and good apples abound.

This little land of ours, fenced in by the Blue Ridge Mountains on the East and South, and by the Great Smokies and Unakas on the West and North, is less than 75 miles square. In coming here from any direction you have to come through or over mountains, and you can always remember in coming here, that beyond the mountains lies the "Land of the Sky," the only place absolutely emblematical of the Hoo-Hoo motto, "Health, Happiness and Long Life," and we would like to see it filled with Hoo-Hoo, and welcome you not only now, but for all time.

Thirty-five miles west of us there is a station on the Southern Railway known as Balsam, where the altitude is 3,300 feet above sea level, and the highest point east of the Rockies that a standard gauge railroad runs. Nearby is Balsam Mountain, that looms up 6,000 feet high, and where, 500 feet from its top, there runs ice cold water, and where this water comes from has always been a mystery, for while water seeks its level, this point is higher than any of the surrounding country, and above the level. At this same place raspberries and whortle berries ripen the last of August and are best about the 1st of September.

Northeast of us we have Mount Mitchell, 6,700 feet high, and the highest point east of the Rockies, the summit of which reaches skyward, and is kissed by the clouds as they go to and fro in their endless flights. From its base flows the water that will make Asheville famous, water 'hat we use here now; it comes through a 16-inch pipe, of its own velocity, across Beaucatcher Mountain, just east of us, and is so pure and clear that it may remain in a vessel for a month without the semblance of sediment. It is the finest ever, and actually has a bead on it.

Two miles south we come to the pretty little town of Biltmore, the only town of its kind and size perhaps in the word, owned absolutely by one man, our friend and neighbor, Mr. Geo. W. Vanderbilt, who, with the latter part of his father's name, and Moore, the name of his mother, making the name Biltmore.

This town is the gateway to the Vanderbilt estate, the finest private estate in America, and perhaps in the whole world, and must be seen to be appreciated.

Mr. Vanderbilt came her and built a mansion on his estate after deciding that this was the most desirable place on the globe to live, and he has proven a boon to this section; for he has not only done many charitable and praiseworthy things, but he has done more for the people and the country by introducing fine stock, scientific farming and forestry, than all others combined.

While I do not know him personally, I do know that he has done many great and good things, and, in fact, his share, and the interest he has taken in forestry and kindred interests, and being virtually one of the clan, I think it not out of place to mention these things, and the only thing lacking is that he is not a Hoo-Hoo, but should be made one, and I suggest that he be made an honorary member of the Order, for all good men eligible to membership should be made Hoo-Hoo.

Now, gentlemen, the reason I am telling you so much about this country is that we want you to come and live among us, and be one with us; this is the natural Hoo-Hoo country, and we want to see it filled with you. And if any or all of you should decide to come and abide among us, we will extend to you the good hand of fellowship, and bid you welcome forever and a day.

The Asheville Club, at the foot of the hill, extends to you the privileges of the Club. You will find the latch string on the outside of the door.

All local or resident Hoo-Hoo will be designated by a special badge, and will be glad to give any information wanted, and be of help in any other way desired; don't hesitate to let them know your wants.

We are glad you are with us, wish you well, and hope you will have a good time, AND—May peace be with you and remain with you always.

THE SNARK:—Gentlemen, I am sure all feel, as I do, thankful for the hearty welcome extended to us by the city of Asheville as well as welcome from Brother Murray. I have long been an enthusiast over North Carolina, where the people are as hospitable as are to be found in any other part of this country; where I have many warm friends, some of the best I have ever made, and nearly all of them through the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo. I am not anything of a speaker, so I cannot express my feelings as I would like. I am certain that the members of the Order who have never been here before will feel as kindly toward Asheville and North Carolina as I do. We have with us a gentleman who has traveled from the Pacific Coast to attend this meeting. I refer to Brother F. W. Trower, of San Francisco, who will respond for us:

BROTHER TROWER'S RESPONSE.

F. W. TROWER (12835):—Worthy Snark, fellow Hoo-Hoo, and friends of Asheville, I left California in somewhat of a hurry and it did not occur to me until I got into the eastern part of Colorado that I would be, probably, one of few representatives of the order from California, and, possibly, from the Pacific coast. With that thought came another: that I might be called upon to say something, and immediately there ensued a chilling of the pedal extremities which even the hot weather of the state of Missouri did not eradicate. (Laughter). It is rather unfair to put up a visitor to respond to the addresses of welcome which we have heard this morning, because it seems that oratory must be indigenous to the soil and the climate, inasmuch as the South has always been noted for the high-class orators it produces. (Applause). I want to say on the part of the visitors that we do most sincerely appreciate the welcome extended to us today by our good friends and fellow members of Asheville. It is the usual and conventional thing to say that, but I assure the brethren and all the people of Asheville and vicinity that we do most thoroughly appreciate their kind and generous words of welcome. The welcome started, by the way, before the regular program, on yesterday—(Laughter)—under the careful guidance of several of the local members, who probably had had an interview with the governor. (Laughter). Anyway, they secured a dispensation of some kind and we were taken out upon a surveying tour by a gentleman who is a past master in the art of surveying. (Laughter). Although he is from Mississippi, I dare say he has surveyed most of the South. (Laughter).

As I look out these windows upon that magnificent scenery, it is difficult for me to express my appreciation of the fact that I have been permitted to make this trip and meet with you here. I love California, but, oh, you Asheville. (Laughter and applause). I am like the young fellow who sat on the porch with two girls and didn't know which he liked best, so he thought he had better adopt both of them. (Laughter).

As I represent here in some sense the Pacific coast, I want to say that I have a telegram from Brother Leiter, Supreme Jabberwock, of Portland, Ore., in which he says that he regrets very much that at the last moment he was unable to leave; but he presents his compliments and wishes to be remembered to our brethren here. While we have not a large attendance from the Pacific coast, I want to tell you that Hoo-Hoo is alive on the Pacific coast; not only in California, but in Oregon and Washington. Tonight, in Seattle, they are going to have a splendid concatenation, and you may depend upon it that Hoo-Hoo is going right ahead on the western coast. (Applause). We of San Francisco particularly want to invite Hoo-Hoo to meet with us in the year of our big fair, in 1915. (Applause).

One of the best thing about Hoo-Hoo, to my mind, is that its headquarters have been in the South. The South has always been a land of delightful interest to me, and I believe that Hoo-Hoo in all parts of the country have been brought into closer touch with the South because of the location of headquarters at Nashville and the large membership in all parts of the South. The South has finally taken its position, in the lead, agriculturally, and in other directions she is making wonderful strides. I am glad to see many prominent Southern men taking an active part in all branches of our national affairs. The fact that our headquarters have been located in the South has not only tended to make us better Hoo-Hoo, but better Americans, and our feelings of loyalty to the Order of Hoo-Hoo are manifested throughout the United States and Canada as well—we are all fellow Americans. Gentlemen, I thank you for attention. (Applause.)

BROTHER TENNANT RESPONDS.

THE SNARK:—Brothers, we have with us a Canadian, other than our distinguished ex-Snark, who is one of us in every respect, although he is from a section that but few of the older members have seen represented at our annual meetings; he is an active member of Hoo-Hoo and we are pleased to have him with us on this occasion. I will call upon our Brother E. D. Tennant, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, for a few words of greeting. (Applause.)

E. D. TENNANT (13070):—Most Worthy Snark and brother, it is indeed a great pleasure to me to be called upon to respond to these cordial words of welcome to which we have listened. I did not expect it, but I accept this kind invitation to respond briefly on behalf of myself and the country I represent here. I come from a land that is new and a land that is old; from a land that but yesterday was the home of the buffalo and the roving Indian; a land that today is thriving with numerous cities and towns that have but recently sprung up. I come here today to the "Land of the Sky," a most beautiful spot that I read about in my boyhood days, distinguished for its genuine Southern hospitality. My expectations regarding that hospitality have been already realized; and I assure you that, while you may call this a dry state, your hospitality is not dry. (Laughter.) I will take back with me to your cousins of the North—and we are cousins, because we come from the same stock; while there is a difference, it is only imaginary—(applause)—I will take back with me to my brethren in Western Canada the words of welcome that we have heard here today, and I assure you that we greatly appreciate things like this. Our country is large, and when we get such a warm welcome, it goes right home to our hearts. Our Snark has said that Western Canada has not been represented at our annual meetings for some time. One of the reasons for that condition is that we are a long distance off. As you know, we have slightly cold weather during the winter time and we have to make hay while the sun shines. (Laughter.) We are busy now from 3 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. That is the principal reason why we have not had a larger attendance at the annual meetings from that part of the country. For a time enthusiasm and interest in Hoo-Hoo rather died down in our part of Canada, but I am glad to say that there has been a revival of the true Hoo-Hoo spirit; the old guard have come back. We had a meeting about three weeks ago, and they told me to come here and tell you that they are with you; that they are willing to back up the old Order and to assist in making it an order that is truly representative of the lumber industry, an industry which, I assure you, and I think you agree with me, is one of the greatest in America. The men engaged in it are some of our greatest and best men. The very nature of our business demands a greater amount of brain power than any other ordinary business demands, and as Hoo-Hoo representing such men, I assure you that we are willing and anxious to make the Order truly representative of the class of men of which I speak. (Applause.) There have been a few remarks made here about the "surveyor." I think he has served a little bit more than the South. Judging from remarks I heard yesterday it seems that he surveyed a good deal of Canada in the early days. I hope his experience in Canada was not too strenuous, and I trust that, some day, he will return to complete his survey. In closing all that I can say is that I extend to you a most cordial invitation to visit Western Canada, and if any of you will do so we will give you a very hearty Canadian welcome. But we could not hope to give to you any more than such a hearty Southern welcome as this. (Applause.) We now extend to you an invitation to come to Winnipeg in 1914, and if you will come, I assure you that you shall receive a very cordial welcome to our country. (Applause.) I want to thank our friend for his suggestion of a remedy for snake bites, and I assure him that we shall take advantage of his kind offer if occasion arises. (Laughter.)

PAST SNARK HADLEY.—Brothers, acting for the Snark of the Universe, Brother Boggess, I would like to say that while listening to the remarks of the judge (Judge Cocke) and Brother Murray, I regretted for a few moments that I had not been born in Asheville. I used to think that I came from a pretty good part of the country, but I have found that there is a better than that here in the "Land of the Sky." (Applause.) I want to supplement the remarks of Brother Tennant and say that, as a Canadian, I have enjoyed the hospitality of Southerners on other occasions; but I am very glad Brother Tennant is here and will go back and tell our Canadian brethren about it and vouch for all that has been said heretofore on that subject. We will now listen to the report of the Snark, Brother E. Stringer Boggess. (Applause.)

SNARK'S ADDRESS.

THE SNARK:—Brethren, I will have to ask you to bear with me in making this report, in which I have only outlined a few of the things that have come into my mind:

Your Supreme Nine elected upon the "City of Cleveland" when leaving Detroit virtually pledged their best endeavors to make this a record year for the Order. We all know the record made by each member of the Nine. These bore splendid results, as will appear in the Scrivenoter's report.

Brothers, the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo has attained its majority. It is twenty-one years of age, or will be next Hoo-Hoo day, the 9th of September. We know all about its history to date and it is remarkable.

Hoo-Hoo is worthy of all we can do to make the Order a gigantic success. We all owe a debt of gratitude for many a pleasant hour spent. I want to make some suggestions as to changes in the Constitution and By-Laws which I believe to be necessary for the good of the Order.

It has always been called, and, what constitutes its most rapid growth—a lumberman's order. It is not intended as a reflection or to be offensive in any way to those of the allied industries.

It is not intended to take from any present member of the Order any of his rights or privileges.

The next is the election of the Supreme Scrivenoter to succeed Brother Baird, who has been for seventeen consecutive years unanimously elected and who has rendered most faithful services, a man of great ability and sterling integrity, which ability has been devoted to the welfare of our beloved Order. Whoever may be his successor, I ask your support and assistance as cheerfully given as if you were extending same to Brother Baird.

The Bulletin is not surpassed by any fraternal journal published. It is read constantly by the majority of our members with great interest and profit, and it should be read by all.

This is the first annual meeting of the Order to be held other than Hoo-Hoo day. If this is to be continued the date should be fixed for the 18th of July, or say, the third Tuesday of July; the beginning and ending of the Hoo-Hoo year should still continue to be September 9th.

Concerning Vicegerents, I suggested one Vicegerent for each State. This suggestion has not been approved by members of the Supreme Nine. He might be appointed upon the recommendation of members of his state. He could select his State Nine, who could assist him in state meetings or district organizations, as has been done in Norfolk—as was recommended by several of our members from the Pacific coast.

Our Order can be made to grow by a continuance of the generous assistance of the members given to the Vicegerent Snarks and the Supreme Nine. It is easily done, it takes no time. Greet your brother with a pleasant word for the good of the Order. Don't hesitate to express your views for the good of Hoo-Hoo. Your officers will prize your suggestions. It will assist them in making Hoo-Hoo what we all want it, a greater, stronger fraternal Order.

Supreme Representative Stephenson has been of great assistance throughout the year. It was wise to have continued the office last year. It has served its purpose in awakening interest and gathering information for the Order in general, and has rendered most valuable assistance to every locality visited by Mr. Stephenson.

(At the conclusion of the report of the Snark a hearty Hoo-Hoo yell was given, in which all present joined.)

THE SNARK:—The next order of business is the report of the Scrivenoter, Mr. James H. Baird.

(Mr. Baird was greeted with prolonged applause, and the Hoo-Hoo yell several times repeated. It was several minutes before he could proceed.)

JAMES H. BAIRD (408):—Gentlemen, I appreciate this very much indeed; more than I can express, especially after you have listened to such eloquent and flowery speeches from the gentlemen who have preceded me.

SCRIVENOTER'S REPORT.

I have audited the books of J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, for the period from close of business September 6, 1911, to close of business July 15, 1912. The above is a true and accurate statement of the money he has received and disbursed during the period named. Of the balance called for by these books I find $485.28 on deposit in the First & Fourth National Bank of this city, and as undeposited cash, $74.49.

*This was a joint concatenation held by Vicegerent J. H. Ehrmantraut, of the Eastern District of Washington, and Vicegerent P. M. Lachmund, of the Northern District of Idaho, the nine initiates being divided between them.

(Note—The above statement of concatenations held, without further explanation, does not do justice to several of our last year's Vicegerents. For instance, one of the four concatenations credited to the Northern District of Alabama, the one held at Birmingham on October 12, was not held by Vicegerent Douglas, but by his predecessor in office, Vicegerent H. B. Wood, twenty-three men being initiated at this concatenation. Similarly, Vicegerent Ehrmantraut, of the Eastern District of Washington, is credited with the concatenation at Liberty Lake, Wash., held on August 26 by Vicegerent Engdahl, at which nineteen men were initiated; Vicegerent E. V. Folsom is credited with concatenation held at Fostoria, Tex., on September 3, by his predecessor, Vicegerent J. C. Dionne, at which five men were initiated.)

It will be seen that credit for the largest concatenation held, the largest number of concatenations held, and the greatest number of initiates at any one concatenation, all goes to Vicegerent Fred S. Palmer, of Northern District of California, he having held four concatenations with a total of 96 initiates, an even fifty of these having been taken in at the splendid meeting at Klamath Falls a few weeks ago.

Credit for the next biggest concatenation goes to Vicegerent L. R. Pifer, of Western District of Washington, he having initiated a class of forty men at the concatenation at Seattle, held February 16.

Vicegerent J. T. Bate, of Southern District of California, and J. W. Douglas, of Northern District of Alabama, are tied for second place in number of concatenations held, each having three to his credit (Vicegerent Douglas being credited with one concatenation, which, as explained, was held by his predecessor, Brother H. B. Wood). Vicegerent Douglas, it will be noticed, is third in number of initiates at any one concatenation, he having taken in thirty-one men at Decatur, Ala., in May.

One other concatenation than those listed above has been held, that at Albany, Ga., held by Vicegerent H. H. Coombs on June 19, of which report was delayed and has not been received when this is written. This makes a total of seventy-one concatenations held since those reported at last annual meeting. This matter of number of concatenations held will be returned to further on in this report.

Record of Work in Jurisdictions.

The record of work done in the nine jurisdictions into which the Vicegerencies are divided is as below:

JURISDICTION	No. Concats.	No. of Initiates
		Reg.	Life	Hon.
Jurisdiction No. 1—Under the Snark (B-gress) the following: West Virginia, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky	9	75
Jurisdiction No. 2—Under the Senior Hoo-Hoo (Judd) the following: Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Arkansas	6	48
Jurisdiction No. 3—Under the Junior Hoo-Hoo (Trower) the following: California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Colorado and Mexico	10	186
Jurisdiction No. 4—Under the Bojum (Patterson) the following: Eastern Canada, Michigan, Wisconsin and all foreign countries	4	25
Jurisdiction No. 5—Under the Scrivenator (Baird) the following: Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia	7	69
Jurisdiction No. 6—Under the Jabberwock (Leter) the following: Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Western Canada	8	155
Jurisdiction No. 7—Under the Custocatian (O'Donnell) the following: Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and Florida	15	227	1
Jurisdiction No. 8—Under the Arcan-per (Ray) the following: Texas, New Mexico, Kansas and Oklahoma	6	77
Jurisdiction No. 9—Under the Gurdon (Carroll) the following: Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, New York, New England States and District of Columbia	4	28
Total	70	902	1

It will be seen that Jurisdiction No. 7, under Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell, leads by a good margin, both in number of concatenations and in number of initiates; Jurisdiction No. 3, under Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower, is second, both in number of concatenations and number of initiates, closely followed by Jurisdiction No. 6, under Jabberwock J. M. Leter. The splendid record made on the Pacific Coast this year will be commented on further in this report, and will no doubt come in for comment at some length in Supreme Representative Stephenson's report.

Resignations.

Two hundred and forty-six resignations have been tendered and accepted since the last annual meeting.

General Review.

I cannot close this report without some comment of a general nature on the year's work. Owing to circumstances and conditions, which it is not necessary now to review at length, the work of the year was very late in being started. It will be seen that only ten concatenations had been held up to January 1, and of these four were held on or prior to the date of last annual meeting. In the six and a half months that have passed since January 1, sixty-one concatenations have been held (including one not embraced in formal report) or at the rate of more than two concatenations every week. Had this rate been maintained during the first three months of this Hoo-Hoo year, and assuming that it will be maintained for the remainder of the year, of which there is little doubt, the record of the year would be one of more than 100 concatenations held—a better report than for any year since the panic came to depress all activities in the lumber trade. As it is, the full Hoo-Hoo year, ending September 9 next, will show a record in concatenations held better than that either of last year or the year before. To those who have been informed of the conditions that have existed this record will be both surprising and gratifying.

While pleased to report that with a very few exceptions the order is in good condition all over the field, with as loyal and able a corps of Vicegerents as we have ever had, and with prospects of more and better concatenations in the immediate future than I ever remember at this season of the year, I cannot refrain from some extended mention of the exceptionally splendid work that has been accomplished this year on the Pacific Coast. In the three great lumber states of Washington, Oregon and California, as well as in the several districts of British Columbia, Hoo-Hoo is stronger and in better condition than it has ever been. For this excellent state of affairs we are indebted most to Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo F. W. Trower, of San Francisco, ably assisted by Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter, of Portland, and the very able and energetic Vicegerents these two officers of the order called to assist them in carrying out plans formed last fall soon after the annual meeting. To Brother Trower we are indebted for the suggestion of our Supreme Representative making a tour of the whole Pacific Coast region, a matter upon which Brother Stephenson will no doubt report at greater length than I do here. We are also indebted to Brother Trower's efforts and to this western trip of our Supreme Representative for the very pleasing revival of Hoo-Hoo interest in the State of Nevada.

Nor can I refrain from some expressions of gratification over the splendid record made in the South, especially in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, as well as Georgia and Florida. It will be seen that numerous and good concatenations have been held in all these states, the same being true of Tennessee and Arkansas.

Another field in which exceptionally good work has been done is the Atlantic Coast States, and here we are indebted mainly to the able and energetic efforts of our distinguished Snark. It is safe to say that no man who has ever held the Snarkship of Hoo-Hoo has done more and better work for the upbuilding of the order than Brother Boggess. To him, and to Vicegerent W. J. Woodward, of the Eastern District of Virginia, we are indebted for an excellent revival of Hoo-Hoo interest at Norfolk, where but very little has existed since the annual meeting of 1901.

But it is impossible to go at greater length into all the good work done by our officers and Vicegerents this year. It is sufficient to say that in the judgment of every member of the Supreme Nine, and of every member of the order cognizant of the facts as they have existed, the work of this year has been such as to create a new interest in Hoo-Hoo practically throughout the whole field and to put the order on such a footing that it needs only a continuance of the energetic administration it has received during the past ten months to give it such a boom as it has never had, and to carry it on to a better footing than it has ever reached.

In Conclusion.

Though elected for the Hoo-Hoo year ending September 9 next, up to which date I purpose to give to the work of this administration practically my whole time and all the energy and ability I can command, this will be the last annual report I will ever make to Hoo-Hoo in annual meeting assembled. I desire, therefore, to briefly express the great pleasure I have had in the work, and the high value I place upon the thousands of acquaintances I have made personally and by correspondence. Men who were infants when I took hold of this office have grown up and been admitted to membership in its ranks. Hundreds of men who were wearing the button when I was elected Scrivenoter are still loyal and devoted members, while other thousands, it is saddening to reflect, have gone to join another brotherhood. It will always be a pleasure for me to reflect that I have had an active and official part in the building up of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, and to believe that through the correspondence of the Scrivenoter's office and the columns of The Bulletin I have been able to add a little to the feeling of kindness and fraternity among the lumbermen of this country.

I desire to express most particularly and especially my appreciation of the able and loyal assistance and support I have received from the several hundred men, living and dead, who have been associated with me during the past sixteen years as members of the Supreme Nine and as Vicegerents. To these men I feel deeply indebted for whatever success has attended my administration of the office I have held.

I believe I hardly need add that whomsoever this meeting may elect as my successor as Supreme Scrivenoter will be given all the aid and comfort it is in my power to render him.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. BAIRD, Scrivenoter.

REPORT OF SUPREME REPRESENTATIVE.

THE SNARK:—The next business is the report of the Supreme Representative. (Applause.)

W. M. STEPHENSON (2676):—Mr. Snark and brothers, I have no written report to make on this occasion. The main part of the report this year covers my trip to the Pacific coast. I attended the first meeting at Spokane, Wash., a joint meeting attended by the Vicegerents of the Inland Empire and the State of Idaho. From there I went to Seattle, Seattle to Portland, Ore., Portland, Ore., to San Francisco, and down the Pacific coast to the Mexican border. On account of the sudden death of Brother Leiter's wife, he has been unable to give the time and attention to Hoo-Hoo during the past year that he used to give. We held a meeting in the city of Portland, which was followed by a concatenation in June, which, I believe, will put Hoo-Hoo in better standing in Portland than it has ever been before. In Seattle, in the selection of the Vicegerent, Brother L. R. Fifer, I think I can say, without exception, without desiring to make injurious or harmful remarks directed to any man, that there never has been a man that has filled the office of Vicegerent Snark who has worked harder or done more faithful or better work than has Brother Fifer during the past year in the State of Washington. (Applause.) Some of the brothers here probably do not understand, and I do not intend to go into the matter in detail, but Brother Fifer had, probably, a harder field to cover than any other Vicegerent in any other part of the country, during the past year. And I want to say to you that Brother Fifer deserves at the hands of Hoo-Hoo any bouquets that you may throw his way and all the credit that you ought to give him for his good work. He has been a true and faithful Hoo-Hoo; he has worked hard, not for his own interests, but in the interest of the order, and he has shown some people in the State of Washington that Hoo-Hoo is alive and will continue to live and prosper. At the banquet held, following the concatenation, at the Washington Hotel, we had a song that was written by Brother Fifer, sung by 300 members at the banquet. That song was published in the Bulletin, and I have no doubt that you have seen it. It was received with open-heartedness by every man there, and every man present heartily entered into the spirit of that song. I think that song did more to heal any wounds and remedy whatever troubles they may have had in the State of Washington than anything else. As to California, Brother Trower is here to speak for himself. We held a concatenation in the City of Reno, Nevada, the first that had been held for several years, and I think that put Hoo-Hoo in good shape in that State for years to come. That was a high-class concatenation and there was a high quality of attendance and initiates.

In Southern California Brother Bate held the first concatenation ever held on the Pacific Ocean, at Venice, which, also, was a high-class concatenation, and Brother Jarrett, of the City of Mexico, was present at that concatenation and promised to be present at the annual here; but he has not arrived yet.

The order is in better shape than it ever has been on the Pacific Coast. The members on the Pacific Coast, almost to a man, state and claim that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo owes what it is, what it has been and what it will be to the efforts of that faithful Hoo-Hoo, James H. Baird, our present Scrivenoter. (Applause.) They seem to appreciate his work even more than we, who are closer to him, do. I find more readers of the Bulletin on the Pacific Coast, who take an interest in things and are live Hoo-Hoo through and through, than anywhere else. They are glad to see you; they talk Hoo-Hoo; they blow for Hoo-Hoo. Fred S. Palmer is Vicegerent for the Central District of California. We made a trip to Sacramento. The train couldn't carry us and we went on a boat. We went to Fresno and all over the State the Pacific Coast Hoo-Hoo turned out. They want Hoo-Hoo to live and be a representative lumbermen's organization. They want good fellowship; they don't want any strife. As one man has very aptly said, "There is no place in Hoo-Hoo for anything but the best of feeling, the best fellowship and the love of mankind," and they will not stand for anything else on the Pacific Coast.

I have attended concatenations in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia, two in Washington, California and Nevada, and every Hoo-Hoo I have met is proud of the order and wants to see the order go forward and succeed, and they all want to pay a tribute to that hard-working man, a man that has been loyal and has helped to make Hoo-Hoo what it is, our worthy Scrivener, James H. Baird. (Applause.)

THE COMMITTEES.

THE SNARK:—Brothers, I will now announce the committees, and reserve the right to make any additions to them later.

(The committees as announced by the Snark, with the additions made later, were as follows):

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS:—W. A. Hadley, Canada, Chairman; J. F. Wilder, Mississippi; John Oxenford, Indiana; G. A. Murray, North Carolina; Frank W. Trower, California; J. H. Dickinson, New York; E. D. Tennant, Canada; S. N. Acree, Mississippi.

NOMINATIONS—Harry Darlington, Illinois, Chairman; A. A. Rudy, West Virginia; C. J. Baer, Arkansas; T. L. O'Donnell, Mississippi; D. W. Richardson, North Carolina; J. A. Kirby, Louisiana; F. W. Trower, California; William Etsweiler, Pennsylvania; W. C. Fellows, Alabama.

AUDITING—J. C. McGrath, Arkansas, Chairman; J. F. Judd, Missouri; W. T. Latham, North Carolina.

RESOLUTIONS—W. M. Stephenson, Minnesota, Chairman; W. J. Kilduff, North Carolina; J. A. Kirby, Louisiana; S. F. Chapman, North Carolina; G. A. Murray, North Carolina; Z. W. Whitehead, North Carolina; Albert Cone, Illinois.

(Following appointment of committees a lengthy discussion ensued on the matter of the order making suitable recognition of the splendid work Mr. Vanderbilt has done for forestry in the South. Several eloquent speeches were made extolling the great service he has rendered through establishment of his magnificent estate at Asheville, serving as an object lesson as well in agriculture, dairying and stock-raising, as in forestry. The discussion terminated by referring the matter to committee on resolutions with instruction that the appreciation of Hoo-Hoo all over the country of Mr. Vanderbilt's efforts be fully covered.)

Second Session, Friday, July 19.

(The meeting was late in assembling, following the splendid concatenation held Thursday night, and the enjoyable session-on-the-roof which followed. None of the committees being ready with reports it was decided to hold nothing more than a formal session Friday morning, as the trip to Biltmore was planned to start immediately after lunch. The convention was called to order by Snark Boggess in the presence of a few members, and was immediately adjourned, after the announcement of several additions to the committees appointed Thursday.)

Third Session, Saturday, July 20.

(Meeting called to order by the Snark at 10:40 a.m.)

THE SNARK:—Brothers, the meeting will now come to order. We very much regret the delay of report of Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, but it will be ready to report in a short time. In the meantime we will hear from the other committees. Is the Auditing Committee ready to report?

REPORT OF AUDITING COMMITTEE.

We, your Auditing Committee, have examined the books and statement of J. H. Baird, Scrivener, so far as totals are concerned, and have compared balance shown in statement with bank pass book, and find same to agree.

(Signed) J. F. JUDD.

J. C. McGRATH.

W. T. LATHAM.

THE SNARK:—Brothers, you have heard the report of the Auditing Committee. What is your pleasure?

T. L. O'DONNELL (14385):—I move that the report of the committee be accepted.

(The motion was carried, and the report was accepted.)

THE SNARK:—Brothers, we have some letters here to be read, and while waiting for the reports these letters will be read by Brother Hadley.

(Ex-Snark Hadley read a number of greetings from prominent absent members. He read also the invitations extended from various cities for the next annual meeting. The invitation from St. Louis was submitted by Brother J. F. Judd, same being a very handsomely engraved four-page affair got up by the Convention Bureau of St. Louis, supplemented by personal letters from Gov. Hadley, the Mayor of St. Louis, and the Associated Retailers of St. Louis.)

(The invitation on behalf of the city of Indianapolis was submitted by Brother John Oxenford, and was received with applause.)

(The invitation from Chicago was in the form of a lengthy letter from Brother J. Newton Nind, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in which he referred to the invitation extended at last annual meeting for the meeting to be held this year at Ottawa Beach. Brother Nind wrote that while that invitation was extended in good faith, it is fortunate as things have turned out that it was not accepted—that a change in the management of the hotel was made quite unexpectedly, and that the new proprietors have been called upon to make such changes and improvements as made it impossible for us to have held a meeting there this year. His invitation and suggestion was that the next annual meeting convene in the city of Chicago, and from that point take another lake cruise on the City of Grand Rapids, visiting Milwaukee, Cheboygan, Menominee and other points on Lake Michigan en route up to Mackinac Island and return. Brother Nind wrote enthusiastically of this trip, and his letter elicited applause.)

MR. HADLEY:—Worthy Snark, I have a suggestion to make; that while waiting for these committees we might give any brother an opportunity to say anything that he has to say for the good of the Order—if anyone has anything on his mind that he wants to explode.

THE SNARK:—Referring to the letter from Brother Bolling Arthur Johnson, I want to express his deep regret over his inability to be with us, owing to other important business and engagements. He has rendered the Supreme Nine invaluable assistance throughout the whole year, which the entire Supreme Nine, as well as the whole Order, I believe, thoroughly appreciates. We will be glad to hear any suggestion for the good of the Order from any member.

D. W. RICHARDSON.—Brother Snark, I desire to make a motion which I believe would be for the good of the Order. I move that the Snark appoint a committee to draw up resolutions to be sent to Mr. Bolling Arthur Johnson expressing our regret over his inability to be with us.

W. J. KILDUFF (406):—I second the motion.

(The motion was unanimously carried and the Snark appointed Brothers Z. W. Whitehead, Chairman; John Oxenford and W. A. Hadley.)

THE SNARK:—Brothers, you have heard the invitations extended us by Chicago, St. Louis, Toledo, Waycross, Ga., Ottawa Beach and Indianapolis. What is your pleasure?

MR. JOHN OXENFORD:—Gentlemen, I will just say to you that we have the greatest, the largest and most complete interurban center in the United States. We have the next largest railroad center. There is no point in the United States that you can go to as well as you can from Indianapolis, except Chicago. Any member from any portion of the country can reach Indianapolis conveniently. We have the greatest number of magnificent salesrooms; we have untold miles of paved streets and pike roads that are used in every direction, north, west and south through the States of Ohio and Michigan, and there is a great number of people who make Indianapolis a center when out upon tours. We are ready and willing to give you all the entertainment you can possibly stand. I assure you that you will be very glad to leave, when you have finished with our hospitality, to get a rest. (Applause.)

J. F. JUDD:—I wish to make a few remarks in regard to St. Louis. We are not the largest interurban center in the world by any means. We have other facilities, though, for taking people around besides interurban roads. We can put them on the Mississippi River and send them to New Orleans if they get dissatisfied. We have the largest breweries in the world and plenty of them (laughter). We have the largest tobacco houses, where you can chew day and night. We have the largest shoe houses, and other things in St. Louis. As far as the people of St. Louis can, I am sure that they will treat you well. You can get to St. Louis very quickly from any part of the country. I hope that you will fully consider the invitation to hold the next annual in St. Louis. (Applause.)

D. W. RICHARDSON:—Brother Snark, I understand that we are now considering invitations for the holding of the next annual meeting? Inasmuch as there has been some suggestion that the office of the Scrivenoter be moved from Nashville, I think that we should consider the location of the headquarters as the place for the holding of the next annual meeting.

S. N. ACREE (372):—Mr. Snark, I move you that the different invitations from the different cities for the holding of the next annual meeting be referred to the committee that has always handled such matters, the Supreme Nine.

J. C. McGRATH (2960):—I second the motion.

D. W. RICHARDSON:—Gentlemen, we ought not to do these things until we hear from the committees. There is some sentiment here that this method be changed to the former custom of placing it before the Order. We think that the Supreme Nine were dilatory in fixing the place of this meeting. Many of the members think we ought to go back to the old method of holding the meeting on the 9th of September, and that the meeting be selected by the convention.

J. F. JUDD:—I think that Brother Richardson's stand is a good one. I believe that the time of the holding of the meeting should be put back to September 9.

W. T. FORD (21116):—Brothers, I think that we should not be too hasty in deciding this question. This is a very important matter. I do not think the attendance would have been so small this year if the meeting had had more advertising, and if we decide at this time where the next meeting is to be held, the members will have 14 months in which to make proper arrangements. I think that we ought to wait for the committees to report, as possibly there will be some suggestions on this subject from the committees.

MR. BAIRD:—I would like to speak briefly in explanation of this. I have no possible interest as to where the next meeting is held, or when; but I want to say that at the last annual meeting there was no change in the Constitution and By-Laws on this subject. The Constitution and the Ritual have always provided that Hoo-Hoo day be September 9—the ninth day of the ninth month. Almost since the beginning we have had discussions on the question of September 9 being an inopportune time for the holding of our annual meeting, as many of our members take vacations in June, July and August and return home to resume their business duties, and it is impossible for them to get away a second time. Furthermore, it has been urged that the schools open about September 5, and that this makes it impossible for some of our members to attend. These arguments have prevailed twice to the extent of causing us, by consent, to suspend the constitution touching the date of meeting, and on three occasions the matter was left to the Supreme Nine to select the time and place of the meeting. On second thought, I believe in the case of the Dallas meeting, the place was fixed by the annual meeting, and the time alone was left to the Supreme Nine. At the last annual meeting the matter came up in about the way I have described, and we were discussing as to when would be a good time to hold the meeting. Many suggestions were made, but the final consensus of opinion was that it should be between June 15 and July 15. Many of you will recall that Brother J. Newton Nind, who lives in Grand Rapids, having a summer home somewhere on the lakes, extended us a very cordial invitation to meet at Ottawa Beach. At that time I believe it was said that the hotel was undergoing repair, but that at the proper time they would desire to be heard from with an invitation to hold the meeting. Brother Nind went to Europe and could not be communicated with at the time this matter was taken up by the Nine. I wrote the proprietors of the hotel, but received no reply. Finally I received a reply from a place down here in North Carolina. It seems the man who owned the Ottawa Beach Hotel also owns a place down in this state. He wrote that he would look into the matter and write later. He never did write until recently, when he said that the hotel had not been completed. We heard nothing further from Brother Nind, and nothing from the hotel, when, early in May, it was deemed necessary to settle the matter, and the Supreme Nine considered a number of places. Asheville was considered the most eligible and was selected by a majority of one vote. We advertised the meeting place as vigorously as possible within so short a time. It seemed the people at Ottawa Beach have not yet got the hotel completed, but they advise us that they are in line to extend us a cordial invitation to meet there next year.

Gentlemen, I am opposed to leaving either the time or the place to the Supreme Nine. For twenty-two years we have been hammering into the heads of our members that the annual meeting of Hoo-Hoo occurs on the 9th day of the ninth month of the year. Despite the numerous publications that have been sent out from my office to the daily newspapers throughout the country, and a full publication of the matter in three issues of The Bulletin, our members seem not to know of the change made this year. There is nothing to be done, as I understand it, by the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws in connection with the selection of the place for the holding of the next annual meeting. I have nothing further to say, but that the place ought to be selected by the annual meeting. Everybody that wants to be heard ought to be heard. I don't see why we should not settle this matter now. Was it your idea, Mr. Richardson, that we should always hold our annual meetings at the place of the Scrivenoter's headquarters?

MR. RICHARDSON:—No, sir; but I think the place where the next annual is to be held should be the place of the location of the office of the Order. I think we should defer this matter until the place of the Scrivenoter's office is decided upon, and then we can go into the discussion of the matter of whether or not it is advisable to have our next meeting there. Many places have been mentioned, and we might decide to locate the Scrivenoter's office at the place that would be desirable for our next annual meeting. I will withdraw the pending motion and make a new motion. I move that we defer this matter of selecting the place of the next annual meeting until we decide upon the location of the Scrivenoter's office.

MR. O'DONNELL:—I second the motion. (Motion carried.)

THE SNARK:—Brothers, I will request ex-Shark Hadley to take the chair, while I hold a short conference with our worthy Scrivenoter.

(Ex-Snark Hadley took the chair.)

MR. BAIRD (as he was being called from the room by Snark Boggess):—Brothers, there is one matter about which I think we ought to reflect very seriously, and that is the date of the annual meeting. This is the second time we have departed from September 9, and I don't think we have gained anything by it. I will offer this resolution: "Resolved, That hereafter the annual meeting of Hoo-Hoo be held always, no matter where it is held, on September 9. (Applause.)

MR. ACREE:—I move its adoption.

MR. T. L. O'DONNELL:—Brother Snark, I fear from the applause just received, in support of Mr. Baird's resolution, that it is going to carry; but I think that this matter of the time of the holding of the meeting is a very serious one. September 9 is Hoo-Hoo Day, but I believe that everybody in this audience, after considering this matter from a practical standpoint, will decide that September is a very inopportune time for the holding of this convention; which is mostly attended by those who wish to take a vacation.

PRESENTATION TO SCRIVENOTER.

EX-SNARK HADLEY:—Brother O'Donnell, will you permit me to stop you, in the middle of your speech, so that we may take up another matter? You will be the first to speak afterward.

(At this point Snark Boggess called Mr. Baird from the meeting hall.)

EX-SNARK HADLEY:—Brothers, we have a matter that we want to bring up now, to be considered as confidential until the time comes when we wish to speak about it. I will ask Brother Trower to place this matter before you.

F. W. TROWER (12835):—Gentlemen, it occurred to a number of the members of the Supreme Nine that we should not allow this occasion to go by without expressing our appreciation of the splendid services rendered the order by our retiring Supreme Scrivenoter, for his sixteen or seventeen years of splendid and faithful service to the order, and in order to have the matter in shape so that it will be taken care of at this meeting, various members of the Supreme Nine decided to contribute toward a suitable remembrance to Brother Baird, which has since taken the form of a gold watch and chain, suitably inscribed, the idea being that this matter should be taken care of promptly so as to have it ready to be presented here. It was suggested that this should be taken care of by a few men, but the idea prevailed that it should not come from only a few of the members, but that the order itself should present the watch and that the funds for the defraying of the expense should come from the order. The men who first considered this question are perfectly willing to do this of their own accord, but we have thought that this token should come from the members of the order as a token of their regard for our Supreme Scrivenoter. (Applause.)

J. F. JUDD:—There is no doubt that the Supreme Nine and the others would have been glad to handle this, but I suppose, if I had been one of you folks who were not on the Supreme Nine and didn't have an opportunity to take part, I would have felt slighted, and I think that the balance of Hoo-Hoo would feel likewise. I think this is something that should come from the entire order. (Applause.)

D. W. RICHARDSON:—I move that the members be given an opportunity right now to contribute to this.

JOHN OXENFORD:—My understanding, from Mr. Trower's remarks, is that this should be paid for out of the treasury of the order. Each member of the order, then, is a participant in it.

H. B. DARLINGTON (22002):—I move that the money be taken from the funds of the order and that the Supreme Nine be authorized to pay for this token.

EX-SNARK HADLEY:—That is practically what Mr. Oxenford suggested.

T. L. O'DONNELL:—I would suggest that Mr. Trower state the amount.

F. W. TROWER:—It would not exceed the sum of $100. Let me tell you that we have the finest thing that could be secured in the City of Asheville. The token is one that any man might be proud of, I am sure.

EX-SNARK HADLEY:—Brothers, you have heard the motion by Brother Oxenford, seconded by several, that this slight token of our appreciation be paid for out of the funds of the order. Are you ready for the question?

(Thereupon a rising vote was taken and the motion was unanimously carried, with great applause.)

EX-SNARK HADLEY:—Now, Brother O'Donnell, you might proceed with your speech.

(Snark Boggess and Scrivenoter Baird were called back into the room.)

THE SNARK (Boggess):—Brothers, while out of this room I heard some of the noise that you are making, and I was fearful that there might be some criticism of our Supreme Scrivenoter. (Turning to Mr. Baird.) Brother Baird, I find, however, that there was not so much criticism, but that the brethren want to express, by means of this little token, their esteem and appreciation for the man who has been so loyal and devoted to our order as you have been during the many years of your service as Supreme Scrivenoter. To more substantially convey to you their appreciation of your work in the interests of this order, and as a token of their esteem, the members have selected this article and have requested me to present the same to you at this time.

(Snark Boggess handed Mr. Baird a velvet case, containing a handsome watch and chain.)

F. W. TROWER:—Gentlemen, I will read the inscription on the watch: On the inside of the cover is engraved the emblem of the order, the cat or the representation of the button, and the inscription is as follows: "A token of esteem to J. H. Baird, Supreme Scrivenoter, 1896-1912, from Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, twenty-first Annual, Asheville, N. C., July 18-20, 1912." And to the chain is suspended the Hoo-Hoo button, with Mr. Baird's number, 408, engraved thereon. On the outside back case appear in monogram the initials familiar to all Hoo-Hoo, "J. H. B."

MR. J. H. BAIRD:—Gentlemen, I scarcely know how to express my appreciation of this action that you have taken. The sentiment and the way you express it I appreciate even more than this beautiful watch that you have given me. But I want to add incidentally that you could not have given me anything that I have wanted longer or needed more. Gentlemen, I appreciate what Brother Boggess has said. I was elected Scrivenoter sixteen years ago. I bumped into the job without knowing much about the duties of the position, and I felt for a long time that it was a lame sort of service that I was able to render, and it has never been much more than a lame service as the years have gone on; but I have tried to do something to build up a spirit of fraternity among lumbermen of this country. The real work of building up Hoo-Hoo has been done by the Vicegerents and the Supreme Nine. These men have never been paid a cent for their work and time. There must be something real and genuine in Hoo-Hoo that will cause men to work and incur heavy expense. The Vicegerents have usually come out at a loss. Usually the loss was the limit of what they could afford to lose. I feel that I have been more highly honored than any other man in Hoo-Hoo. I appreciate your sentiment and this beautiful token that you have given me. If I attempted to say all that I feel I would be talking here until all of you men had gone away. (Applause.)

F. W. TROWER:—I just want to say one word more. Today the eyes of every member of the fraternity are centered upon Asheville, as the Mohammedan thinks of Mecca, the center of all. I am sure that there is no one event of this occasion that will bring more pride and satisfaction to those members in the mountains and on the plains, and scattered all over this country and foreign countries, than the presentation of this little token of esteem to our retiring Scrivenoter. It seems to me, in fact, I am sure, that there are many of us, if we had inscribing to do, would give to him not only a token of esteem, but a token of affection, for the members of the order have become so attached to our Scrivenoter that we cannot bear to realize that this is the last year that he is to serve us in that office. The real values in life are not the things that are tangible. Real success in life is not measured by the dollars you accumulate, but by the number of friends you have made. By this standard J. H. Baird has attained the very highest success. With this token goes the esteem and the heartfelt sentiment of every member of Hoo-Hoo, I am sure, and as it is a token of time, we hope that every hour of all the days of the many years that our Brother Baird carries this watch may be filled with happiness and health. (Applause, followed by hearty Hoo-Hoo yell for Mr. Baird.)

S. N. ACREE:—Gentlemen, as he says he has never had a good watch before, I will show him how to put it on.

(Mr. Acree placed the watch in Mr. Baird's pocket and adjusted the chain, amid laughter.)

EX-SNARK HADLEY:—Gentlemen, we will now permit Mr. O'Donnell to finish his remarks.

TIME OF MEETING DISCUSSED.

T. L. O'DONNELL:—Gentlemen, I may be mistaken in my views, but whatever I have to say is with a view to making these annual meetings more successful and more largely attended. If the place of the meeting is decided on by the annual or by us who are here, as Brother Baird's motion provides, something may occur between the date of the annual and the date of the next annual that might make it necessary to change the place of meeting. If the constitution and by-laws require the annual meeting to designate the place for holding the next annual meeting, and it is done, there is no provision for making a change. Should the annual meeting be held at some place on the lakes, on September 9, we people in the South would be suffering under a temperature of 90 or above and wearing the thinnest clothes that we possibly get hold of. At that time we have not purchased our winter clothing, if we have the wherewithal, but if the meeting was to be held in the South, in September, the people in Canada and even further South would have on their heavy clothing and would come South and kick about it being so hot. This is really a commonsense thing, but it amounts to keeping people away from the annuals when they are held at either of the extremes. I think that September is a very inopportune time to hold the meeting. Down our way everybody that has had an opportunity to take a vacation has taken it by September, and we are all supposed to be at work September 1.

S. N. ACREE:—It has been my pleasure to cover the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Florida in connection with my business, and I have always been an enthusiastic Hoo-Hoo. Whenever I have had the funds I have gone to the concatenations. In my recent travels through Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama, I believe that I have met two hundred and fifty Hoo-Hoo who have asked me why the time for holding the meeting was changed. A sentiment in regard to the ninth of September permeates this order just like the animosity existing between Tom O'Donnell and Jim Kirby—they have it in their systems and they are trying to get it out. We ought to put the date of this meeting back to September 9.

G. A. MURRAY (4189):—I have never before attended a Hoo-Hoo Annual for different reasons, but in a matter of this kind it would be an utter impossibility to please everybody. Hoo-Hoo covers a big portion of the country. We are glad to welcome those from Canada and California, from Florida and Michigan, and it would be utterly impossible to select any time that would suit all sections. I believe in matters of this kind that we must do away with sections and personal wishes and work for the interests of Hoo-Hoo.

ALBERT CONE (7304):—As I understand the status of the matter, September 9 is the regular meeting date, and the Supreme Nine fixes the place, but the annual meeting may recommend to the Supreme Nine its wishes. It seems to me, however, the motion to which we are speaking now is merely an indorsement of our present constitution and by-laws, merely an expression of our views, that in no case should we depart from that particular date. I do not wish to go as far as Brother O'Donnell in arguing that the date itself should be absolutely and positively changed, although I recognize there is great merit in some of the arguments he presents. There is probably no meeting place in the country which would satisfy all of the objections that he makes on the part of the members from the far North and the far South, unless it should be the City of Chicago. It is a peculiarity of our climate that we could give you almost any kind of weather at any time of the year that you might select. I believe that it would be unfortunate if we should have a time fixed so rigid as not to be susceptible of any change, in the judgment of the Supreme Nine or the annual meeting.

THE SNARK:—Brother Baird will please restate his motion.

MR. BAIRD:—It was not a motion, but a resolution designed to bring out full discussion. It was to the effect, as I recall it, that no matter where our meetings are held hereafter, that they be held on the 9th of September. I admit that there is force in what Mr. O'Donnell has said about our business year beginning on September 9. The main point that I had in mind was that the place of the meeting should be selected by the annual and not left to the Supreme Nine. If the place is fixed by the annual meeting, it is fixed a year ahead. There is then no question coming up about who is going to be Snark, etc. If place of meeting is left to the Supreme Nine there is always sooner or later somebody to make the charge that the place was selected with reference to some man's candidacy for office. No such charge has ever been true, but it is an added embarrassment that ought not to be put upon the Supreme Nine. We have never suffered much at any place where we have held our annual meetings. I have never been any place where I have suffered from chills or very severely from the heat. No matter where the meetings are held in the future I will attend them. (Applause.)

(A vote was then taken upon Mr. Baird's resolution and it was adopted unanimously.)

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

MR. HADLEY:—Worthy Snark, I am going to ask Brother Trower to read the report of the Committee on Constitution and By-laws.

Mr. Trower read the report of the committee as follows:

Your committee appointed on Constitution and By-Laws has carefully considered changes proposed by Snark Bogges and Brother Leonard Bronson.

Your committee does not favor either numerous or radical changes in our Constitution and By-Laws at this time, believing that what the order most needs is a more rigid enforcement of its laws and regulations rather than the enactment of new laws.

Your committee, however, recommends the repeal and elimination of Section 6 of Article 4, providing for a Supreme Representative.

Your committee recommends that for Supreme Scrivener of the order be chosen and elected a capable man whose entire time and talents can be devoted to duties of the office; this Supreme Scrivener to do so much of the work done during the past two years by the Supreme Representative as is found possible and compatible with proper attention to the administrative duties of his office.

To give force and effect to the general recommendations your committee recommends that the last clause of By-Law 2 be changed to read as follows:

"He shall receive an annual salary of $3,200 and shall be empowered to employ a chief clerk who shall be a member of the order, and whose official title shall be Assistant Scrivener, at an annual salary not exceeding $1,800, and such additional clerical help as the work of the Scrivener office may require, all assistance and clerical help being selected and employed under the direction and supervision of the Snark and Senior Hoo-Hoo."

To further give effect to the recommendations herein made by your committee, we recommend that a new By-Law be added as follows, to become By-Law 3:

"The Scrivener shall devote his entire time and talents to the duties of his office. It shall be his duty in addition to those set forth in By-Law 2, to attend such concatenations as the other duties of his office will permit; to effect the reinstatement of desirable delinquent members; to see that all concatenations conform to the ritual and spirit of the order, and to eliminate all unnecessary expenses, and to see that all moneys not expended shall go into the Treasury of the order, said Supreme Scrivener to carry out all his duties under the direction of the Supreme Nine. The Scrivener's necessary traveling expenses shall be paid from the funds of the order."

The adoption of the above new by-law makes necessary the renumbering of the remaining by-laws to become respectively 4, 5, 6 and 7.

Your committee further recommends that at its earliest convenience the Supreme Nine carefully prepare additional suggestions and instructions to be sent Vicegerent urging upon him that greater care be exercised both as to the character and standing of men initiated and the conduct of concatenations, to the end that the personnel of Hoo-Hoo shall be brought to a higher standard, and all its meetings be invested with greater decorum and dignity.

F. W. TROWER:—Gentlemen, I presume it is my duty to move the adoption of the first clause.

J. W. WILDER:—I second the motion.

MR. FORD:—Is this to be a vote by ayes or by States?

THE SNARK:—All voting is viva voce, unless some member wishes to call for a vote by States.

J. A. KIRBY:—I would like to move that we adopt the recommendations of the committee in their entirety.

ALBERT CONE:—I understand that any member may call for a division of the report, but it seems to me to properly meet the views of all of us, and unless some one objects, I shall be pleased to second Brother Kirby's motion.

J. A. KIRBY:—I believe that I am voicing the sentiment of the majority of those in attendance when I propose an additional amendment to the effect that a permanent headquarters be selected for Hoo-Hoo, and that such permanent headquarters be the place of the Scrivener's office.

MR. RICHARDSON:—I second the amendment.

(Upon vote the amendment was unanimously carried.)

J. A. KIRBY:—I will now call for the question on the adoption of the entire report as amended.

J. H. BAIRD:—Gentlemen, I think we ought to have some discussion on this. This is the nub of the whole proceeding. It is not detracting from the report of the committee to say that this matter ought to receive careful consideration. This is a vital matter. The committee, I am sure, is not inflamed with any idea that what it recommends has to go. Has the committee done the right thing in fixing these salaries? Have they properly defined the duties of this man? Is that in accordance with your ideas? Let us consider this matter carefully. We have not much else to do. If it is all right there is nothing to say about it, but if it is not, now is the time to speak out.

J. F. JUDD:—I think we are all ready to vote on the question.

J. A. KIRBY:—It has just occurred to me that there was a grave oversight in my motion to select permanent headquarters. Should I not name the place?

PERMANENT HEADQUARTERS ESTABLISHED.

(The question was called for and was carried and the report of the committee was adopted.)

J. H. BAIRD:—Now we have made the constitution and by-laws to read that a permanent headquarters shall be selected. Where are the headquarters to be located?

J. A. KIRBY:—I am under the impression that I should have named the place where the headquarters should be located; but as we all understand there are several candidates for Scrivener, upon the selection of the Scrivener may depend the selection of the place of the permanent headquarters. I think the Scrivener should follow the office and not that the office should follow the Scrivener. (Applause.) I have very definitely in my mind a preference, and I believe that preference is shared by many present; but there is one thing to be considered; there is one candidate here who offers a permanent home for Hoo-Hoo, without cost to the order, rent free, and he is backed up in that proposition by the best people of his State, and that might have some bearing on the question. For that reason I have hesitated to designate a place in my motion. To get the matter before the meeting, I move that St. Louis be selected as the place of the permanent headquarters of the office of Hoo-Hoo.

J. W. WILDER:—I second the motion.

E. D. TENNANT (13070):—I move, as an amendment, that Chicago be selected.

F. L. JOHNSON, JR. (4118):—I second the amendment.

CARL J. BAER (22202):—Brother Snark, I want to read a few telegrams from the State of Arkansas. I believe this question is one of the most important questions now before Hoo-Hoo, not excepting the question of the election of officers of this great order. I believe, gentlemen, that we should get down to business right now, and say where is the best place for Hoo-Hoo to live and die, if she is to die. We have never had a permanent headquarters. For sixteen years the headquarters have been in the South, where a great number of the members of this order live. I want to present here now the claims of Little Rock, Ark. I have here a map that has been prepared and which, possibly, some of you might wish to look at, to learn something about where Hoo-Hoo had its growth. Arkansas has 706 members; Missouri, 744; Louisiana, 932; Oklahoma, 585; Mississippi, 380; Texas, 1,252. (Applause.) St. Louis is a beautiful city, Chicago is a beautiful city, and there are other cities far ahead of Little Rock in some respects, but, my dear brothers, we are growing; the time is coming when Arkansas and the South will be the center of the lumber industry of the entire North American continent. Shall we put Hoo-Hoo, which is an organization of lumbermen, in a place where it would be far distant from the center of this great industry? The State of Arkansas is the mother of this great order, and no matter how many better States there may be, or how many places there may be better for us to go to than to Arkansas, we certainly owe it to old Arkansas to go back home and live where its mother lives, and I say that we ought to go to Arkansas and establish permanent headquarters. I say to you to consider Little Rock as the best city for such a purpose. I will take the time to read to you communications from a large number of Hoo-Hoo in the State of Arkansas, from the Governor and many prominent citizens of the State—invitations to Hoo-Hoo to come to Little Rock with its headquarters. Remember that two-fifths of your entire membership are located in the South, with all due respect to the North, the East and the West. We know that the timber of Michigan and the great Northwest has been pretty well cut out. If we consider the number of lumbermen in the South, 100,000, and the number of Hoo-Hoo in the States I have mentioned, and other portions of the South, we will vote to put the headquarters at Little Rock. Arkansas is as big as any other State when we consider the number of its mills; it is as big as any other State in the Union from the standpoint of lumber on the yards. It is a great lumber center, the greatest indeed of standing stumpage in the United States today. This fraternal order of Hoo-Hoo should be ten times as large as it is. Possibly this meeting is one of the smallest that we have ever held, because it has been difficult to get the matter of the change of date properly before the members, but the members should get together on this proposition regardless of who is to be elected Snark or Scribe-noter. As a member of this order and as a lumberman in the State of Arkansas, I ask you to come to Little Rock to establish your future home. (Applause.)

MR. F. L. JOHNSON, JR. (4118):—Worthy Snark and gentlemen, we have just heard from the gentleman from Arkansas. With all due respect toward Arkansas, there is one thing that we have got to take into consideration in considering the question of permanent headquarters. In making this selection the advisability of selecting a point that the Supreme Nine can get to conveniently must be considered. Now, the membership of this body covers the entire country. If you locate the headquarters at a point that is not advantageous and convenient, you will create an additional expense. Now, from a business point of view, a location that is not central is detrimental. You cannot get over that fact. It is true that Arkansas is the mother of Hoo-Hoo, but to establish our permanent headquarters, even in Arkansas or in Tennessee or in North Carolina or away up in Michigan or Canada, would not be practical; it would not be good judgment. When you pick this point, remember that you must select a point that is geographically so situated that each member of the Nine can reach it whenever necessary, at the least expense, in the quickest time. I might suggest the City of Chicago, but I would not want to go on record as making a claim for Chicago, if there is any other point that is far better situated. I have been a member of the Supreme Nine. I have attended these meetings, and I have heard others who were on the Supreme Nine speak on this subject, and they have all said, when they wanted to call a meeting, that they preferred Chicago. Why? Because it was centrally located and they could get there advantageously. It is not a question of where we are going to locate this office with respect to any locality where the membership is located. What we want is to locate the office permanently to the best advantage somewhere in the United States, Canada or Mexico; but we must select a point situated conveniently geographically, so that every member of the Supreme Nine can get there advantageously and quickly. Now, we have been spending in some ways that have not been good business. Why should we incur this additional expense, to send nine men several hundred miles further than necessary, at extra expense over the cost of going to a more centrally located city? I say that we should select either Chicago or St. Louis. (Applause.)

MR. OXENFORD:—Mr. Snark and gentlemen, three years ago our Brother Ramsey and other members of the organization extended to us a very warm invitation from Hot Springs for the holding of our annual meeting and gave us many assurances regarding comfortable weather at that place at the time of our meeting. We held our annual meeting at Hot Springs four years ago. With all due respect to my brother over here, and to the membership in Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and the other adjacent territory, I want to say that the attendance at that annual was less than 200, and 40 of those were women, 35 or 36 of those women being from the North. The largest part of the attendance came from Iowa, Indiana, Illinois and other Northern territory. If so few of the members of the order in such a vast territory, with such a large membership, would not attend the annual meeting, the only real meeting that we have throughout the year, why should permanent headquarters be located in that vicinity? Any central point, Detroit, Chicago or St. Louis—and Chicago is the most logical, in my estimation and judging from my experience as a travelling man with forty years' experience—is desirable; St. Louis comes second. Perhaps, for the good of the order, it might be best to locate the headquarters at St. Louis. All of my personal preferences or interest in the matter are met, as far as I am concerned, if you select any logical, central point.

E. D. TENNANT:—Gentlemen, the previous speakers have mentioned a point where all Hoo-Hoo can most easily get together, and with all due respect to our Southern brothers, I tell you now that if the permanent headquarters of this order are placed in the South, the interest of the Canadian Hoo-Hoo is going to die out. We cannot keep it alive. In order to keep the order going up there, we have got to keep in touch with Canadian Hoo-Hoo more than we have done in the past. Our chief trouble is that we have not been in real touch with Hoo-Hoo. This is the first time that I have ever met Brother Baird, your Scrivenoter for sixteen years. A large number of the officers are not acquainted with any of the members of the order, chiefly because the headquarters have been so far South that we have found it impossible to come South to get in touch with you. Chicago is as far from us as any point in the South is from Chicago. From Vancouver Chicago is over 2,000 miles, but still our Vancouver brethren have business in Chicago. Now, we want a point that is a business point. We do business in Chicago, from the North, South, East and West. We all do business there. We all have occasion to go to Chicago. Many of our members pass through Chicago every day at Christmas time. I might say that fully 40 per cent of our entire membership go through Chicago when going East. If the permanent headquarters were located in Chicago wouldn't it be reasonable to suppose that these men would drop in and get acquainted with our Scrivenoter and get acquainted with the order and keep in touch with you? I tell you that it is not a question of North and South, but it is a question of vital importance to Canadian Hoo-Hoo that you select some place that we can keep in close touch with. If you take the headquarters to Chicago the order will grow by leaps and bounds. There is a great field in our country for Hoo-Hoo effort. Many of the Canadian lumbermen are your own brothers and they have gone there and prospered. Many other Canadian lumbermen will be induced to become members and take an interest in the order if the headquarters are located in Chicago, but if you take the headquarters further South, the order will, I fear, suffer very much. Now, I do not desire to make any unjust criticism. Your hospitality is more than I had expected, but knowing the difficulties that we have had in our part of the country in keeping Hoo-Hoo alive, and the fact that we have not been in close touch with the other members of the order in this country, and in order to keep in touch with you in the future, I think that you have got to have a place where the members can drop in and get in touch with the order, a place that they can conveniently and quickly reach. (Applause.)

MR. G. A. MURRAY:—Mr. Snark, I think we are wasting time, but I am for Hoo-Hoo. It seems to me that there are but two places, one of them Chicago and the other St. Louis, and I move that we vote on one of those two places. I am an absolute Southerner, from A to Z, but for the benefit of Hoo-Hoo, I think we ought to have the most advantageous place. Chicago and St. Louis are two places that I have never visited, and I may never go there for various reasons, but I move that we vote now and determine which one of these two places shall be the home of Hoo-Hoo in the future.

J. F. WILDER:—I don't want to draw any line between the North and the South, from Canada to Florida, but I want to move with all of the power and the force that I have, that we have our headquarters at a point which will be the most easily reached and will be most satisfactory to the majority of Hoo-Hoo. I believe that St. Louis is the most logical point.

MR. BAER:—I want to ask for information. How many meetings of the Supreme Nine have been called during the last twenty years? I am told that there were only four, because it was so expensive for the Supreme Nine to get to a central point. If I am correctly informed, that expense has not exceeded one thousand dollars.

EX-SNARK HADLEY:—Worthy Snark, I did not intend to take any part in this discussion, but the brother from Arkansas has asked a question that I would like to answer. I can say for the information of the brother that I do not think there have been more than four meetings of the Supreme Nine called during twenty years, but I think it is advisable and has been suggested to this convention that we should hold more meetings of the Supreme Nine and the House of Ancients. We have an Executive Council that should meet and decide what is best for this organization, not only for the North, the South, but the East and the West. In view of the fact that we should have more meetings, we should facilitate these meetings and fix them at some point that can be conveniently reached. The members of the Supreme Nine should be distributed geographically at points which they can leave and meet at some centrally located point without great expense or too much time being consumed in traveling. We are meeting here today at a place that is in the South, and we have two representatives from the State that is the mother of Hoo-Hoo; but you have with you today two members from Canada, just as many from Canada as you have from Arkansas. That is a good demonstration of how this question works out at annual meetings. In answer to another argument of Brother Baer's, that we should move the headquarters of this order to a section where the timber is the thickest, that we should consider where we are going to sell our lumber. You have got to make friends among the people to whom you sell your lumber, and we have got to draw our members from all parts of the country. There is another timber belt, nearly as large as that of Arkansas, situated on the Pacific Coast, which includes the province of British Columbia and other parts of Canada, particularly in the East, where there is a large opportunity for Hoo-Hoo, and I refer particularly to Quebec, Nova Scotia and British Columbia, where there is a great deal of material that will probably measure up to the material of the South. I am not particularly interested in any section. I am what is known in some parts as a "foreigner," although I do not feel that I am. But I do want you to decide on some point where, if I want to attend an annual meeting or go to see about the business of the order of Hoo-Hoo, I can go in at least a day and a half or two days. I do think that we should have some point that will be centrally located with respect to this country and our country on the north, a place which will enable us to build up the order in every section. I thank you, gentlemen. (Applause.)

T. L. O'DONNELL:—I want to second the nomination of St. Louis.

F. L. JOHNSON, JR.:—I just want to say a few words in answer to my friend from Arkansas. As far as I am individually concerned, I want to thank the people of Arkansas for their kind offer to provide a building, without rent, provide a future home. That alone is a very good idea. That is an idea that I have had in my head for ten years, that we ought to have some permanent headquarters and own the building ourselves. I think that every member here thoroughly appreciates the offer which Arkansas makes. I do not want to talk at this particular time about the advantages of Chicago. What I want to drive in your minds is this question: that we don't want to make any fatal mistake in the selection of the permanent home. We want to get that right first; then, when we have got that right, all these other wrongs that have been going on for a few years, to some people's minds, will promptly rectify themselves. Now, let us get down to rock bottom facts. Let us get on a clean basis and get located, so that it will be satisfactory to all interests. We cannot satisfy one little interest only, but we must take into consideration our brethren in Canada, in New York State, in Pennsylvania and other states. Hoo-Hoo is laid out along good lines, but let us get on a good business basis. Let us get this thing right down to a rock bottom point. Let us select some place that is centrally located, so that every individual, if it is necessary for him to transact Hoo-Hoo business, can get to it at the least possible expense. After we have done that, the next thing to consider is the building of a permanent home, put some of our money into it, and then we will have something to show for it. Personally, I want to thank Arkansas for what they are willing to do, but I say that we must select a central point and then consider the building of a home for our order.

J. A. Kirby:—If I may be pardoned, in order that everyone may understand the question and vote correctly, I move that St. Louis be selected as the permanent place for the headquarters of Hoo-Hoo; Brother Tennant moves to substitute Chicago. The question recurs on his amendment. Those voting aye will vote to substitute Chicago for St. Louis; those voting no, will oppose the substitution.

W. C. FELLOWS:—I move that we vote on the three places, and the place getting the lowest vote drop out; that we then take a second ballot, and the city receiving the largest vote be declared the selection.

J. A. KIRBY:—Then I withdraw my motion, which carries with it the amendment.

(A vote was then taken upon location of headquarters of the order, in accordance with the foregoing motion, and resulted as follows:)

	Chicago.	St. Louis.	Little Rock.
Alabama	157	157
Arkansas	706
California	851
Illinois	605
Indiana	248
Louisiana	932	...
Massachusetts	65
Mississippi	380	...
Minnesota	159
North Carolina	200	...
New York	299
Pennsylvania	332	...
South Carolina	40	...
Tennessee	196½	196½	...
Virginia	155
West Virginia	410
Canada	790
Ohio	367	...
Missouri	744	...
	3778½	3348½	863

(The result of the vote was announced by Mr. Albert Cone, who had been requested by the Scrivenoter to verify the vote and announce the result, which was done previous to the change of the vote of Arkansas.)

MR. BAER:—Arkansas votes for St. Louis.

MR. FORD:—Mr. Snark, I rise to a point of order. The vote has been announced, and he cannot change his vote now.

MR. CONE:—I find that the figures are correct, and that the vote for each place is less than a majority.

(A second ballot was immediately ordered, and resulted as follows:)

	Chicago.	St. Louis.	Little Rock.
Alabama	314
Arkansas	706
California	851
Illinois	605
Indiana	248
Louisiana	932	...
Massachusetts	65
Minnesota	159
Mississippi	380	...
Missouri	744	...
New York	299
North Carolina	200	...
Ohio	367	...
Pennsylvania	332	...
South Carolina	40	...
Tennessee	393	...
Virginia	155
West Virginia	410
Canada	790
	3582	4408	1020

(Arkansas vote was changed to St. Louis before result was announced.)

THE SNARK:—St. Louis, having received a majority of all the votes cast, is the choice of this annual meeting as the place for the location of the headquarters of this order.

S. N. ACREE:—Now, in view of the fact that St. Louis has won such a signal victory in this matter, and that we have done it without animosity or feeling, and we have done it because we feel we have made a compromise, I want to state to all of our friends in Canada and the United States that we want to get together with a big heart and a big liver and work for Hoo-Hoo, and work all together. (Applause.)

MR. BAER:—In behalf of Arkansas I want to indorse the brother's sentiments.

ALBERT CONE:—In behalf of Chicago I vote to make the selection of St. Louis unanimous. (Motion seconded and carried.)

G. A. MURRAY:—Mr. Snark, I am from North Carolina, and my personal preferences were in favor of Chicago, when I consulted my own personal convenience. Our delegation really had the success of the order at heart, and I want to say to our friends in the Northwest that when we voted for St. Louis it was not because we loved Chicago less.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

The report of the committee was read by the Chairman, W. M. Stephenson, as follows:

This annual meeting of Hoo-Hoo has been notable for its earnestness, entire harmony and good-will, and the feeling of optimism which prevails among those of us as face the larger and higher things which the future holds for our beloved Order. We have come, we have tarried briefly, we are about to depart. In the heart of Hoo-Hoo there is due appreciation of our hosts and our welcome here, though upon the lips of Hoo-Hoo there may tremble no words potent to voice it.

You of Asheville have carried us toward the sky that we might better view your beautiful city and its sheltered valley. Your four magnificent hotels, the Battery Park, Langren, Swannanoa-Berkeley and Margo Terrace, have sheltered us not merely comfortably but luxuriously. The concatenation was a notable one in both size of class and character of kittens, for which credit is chiefly due to Vicegerent J. M. English and the Hoo-Hoo of this city and State. Your local press has been very courteous and very able in its reports of our visit and our activities. As far as words may, we tender to all of you our thanks. Much that we cannot speak we trust that you will feel in the parting handclasp, and we hope also that there may abide permanently with you the beneficent spirit of Hoo-Hoo in such fullness as has overflowed the measure of your welcome and entertainment of his followers.

The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo is further deeply appreciative of the courtesy extended by George W. Vanderbilt in opening the Biltmore estate for the pleasure of visiting members. In Mr. Vanderbilt we recognize a man who has perhaps done a greater service for forestry and general conservation than any other in the United States. While few if any may hope to equal him in achievement, it is in the power of all in a measure to emulate his example and this we strongly recommend. The Scrivenoter is directed to forward Mr. Vanderbilt a copy of this resolution.

The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo wishes further to express its sincere thanks and appreciation to our brother, Vicegerent J. M. English, and his associated local Hoo-Hoo, for their untiring hospitable efforts of the week, and particularly for the open house maintained at the Asheville Club.

Your committee desires here to give formal expression of its appreciation and endorsement of the very able, efficient and impartial administration of the high and responsible office of Scriveonoter by our life-long brother and patriotic Hoo-Hoo, James H. Baird. Starting with the early history of the order many years ago, he has labored zealously and persistently for its upbuilding in both numbers and character—a work for the betterment of mankind and a strengthening of the ties of friendship and fraternal affection, preaching the principles of Hoo-Hoo as exemplifying the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. He has performed for the order and for mankind, building up an institution that shall live long after he shall have passed over the river, an enduring monument to all who have in the past or who may hereafter participate in its establishment.

Your committee notes with deepest sorrow the long list of members deceased during the past ten months, embracing the names of some of our oldest and most prominent members. Not to specify individuals, your committee notes with especial sadness the name of Brother W. B. Judson, No. 624, a man who always took an active interest in Hoo-Hoo and who just a few days before his sudden death wrote a long letter commending the principles of the order and making valuable suggestions for its future conduct. Your committee, on behalf of the entire order, extends to the bereaved families of our deceased members our deepest sympathy.

Your committee has read with interest the resolutions adopted at the concatenation held at Great Falls, Mont., December 15, 1911, and desires to embody those resolutions as a fit expression of what it believes to be the sentiment of this annual meeting.

Resolved, That we of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, in convention assembled at Great Falls, Mont., do most heartily endorse the splendid manner in which the ceremonial has been conducted. The amusement has been clean, entertaining and wholesome.

Be it further resolved, That we wish to go on record as favoring this advance move, and hope that Hoo-Hoo, wherever convened and at all ceremonials, will refrain from all reference to mother, wife and daughter, and will always hold in high reverence and respect the sanctity of mother, home and fireside.

(The report of the committee was adopted unanimously.)

(Mr. Stephenson read a telegram from Seattle, Wash., in regard to the concatenation held there on the night of July 18 as follows:)

Seattle, Wash., July 19, 1912.—Forty-five applications, forty initiated, seventy-five in parade. two hundred at banquet, all features big success. Jabberwock Letter, Vicegerent Davis of Portland, Ehrmantraut of Spokane, and Fau-Vel of British Columbia, in attendance. Everybody enthusiastic for Hoo-Hoo. Unanimously in favor of Stephenson for Scrivenoter, Trower and W. T. Lockwood, of Seattle, members of Supreme Nine. I resign Vicegerency at close of present term. All in attendance request appointment of Alexander T. Page, of Seattle, my successor. Wire his appointment, also names of all Supreme Nine elected.

L. R. FIFER, Vicegerent.

ST. LOUIS PLACE OF NEXT MEETING.

D. W. RICHARDSON:—Mr. Snark, I now move that we take up the invitations to hold our next annual meeting. (Motion seconded.)

Z. W. WHITEHEAD:—Mr. Snark, something has transpired within the last year or so which, I think, makes it eminently fit and proper that we hold our next annual meeting in St. Louis, and I think if we do we will strengthen the ties of Hoo-Hoo, and at the same time increase our membership and create a wholesome feeling of good fellowship in this order. (Applause.)

(Mr. Richardson's motion to hold the next annual meeting in St. Louis was unanimously carried.)

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS.

The report was read by the Chairman, H. B. Darlington, and was as follows:

To the Snark of the Universe: Your Committee on Nominations, appointed under the provision of Constitution for same, begs leave to submit the following proposals for members of the Supreme Nine of Hoo-Hoo for the Hoo-Hoo year, September 9, 1912, to September 9, 1913:

Snark of the Universe, F. W. Trower, San Francisco, Cal.
Senior Hoo-Hoo, J. M. English, Asheville, N. C.
Junior Hoo-Hoo, E. D. Tennant, Winnipeg, Canada.
Bojum, John Oxenford, Indianapolis, Ind.
Jabberwock, J. F. Wilder, Hattiesburg, Miss.
Arcanoper, J. B. Baker, Hodge, La.

Gurdon, George J. Michelsen, Rochester, N. Y.

There being four candidates before this annual for the important office of Scrivenoter, your Committee on Nominations has hesitated to take the responsibility of passing upon the merits of these several candidates and of choosing between them; all are true and devoted Hoo-Hoo and are well qualified to discharge the duties of the office. The committee therefore submits each of their names to the consideration of this annual meeting. These candidates are: W. M. Stephenson, St. Paul, Minn., present Supreme Representative of the order; J. C. McGrath, Little Rock, Ark.; George W. Burgoyne, Chicago, Ill., and W. T. Christine, Chicago, Ill.

Respectfully submitted,

HARRY B. DARLINGTON, Chairman, 22002.

CARL J. BAER, 22202.

JAS. A. KIRBY, 20625.

ALF A. RUDY, 13139.

WM. ETSWEILER, 16762.

W. C. FELLOWS, 3437.

T. L. O'DONNELL, 14385.

D. W. RICHARDSON, 8272.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

J. F. JUDD:—As the oldest member of Hoo-Hoo here today—and I do not think there is any one here today who has a number smaller than mine—I want to second the nomination of Brother F. W. Trower, of San Francisco. I want to thank the Nominating Committee for using the judgment they have displayed. I have made two trips across the continent to attend annual meetings, and I know that the Pacific Coast has always treated Hoo-Hoo as only the Pacific Coast can treat any one. I wish to state further that I believe that Brother Trower will have a big influence with this order this year. This is one year that we should select the best nine that could possibly be selected.

S. N. ACREE:—Mr. Snark and gentlemen, I move that the rules be suspended, that the nominations be closed and that the gentlemen recommended by the Nominations Committee be elected by acclamation to the several offices named. Of course I do not include the Scrivenoter.

MR. OXFORD:—I second the motion. (Motion carried.)

THE SCRIVENOTER:—I take pleasure in casting the vote accordingly. I think at this time that we ought to hear something from Brothers Judd and Kirby about this absent Southerner we have put on the Nine. They know him well.

J. F. JUDD:—I wish to state that the committee has made a splendid selection in the eight whom they recommended. I am satisfied that Mr. Baker, of Louisiana, with whom I am well acquainted, will do his duty in that Southern country.

S. N. ACREE:—If it is necessary, Mr. Snark, I can vouch for Mr. Wilder, of Mississippi. (Laughter.)

(The Snark-elect, Brother Frank W. Trower, was then escorted to the platform, and, in response to many calls for a "speech," accompanied by the Hoo-Hoo yell, spoke as follows:)

SNARK-ELECT TROWER:—Brothers Hoo-Hoo and Worthy Snark: I am under a strong sense of embarrassment in accepting this great honor, when I think of the splendid men, both living and dead, who have filled this office to which you have elected me. I am also sensible of the fact that there are many other worthy men, not only in our midst, but in this country and Canada, who could doubtless fill the office better than I can and be more successful, probably, than I shall be. I am also laboring under an additional embarrassment owing to the fact that I was sent here by the Hoo-Hoo of California for a specific purpose; first, to see that our State was represented, to show our interest in the order and in its good work, and, secondly, that I should use every effort within my power to put into the office of Snark a man who, I believe, every member of the order would desire to have. However, I shall have to leave this to some of my good friends to square me at home.

I also heard that some of the members desired to honor another gentleman by placing him in this office, a gentleman who, in the past, has done a great deal of good work for the order, a member in an Eastern State, Maryland; and when a member of the Nominating Committee told me of this, I told him I would be very glad indeed to work for this other gentleman. But it seems there is a sort of unwritten law of Hoo-Hoo that the man elected Snark must be at the meeting. Gentlemen, inasmuch as you have elected me, my hat is in the ring and my heart in the work. With your help we are going to make this a splendid Hoo-Hoo year. I believe thoroughly in the principles of Hoo-Hoo. No matter if this order should go out of existence, the principles that have called us together will always live and remain with us. The idea of getting lumbermen together in more fraternal relations will always bring them together whether under our banner or under no banner whatever. I do not think that any proper recognition has ever been made of the services that Hoo-Hoo has rendered to the lumbermen of the country. It has stimulated interest in association work by making men better acquainted, and also we do many things for the betterment of our members. This, however, is not a time to go into extended remarks along that line. California, and San Francisco particularly, will do what Hoo-Hoo can do to help their brethren. When we had our great disaster six years ago, Hoo-Hoo was the first organization that came to the help of the lumbermen, and when our worthy Scrivenoter, Brother Baird, wired to draw on the Scrivenoter for $2,000, it sent a thrill of pride through our hearts. At the same time our good brothers in Portland and Salt Lake City sent down contributions, but I am glad to say that we were able to retrieve our lost fortunes without using any of this money, and it was duly returned to the Order. California believes thoroughly in what Hoo-Hoo stands for. I, alone, cannot bring success to the work. I ask the cooperation of every Vicegerent appointed and also ask the help of every other officer and every man at this meeting. Again I thank you most heartily, gentlemen, for the honor that you have conferred upon me in electing me to this, the highest office in the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo. (Applause.)

(Loud calls were made for a speech from J. M. English, elected Senior Hoo-Hoo.)

J. M. ENGLISH:—Brother Snark and Hoo-Hoo: I was very much surprised yesterday when one of the brethren told me that I had been nominated for the office of Senior Hoo-Hoo. I want to say to you that I appreciate this honor more than I can express, coming, as it has, unsolicited and unexpected.

I do not feel that I am worthy of the honor, but in accepting it I pledge myself to cooperate with all members of the Supreme Nine and with every member of the order in whatever work there is to be done, and that I will to the very best of my ability work for the good of the order and its upbuilding. I fully realize that this means that I must get behind the proposition with all my energy and that I must have the cooperation of all the Vicegerents in whatever territory is assigned to me, and of each individual member, I feel that I will have this cooperation, and with this help I hope to make a good showing. I thank you for the honor conferred upon me, which I feel is rather an honor conferred upon the good old State of North Carolina. I sincerely hope the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo will have a glorious success, as I am thoroughly convinced that it is founded on the proper basis, and I see no reason why it should not be built up to even greater usefulness. I thank you. (Applause.)

(E. D. Tennant, Junior Hoo-Hoo, was escorted to the platform and spoke as follows:)

E. D. TENNANT:—Brother Snark and Gentlemen: It is indeed an honor that you have bestowed upon me, an honor that I hardly expected, and in accepting this office I do so not so much as an honor to myself, but as an honor to my country. (Applause.) I assure you that your brother Canadians will appreciate this honor very much, and western Canada especially will realize that their brothers to the south of them are anxious and willing that they should get into a closer bond of union in order to upbuild Hoo-Hoo. Since coming down here I have heard more of the genuine spirit than I have ever heard before. I have come in contact with a body of men the equal of any I have ever met before in my life, men who are whole-hearted lumbermen, and when I say "men who are whole-hearted lumbermen," I do not think that I can give them any higher compliment—men who are open-hearted, broad-minded, with opinions which they are quite willing to express, but willing to give in for the benefit of the whole. I have seen this exemplified this morning in no uncertain way, and this proves to me today that the men in this order can carry forward any movement that they enter into with the greatest success. I think I can get the boys in Western Canada behind me. I know I can double our membership, and my greatest ambition will be to help to make Hoo-Hoo an organization that all of us can be proud of. Let us raise the standard as high as possible where we can command respect of every other organization, whether lumbermen or others in the allied trades, and if we do that we shall have an order that will benefit all of us and enable us to get together in long life, health and happiness. (Applause.)

I wish again to thank you for the many kindnesses you have extended to me, and especially do I thank you for the many courtesies you have shown me in your Southern hospitality, which has been exceedingly warm and cordial. You have a beautiful and most delightful country here. I have never seen anything to equal the magnificent views from these hills. I will leave these parts with regret, but I assure you that I will come back some day to renew the acquaintances I have made on this occasion. I hope many of you will visit us in the Northwest whenever it is possible to do so. I thank you for your attention. (Applause.)

(John D. Oxenford, the Bojum-elect, was escorted to the platform by Messrs. Baird and Darlington, amid applause, and spoke as follows:)

MR. OXFENFORD:—Worthy Snark and Brothers: The hour is getting late and some of the brethren appear to need refreshments. (Laughter.) As my number indicates (1346), I am rather an old Hoo-Hoo. I have worked long in the ranks, have always refused to receive office, and have been elected now over my protest. With the able gentlemen you have seen fit to elect on the Nine (excluding myself), I hope that my shortcomings will be overlooked. It is unnecessary for me to say that I will do all that I can do for Hoo-Hoo, as I think my past record proves. (Applause.)

(J. F. Wilder, the newly elected Jabberwock, was escorted to the platform by Messrs. O'Donnell and Kirby, and said:)

J. F. WILDER:—Worthy Snark and Gentlemen: The Nominating Committee was not so kind to me as they were to some of the other gentlemen, whom they notified of their nomination, thus giving them an opportunity to write a speech. I really think it would have been very much better if I had had two or three weeks to think it over. I wish to say I thank you very much for the honor you do me. I think probably you have made a mistake, but I will do my very best to promote the interests of the order. I want it distinctly understood that I did not come here to solicit an office. I merely came along to look after the delegates from Mississippi and Louisiana, who need attention at times; but I myself, in traveling through this country, have needed an expert "surveyor" at times. I regret very much that I must go away from here. I wish I could stay here with you and have all these Hoo-Hoo with us. I am sure, however, if we should stay here very long the citizens of Asheville would want to move away and turn the city over to us. (Laughter.) I thank you for electing me to this office, and if I make any mistakes, they will come from the head and not from the heart. (Applause.)

SNARK-ELECT TROWER:—Brother Fifer, the newly-elected Custocatian, is now probably in Seattle recuperating from the strenuous time and the enjoyable features of the concatenation held there. Our newly-elected Arcanoper, Brother Baker, is also not able to be here. I will ask Brother Michelsen to let us have a word from him.

(Gurdon-elect George J. Michelsen said:)

MR. MICHELSEN:—Officers and Brother Hoo-Hoo: I have been trying to find out this morning what the object of your committee was in placing me in this office. We have not much timber remaining in the North now and

I couldn't figure that as the reason. I think the reason must be that we are great consumers—we can chew up a lot of stuff. I guess we can get some timber from Hoo-Hoo, and I will do everything in my power for Hoo-Hoo. I thank you all very kindly for your consideration. (Applause.)

ELECTION OF SCRIVENOTER.

CARL J. BAER (22202):—Brother Hoo-Hoo, I want to place in nomination for the office of Scrivenoter a man from Arkansas. I want to nominate him for the reason that he is a splendid worker and has been for seventeen years a hard worker in this order. He has served in the minor offices of this order and has served on the Supreme Nine. He has been a tireless worker for many years and his work has been very successful in our section. He is capable, he is willing and he has the interests of Hoo-Hoo at heart. He loves Hoo-Hoo for Hoo-Hoo's sake, and he will work for you if you honor him by electing him to this office. Every man in Arkansas who knows him as a Hoo-Hoo will stand for this man. I assure you that the personal acquaintances I have in Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas have expressed a preference for this man, and you will do the State of Arkansas a great honor if you will elect J. C. McGrath as your Scrivenoter. (Applause.)

F. L. JOHNSON, JR. (4118):—Worthy Snark and Gentlemen: I want to present the name of Wm. M. Stephenson for the office of Scrivenoter during the ensuing year. (Applause.) Two years ago, when we threshed out this proposition on the Pacific Coast of a man for Supreme Representative we went over very carefully all of the candidates who presented themselves for the office, and we came to the conclusion that Mr. Stephenson was the right man. We elected him as Supreme Representative, and up to the present time we have found his work very satisfactory as a whole. Mr. Stephenson has been connected with the order a good many years, I think about twenty years; he has done a great deal of work throughout the Southern country before he came into the Northern country. He has always been a hard worker in whatever position he has occupied. Any time there was a concatenation "Bill" Stephenson was willing to do anything. Now, I think it is for the best interests of the order that we elect Mr. Stephenson. His experience as Supreme Representative has given him a large acquaintance throughout the entire country. I even thought, when the proposition was brought up to dispense with the Supreme Representative, that it was a mistake. I would also like to see a traveling representative elected, but I conceded that point, because the majority of the members thought it was unnecessary. I think we cannot make a mistake in electing W. M. Stephenson to this important position. I believe it is always for the interests of any fraternal organization to promote the men in line, because you get the most efficient work in that way. There is no question that Mr. Stephenson's acquaintance extends all over the United States. He knows a good many Hoo-Hoo personally in all localities, I think you will make no mistake in electing Mr. Stephenson to the office of Supreme Scrivenoter. (Applause.)

SNARK-ELECT TROWER:—Are there any other nominations? Hearing none, we will proceed to ballot.

(Mr. Burgoyne made a graceful speech in withdrawing his name, reviewing briefly his long and pleasant connection with Hoo-Hoo as official reporter, and paying a high tribute to the officers with whom his duties have brought him in contact. In concluding his remarks Mr. Burgoyne said:)

MR. BURGOYNE:—Gentlemen, I take this opportunity to heartily thank my friends for placing my name before this order for this important position, but I do not desire to abandon my life-long occupation at this time; and even though I might be unanimously chosen as the future occupant of this office, I would not accept the honor without some degree of trepidation and hesitation. Consequently, I am greatly pleased, most Worthy Snark and Brother Hoo, Hoo, to withdraw my name from your consideration and to unqualifiedly endorse and support the candidacy of my good friend, Mr. W. M. Stephenson.

Z. W. WHITEHEAD:—Before coming to Asheville I had never had the pleasure of meeting either of these candidates, and I therefore second the nomination of Mr. Stephenson purely out of my love for the order and my interest in its welfare. The gentleman who has just preceded me has emphasized, very wisely, I think, that experience is the most valuable asset of a man filling this office, and I want to say that as valuable a man as Mr. Stephenson will develop into, he is to fill the shoes of man who has done the work of this office so successfully that any other man would find it difficult to take his place. Either Mr. Stephenson or any of the other gentlemen who have been mentioned for this office might well take this office with a good many forebodings. I do not believe that any man—and I know that we have in the ranks of Hoo-Hoo as good as the best in any other organization—but by reason of Mr. Baird's peculiar aptitude, his long service and his love for Hoo-Hoo, his interest in his fellow-man, he has given to the duties of this office the best attention, under conditions that probably no other man shall have to contend against. I believe that Mr. Stephenson as the result of his long experience as Supreme Representative all over the United States, his familiarity with the work, his knowledge of the men in Hoo-Hoo, is the best qualified man we have for this position. (Applause.)

S. N. ACREE:—I appreciate these eloquent remarks by the gentleman from Chicago and the brother from North Carolina. I have known Mr. Stephenson a very long time. It is true that he has proved very valuable as Supreme Representative, and he may have absorbed much of the methods and ideas of the present Scrivenoter; but, gentlemen, there are other things in Hoo-Hoo that make a man eminently fit besides being backed up by the Supreme Nine; there are other places where a man can work besides on the Supreme Nine. I have seen this gentleman (Mr. McGrath) go out and work among the men at the saw mill, in the camps and other places; he is an experienced man, he is a good man, and he would make a good Scrivenoter. (Applause.)

SNARK-ELECT TROWER:—Is there anything further to be said? If not, we will proceed to ballot.

MR. ACREE:—I move that we ballot by States.

MR. BAER:—I second the motion. I also move that we take a recess of three minutes.

(The latter motion was seconded and carried, after which an intermission of five minutes was taken, at expiration of which ballot was taken with result as below.)

	Stephenson.	McGrath.
Alabama	104	210
Arkansas	706
California	851	...

New York	299	...
Ohio	367

Pennsylvania	332	...
South Carolina	40
Tennessee	294%	98%
Virginia	155	...
West Virginia	410	...
Canada	790	...
North Carolina	100	100
	4347%	3577%

(Prior to the result of vote being announced, Tennessee, Alabama and North Carolina changed their vote to Stephenson, making his total vote 4,756, for McGrath 3,169.)

SNARK-ELECT TROWER:—Gentlemen, I feel that I ought to make a little explanation of my vote. As I said, I am here only in a representative capacity, and under the circumstances I would rather not cast a vote in this election. You know that Brother Stephenson was out on the Coast and he made a great many acquaintances there. I know that I am only carrying out the wishes of my California friends in casting the vote for Brother Stephenson. I will ask Brother Baird to escort the newly-elected Scrivenoter to the chair.

(Mr. Baird escorted Scrivenoter-elect Stephenson to the chair amid great applause, followed by the Hoo-Hoo yell.)

J. F. JUDD:—I move to make the election of Brother Stephenson unanimous.

(The motion was seconded by many and unanimously carried.)

MR. BAIRD:—Gentlemen, I desire to briefly introduce to you your new Scrivenoter. I have great pleasure in doing so. The only thing in the world that I have against him is that he has the misfortune of getting mixed up with the wrong man at times, as he did in having pitted against him another good friend of mine. Gentlemen, both of the aspirants for this office are good friends of mine, and have been for twenty years. I have had to be strictly on the fence. Gentlemen, you have now elected a whole man for Scrivenoter, and a whole man is better than half a man, no matter who the half a man may be. I have been able to give only a portion of my time to this job, but Mr. Stephenson will be able to give the whole of his time and talent to the job. When I was elected sixteen years ago and brought the office to Nashville and was up against the proposition of figuring the thing out, the one man I thought of was Brother Stephenson, who is a Nashville boy. I sent for him, and I nearly worked him to death as assistant Scrivenoter, without money and without price. Gentlemen, he early became acquainted with the work he will have to do, and he will do it right. (Applause.)

W. M. STEPHENSON:—Brothers, words fall me in attempting to express adequately my thanks for the honor that you have conferred upon me today. I assure you that I will do everything in my power to make the office a success and build up the order. If Brother McGrath had been the successful man, I would have moved that we make his election unanimous, and he would not have had any more hearty support than I would have given him. What we want in the order of Hoo-Hoo is for every man to take off his coat, and work and shout for Hoo-Hoo. Gentlemen, the Supreme Scrivenoter cannot accomplish anything without assistance and hearty support of every member of the order. With your support he can accomplish wonders. I thank you. (Applause.)

(Mr. McGrath was called for, and said:)

MR. M'GRATH:—Worthy Snark and Brother Hoo-Hoo: I am a mighty good loser. I had a man feel my pulse a while ago, but I assure you that, although defeated, the order shall always have my hearty support. I wish to tender to Mr. Stephenson the strongest efforts within my power to assist him in any way possible.

(The Hoo-Hoo yell was given Brother McGrath with unanimous enthusiasm.)

MR. ACREE:—I move that we tender the thanks of this organization to our esteemed retiring Snark Boggess, for the impartial and capable manner in which he has presided over the deliberations of this meeting, and I know that we all trust that health and happiness may follow him during all the remainder of his years. (Motion seconded and unanimously carried amid great applause, followed by the Hoo-Hoo yell.)

E. STRINGER BOGCESS:—Worthy Snark and Brothers: I want to say a few words of appreciation of the manner in which you have put up with my shortcomings as a presiding officer. I thank you for overlooking them, and particularly for the harmonious way in which you have all worked together for the good of Hoo-Hoo at this convention, as all of the members of the Supreme Nine and all the Vicegerents have ever done. And I want to express my appreciation also for the many courtesies and the elaborate entertainment provided by our Brother English and his fellow members of Asheville. (Applause.)

MR. BAIRD:—Boys, let us set the mark at 150 concatenations this year and 2,000 initiates. Let us go after them. Tennessee will furnish her part of them. (Applause.)

SNARK-ELECT TROWER:—Gentlemen, in my desire to square myself and to show that I did everything I could in a representative capacity to elect our worthy Scribe-noter to the office of Snark, I forgot another commission which had been put into my hands by the California brothers. As you all know, we are all going to have a great exposition in California at San Francisco in 1915. We feel that we are the custodians of a trust of the entire people of the United States in handling an exposition which will be a credit to the whole country, and it seems proper and fitting that at that time the order of Hoo-Hoo should meet in the City of San Francisco. Therefore, I desire to extend an invitation to this order to hold its annual meeting in San Francisco in 1915, but I realize that we cannot vote at this meeting to do that, and that it will be up to the annual meeting of 1914. However, I would like to have an expression from this meeting that it is the sense of this meeting that the annual meeting of 1915 be held in the City of San Francisco.

J. L. CLELAND (10418):—I second the motion.

MR. BOGCESS:—I would be very glad to put that as a motion, that it is the sense of this meeting that we go to San Francisco in 1915. (The motion was unanimously carried.) (Upon motion the meeting was adjourned.)

ANNUAL ASSEMBLY OSIRIAN CLOISTER.

The Annual Assembly of the Osirian Cloister was held Friday evening, July 19, following the return from Baltimore. Present of the officers: John Oxenford, F. L. Johnson, Jr., and J. H. Baird, with about twenty members. Ranking High Priest Oxenford was called to the chair. The Scribe read the report of receipts and disbursements since the last annual statement, same being received and approved.

The meeting proceeded to the election of High Priests for the year ensuing after September 9, with the following result:

High Priest of Osiris (Chief Priest)—W. A. Hadley, Chatham, Ont.

High Priest of Ptah—Albert Cone, Chicago, Ill.

High Priest of Ra—Dan Richardson, Dover, N. C.

High Priest of Isis—R. A. Hiscox, San Francisco, Cal.

High Priest of Shu—F. L. Johnson, Jr., Chicago, Ill.

High Priest of Thoth—W. M. Stephenson, St. Paul, Minn.

High Priest of Hathor—John Oxenford, Indianapolis, Ind.

High Priest of Sed—J. C. McGrath, Little Rock, Ark.

High Priest of Anubis—J. F. Judd, St. Louis, Mo.

A general discussion on the good of the order, participated in by practically all members present, resulted finally in a motion made by J. H. Baird, which was adopted, that a strong committee be appointed to further the interest of the Osirian Cloister and increase its membership. Acting Chief Priest Oxenford appointed the following on this committee:

S. N. Acree, Mississippi; W. J. Kilduff and W. C. Fellows, Alabama; John L. Alcock, Maryland; John S. Bonner, Texas.

It was suggested that this committee be added to indefinitely by the Chief Priest to be elected at this meeting, it being the sense of the meeting that the committee be composed of at least one man from every state in which Hoo-Hoo has considerable membership.

The Acting Chief Priest appointed F. W. Trower, J. H. Baird and E. Stringer Boggess as a committee to draft resolutions on the death of members of the Cloister occurring during the past year. This committee submitted the following report, which was adopted:

Your committee is pleased to report that only two deaths have occurred since last Hoo-Hoo Annual Meeting among members of the Osirian Cloister. Our two brethren deceased during the year are E. R. Dowler, Braddock, Pa., and G. H. Anthony, Monrovia, Cal. Both men were good and loyal Hoo-Hoo and active and loyal members of the Osirian Cloister. Both were good men, widely known to lumbermen and Hoo-Hoo throughout the country. Brother Anthony's death followed only a few weeks after the death of his devoted wife.

Your committee on behalf of the Osirian Cloister extends deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones of our two deceased brothers.

The annual initiatory ceremonies of the Cloister were postponed until Saturday afternoon, July 20, when the following splendid class was initiated:

Harry B. Darlington, Chicago, Ill.; J. L. English, Asheville, N. C.; William Etsweiler, Philadelphia, Pa.; Watson Tifton Ford, Crestmont, N. C.; R. A. Gaither, Statesville, N. C.; C. E. Gordon, Waynesville, N. C.; C. M. Hawkins, Charleston, W. Va.; L. E. Hunter, Graham, Va.; George Michelsen, Rochester, N. Y.; T. L. O'Donnell, Sanford, Miss.; Alf A. Rudy, Elkins, W. Va.; E. D. Tennant, Winnipeg, Man.; J. F. Wilder, Perkinston, Miss.; D. H. MacLean, Atlanta, Ga.; W. T. Latham, Mt. Sterling, N. C.; J. M. English, Asheville, N. C.

The officers serving at this initiatory ceremony were as follows:

Osiris, W. A. Hadley; Ptah, Albert Cone; Ra, Dan Richardson; Isis, J. H. Baird; Shu, F. L. Johnson, Jr.; Thoth, W. M. Stephenson; Hathor, John Oxenford; Sed, S. N. Acree; Anubis, E. Stringer Boggess.

The initiatory session proved one of the best and most enjoyable the Cloister has ever held, all the members of the Cloister as well as the new initiates going away from the meeting with a high appreciation of the beauties of its ceremonial and the high ends it aims to achieve.

ENTERTAINMENT FEATURES.

The entertainments at Asheville were distinctive in their elegant simplicity and lack of formality. A gracious cordiality seemed to pervade the whole city. Of old, "Light and come in!" was the invariable Southern salutation to the stranger at the gate; and when he had alighted he at once found himself truly at home. All he had to do was to 'light.

The spirit of the old-time custom still prevails—in Asheville the "at home" feeling permeates the atmosphere. Nobody deems himself a stranger and a pilgrim; all are made to realize that they are one with the easy, happy life of that charming city in the highlands. "Light and come in!" calls the rippling river. "Light and come in!" echoes from the mountains. "Light and come in!" the breezes whisper. Without a doubt, Asheville is a fine place to "light"!

The visitors began to gather Wednesday, July 17, and at an informal reception in the evening at the Battery Park Hotel these early arrivals were given an opportunity of meeting a number of the Asheville people. Several informal dinner parties also took place.

Thursday afternoon a delightful automobile trip up the mountain to Overlook Park, on Sunset Mountain, was enjoyed by all. The views from this point are superb. The spectacle of verdure-clad mountains was somewhat of a new experience to the visitors from the West, where the great white Rockies stand out sharp against the sky—a green mountain was a refreshing change. Refreshments were served at the park, and afterward the visitors strolled through the grove, enjoying the mountain air and watching the showers falling on a far-off peak. All left the beautiful spot with regret that their stay could not be longer, for the enchantment of the wooded heights is strong—forest and mountain together form a double lure. To primitive man the hills meant refuge, protection; to the man of today, weary of the stress of business life, they appeal as the symbol of rest, surcease from strife. On these peaceful heights one feels that he can forget his troubles and forgive his transgressions. And this, indeed, is reaching a high point.

Among those who accompanied the party on this mountain trip was Mr. Locke Craig, Democratic nominee for Governor of North Carolina. After the serving of refreshments at the park, Mr. Craig made an interesting talk, in which he informed the guests that the privilege of visiting this beautiful place was extended them by Dr. Grove, one of Asheville's wealthiest and most public-spirited citizens. Dr. Grove is building a handsome and costly hotel, which will be a great addition to Asheville's list of attractions.

A trolley ride over the city was an interesting feature of Friday morning's entertainment for the visitors, who, upon this occasion, were guests of the Asheville Light & Power Company, which provided transportation for them. Any form of outing is enjoyable at Asheville, for so mild is the climate's summer temperature that always there is a restful and refreshing quality in the air. The trolley ride afforded opportunity for a leisurely view of the town and glimpses of the surrounding county. Upon the return trip the party stopped at the Swannanoa-Berkeley Hotel, where, as guests of Mr. Frank Loughran, the visitors were tendered a reception and dance. Elaborate and delicious refreshments were served and the occasion was one of much genuine pleasure.

A carriage drive to Biltmore, arranged for Friday afternoon, had been eagerly looked forward to by all, as the fame of this great estate, the finest in America, is world wide. The road winds for miles through a country unrivaled for beauty and charm, on either side a wealth of flowering shrubs, and always, in the distance, the lofty mountains with their changing tints of green and purple and soft, dim gray. The estate comprises an area of 125,000 acres, and includes a model dairy, extensive gardens and other appurtenances of an ideal country home. The entire afternoon was devoted to this visit to Biltmore, and for most of the visitors the trip constituted a new and unique experience. The members expressed themselves as being delighted with the estate, and a member from one of the far western states said that he had been fully repaid for making the trip by having the privilege of visiting this estate alone.

After the drive, an informal reception was given in honor of the members of the Order by the Asheville club. Refreshments of a tempting nature were served at the club, and the reception, as are all of the entertainments given by that club, was a thorough success and enjoyed very much.

At the Hotel Langren, Friday evening, was given a dance, preceded by a musicale, which took place on the roof garden. The spacious ballroom presented a brilliant appearance, and many dancers lingered till a late hour. During the evening punch and other refreshments were served.

A dance at the Battery Park Hotel Saturday evening closed a programme of entertainment which throughout was excellently planned and splendidly executed. Besides the members of Hoo-Hoo and ladies, a number of the other guests of the hotel were present at this farewell entertainment, and the immense ballroom was filled with dancers.

The Asheville ladies who made the social side of the twenty-first Hoo-Hoo Annual so conspicuous a success were:

Mrs. H. B. Stevens, Mrs. A. F. Hull, Mrs. J. F. Coleman, Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. F. E. Johnson, Mrs. L. E. Hunter, Mrs. N. T. Taylor, Mrs. Williamson, Mrs. S. F. Chapman, Mrs. Reuben Robinson, Mrs. J. E. Cocke, Mrs. Carmichael, Mrs. J. S. Coleman, Miss Spanner.

The City of Asheville was beautifully decorated in honor of the visitors. The Black Cat and "Welcome" signs were in evidence on the streets, in show windows, in the various hotels, and particularly in the Asheville Club house. The privileges of the club were extended to the members during their stay.

NOTES OF THE ANNUAL.

"Come or say why," is the invitation, in connection with the Annual Meeting, which is extended to all Hoo-Hoo, wherever they may be. Every member who cannot be present is expected to write or wire a message of greeting and to send in such suggestions for the good of the Order as may occur to him. A number of those who could not go to Asheville gave the reason for non-attendance as extension of business and consequent demands on time, etc. A few of the absent ones pleaded ill-health. In one way and another it was apparent that July is not, as has been believed by some, a better time for the Annual than September 9, and the changing of the date back to the traditional ninth day of the ninth month will doubtless give general satisfaction. The following are some of the messages and suggestions received at Asheville:

Portland, Ore., July 18, 1912.—I am sorry I cannot be with you at the Annual Meeting, but I was afraid to tackle the summer heat at this time of the year. Davis and Fifer join me in greeting to all. J. M. LEITER, Jabberwock.

Sorry to miss this Annual. Too busy to go at this time of year. Personally I would like to see Fred Gilman put on the Nine, and I think it would meet with the approval of all the Coast Hoo-Hoo. Mrs. Youle joins me in wishing you a successful Annual. Regards to all the old guard. Hope to be with you next year. GEO. E. YOULE.

Savannah, Ga., July 18, 1912.—Had arranged to attend Annual together, but unavoidably prevented at last minute. Think archives should be placed in shape to exhibit to members and left in custody of Secretary or Seer of House of Ancients. Approve of classifications of membership. Think Scrivenoter should be elected by members. Favor careful consideration and conservative action on other proposed changes. Deeply regret our absence. Trust harmony will prevail, and all things tend to Health, Happiness and Long Life.

WILLIAM B. STILLWELL,
WILLIAM L. GIGNILLIAT.

Under date of July 15, Brother Stillwell had written:

J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.—I can assure you that it has been no slight disappointment to me from year to year to be unable to attend the Hoo-Hoo Annuals. Each succeeding year I have done my utmost to make my arrangements to be present, but in each instance insuperable obstacles came in the way.

I am, as usual, and have been for six months past, figuring on being present at the coming Annual, and barring unforeseen delays I will try at least to spend one or two days in Asheville.

My company has recently very greatly increased and extended its business, imposing much heavier and more exacting duties on me, which are occupying all of my time.

A member who has attended many Annuals, but who was missing this time, gives this reason for his absence:

Denver, Colo., July 8, 1912.—It grieves me very much to inform you that it will be impossible for me to attend the Annual which occurs this month.

Since my return from Hot Springs, Ark., last April I have not been as well as I expected, and I am not in shape to leave home. While it is a fact that the old trouble that I have been enduring for a number of years is absolutely cured, yet I have had more or less other trouble, so that I am not able to do any traveling, and am only able to come to the office a short time once in a while.

I hope the Annual will be one of great pleasure and profit to all those that attend, as well as the entire membership of the Order. Give my regards to all the boys as you meet them. R. W. ENGLISH.

Norfolk, Va., July 15, 1912.—With much regret I find that I cannot attend the Annual which is called for the 18th at Asheville, but my friend Harvey M. Dickson expects to go. I am very desirous that he become a member of the Osirian Cloister. I take pleasure in requesting you to present his name for me, to act as my proxy, and do what may be necessary to put him through. You will find him a man of nerve and of happy disposition, yet with a full share of dignity. Treat him well!

I wish you a profitable meeting, and hope that each and every one will enjoy to its full limit.

W. J. WOODWARD, Vicegerent.

Roanoke, Va., July 19, 1912.—E. Stringer Boggers, Snark of the Universe, Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C.: We the undersigned Hoo-Hoo being deprived the great pleasure of being with you at our annual convention but wishing to let you know that we are with you in spirit, send greetings from our loyal band in the magic city.

JAS. F. WALKER, Vicegerent.
L. S. GILLESPIE.
E. C. HEADLEY.
F. A. MASSEY.
JOHN KEYS.
E. R. CHAPMAN.
ROBT. H. ANGELE.
PHILIP LITIG.
T. F. JAMISON.
W. H. YATES.

Seattle, Wash., July 19, 1912.—J. H. Baird, Hoo-Hoo Scrivenoter, Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C.: Good concatenation last night and forty initiates. Stephenson endorsed for Scrivenoter, and sentiment strong for retaining Trower on Nine because of his good work. Would suggest W. P. Lockwood, Seattle, for Supreme Nine, as meeting popular choice of Western Washington Hoo-Hoo. If state is to be honored otherwise re-elect Leiter.

FRED H. GILMAN.

Seattle, Wash., July 19, 1912.—Forty-five applications, forty initiated, seventy-five in parade, two hundred at banquet, all features big success. Jabberwock Leiter, Vicegerent Davis, of Portland, Ehrmantraut, of Spokane, and Fau-Vel, of British Columbia, in attendance. Everybody enthusiastic for Hoo-Hoo, unanimously in favor of Stephenson for Scrivenoter, Trower and W. T. Lockwood, of Seattle, members of Supreme Nine. L. R. FIFER.

Cairo, Ill., July 18, 1912.—Happiness and Long Life to Jim Baird and Hoo-Hoo. May Stephenson be next Scrivenoter. P. T. LANGAN.

Houston, Tex., July 15, 1912.—J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.: I am very much disappointed, but the continued serious illness of my niece absolutely prevents my attending the Annual. I wish you a successful meeting. J. S. BONNER.

Rome, N. Y., July 18, 1912.—Regret inability to be with you and the bunch today. Cast my vote for Brother Stephenson for next Scrivenoter. Regards. H. T. TROTTER.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 15, 1912.—My reason for not attending this meeting of Hoo-Hoo is because our force is very small just now, and I am compelled to stay at home. I sincerely hope this will be the best business session this Order has had, and that there will be a big attendance. All Wisconsin Hoo-Hoo, besides being loyal to the Order, are generally in good health and are prosperous, and all hope to live long.

With kindest regards and best wishes, I am,

Fraternally yours,

W. R. ANDERSON, Vicegerent.

Williamsport, Pa., July 18, 1912.—I regret very much to be unable to attend the Annual, but have just embarked in a new business, and it is out of the question for me to think of leaving at this time. J. FRED FORESMAN, Vicegerent Central District Pennsylvania.

Office of McMillan & Co., Beach, Ga., July 16, 1912.—Dear Brother Baird: I regret very much indeed that I will not be able to attend the Annual this year. I had hoped until today that I would be able to get away, but the pressure of business will prevent my attendance. I would thank you very much to extend an invitation to the Order to hold its next annual at Waycross, Ga. My best wishes are with you and all brother Hoo-Hoo.

Yours fraternally,

T. H. CALHOUN, 15667.

Hamilton, Ont., Canada, July 15, 1912.—I have deferred answering your letter of the 8th until the last moment, expecting to be able to be present at the Annual, but owing to extreme pressure of business am very much disappointed in not being able to make it.

I am very much disappointed at not being able to be present at this particular Annual, as I believe this to be a decidedly important meeting, and the decisions of the different committees should be given after earnest and careful consideration, and with the spirit of the Golden Rule ever in mind at all discussions.

As to the appointment of a successor to yourself, my vote would be in favor of Brother Stephenson, and in connection with this change, would be in favor of the removal of its present headquarters to some more central point, say Chicago or St. Louis.

With regard to proposed changes in constitution as outlined in a communication from our Supreme Snark to your office and under date of June 29, I heartily endorse every one of them, particularly that which tends to keep the Order confined to lumbermen and a very few closely associated lines of trade; and I strongly endorse the idea of getting the interest of old members reawakened and bringing them back into the Order.

THOS. PATTERSON, Bojum.

Upon the close of the Annual Meeting some of those present went for a little outing to Lake Toxaway and to other mountain resorts, while others visited friends on the way home.

Nashville was honored by a visit from two distinguished members, Brother Frank Trower, of San Francisco, and Brother W. A. Hadley, of Chatham, Ontario—Snark-elect and ex-Snark, respectively.

It is interesting to learn what most impresses visitors from a far-away state—how to their eyes appear the scenes so familiar to the home folks. Middle Tennessee, to a Californian, looks like a vast and beautiful park. "I keep thinking," said Brother Trower, "that presently I shall come to a place where there is no grass." Miles and miles of fields, and green meadows, and tree-clad hills, and shady lanes—these seemed scarcely natural, but rather "too good to be true." The fireflies, sparkling about in the dusk, were a source of delight and wonder; the weird cry of a "screech owl" in the treetops on the lawn at nightfall was an unaccustomed sound, and the raucous, scraping noise made by a "dry fly" was mysterious and unaccountable. In short, a Californian in Tennessee has nearly as many strange experiences as if he had gone to another world, and the same is true of a Tennessean in California—so different is the Pacific coast from all other sections of our wonderful land.

OBITUARY.

John Driscol (No. 23145).

The death of Brother John Driscol, of Perryville, Ark., has been reported to this office, but no particulars of the sad event are given, except that he died July 12 and is survived by a widow. Brother Driscol was initiated into Hoo-Hoo May 1, 1909, at Little Rock, Ark. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Edward John McGaghran (No. 18823).

Brother Edward J. McGaghran died at Arrowhead, B. C., July 12. Brother McGaghran had been a Hoo-Hoo since January 16, 1907. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Just as The Bulletin is about to go to press the following particular of this death are received:

Edward McGaghran, late superintendent of the Arrow Lakes Lumber Co., Arrowhead, passed away in the Revelstoke general hospital on the afternoon of the 12th inst. Intestinal hemorrhage was the immediate cause of death. His remains were interred in the Catholic Cemetery, Revelstoke, on the 16th inst.

Deceased for the past four years has been superintendent in charge of the extensive logging and milling operations carried on in the neighborhood of Arrowhead by the Arrow Lakes Lumber Co. His work earned for him the entire confidence of the company's late manager, Mr. Otto Lachmund, and in spite of his long and severe illness, which has lasted since the first of the present year, his services were retained by the head of the company, Mr. Lamb, until the day of his death.

Edward McGaghran was still a young man. He was born 33 years ago in Bulger, Ont., and spent his early days in the neighborhood of Egansville and Killaloe. His work as a carpenter and millwright found him employed in various lumber mills in the North Shore Ontario district, before he came to British Columbia some nine years ago. It was as a millwright he was first employed on the Arrowhead plant, the work over which his complete knowledge and energy earned for him later the highly responsible position of superintendent. Deceased was also a partner in the firm of Messrs. McGaghran and Johnson, in the town of Arrowhead.

His aged mother has the profound sympathy of the entire community in her sad bereavement, for Edward McGaghran was a devoted son, and his ever-increasing solicitude for the comfort of his parents was a faithful measure of his life's success. In addition to the mother, two brothers and a sister are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral took place from the Catholic church, and in addition to the sorrowing chief mourners, there were present a large number of friends and lodge brethren of deceased, assembled to pay their last tribute of respect. Rev. Father McKenzie officiated.

John Keith Stewart (No. 6789).

John Keith Stewart, Hoo-Hoo No. 6789, of Mt. Vernon, Wash., died June 24.

Brother Stewart was born at Little York, N. J., December 20, 1855. He had been a resident of Mt. Vernon, Wash., since December, 1891. He was connected with various mill operations in the State of Washington, but later was connected with a general mercantile business.

Brother Stewart is survived by Mrs. Stewart and four children. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Alfred Lawrence Jaquith (No. 4401).

Brother Alfred L. Jaquith died at Vicksburg, Miss., July 21. No particulars have been received concerning the death of this member. He was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Vicksburg, Miss., July 30, 1896. Brother Jaquith was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

James Robert Slone (No. 19901).

Brother James Robert Slone died at Deming, N. M., July 21. Brother Slone was formerly a resident of Jacksonville, Fla., removing to Deming, N. M., last May. Particulars of his death have not yet reached The Bulletin.

Brother Slone has been a Hoo-Hoo since July 15, 1907, having been initiated on that date at Atlantic Beach, Fla. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Daniel Alexander Brown (No. 23010).

D. A. Brown, Hoo-Hoo No. 23010, came to his death at Alberta, La., under circumstances peculiarly tragic on July 18. Brother Brown was attacked by a half-crazed negro, who was armed with a pocket-knife, about 6 o'clock on the evening of July 16, and was cut in two or three places. The wounds proved to be more serious than was at first suspected, and it was found that death had been inevitable from the first. The attack was made apparently without provocation, and certainly without warning of any sort. Brother Brown remembered having scolded the negro a few days before, but there was nothing to indicate that the man had harbored a deep-seated resentment.

Brother Brown was connected with the Bienville Lumber Company, and had been a member of Hoo-Hoo since April 24, 1909. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Powell Lusk (No. 25833).

Brother Powell Lusk (No. 25833) died at Kellam's Hospital, Richmond, Va., May 23, 1912, of paralysis. Brother Lusk was born in Wyoming County, W. Va., February 25, 1852, where practically his entire life was spent. He was married February 12, 1874, to Mary A. Belcher, and is survived by his wife and seven children. He was prominent in the financial and political affairs of southern West Virginia, a successful lumberman, and a devoted husband and father.

Brother Lusk became a Hoo-Hoo at Roanoke, Va., in July, 1911. He was buried at his old home at Herndon, W. Va.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Brother G. R. Gloor has recently opened an office at 1442 Semple Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., and will act in the capacity of sales agent for several Louisiana yellow pine concerns. Mr. Gloor is a progressive young lumberman and an active Hoo-Hoo, having until his recent removal from that state been Vicegerent for the Southern District of Louisiana. Mr. Gloor formerly resided at Winnfield, La. He expects to do a general yellow pine commission business in St. Louis.

HOO-HOO PENNANT WAVES FROM CASCADE RANGE.

The Great Black Cat this year has shown a decided liking for the high places of earth—the banner of Hoo-Hoo literally, as well as figuratively, has waved high. At the same time that preparations were in progress for the annual in the Alleghanies, away out in the Oregon country the Hoo-Hoo pennant was flung high on the breeze. On the shore of Crater Lake, at an altitude of 7,076 feet above sea level, the emblem of Hoo-Hoo was planted—in the heart of the most magnificent scenery in the world, in the awesome silence of snow-clad mountain peaks.

This picturesque incident occurred June 5, and the fearless mountain climbers who bore the flag aloft were Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Trower and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Neighbor, of San Francisco, under the guidance of Chief Ranger H. E. Momyer, of the Crater Lake National Park.

Mr. Trower and Mr. Neighbor had attended the concatenation at Klamath Falls, Oregon, which took place May 31. From the time they left San Francisco to go to Klamath Falls the little party had cherished the plan of making the trip to the wonderful Crater Lake, and they hoped that the roads would be clear of snow. They were told, however, by friends at Klamath Falls that they were quite a month ahead of the season—that nobody could get to Crater Lake until early in July—that an attempt to make the trip earlier would be fraught with grave peril, as in those high regions the snow lingers till nearly mid-summer. One man said that if any relation of his should propose such a journey in the snow season he would tie the too-venturesome one to a bedpost! But the dauntless party from the Golden Gate persisted. The only encouragement received was from W. B. Innes, a recently initiated at Camp Arrant before leaving it last winter. Early next morning we were on the go, using two of our horses in the rig and leading the other three. After a ride of about ten miles we got to the snow line, and, running our wagon into the brush, we mounted our saddle horses. Shortly before this, however, we had left the last outpost of civilization (also usually the first), a sawmill, located on the United States forest reserve, and run by Messrs. Utter and Burns, both of them Hoo-Hoo, just initiated at the Klamath Falls meeting.

We found the going fairly easy, although in occasional spots the snow was not well packed under the bushes or around fallen logs, and the horses floundered enough to make us pretty cautious. We reached Bridge Creek about noon and found quite a little stream running between the snow banks. Here we stopped for a picnic lunch and were soon on the road again. That is, we were told it was the road, but if Mr. Momyer had not been with us, or we had not seen or rode over a piece of the broken-down telephone line, we would have completely lost our way. Our road led us in and out of the forest of pines and cedars, and the weather was uncomfortably warm. The snow was from three to ten feet deep. We followed pretty closely the banks of beautiful Anna Creek, flowing swiftly from 300 to 500 feet below us in a narrow canyon whose rocky walls were often chiseled out similar to those in the Grand Canyon of Arizona. At one of these points the canyon widens out and is called the Garden of the Gods.

We reached Camp Arrant late in the afternoon, tired, but happy because we had been able to make such good progress. Here are located the government buildings and Crater Lake postoffice, though we were still five long miles from the lake itself. There was ten feet of snow around the barn and Mr. Momyer's house, and we had to shovel an entrance through to the doors, admission to the house being first gained by crawling into the second-story windows. We soon had fires going, and the ladies enjoyed themselves baking pies and other good things which Hoo-Hoo are fond of. It was a jolly party which sat down to our first meal in this snow-bound and isolated camp in the Cascade Mountains. After supper we fed some of the blue jays and "camp-robber" birds gathered around the door. All we had to do for a refrigerator for our fresh supplies was to raise the window and scoop out a place in the snow. Next morning the butter was hard enough to play ball with.

We were in the saddle on Wednesday morning, June 5, before 7 o'clock, but found the snow a little softer, with consequent difficulty with the horses. Bob Neighbor's horse got into a bad drift and threw him off, but without harm. The planks over the larger bridges had been taken up last fall to prevent the snow crushing them, and we had to make careful detours up these streams to get across safely. After about a mile of rough going, part of the time leading the horses, we concluded to make the rest of the trip on foot. We tied the horses under a clump of trees where the snow had run off and then hiked it, making good progress by stepping in the footprints of our guide. The sun shone down fiercely, with the temperature about 90 degrees, and we quickly shed our coats. Of course, we wore blue of snow glasses, but the sun's reflection on the snow was very trying. Bob Neighbor wore ordinary old shoes, but the Hoo-Hoo. He has charge of the former Harriman properties at Pelican Bay and Odessa Creek, and he knows that region well. Mr. Innes extolled the grandeur of the scenery when the snow is on the mountains. Thus strengthened in their resolution, the California folks set forth, accompanied by Mr. Momyer, who lives at Klamath Falls from November till July, as does also the superintendent of Crater Lake Park. The following graphic account of the trip is from the pen of Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo (since elected Snark of the Universe) Frank W. Trower, who says, to begin with, "We had broken this year's Hoo-Hoo record at Klamath Falls, and were determined to break some more records by raising the Hoo-Hoo pennant at the rim of Crater Lake in snow time."

Brother Trower did not intend his letter for publication, but, in the opinion of The Bulletin, the experience he relates will prove of interest to many members, especially to those who do not realize that it is not necessary for an American to go to Switzerland to view scenery that is truly sublime:

We left at noon Monday, June 3, for the 63-mile trip, and traveled the first forty miles by automobile to Fort Klamath over a fine road, with matchless scenery of forest, lake and high mountains. We passed through the reservation on which reside about 1,200 Indians, each of whom has been given 160 acres by Uncle Sam, and most of it is wonderfully fertile. Near the old fort we passed the grave of Captain Jack, a noted chief, who was hanged by our government for leading the insurrection which ended at the battle in the lava beds.

In this section are some fine trout streams. We stayed over night in the quiet old frontier trading town of Fort Klamath, where Mr. Momyer arranged for our horses and saddle outfits. We had to take only some butter and meat, as Mr. Momyer had stored away some supplies in his house rest of us had outing boots. Occasionally some mosquitoes would bother us, and then we remembered the warnings that we would be eaten up by these pests. The only signs of life we saw were a couple of groundhogs, who gazed at the intruders curiously. We saw tracks of some animals, and our chief ranger saw man tracks, which confirmed his suspicion that a trapper was in the park unlawfully hunting martin. The snow was in many places over twenty feet deep, and it was, indeed, hard for us Californians to reconcile this with the calendar date.

As we neared the rim of the lake the trail became steeper, and then, without warning, our goal was won, and we stood there on the summit of the Cascade range, while at our feet, nearly 1,000 feet below, and stretching away for over five miles, lay this crystalline gem of all lakes, with its matchless coloring of blue, and so mirror-like that on its still surface was reflected in infinite detail the surrounding snowy cliffs and every fleecy cloud passing over it. Indeed, it was at first difficult to make out clearly where the shore ended and the lake began. The first view is awe-inspiring, and our tongues surrendered the effort to give expression to our thoughts. Not a sound breaks the majestic quietness of the scene; indeed, the silence is so profound as to be actually felt. Here within this crater, more than five miles in diameter and about 4,000 feet deep, now half filled with water, were once in action the mightiest forces of nature. Here had once been a mountain towering as high as Shasta, but which had sunk into the abyss, and in its dying throes of eruption had thrown up what is now Wizard Island, in the western portion of the lake. This island is about 800 feet above water, and itself contains a small crater about 150 feet deep.

The government geologist, J. S. Diller, says of Crater Lake: "It is one of the most attractive geologic fields in the world. It is remarkable for its position and size, but more especially on account of its beauty, its depth, the grandeur of its encircling cliffs, and its geologic history. The color of the water is ultramarine, bordered by turquoise along the shores. Beautiful and wonderful as the lake is, it serves but to conceal in large part the greater wonder—the stupendous pit or basin, the caldera, in which it is contained, and from which it has been named. Although there are thousands of craters in this country, there is but one great caldera, and that contains Crater Lake. The lake is completely girdled by a bold escarpment that ranges from 500 to 2,200 feet in height, forming a picture which, in beauty and grandeur, is rarely equaled. Although the steep slopes of the escarpment are in some places well wooded, they are generally either cliffs or talus descending to the lake and plunging into deep water. The lake can be easily approached at but few points, and sandy beaches along its shores are few and small. The mountain which once covered this space has been called Mount Mazama, and some present erosional features suggest it was probably, in its day, the greatest peak of the Cascade range. Its eruptions were still active during the glacial epoch. The rim of the present lake is evidently the peripheral part of the original mountain's base, and is not due to the accumulation of material blown from the hole. Mount Mazama collapsed and was engulfed, and the great caldera was produced by subsidence. The freshness of the lava of Wizard Island and the absence of all traces of erosion indicate that its volcano was active in comparatively recent geologic times. The presence of so large a growth of forest trees, however, suggests that the eruption must have occurred centuries ago. Crater Lake has no visible outlet. Its surplus water escapes by percolation, and in part, at least, reappears in the great springs about Fort Klamath. The temperature of the water at the surface of the lake varies, but from a depth of 300 feet to the bottom it is uniformly about 39 degrees F."

We sat down for lunch in the shade of the partially constructed stone hotel near the edge of the lake and wished that all of our friends were there to enjoy the magnificent scene with us. The government bench mark showed we were 7,076 feet above sea level. The lake level is about 6.20 feet. The lake is rising at the rate of about four inches per year. We took a number of photographs, of which I am enclosing a few. We had to be careful where we walked near the edge, as the snow was treacherous. Only a year ago a lone photographer came into this region during the winter for some snow scenes. Some of his camera outfit was found near the top of the snow cliffs bordering the lake, but his body was never found.

We took some pictures of Mrs. Neighbor and Mrs. Trower holding our Hoo-Hoo pennant, with the lake for a background, thus giving ample proof of our record-breaking expedition, for this was the first time the Hoo-Hoo flag had been raised here; this was the earliest time in the year that women had reached Crater Lake, and our party was the first lot of visitors at the lake in 1912.

Reluctantly we left this entrancing scene and turned our steps toward Camp Arrant about 2 o'clock, after about three hours' stay at the lake. We arrived at the place where we had tied our horses, and, being rather footsore, some of the party rode into camp and the others walked. Mrs. Trower was the object of some good-natured bantering about the new kind of stride she had acquired. My, but our dinner that night tasted good! We had the chores all done and had turned in by 8 p. m. We were in the saddles early next morning, and, the snow having crusted a little, we made good progress coming out, reaching our wagon about 10 o'clock and getting into Fort Klamath about noon. The auto got us into Klamath Falls about 8 o'clock, after running through two thundershowers and getting us soaked to the skin. We were tired, blistered and sunburned, and Brother Fred Gilman said our appearance merited our being put out of the sumptuous White Pelican Hotel, but we were thankful that our Hoo-Hoo trip through the snow to Crater Lake was a great success, and that we had been fortunate enough to view this masterpiece of nature.

Shillailly.

The shillelagh, which showed at Louth that it has not entirely lost its old importance as a factor in deciding elections, is no raw limb of a tree. It is almost as much a work of art as a well-balanced cricket bat. The old shillelaghs were as carefully looked after by their loving owners as is a rifle in the wilds. Cut from the sturdiest of young blackthorns, and showing as little taper as an ebony ruler, it was weighted with lead or iron at the end nearest the grip, so that its center of gravity was about four-fifths of the way from the hitting end. When properly seasoned by being kept in the neighborhood of the farm oven for a few months, it became a thing of supple steel. And the proper pronunciation of the name of this fearsome weapon is the melodious one of "shill-ailly," with the accent on the "ail."—London Chronicle.

On account of heavy pressure on its space, this issue of The Bulletin must needs make but brief mention of the splendid concatenations held since the June Bulletin went to press.

A "Special" at Clarksburg, W. Va.

The concatenation at Clarksburg, W. Va., on the evening of June 24 was a special affair held by Snark Boggess for the purpose of initiating two high-class lumbermen whom he thought it would be difficult to get together on another occasion. Having a trunk handy, he summoned Brother H. B. Curtin, ex-Vicegerent L. O. Smith and five or six other good men, and held what he says was a "cracking good little concatenation." There was no session on the roof.

Second Big One for Brother Snyder.

The concatenation at Shreveport, La., on June 22, was the second big meeting to be held this Hoo-Hoo year by Vicegerent F. G. Snyder. The report shows that he initiated twenty-four men. The Bulletin cannot go into the details of this splendid meeting. It suffices to say that it was in every way enjoyable and in every way a success. The class Brother Snyder initiated speaks for itself.

A Starter at Memphis.

The concatenation at Memphis on July 2, held by Vicegerent G. O. Friedel, at which ten men were initiated, is a mere starter for the big meeting to be held there this fall. No concatenation had been held at Memphis for a long time, and it was found a little difficult to round up a big class in midsummer. However, the class would have been at least twenty but for a tremendous downpour of rain that came in the afternoon and continued until late in the evening. The concatenation was highly successful and most enjoyable. The session-on-the-roof was an elegant affair, at which several good talks on the welfare of Hoo-Hoo were made. A feature of the session-on-the-roof was a strong talk on the Death Emergency Fund.

Another "Starter"—At Chattanooga.

The concatenation held by Vicegerent Harry Wise at Chattanooga on July 5 was planned to follow immediately after the one at Memphis, and, like the one at Memphis, was intended as a round-up for a big meeting to be held this fall. No more successful, enjoyable or high-toned affair was ever held than this meeting at Chattanooga. While only five men were initiated, they were of exceptionally high character and standing. Among the other initiates were Mr. Horace M. Evans and his son, DeForrest William Evans, both of the G. H. Evans Lumber Company, of Chattanooga. The elder Mr. Evans is a man of wealth and standing, who has held many high positions in business and professionally. He is a college graduate, and was for many years professor in the Valparaiso College at Valparaiso, Ind. Later for many years he was a practicing physician, in which position he attained both wealth and fame. He first located at Chattanooga as President of the Chattanooga Normal University, which he established, but returned to Indiana after some years and resumed his practice of law. He returned to Chattanooga some years ago, but retains large business interests in Indiana. He is Vice-President of the Valparaiso National Bank and Vice-President of the First Trust Company, of Valparaiso. Dr. Evans is a very public-spirited man, actively identifying himself with the upbuilding committee wherever he is located. He is now Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga and one of the most prominent residents of that city.

The other four candidates initiated were of equally high standing. The meeting reflects great credit on Vicegerent Wise, who announced at the time his purpose to initiate a class of at least thirty this fall.

The session-on-the-roof took the form of an elegant luncheon at the Commercial Club, at which about twenty men sat down, and on which occasion the speech-making on the upbuilding of Hoo-Hoo held on until past midnight. It would be a great thing for Hoo-Hoo if more such concatenations as this at Chattanooga could be held. It was a high-class affair, in which any man would be proud to participate. In all arrangements for the meeting Vicegerent Wise was ably assisted by Brother C. H. Huston, the well-known manager of the Whelan Company, of Chattanooga.

No. 3 For Vicegerent Douglas.

The concatenation at Birmingham on July 11 was the third big meeting held this Hoo-Hoo year by Vicegerent J. W. Douglas, the two previous meetings being held at Birmingham and Decatur, respectively. Twelve men were initiated, five candidates failing to arrive in time for the concatenation, which was held out at one of the suburban parks.

Reversing the usual procedure, the session-on-the-roof was held first and took the form of a delightful barbecue and picnic, and which was convened at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. It was a genuine old-fashioned barbecue and attended by more than a hundred members of the Order and guests. The initiation was held in one of the park buildings, admirably arranged for the purpose, and, despite the barbecue which preceded it, was followed by a delightful luncheon, with vaudeville features, in which participated two young lady vocalists of Birmingham. The whole affair was concluded by 11:45 o'clock, and the crowd returned to the city in automobiles, having spent a delightful evening. Many visiting lumbermen from near-by towns in Alabama were present.

Sixteen at Jackson.

A splendid concatenation was held at Jackson, Miss., on the evening of June 28 by Vicegerent C. A. Schumann, assisted by Vicegerent John F. Wilder, of Perkinston, who, at the Annual Meeting, was elevated to the position of Supreme Jabberwock. Sixteen men were initiated, as appears from the report, all of the highest class and standing. The session-on-the-roof following was a delightful affair. This was the third excellent concatenation to be held in Southern Mississippi this Hoo-Hoo year, and which went to swell the splendid record made during the year for Supreme Custocatian T. L. O'Donnell.

Best Annual Concatenation Ever Held.

The concatenation at Asheville on the night of July 18 was by far the best ever held in connection with an Annual Meeting. The Bulletin cannot speak from personal knowledge of all concatenations that have been held, but it is safe in saying that, in the judgment of many of those present at the Asheville meeting, the concatenation there was the best ever held anywhere.

The revised ritual was tentatively tried out and worked well. The revision changes but little of the matter in the old ritual, but rearranges the parts quite radically. It is very likely that, as a result of the try-out, the new ritual, after receiving a little further revision, will be adopted and put into general use. It undoubtedly eliminates some difficulties heretofore existing at initiations.

The report below shows that thirty-three men were initiated. The roster of those present shows a total of nearly 200. The ceremonies were administered with dignity and solemnity, but there was, nevertheless, at the close of the initiation, a large amount of very wholesome fun. The officers who administered the ceremonies are to be congratulated. The list of the initiates shows the high standing of the men who composed the class.

The session-on-the-roof was a notable affair. The attendance filled the big main dining hall of the Battery Park Hotel and remained throughout an informal speech-making that lasted for more than an hour. Ex-Snark Hadley acted as toastmaster and filled the position with unusual gracefulness. No set speeches were made, but more than half a dozen informal talks of the most enjoyable nature were made. Brother George A. Murray, of Asheville, and Judge Phil Cocke, both of whom had delivered formal addresses of welcome to the convention in the morning, were again called on and responded eloquently. Snark Boggess responded on behalf of the Order. Other speeches made were by Vicegerent J. M. English; Albert Cone, of the American Lumberman; J. A. Kirby, the Supreme Scrivener; W. M. Stephenson, J. C. McGrath and several others.

The whole affair was delightful in the highest degree and gave good opportunity for the remarkable enthusiasm of the Annual Meeting to manifest itself.

Forty at Seattle.

At the hour this is written only telegraphic report has been received of the big concatenation held by Vicegerent L. R. Fifer at Seattle on July 18. This telegram was read at the Annual Meeting at Asheville, and recounts that forty men were initiated out of forty-five applications on file; that there were seventy-five robed members of the Order in the parade and 200 at the banquet. Every feature of the concatenation was a big success. Supreme Jabberwock J. M. Leiter and Vicegerent D. U. Davis, both of Portland, and Vicegerents Ehrmantraut, of Spokane, and Fau-Vel, of British Columbia, were in attendance. Brother Fifer's telegram concludes: "Everybody enthusiastic for Hoo-Hoo."

The Bulletin regrets not to be able to give a full account of this splendid meeting in this issue, but feels safe in saying that it was one of the best concatenations ever held anywhere, and a fit accompaniment in enthusiasm to that manifested at the Annual Meeting at Asheville. Brother Fifer's telegram was greeted with prolonged applause at the Annual Meeting.

"This item in your campaign expense account mystifies me," said the auditor. "I don't understand what you mean by raw material." "That's an error on the part of the stenographer," replied Senator Sorghum. "It should read 'hurrah material.'"—Washington Star.

HYMENEAL.

Announcement has been received of the marriage of Miss Helen Walker to Mr. Thomas Townsley Van Swearingen at Vancouver, B. C., June 26. Brother Swearingen (No. 7084) is connected with the Buckeye Lumber Company, of Seattle, Wash.

Announcement has been received of the marriage of Mr. Thomas Henry Ryan (No. 9632) to Miss Hannah Savage, which happy event took place at Seattle, Wash., June 1.

Brother Fred Foss and Miss Vida May Veralin were quietly married July 16 at Berkeley, Cal., where both parties reside. One of the local papers gives the following interesting notice of the event:

"Miss Veralin is a graduate of the University of California, and for several years has taught in the public schools at Berkeley. Mr. Foss is a leading figure in Berkeley political and business circles. After a short honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Foss will return to Berkeley, where Mr. Foss is building a new home for his bride."

Brother Foss is an ex-Vicegerent, having served the Order faithfully in that capacity several years ago.

WANTED—To invest $10,000 in an active interest in a lumber yard in a county seat town of Northern Missouri or Southern Iowa by an experienced lumberman with satisfactory references. Address, "Iowa," care J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—Position as buyer or inspector of hardwood. Have had fifteen years' experience, six years buying on road and nine years looking after mills, yards and doing shipping. Can give satisfactory reference. Address J. W. P., No. 15713, care J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—Position by an A1 hardwood man with twenty years' experience as a hardwood inspector and shipper, who would like to connect himself with a reliable concern in that capacity. I am 39 years old, married and strictly sober, and can refer to my present employer. Have good reasons for wishing to make a change. Southern connection preferred. "W.," 2544 South Bancroft Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED—Position as Superintendent or Manager of small railroad. Thoroughly experienced in construction, operating and maintenance. Can furnish best of references as to ability and character. Strictly sober; married. At present time holding position of General Superintendent. Best of reason for desiring to make change. Address "X. Y. Z.," care J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—Position as manager or superintendent of a saw mill plant by July or August 1, as the company I am with will close their saw mill and yard by the above date. I have managed the saw mill and yard here for the past four years, cutting 40,000 feet per day of cypress. I have the reputation of knowing the grades of cypress, hardwood and white pine thoroughly, also of handling all classes of labor in the South. Am 32 years of age, married, and am considered a hustler, and I would like to hear from a good company wanting a man of my ability in whom they can place implicit confidence as to honesty and loyalty to their business. Would consider a position with some wholesale or retail company to buy or sell, as I have had experience in both. Can furnish A1 reference. Address No. 22441, care J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—Partner in sash, door, general mill work and fixture factory. Established 26 years, business grown too large for one man to handle; experienced man preferred. Plant located in most prosperous section of Kansas. Address "R. No. 1," care J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—Position with large lumber concern where experience of several years as a railroad traffic official can count. Address "4712," care J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—Position with good lumber concern. Have had five years experience as manager of retail yard in Iowa; am a good collector and can keep the books. I want employment right now. Address "Texas," care J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, Nashville, Tenn.

THE HOO-HOO JEWELRY

PRICES.

No. 1, (Wishbone).....	$6 00
No. 2, (Horseshoe).....	6 50
No. 3, (Crescent).....	8 00
No. 4, (Clover Leaf).....	12 00
No. 5, (Bar).....	4 00
Souvenir Spoon.....	3 00

THE SOUVENIR SPOON.

The cut gives but a faint idea of its beauty and artistic elegance in addition to bearing the Hoo-Hoo emblem, it is adorned with nine cat-tails, such as grow in the marshes in the South, enameled in the natural color of brown, with green leaves. The workmanship is of the highest quality. It is no cheap affair, but is hand-painted, and hand-enameled. This spoon itself is sterling gilt, which means that it is sterling silver, plated with gold. To all intents and purposes it is a gold spoon. The price is about right, I think, considering what you get.

THE HOO-HOO BROOCHES.

In addition to being artistic and beautiful, these are all "lucky" pins, and I guarantee them to bring success to the purchaser and make his wish come true, provided he wishes for the right thing, and is willing to work.

The simple "bar" brooch is recommended as a present to a practical-minded girl. It carries with it a suggestion of solid worth and is calculated to impress her with the idea that you are about as good a chance, all things considered, as she will be likely to get. The WISHBONE design was made with a view to marrying-off the confirmed bachelors of Hoo-Hoo. THE HORSESHOE PIN is the luckiest of all. It will be observed that this horseshoe is not the old-fashioned kind, such as a common "plug" would wear, but is the up-to-date shoe worn by a running horse. It is, therefore, symbolic of the speedy realization of the purchaser's brightest dreams. The CRESCENT PIN is intended for presentation to a romantic maiden, and may be accompanied by a speech about the moon—"the inconstant moon that monthly changes in its circled orb"—and entreaty that her love be not likewise variable. The CLOVER-LEAF PIN is for widowers with children, who are trying to marry young girls. It is absolutely irresistible—"a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The clover-leaf has a border of Roman gold, with the center enameled in the natural clover green. Any one of these pins would make an appropriate present from a man to his wife. The horseshoe pin might prove effective as a present to one's mother-in-law, as it would carry with it a delicate hint to "walk away."

THE HOO-HOO GRIP TAG.

This, also is guaranteed to bring good luck to any traveling man and to keep him from journeying on the downhill road towards failure or disaster. It will be seen that lost grips with this tag on them will probably be sent in to me. In every such case the greatest secrecy will be maintained as to the contents. If your bag contains only a collar button and your other pair of socks, nothing will be said to humiliate you. Price 20 cents, and cheap at the money.

THE LADIES' PIN.

I have yet to see a lady, old or young, who did not want one of these pins the minute she saw it. To have these pins in the hands of pretty women—and a good Hoo-Hoo knows no other sort—is the best possible advertisement for the Order. Every Hoo-Hoo ought to buy one of these pins, have his number engraved on it, and give it to some good woman. Price $1.00 by registered mail—$1.50, flat, if taken f. o. b., Nashville. Loosen up, boys, and give the women a chance.

THE HOO-HOO WATCH CHARM.

The new design being alike on both sides it will never hang "wrong side out." The edges are smooth, which is also a great advantage. We once had a most beautiful design, to which we thought there could be no possible objection. It had, however, some sharp points, and numerous kicks began to reach us from married brothers who said the charm "scratched the baby's legs all up." This watch charm is perfectly harmless, as well as very beautiful, besides being appropriately suggestive of Egypt, the birthplace of Hoo-Hoo. That part of the design which looks like the top of a gate or door represents the "Propylon." The Propylon was the great gateway erected in front of the temple of Osiris. It was massive in proportion and rich in sculptural design and inscriptions. In shape it was like the Pylons of the temple, from which it took its name. It served as a kind of introduction to the temple, and beyond it was sacred ground. From beneath its portal, on account of its position, the temple in all its glory was seen. Leading from it was the sacred way, bordered on each side by the recumbent sphinx. Once a year, when the earth in its circuit around the sun had reached a certain point in the ecliptic, the rays of the rising sun, cutting across the desert, shone through the great Propylon down the avenue of sphinx into and down through the temple until it lighted up the place of the Most Holy and glittered on the gilded horns of the sacred bull—and the Egyptian new year had begun. The rest of the design is made up of a continuous border of the lotus, symbolic of the resurrection—the lotus sleeps and awakens. The Egyptians believed that their spirits would return to earth after a lengthy sojourn elsewhere and that they would inhabit their old bodies—hence mummies. (You don't have to remember all this, if you buy the charm, but ought to.)

PRICE $7.50 PREPAID.

Now, then, none of this Hoo-Hoo jewelry will be sold to other than members in good standing, and only for cash. There is a profit in it to the manufacturer, but none to Hoo-Hoo. It is handled for the accommodation of our members and the good of the Order. None of it will be sold without the buyer's number. Address all orders to J. H. BAIRD, Scribe-noter, Nashville, Tenn.

THE BULLETIN

VOL. XVIII.

NASHVILLE, TENN., AUGUST, 1912.

No. 202

DUES for the Hoo-Hoo year ending September 9, 1913, become payable at midnight, September 9. Notice of these dues will be mailed to reach the members on or before September 9, and should have prompt attention. Notice of dues will of course be for only the year 1913, the amount being $1.65. However, if you have not a card showing dues paid for 1912, your check should be made for $3.30, covering the two years.

¶ With notice of dues will be sent Fifth Call for the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, but this call will bear date of October 1. The present balance on hand in the Death Fund is deemed amply sufficient to pay all claims up to that time, and the Fifth Call is sent out in advance only that it may go along with the dues notice, thereby effecting a material saving in postage.

¶ The issuance of this call under date of October 1 again causes just six months to elapse between this and the preceding call which went out April 1, still further attesting the accuracy of the estimate made by The Bulletin in the beginning that the death rate among participants would be such as to require the issuance of calls at intervals of six months, or two calls for each year, making the cost of participation $4.00 per annum for $250 of indemnity, or at the rate of $16 per annum per thousand of insurance—and this without age limit or medical examination.

¶ SPECIAL NOTICE—All communications intended to reach the office of the Supreme Scrivenoter after September 9, 1912, must be addressed to W. M. Stephenson, Scrivenoter, 1219 Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo. All checks, money orders or other forms of remittance mailed to reach the Scrivenoter after September 9 must be made payable to Brother Stephenson. Failure to remember this will cause delay and inconvenience.

A MONTHLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF HOO-HOO

THE BULLETIN

J. H. BAIRD, Scrivenoter, Editor.

Published Monthly by the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, at Nashville, Tennessee.

Entered at the Postoffice at Nashville, Tennessee, as second class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

THE BULLETIN is the only official medium of Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo recognized by the Supreme Nine, and all other publications are unauthentic and unauthorized.

NASHVILLE, TENN., AUGUST, 1912.

With this issue of The Bulletin my official connection with the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo ceases. I want to say to all the members, and especially to my personal friends in the order, that I leave the work with genuine regret, and with undiminished interest in the order and faith in its future growth and usefulness, into a greater usefulness than it has ever had before. I do not know, any more than any other member, into what Hoo-Hoo may ultimately develop, but I do know, and I believe this knowledge and feeling is shared by most of the members, that Hoo-Hoo is too good a thing, has lived too long, has built up too many pleasant relations and memories, has had too much unselfish work done in its behalf by men from one side of the country to the other (absolutely without money and without price), and finally that it has cost the individual member too little, and is now costing him too little, ever to be permitted to decline.

There is something essentially vital in the fundamental idea upon which Hoo-Hoo was established—"to bring into social and fraternal relations those men engaged in the lumber business." No other organization, of whatever sort, was ever formed upon such an idea. The idea lives and is a good one, and the order will live and grow and prosper.

It is with the greatest gratification that I leave the work with a record behind for the past year so satisfactory, and the outlook for the future so bright. The record of concatenations for the past Hoo-Hoo year, despite untoward circumstances that delayed and retarded the efforts of officers and members during several months of last fall, is already nearly equal to that of last year and the year before. Last year exactly the same number of concatenations were held as were held the year before, namely, 82. This year, when this is written, 78 concatenations have been held and reported, while a half dozen or more are scheduled to come off between now and September 9. The record is a remarkable one, but the prospect ahead is even more gratifying. The holding of the Annual Meeting in July has resulted in one great good. It has put the new administration in harness with a running start. Instead of having to consume two or three months of the Hoo-Hoo year, as heretofore, in these officers getting acquainted with the situation and appointing the Vicegerents, most of this work has been already done. More than half the Vicegerents to be appointed for next Hoo-Hoo year have already been selected and their appointments will go out to reach them September 9. Dozens of them have been already informally notified, and a goodly number of these have already started work on concatenations to be held in the early fall.

I prophesy that with the new impetus given to Hoo-Hoo there will be not less than 125 concatenations held between September 9 of this year and the convening of the Annual Meeting at St. Louis next year, that a larger number of initiates of a better class will be initiated than for many years, and finally that the Annual Meeting at St. Louis a year hence will be the biggest, the best, and the most enthusiastic any Hoo-Hoo has ever attended.

Every indication points to all these predictions being fulfilled or exceeded. The new Supreme Nine is composed of able men, well chosen to carry forward the splendid efforts of the Nine which has served during the past twelve months. They are men of ability, are wisely selected as to geographical location, and have already started into the year's work with an enthusiasm never before witnessed since I have been Scrivenoter.

The choice made of the new Scrivenoter is a wise one. Besides being well qualified for the position, his past two years' work as Supreme Representative of the order has given him a knowledge of the existing situation all over the field and a personal acquaintance among the members of the order such as no other man holding official connection with Hoo-Hoo has ever had to start with.

I feel a more than personal interest in seeing the record of next Hoo-Hoo year made the best in the history of the order, and I ask all my personal friends to join with me in the most vigorous assistance each of us can possibly render.

Fraternally yours,

J. H. BAIRD (408).

THE NEW HOME OF HOO-HOO.
Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

THE HOO-HOO DEATH EMERGENCY FUND.

The following is statement of the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund to close of business August 26. It will be seen that deaths have run heavy during both July and August, eleven claims being paid during those months. There will be seen an expense disbursement of $300. This is pro rata of general expense for postage, stationery and such like, assessed against the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund incurred during the two years the fund has been in operation. Heretofore the Death Emergency Fund has paid no part of these general expenses, no office rent, no postage or printing, except for the formal calls sent out at the intervals of six months, no clerical work whatever, and no part of the postage on general correspondence. As a matter of fact, during the past two years something like one-fourth of the general correspondence has been in some connection with the Death Emergency Fund. It was deemed that the fund should stand a fair proportion of this expense, and upon figures and estimates being submitted at last Annual Meeting, the Supreme Nine authorized a payment of $300 from the Death Fund to the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, the latter having stood absolutely all of these expenses. The apportionment is certainly low enough. No participant in the Death Fund can complain of this expense. It is only $150 a year for the two years the fund has been in operation. The Supreme Scrivenoter is confident that this sum would not cover the postage alone.

With this expenditure the nine death claims paid since report published in July Bulletin, brings our balance down to $3,164.98. This is ample to run the fund for the the remainder of the usual period of six months, and will put the Fifth Call out under date of October 1, just six months from the time the Fourth Call went out, which was April 1. As a matter of fact, however, the Fifth Call will go out September 9, along with first notice of 1913 dues. This is merely to save postage, the two notices being sent in the same envelope. The Fifth Call will bear date of October 1: From now on until October 1 such subscriptions as come in to the Death Fund will be credited in advance on Fifth Call.

Some Expressions from Participants.

The following letter from Brother P. D. Roe needs a little explanation. Every time a Call has come out Brother Roe has cracked down with $10, without saying a word even in acknowledgment of the cards sent him. The letter below is in response to one written him calling attention to the fact that he is paid far in advance and jocularly suggesting that he may not be fully informed as to what is expected of the participants.

Port Moody, B. C., April 1, 1912.—Enclosed find my check in response to the Fourth Call on Emergency Fund. In reply to yours of the 27th ult., I wish to say that you are wrong in both conclusions. I merely want to get satisfaction in some way for the money I spend, and I don't know anything more satisfying than the feeling that some one's widow or orphans are being benefited. I sincerely hope this call is liberally responded to and that the fund is maintained.
Yours fraternally,

P. D. ROE, 16981.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 8, 1912.—I am very much pleased to subscribe to this fund, as I regard it as a very small expense for the good it does, and I have no doubt it has in numerous cases supplid emergency funds greatly needed.

Trusting the response will be general from our membership, I am,
Very truly yours,

O. D. HASKETT.

Marion, Ill., April 2, 1912.—Enclosed please find my check for $2.00 in payment for the Fourth Call Death Emergency Fund. I have been very sick, but concluded not to die now and deplete the Death Emergency Fund.

With best wishes, I am,
Yours truly,

ED VANDEGRIFT, 22589.

North Birmingham, Ala., April 5, 1912.—I am enclosing my check for $2.00 to cover Fourth Call for Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. I am a hearty believer in this work, and believe that it is the best step that Hoo-Hoo has ever taken.

Yours respectfully,

W. THORNTON ESTES.

Bond, Miss., April 6, 1912.—Enclosed find money order for $2.00 for Fourth Call. I regard this emergency fund as a Godsend to many bereaved widows.

Yours fraternally,

JOHN W. CONNELL, 5950.

Waco, Texas, April 5, 1912.—Enclosed please find check for $2.00 to cover Fourth Call Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. Wish I could write all checks with as much pleasure as this.

With best wishes,

Yours very truly,

W. E. DORIS.

Ovalo, Tex., April 3, 1912.—It is my purpose to stand by this feature of our Order. I think it should be maintained.

With kind regards,

Fraternally yours,

J. B. BURKE, 8144.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 2, 1912.—My check for $2.00 to apply on the Fourth Call Death Emergency Fund, when it is made. This is a good step in Hoo-Hoo, and I hope to contribute several times more yet.

With best wishes for the Order.

Respectfully,

F. F. BULLARD, 16180.

Clay, W. Va., April 3, 1912.—I see by The Bulletin notice of Fourth Call for the Death Emergency Fund. I enclose you check to pay my share, and I feel it is a good investment, and I hope I will live to pay the calls as they come.

Wishing you and all Hoo-Hoo long life, etc.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN S. SWAN, Jr., 8197.

By the time this issue of The Bulletin reaches its readers the Hoo-Hoo year will have nearly ended and the new year will be close at hand. The prospects are that the coming year will be one of much prosperity. The Order's interests are in good hands; the Supreme Nine and the corps of Vicegerents are able men and faithful Hoo-Hoo, and from all over the country have come assurances of deep interest on part of the members. But it should be borne in mind that every man in the Order is expected to do his part toward making the work a success. And in this regard, actions speak louder than words.

One thing in particular that every man can do, with but little expenditure of time or energy, is to pay his dues promptly. When a great many wait for the second or third call for dues, the Order is "out" quite a sum for postage and printing. Delay in remitting does not forward the welfare of the organization; promptness harms nobody, but on the contrary helps all concerned, for it gets the matter off the mind of the member and simplifies the general conduct of business. Wherefore, do it now.

Another thing which it is hoped the members will bear in mind is that The Bulletin is their paper—it is not the exponent of any one person's views or interests, but the medium of communication among all the members. It cannot be a success in this respect unless the members will cooperate in the work of making its columns interesting. Not everybody can write a newspaper article (fortunately not everybody wants to!), but every man can send in an occasional news item of interest to members, personal notes, advice as to conditions of the Order and of business in his territory, etc. Hoo-Hoo covers a large area of country and members in widely separated districts enjoy "hearing from" each other. Communications should be reasonably brief; sometimes a long letter is crowded out at the last moment by a belated report of concatenation, or something of that sort. This accounts for the fact that sometimes there appears in The Bulletin a letter bearing a date some time back. Still, if the facts given are interesting, the date does not greatly matter. The point is that short communications fit in more readily with the "make-up" of a paper than do lengthy articles.

These are some of the ways in which all members can assist in the progress of the Order. Another way is to keep in touch with the nearest Vicegerent. The biggest man in the district is the Vicegerent. The Supreme Nine member for each respective jurisdiction is expected to supervise the work in a general way and to attend concatenations as the assistant or coadjutor of the Vicegerent. But in the district the Vicegerent is supreme; he is it, and it's up to him. Therefore, it's up to each member to cooperate with the Vicegerent, to "hold up his hands," as the old-fashioned folks used to say of the congregation's duty toward the circuit rider. No Vicegerent can make much headway without the cordial cooperation of the members in his district. It is urged upon each member, therefore, to manifest his loyalty by doing all in his power to aid and abet the efforts of his state officer, to the end that the coming twelve months may prove, as it promises now to be, a banner year for Hoo-Hoo.

Office of The Robert Dollar Co., Shanghai, China, June 15, 1912.— . . . I am looking for another big "stir up" here. Things look mighty bad, as the people are making a lot of trouble over the loan question, and if China doesn't get some money mighty quick, there is going to be fighting without end. E. K. HOWE, No. 15826.

These remarks, coming from a level-headed business man (not a politician) who is "on the spot," are of more than ordinary interest. The whole world is concerned in the future of China. That immense territory offers boundless opportunity for trade if only the financial and commercial conditions ever become entirely settled. Some weeks ago one of the leading journals of the Pacific Coast, in the course of an editorial article, observed: "The news that China has refused to accept the loan of $300,000,000, somewhat coercively offered by the six powers, is of some importance, because it certainly will be followed by other measures tending toward the partition of the country. The attitude of China is that generally assumed by intelligent people who have a wholesome fear of getting into the hands of money lenders."

China originally asked for a loan of $50,000,000, and offered the usual securities for repayment. The reply of the big nations—the "Powers"—was an offer of six times that amount, but with conditions that would practically divide the sovereignty of China among them. They demanded that the money should be spent by their own financial agents, who would be sent to China with full supervisory powers, and that China should undertake to pledge her credit in no other way.

"It is excellent," says Shakespeare, "to have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous to use it like a giant." Sometimes, too, it is not so profitable to the giant; the Powers were probably surprised to find their plan a bit difficult to "put over." It was originally decided that France, England, Germany and America should provide the cash, Russia and Japan being excluded by a provision that money must not be borrowed for the purpose of lending it again to China. Naturally, Russia and Japan objected to this; in fact, they howled long and loud, for their agony was extreme. Their clamorous protests were successful—the amount of the Chinese loan was raised to $300,000,000, "in order," as one sarcastic writer expressed it, "that the mortgage might be substantial enough to justify subsequent proceedings in the way of control and foreclosure." But the Powers had overstepped the mark. In China the dominant sentiment in the popular mind is a dread of foreign aggression, and this led them to refuse the loan. Concerning this attitude on part of the Chinese, an English reviewer recently said:

It was the dread of foreign aggression that caused the overthrow of the Manchus, and it was in the hope of adequate protection that the republic was established, if indeed it can be said to be established at all. If the people of China should become convinced that they are still ringed round by a circle of powers determined to control or to partition the country, by means of loans or otherwise, their rage will be of a dangerous kind.

During the time the Olympic games were in progress at Stockholm, Sweden, a complete illustrated newspaper was published in that city in English. This was done through the enterprise of "Dagens Nyheter," one of the leading Stockholm dailies. The English edition was entitled "The Stadium." The reason for the paper's being summed up in the following excerpt from a valedictory which appeared in the last issue that was published:

"English is the universal language of sport, and not only is the native tongue of the two greatest sporting nations, but is understood and used for intercourse by athletes and athletic officials of other countries. This state of affairs will undoubtedly progress, and we may certainly expect an English paper at the scene of every future Olympiad. We hope every such venture may not only succeed where we succeeded, but may and probably will—as is the happy lot of the follower—meet with success where we perhaps did not."

A little while ago we were hearing a great deal about Esperanto, the hand-made language which was destined to become the world speech—a medium of communication for all nations. From the beginning, The Bulletin flatly asserted that Esperanto was doomed to failure. There are some things that can be safely predicted from the very first jump. No artificial language will “go,” for the simple reason that there is no go to it. It has no inherent strength, no life. A language that is alive is always undergoing change. But alterations in language are not made by the human will. There is no will to alter speech; there is only will to use speech in a way that is new—and the alteration comes of itself as a result. An exigency arises in which existing available resources are not sufficient for the speaker's needs—or the opportunity offers itself for a short cut, a new and more attractive path to a point accessible enough in old ways. Thus words are added almost without conscious effort. Some of the efforts the English people have made to express new ideas in old words constitute most interesting phases of their history. For instance: At the time Christianity was introduced into the British Isles the people there had no word for saviour. Their word for the deity meant a being who had to be placated with offerings, sacrifices and the like—a horrid creature usually filled with wrath. For the new idea of the Christian creator and father the old word “god,” ennobled and inspired with a new meaning, answered English purposes well enough. But there was no current name applicable to the conception of one who saved men from their sins. In short, here was a new idea and a new word was needed. Now, if a man is made free from sin, he is whole or hale, and that which makes him hale is a healing power. So the present participle of the verb “haelan,” to heal, was specialized into a proper name. The people did not reason about it—that is, not consciously; they simply said the Healing One when they wished to refer to the Saviour. As for the disciples, they were called learning-knights—that is, youths under instruction. (Learning-knights was originally spelled learning-cnihtas.) At that time it was easier to accept the new institutions of Christianity than the new names for them, and it was not until years later that the Latin words “disciple” and “Saviour” came into use—the Anglo-Saxon did not, like the modern English, resort freely to foreign stores of expression for the supply of new needs. The Anglo-Saxon word for foreign was “outlandish.” To them Saviour was an outlandish word. But at last, through the operation of causes too complex to be gone into here, the outlandish word became incorporated into the English language and is now clothed with sacred meaning. Yet, after all, there is something very beautiful and appealing in that idea of The Healing One and His learning-knights.

Although in the course of centuries a great number of words derived from Latin (“Mediterranean words” as a certain English writer disdainfully calls them) crept into English, Anglo-Saxon remains the body and framework of our speech. As one eminent authority says: “If what has come to us through the Normans and since their time from France and Italy and the Latin lexicon were turned out of our vocabulary, we could still love and work and talk and sing and have a folk-lore and a higher literature.” English is the language of a virile people, a dominant race. In English, then, and not in Esperanto, was the paper published at Stockholm. And if ever there is such a thing as a universal language, it will be English. As the Stockholm editor said, English is the language of the two greatest sporting nations. It is also the language of the greatest money-spending nation on earth. As a rule, Americans either cannot or will not learn any foreign language well enough to speak it. Yet they are great globe trotters. If a man won't stay at home and won't speak any language but his own, and yet has money to burn, what is the inevitable result? The question is answered in the words of a sign displayed by many shops in Paris, “Ici on parle Anglais”—“English spoken here”!

It will be remembered that Brother James Lightbody, otherwise known as the Hoot Mon, some time ago adopted the pretty custom of sending a spray of heather to the Annual Meeting. For years he has not failed to send the heather, but at Asheville it was not forthcoming. The following letter tells why:

8 Gordon Street, Glasgow, Scotland, July 31, 1912.—Dear Brother Baird: . . . I trust you had a good time at Asheville and got through some good work. I did not send the heather, as it is not in bloom till about the end of August. However, it will be at Nashville by the 9th of 9th. Thine aye,
JAMES HOOT MON LIGHTBODY, No. 12798.

One of the Vicegerents in a Western State, who was recently reappointed to office, writes enthusiastically of prospects for the coming Hoo-Hoo year:

“ . . . Crop conditions in this vicinity promise the best yield for the past ten years. With conditions in such shape, think I can round up a class of fifteen or twenty kittens for a concatenation to be held early in December. I am doing some scouting around now, and will send you a definite announcement as soon as things materialize.”

Brother Frank W. Trower, of San Francisco, was farther East when at Asheville than he had ever been before in his life. En route home he visited, among other places, Washington City. Speaking of this part of his trip afterwards, Brother Trower said:

“I had a peculiar experience at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington when I arrived there the evening of July 21. I had just registered when the clerk picked up a black cat from behind the counter and asked me what I thought of the new menagerie he was acquiring. He said the cat had just come in from the street a few minutes before and he did not know whether to keep it or put it out again. It was a pretty little kitten and seemed anxious to make friends. I called the clerk's attention to my button and informed him that the arrival of this cat was an omen of good luck and that the ancient Egyptians would certainly have so considered it. I think the kitten stayed.”

Friends of Brother Trower in this part of the country cherish the hope that the black cat at Washington presaged not only good luck for the hotel but also another trip east of the Rockies for himself. And of course the simultaneous arrival of the newly-elected Snark and the kitten augurs a prosperous year for the Order.

In the course of a recent letter written in reply to one from this office, Brother S. G. Dowell, of Douglas, Arizona, gives some general items which, no doubt, will interest the members at large. Brother Dowell is superintendent of the Arizona Gypsum Plaster Company, manufacturers of hard wall plaster and building blocks. He is a life member of the Order:

Flagstaff is in the northern part of Arizona, while Douglas is in the extreme southern portion, being on the line of Old Mexico. The situation being thus, the people of this part of Arizona have very little in common with those of the northern portions. Railway facilities being bad, also, one could go almost to Nashville in the time it takes to go to Flagstaff. Phoenix, the capital, is the most central city in Arizona and very easy to reach from all points; the State fair is held there every fall.

I became a member of the Emergency Fund on the start, for I am a great believer in that part of Hoo-Hoo and wish it all success.

While I have never had the opportunity to enjoy the social side of the order, I have always had my interest kept up by reading The Bulletin.

Office of Midland Route, Chicago, Ill., July 23, 1912.—Dear Brother Baird: Note enclosed clipping from the Record-Herald of yesterday. It seems a pity that, in this day and age, some people still do not know that a black cat is not a hoodoo, but a lucky sign. A. E. BROWN, No. 7896.

The clipping is as follows:

A black cat, omen of bad luck, led the way yesterday for the first street car that passed through the new North LaSalle street tunnel.

Some laughed at the old superstition; others remembered Edgar Allan Poe's graphic story of the black cat and the skeleton and were silent.

A Clybourn avenue car was being prepared for the first plunge beneath the river when the cat appeared. No one had seen it arrive. No one knew whence it came nor where it belonged.

It perched on a rail, its back in a hump and its tail standing straight in the air, looking into the giant "rat hole." It hesitated only a moment, blinking at the bright arc lights that gleamed in the gloom of the passage like great eyes.

Clinging to the rail the animal disappeared into the mouth of the tunnel and was lost to the view of the crowd. Ten minutes later it emerged on the opposite side, its eyes still wide from their dilation in the darkness of the tube.

For a few minutes it loafed in the sun, then disappeared as mysteriously as it had appeared at the southern entrance.

No accident attended the initial trip of the Clybourn avenue car.

FROM THE OTHER SIDE OF THE WORLD.

Office of the Berlin Machine Works, Sydney, Australia.—

P. & O. S. S. "Marmora" en route Perth, West Australia, July 5, 1912.

My Dear Baird: You ask me why I do not write something for publication. I am often tempted to do so, but owing to many other activities I as often put it off.

Travel takes up much of my time, and at the same time I maintain an office in Sydney in touch with which I have to be continually by mail, cable, telegraph and wireless. You folks at home have no idea of the distances out here. For instance I am now taking a hurried run out to Western Australia from Sydney to advise with engineers regarding a saw milling plant. It is merely a hurried run and back again, but in point of time it corresponds exactly to your taking a trip to new Orleans and thence to San Francisco by sea via Panama Canal; or to run over to London and back again.

My territory extends from Singapore in the north to Hobart in the south, and from Perth in the west to Gisborne, New Zealand, in the east. It corresponds to a territory extending from Winnipeg to Venezuela and from San Francisco to London. Much of the traveling is by sea which, to be sure, is most comfortable, but comparatively slow.

Australia is a delightful place to live in. The people are all of British origin, the cities are large and modern and life in many ways easier and saner than in America.

There are a great many Americans out here, some permanently located and some as birds of passage. One meets them everywhere. On the boat this trip there are several, among whom is our Consul General at Large, Mr. Chesire, who is going on to inspect our consulate at Perth. Yesterday we were in port at Adelaide, and as it was the Fourth of July we visited the consulate where our Consular Agent (a British subject, by the way) was giving a delightful reception to all and sundry. It was here that we learned of the nomination of Mr. Wilson as Democratic candidate for the presidency. This was discussed when we came together on board again, and so far as the Americans went, it seemed to be the general opinion that he will be our next President.

As you know, I am Vicegerent of Hoo-Hoo in Australasia. So far it has been simply an ornamental honor. I have felt, however, that the Australasian would take kindly to Hoo-Hoo. It would be necessary to get a trunk from home and initiate a dozen or so prominent men by administering the oaths and then go after the rest in the good old orthodox way.

Give my best regards to all old friends. Sincerely,
W. G. BOORMAN (No. 196).

In Western Canada.

The following letter is from Brother W. R. Waters, No. 16304, formerly of Kentucky, but now making a hazard of new fortune in British territory. Brother Waters was for a time a member of the Kentucky State Board of Equalization and Assessment. He says, however, that he was born a hayseed, and that, harkening to the call of the wild, he took to the prairie. In his letter, Brother Waters has touched on conditions in western Canada as they appear to him:

Big Stone Gap, Alberta, July 19, 1912.— . . . I have given this country my best thought and study since coming here last August 10th, but I have not attempted to study the government system, etc.

I came here to homestead and pre-empt, brought a nephew along to do the same, and have two young men who came here in 1909 and took up land who wanted me to help them along the road of developing a grain farm, and we are hard at it. The job is no child's play. I would advise any one with that in mind to steer clear of the homestead and pre-emption line. There are many here now hoping to hang on by their eyebrows, prove up, sell out, and get out with a good stake. I simply say they will earn what they get, and perhaps not get it after earning it. Conquering this prairie sod reminds me of "Broncho Busting," you must either "bust it" or it will certainly "bust" you, mentally, physically and financially. There are no golden apples here waiting for the picker. But there is an opportunity here for the farmer with brains, push, energy, experience and capital. While I do not want to discourage anyone from coming here to "sail their prairie schooner" on this seemingly placid lake of prairie sod, I want to state facts as they appear to me.

I believe that all crimes in the category have been committed for the possession of land. Since there is supposedly nothing new under the sun, "history will simply repeat itself" more rapidly as new land becomes scarcer. The man who has never owned a farm is strangely struck when he is told or reads that in a certain location 160 acres of virgin soil is to be had for $3.00 per acre at 5 per cent interest on long time; he does not see that there is a strong rope tied to this proposition in the way of homestead and requirements, and so he jumps in and has an experience that pen cannot put on paper and do the subject justice. Now, as a matter of fact, the government is not to blame. The cost of looking after this homestead and pre-emption department I presume does not make the government any appreciable net returns on the investment. I take it that the government is as liberal in the matter as it is possible for them to be. The thing that wrecks the homesteader's schooner is the cost of living and the cost of everything he has to do and buy before his land will support itself and him.

Without attempting to go into the causes for it being so I will simply state that in Calgary, a town of 50,000 people, goods cost at wholesale as much as the same goods do at retail in Louisville or Nashville. To this rule there are no exceptions that affect the homesteader, but there may be articles out of the homesteader's class that sell on a parity with like articles in the States. You can buy smokers' matches (safety matches in small boxes) at any cigar store in Louisville at 1 cent per box; in Calgary the same matches cost 5 cents for 2 boxes at a cigar stand. It is safe to say that goods cost at retail here in the towns from 50 to 100 per cent higher at retail than they do in Louisville or Nashville. Now think what these goods cost a homesteader after he hauled an empty wagon 65 to 80 miles to a railroad station to get them and hauled them home. It would help the cause if he had hauled something to market when he went after the goods. Lumber is high, and there is no profit in freighting as above at one cent per lb. The commonest sheeting costs $19.00 per M. Now add one cent per lb. to freight it to the homestead; so you see the homestead shack may not look as well as a chicken coop, yet it cost something. You can see that one does not have to build a mansion to have the $300 house required by the government when you prove up your homestead at the end of the third year. The costly part of hauling generally does not last long; fortunately the railroad development generally comes to his relief, but the "early birds" have about lost all their feathers before the railroad comes to their relief. Of course the railroad does not build in until the population is there to buy something for the road to haul in and also something for the road to haul out. Before much can be raised this sod has to be reckoned with at a cost of $4.00 per acre for the breaking and some $3.00 or more per acre for preparing and seeding. The first crop, as a rule, does not count for much, but if the seasons are favorable the succeeding crops cost less to put in and the yield is phenomenal to one versed in farming in Kentucky or Tennessee.

My first work here after visiting the land office at Calgary was to buy a self-binder and bring it out here and cut some 50 acres of oats. The land was broken in 1910 and a crop sown on it which failed. It was disked up in 1911 and sown in oats; you can see from photograph enclosed what the standing grain looks like. We stacked the oats, and believe that we harvested at least 4 tons to the acre. We will thresh the oats in the spring and then know what the grain yield will be. I have no fear of the quality. I have never seen better grain. Garden truck flourishes here; I have never seen better in quality, and the quantity is also gratifying. The variety covers a much wider range than one would expect so far north. The altitude is between 2,400 and 2,500 feet. We depend on wells for water which are generally from 60 to 100 feet deep.

The system of farming here will closely follow the Campbell system or dry farming, and where it has been faithfully followed the yield in crops is excellent. We can expect an off year now and then, but the best information is that in the last twenty years the rainfall has been sufficient if properly preserved by preparation of the soil to produce a crop, except in 1910, and then the trouble was largely due to this section having been devastated by a prairie fire in the fall of 1909, literally burned to a crisp.

The cost of tilling the soil by animal power is too slow and expensive, and will not meet the demands of the occasion. Steam power is out, owing to the cost of coal and the quality of that to be had (lignite at a cost of about $11.00 per ton delivered). The gasoline traction engine seems to have solved the problem. Such an outfit fully equipped will cost $8,000, or about that figure, depending on size of engine and the completeness of the equipment; will cost $30.00 per day to run it at planting, and should earn $60.00 per day plowing prairie sod, doing the work of 28 horses and seven men. In other words, the work can be done for $3 1-3 less with traction engine than it can be done with horses, and a better quality of work can be done. Preparing and seeding can be done with engine at same cost comparison, and threshing the crop no comparison can be made as the engine work is so far removed from horsepower. Delivering the grain at railroad station will be done in the near future with the engine at a much less cost than by horse power.

A railroad will be a life-saver to this district, and it looks good for two here by midsummer of 1913, one perhaps somewhat sooner. You perhaps understand why brains, push, energy, and capital are put strong in this letter. We here are building for some two years hence, when we hope to come into our own. We are simply going through the diseases of childhood. We may survive them or may not. If not, others will take our places and the repetition of the history of developing a new country will go merrily on.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Brother W. R. Anderson (No. 14472) recently took over the entire capital stock of the Packages Publishing Company, of Milwaukee, and is now the whole thing in that concern. The company publishes "Packages," a paper devoted to the wooden package industry and allied industries, and also publishes "Flour and Feed," a journal devoted to horse, mule, cattle and poultry feed manufacturers and wholesale and retail dealers. Both these publications are leaders in their respective fields. Brother Anderson has been connected with Packages for nearly five years. Prior to that he had a long and valuable newspaper training, having been connected at different times with two leading dailies in Milwaukee and also, some years ago, having been on the staff of a lumber newspaper in the South. Brother Anderson is now Vicegerent for the Southern District of Wisconsin. He has been a Vicegerent for seven consecutive years—in fact, he is what might be termed a veteran in that line. No man has served the Order more faithfully, and members throughout the country will be interested to learn of his expanding enterprises in the field of trade journalism. Brother Anderson was initiated at Vicksburg, Miss., in April, 1905.

Brother E. L. More, of the Horse Shoe Lumber Company, River Falls, Ala., is taking a vacation trip in the form of an extended tour of the West. Brother More will visit for a time at a ranch in Montana.

Various notices in lumber newspapers recently announced the fact that Brother George H. Hodges, of the lumber firm of Hodges Bros., Olathe, Kans., has become Democratic candidate for Governor. The Sunflower State is normally Republican by from 60,000 to 80,000. Two years ago Brother Hodges made the race for Governor against a favored "second-termer" and cut down the latter's majority to 16,000. As a member of the State Senate for eight years, Brother Hodges made a fine record. He was the author of a number of important laws now on the statute books of Kansas.

Brother James Hays Quarles, formerly of College Station, Texas, is now located at Waco, Texas, where he is managing editor of the Waco Morning News.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.

In a letter dated August 7 from Brother N. H. Falk, of Arcata, Cal., this interesting paragraph occurs: "I have just entered my seventy-seventh year of this life. Saturday, August 10, we will celebrate our golden wedding. Rather a long time to live with one woman!"

A One Man Affair.

A one man concatenation was held at Nashville on July 30 for the purpose of initiating Brother Joseph S. Wood, connected with the Southern Lumberman. Brother Wood has been an aspirant for membership in Hoo-Hoo for a year or two, but from one cause or another he has been unable to show up at either of the two concatenations held here. He was signed up and paid for at the concatenation which was to have been held here last month, but which has now been postponed for cool weather and the return of several of the Nashville members from vacation trips. In the meantime the health of the wife of Brother Wood required her residence for a time in the West, and being called on to leave Nashville rather suddenly Brother Wood was very anxious to take his degree. He got it. There was not a large crowd present at his initiation, which occurred in the office of the Supreme Scrivenoter, but those who were present bear out Vicegerent Ewing in saying that there was probably more doing for the size of the class than ever occurred at any concatenation. The ceremonies extended over more than two hours, and from the noise which drifted out into the corridors of the First National Bank Building and the crowd of attendants which there congregated in some alarm, attest the thoroughness with which the ceremonies were administered. Brother Wood has temporarily taken up his residence in Denver.

"Golden-Potlatch" Concatenation.

It was a wonderful concatenation held at Seattle, Wash., on July 18 by Vicegerent L. R. Fifer, now elevated to Supreme Custocatian on the Supreme Nine. The concatenation came Thursday night in a week given up to celebrating the festival called the "Golden Potlatch." This is a celebration peculiar to Seattle. It never has been and never can be held anywhere else. It is a Seattle institution. Just what it is, which is news to us, is thus explained by Brother Fred H. Gilman, in the American Lumberman in his report of the affair, in which Brother Gilman certainly set nothing of the Hoo-Hoo doings lose in the telling. He says:

The Golden Potlatch is the annual celebration of the greatest event in Seattle's history since the first transcontinental railroad was built—the arrival of the first golden-laden ship from Alaska in the first days of the Klondike strike. Potlatch is an Indian word meaning feast or celebration and the giving of gifts. The celebration Wednesday was handled entirely by the Tillkums of Elitæes (Friends of Seattle). The golden-laden ship Portland, with its little band of roughly dressed northerners, with their pokes of gold dust, their malamutes, sleds and furs, was met at the dock by the Tillkums all dressed in white suits and the Hyas Tye (Great Chief) conducted the party through the streets to the big tepee.

The concatenation was preceded by a street parade of Hoo-Hoo in regulation robes, making part of the general Potlatch parade. It was a magnificent showing. The robed members of Hoo-Hoo were led by a band from Centralia, Wash., consisting of twenty pieces. Vicegerent Fifer rode in a carriage at the head of the line, looking altogether as radiant as any Gaekwar of Baroda at a Queen's Durbar. The marching Hoo-Hoo carried with them a caged black cat, and on their float was another huge wooden cage, filled with the candidates for initiation.

Forty men were initiated. Vicegerent Fifer called to the Snark's station the following distinguished members of the order present at the meeting: Supreme Jabberwock, J. M. Leiter, of Portland, Ore.; Past ex-Snark of the Universe, H. J. Miller, of Index, Wash.; P. W. Fau-Vel, Vicegerent, of British Columbia; David Davis, Vicegerent, of Northern District of Oregon; J. H. Ehrmantraut, Vicegerent for Eastern District of Washington; and ex-Vicegerents T. H. Claffey, W. C. Miles and W. P. Lockwood, all of the Western District of Washington.

The initiatory ceremonies began about 4:30 p. m., with more than 150 members of the order present. The initiation was concluded about 7 o'clock when the whole crowd, now numbering over 200, sat down to the session-on-the-roof. Snark Fifer presided as toastmaster and invited the distinguished members named in the foregoing to the head of the table.

After the first few courses of the dinner had been served the Snark announced that there would be a few short talks by prominent Hoo-Hoo, and one or two matters of business to be brought before the gathering, and in order to expedite matters so that all could get away in time to see the Illuminated Potlatch parade, without more ado he introduced E. C. Hole, of the American Lumberman, as the first speaker.

Mr. Hole thanked Mr. Fifer for this complimentary introduction, and said in part:

I am anxious that Hoo-Hoo shall profit and continue to become bigger and better here in the West where the trees are big and the ideas are big. Great Hoo-Hoo has a mission to perform in cementing the friendships of the men in this great industry, and I hope you of the West who are enthusiastic and courageous will make the East and the South see how important the order is. Hoo-Hoo will never be bigger than the men who compose its membership. You men of the West, and particularly the young men, have a great duty to perform to rebuild and uphold the order and make Hoo-Hoo the greatest order in the land.

Mr. Hole closed by reciting the following verses from the pen of Brother Douglass Malloch, the "Lumberman Poet":

THE WEST.

Men look to the East for the dawning things, for the light of a rising sun,
But they look to the West, to the crimson West, for the things that are done, are done!
The eastward sun is a newmade hope from the dark of the night distilled;
But the westward sun is a sunset sun, is the sun of a hope fulfilled!

So out of the East they have always come, the cradle that saw the birth
Of all the heart-warm hopes of man and all of the hopes of earth—
For out of the East arose a Christ and out of the East has gleamed
The dearest dream and the clearest dream that ever a prophet dreamed.

And in to the waiting West they go with the dream-child of the East,
And find the hopes that they hoped of old are a hundred-fold increased.
For here in the East we dream our dreams of the things we hope to do,
And here in the West, the crimson West, the dreams of the East come true!

Mr. Leiter, Supreme Jabberwock, being introduced, briefly but eloquently expressed his pleasure at being able to be present, at the big turnout and the interest displayed. Mr. Leiter, who is from Portland, said that anybody that knows anything about Washington knows it has men that are doing things. He closed by wishing all health, happiness and long life and with them prosperity.

David Davis, Vicegerent for Oregon, told of the good work being done in Oregon, the number of concatenations, and said that Hoo-Hoo was getting stronger all the time, and was going to keep up the good work in Oregon as well as Washington.

Harry J. Miller, ex-Snark of the Universe, recited a poem of his own composition entitled "A Baseball Game in Heaven." A concatenation in Washington would never be a success without an original poem from Harry, the "Poet Laureate of Hoo-Hoo." Others that made short talks or told stories were "Tom" Claffey, "Tom" Shields, Cal Welbon.

Following the speech making a short business session was held, at which Brother Alexander Page, No. 5891, was selected as the new Vicegerent to succeed Brother Fifer. Mr. Page voiced his pleasure at receiving this honor at the hands of his friends and promised to do everything in his power to build up the order, saying that if he could do as well as Brother Fifer and have as loyal support from the members, he would be satisfied on the record made. Another feature of business was the adoption of resolutions to be wired the Annual Meeting in session at Asheville, N C., endorsing the candidacy of W. M. Stephenson as Supreme Scrivenoter. The business session closed with the awarding of two prizes to the members who had rendered most effective service in arranging for the concatenation. The first prize, a handsome diamond scarf pin, went to Brother E. L. Fairbanks, and the second, a pearl scarf pin, went to Virgil Baker. Much credit for the success of the concatenation and the enjoyableness of the evening was due also to the efforts of Brother E. F. Heisser, who had charge of arrangements and who labored untiringly throughout the week for the success of the concatenation. His work was warmly commended.

Brother Fred Gilman concludes a two-page report to his paper with the words, "Another great concatenation has gone down in the history of western Washington, credited to Seattle, and to Vicegerent Fifer."

Twenty at DeRidder.

The concatenation which has been several times announced in The Bulletin to occur at Merryville, La., did not occur there at all, but at the last moment was adjourned over at DeRidder, La. It was held on August 3, Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. F. Judd going down to preside as Snark. Twenty men were initiated, being a first-rate class of husky lumbermen, and but for the uncertainty and uneasiness created by the labor conditions prevailing in that territory, a class of at least forty would have been initiated. Not very full particulars of the session-on-the-roof are furnished, but Vicegerent Wood writes that the initiation was preceded by a small street parade, which was enjoyed by the candidates and the people of DeRidder. Senior Hoo-Hoo Judd writes that with the class of twenty stalwart lumbermen to initiate, the old members present had their hands full in handling them, and that the night of the concatenation was almost unbearably hot, which detracted somewhat both from the attendance and the enjoyableness of the meeting. This is the second concatenation to be held in Southern Louisiana, and will be followed by quite a series of other meetings during the early fall.

Delayed in Reporting.

Due to illness of Vicegerent H. H. Coombs, the splendid concatenation held at Albany, Ga., on June 19 was not reported in time for July Bulletin. It is a little late now to go into details of a news nature, but the concatenation deserves all that might be said about it as a successful and enjoyable one. Eleven men were initiated in the presence of some forty or fifty members of the order, in the list of which appears the name of many of the old-time prominent Hoo-Hoo of South Georgia. At the-session-on-the-roof, which was a most delightful one, Vicegerent Coombs presided as toastmaster, and set the speech-making going with a few bright and timely observations. The principal talk of the evening was made by Mr. S. K. Cowan, of

No. 2 For Brother Monson.

Vicegerent W. P. Monson, of Utah, held his second concatenation of the Hoo-Hoo year at Ogden on July 26, and it proved a most delightful and enjoyable affair despite some disappointment in the number of initiates. Bad weather, bad train service and illness of two or three of the prospective initiates all conspired to cut down the class, but the attendance of members was gratifying, seeing that no large membership exists at Ogden. Between twenty and thirty members of the order were present, several coming up from Salt Lake City, where Hoo-Hoo has always had an active and enthusiastic membership. Brother Monson's splendid concatenation earlier in the year will be recalled. He writes that this last meeting, though initiating a small class, was none the less enjoyable. Brother Monson has made an excellent record as Vicegerent during the year, and has been asked by the new administration to accept reappointment.

Good Meeting at Marlinton.

While full formal report has not yet been received of the concatenation held at Marlinton by Vicegerent A. D. Williams, on August 14, enough advice has been received to show that the meeting was a pronounced success, probably one of the best held in West Virginia for a long time. A high-class bunch of initiates, numbering eleven and consisting for the most part of prominent lumbermen of the region was initiated. Immediately after the concatenation Brother Williams was called away by the serious illness of Mrs. Williams, at whose bedside he still is when this is written. Vicegerent Williams has been at work on the concatenation for several weeks, holding a little informal dinner party at the Marlinton on July 4, which was preparatory for this concatenation.

Andrew H. Billmeyer (No. 25037).

Brother Andrew H. Billmeyer died August 15 at his home in Cumberland, Md. Brother Billmeyer had been ill for a long while, having fallen a victim to Bright's disease, but at times he was able to be about and had attended the concatenation held at Cumberland, April 12, last.

Brother Billmeyer was born in Montour County, Pa., near the city of Danville, March 9, 1856. For a number of years previous to his death Brother Billmeyer had been very prominent in the lumber business in Maryland and in West Virginia, and he was also well known throughout the east. At the time of his death Brother Billmeyer was President of the Billmeyer Lumber Company, of Cumberland. He was initiated into Hoo-Hoo December 9, 1910, and was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Jesse James Benjamin McCullar (No. 14606).

Brother McCullar died at Denton, Texas August 12. He had just returned from a trip to Oklahoma in search of health, and had been at home but a few hours when the end came. Brother McCullar was born at Eldorado, Ark., August 6, 1856. He was initiated into Hoo-Hoo in April 1905. Brother McCullar had responded to one call of the Death Emergency Fund (Third Call sent out last October), but like too many of our other members he had failed to keep up his payments and, therefore, was not in line to have his death claim paid.

Alexander Benjamin Lukens (No. 11533).

Brother A. B. Lukens died suddenly on the Norfolk Southern train just after leaving Norfolk for his home at Moyock, N. C., July 10. He had rushed to catch the train and it is believed that his death was caused by heart failure due to over exertion.

Brother Lukens was born in Pickaway County, Ohio in 1862. He removed to North Carolina in 1903 and was an active member of the Carolina Land & Lumber Company and of the Provident Land Company, being treasurer and vice-president, respectively, of the two companies named. He was also president of the Drainage Board of Moyock. He was a prominent Mason and a very progressive and able man. He became a Hoo-Hoo at Norfolk in 1903.

John Lancaster Hammer (No. 8216).

Brother John Lancaster Hammer died at Eureka, California August 4. Very few particulars of this death have been received.

Brother Hammer was born at Lancaster, N. Y., September 29, 1849. He became a Hoo-Hoo at Tacoma, Wash., in April 1901. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

Charles Augustus Brown (No. 3807).

Brother Chas A. Brown died at Milwaukee, Wis., August 26. Brother Brown was born at Norwich, N. Y., March 12, 1850. He was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Milwaukee in 1896. Brother Brown was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund. No particulars of this death have been received at this office beyond the mere mention of the fact of death.

Samuel Thomas Swinford (No. 542).

Brother Samuel T. Swinford died at Houston, Texas August 4. Brother Swinford was head of S. T. Swinford & Co., lumber dealers, secretary of the Lumbermen's Association of Texas; president of the Houston Real Estate Exchange; vice-president of the Houston School Board, and one of the foremost citizens of Texas. His death was due to a prolonged general decline of health, brought on by an attack of pneumonia. Brother Swinford was born at Pleasant Hill, Mo., December 11, 1851. In 1878 he went to Texas and for a time engaged in teaching school, in which he attained marked success.

He organized the present school system of Orange. Later on Brother Swinford engaged in the lumber business in Orange, Texas, but afterwards removed to Houston, where he had lived for years. He is survived by a widow and four sons, Jerome, Samuel T. Jr., Harry and Eberle.

Brother Swinford had been a member of Hoo-Hoo for many years, having been initiated at Houston, Texas, in 1893, the second year after the order was organized. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

AN UNKNOWN QUANTITY.

It is impossible to get the best of some people. They haven't any.

Embedded in the heart of a plank of wood taken from a railway station platform at Oakley, Fifeshire (says the London Standard), there has been found a sword measuring over two feet long. The plank had been in use for at least fifteen years.

Many a man keeps his head above water by not letting the grass grow under his feet.

Without funnels, coal, firemen, and smoke, the fore-runner of the new steamship has arrived. The Danish East Asiatic Company has made a practical test with a new boat of 10,000 tons displacement. The ship is an oil-burner, and is, in fact, an immense motor-boat driven by engines somewhat similar to those in use upon motor-cars. The engine-room has the advantage of plenty of light, no oppressive heat, and but little noise. Its oil tanks, at the keel, carry sufficient fuel for a cruise around the world.

COMING CONCATENATIONS.

Two in Western Canada.

Just as The Bulletin is sent to press comes announcement from Brother E. D. Tennant, of Winnipeg, of a concatenation to be held September 4 or 5 at Calgary, Alberta, by Vicegerent E. R. Birnie. Brother Tennant, who it will be recalled, was made Junior Hoo-Hoo at last Annual Meeting, advises that everything is well in hand for the meeting and that a fairly large class will be initiated.

In the same letter Brother Tennant advises of a concatenation which was to have been held, and no doubt was held, at Winnipeg on August 24. At this meeting, Brother Tennant wrote, no very large class was expected, but that the meeting was intended to get the members together preparatory to a vigorous campaign to be instituted this fall. Brother Tennant promised at the Annual Meeting that there would be such activities throughout his part of Canada this next Hoo-Hoo year as has not been witnessed there in several years.

At Evansville, Ind., On September 9.

Vicegerent Carroll L. Beck in cooperation with the Lumbermen's Club of Evansville, will hold a concatenation at that place on the evening of September 9. Brother Beck is promising all who attend, "a feast of fun." The concatenation is to be held during the short boat trip on the Ohio River, the boat leaving Evansville at 6 o'clock in the evening, chartered and provisioned with all the necessaries. The boat is scheduled to return to Evansville by 11 o'clock, giving four or five hours of what Brother Beck promises will be unalloyed pleasure. The concatenation follows an exhibition of the great Ringling Brothers' celebrated, consolidated railroad circus, at which Brother Beck is confident that his affair will be the real show for the lumbermen.

Another At Toledo, Ohio.

Vicegerent Frank Spangler will hold his second concatenation at Toledo on the evening of September 9, closing out his first term as Vicegerent. He says the success of this second concatenation is assured. As far back as the first of August he had six men already lined up and wanting to be initiated, thus evidencing the good effect of the concatenation he held last January.

No. 2 at Norfolk.

Vicegerent W. J. Woodward, of Norfolk, has fourteen candidates lined up for a concatenation to be held early in September. The exact date has not yet been fixed, as effort is being made to have it come just before or just after concatenation number two to be held at Baltimore by Vicegerent S. Robb Eccles. Vicegerent Woodward and Vicegerent Eccles are working together on this little series of two meetings, and both are being actively assisted by Snark Boggess. Those who recall the splendid concatenation at Norfolk held May 28 will not doubt the success of this second meeting, and an even larger class is assured than that initiated at the first meeting, a fine revival of interest having been accomplished throughout the Norfolk district.

Watsonville, Cal., October 5.

Just as The Bulletin is about to go to press the following letter announcing concatenation to occur at Watsonville, Cal., is received from Brother Trower:

San Francisco, Cal., August 22, 1912—If it is not too late please insert in the August Bulletin notice of a concatenation to be held at Watsonville, Cal., at 5 o'clock p.m., Saturday, October 5. This meeting is being arranged in connection with a meeting of the Central Coast Counties Lumbermen's Association. Brothers F. H. Wheelan and W. H. Dillon, respectively president and secretary of the association, are working up the details of this concatenation with me.

We have never held a meeting in this section and we ought to have a fairly good sized class. Watsonville is the center of the great apple section of this state. Brother J. D. Rickard, of Watsonville, is looking out for local arrangements. The "On the Roof Session" will be combined with the association banquet about 7:30 p.m., being held probably in the Appleton Hotel, a fine new structure.

I will have more details of this meeting for the September Bulletin.

Yours fraternally,

F. W. TROWER.

OUR VICEGERENTS.

Steve J. Rathbun, Hoo-Hoo No. 16313, Vicegerent at Battle Creek, Mich., where he held a good concatenation on March 21, was born at Battle Creek, 1876. He got his education in the high schools and other schools at Battle Creek and started out in life by enlisting as a private in the Spanish-American war. This was in 1898. Brother Rathbun shows a Thirty-second Michigan Volunteer Regiment of infantry with which to fight, bleed and die, but got a chance to do no very great amount of any of these things.

When the cruel war was over he returned to Battle Creek and bought out the lumber business of Mason, Rathbun & Co., along with Mr. A. J. Kraft, with whom he organized the Rathbun & Kraft Lumber & Coal Company. This was in 1899. Brother Rathbun's next important step was to get married. This occurred on September 12 of the same year he started in business, his bride being Miss Julia Henning Frazier. Two children have blessed this happy home, David Henning, now eleven years old, and Mary Louise, two years younger.

Everybody who went along on the boat cruise last September will remember as long as they live two men for the successful efforts put forth at entertaining the crowd—"Steve" Rathbun and "Jeff" Webb.

Frank Spangler (No. 3677).

Descended from those sturdy German pioneers sometimes called Pennsylvania Dutch, than whom no better people ever landed in America, Brother Frank Spangler was born on a farm near Freeburg, Snyder County, Pennsylvania, November 7, 1867. His father was a saw mill man, a member of the firm of Kalbach & Spangler; and probably a taste for sawdust was inherited by the son. After completing his education at the public schools, topped off with five terms at the Freeburg Academy and one year in a business college in Newark, N. J., Brother Spangler started his business career by making a long jump westward. His first employment was in the capacity of bookkeeper with W. R. Wilson & Co. (now the Nye-Schneider-Fowler Company), of Fremont, Nebraska. In the course of six months he was placed in charge of a branch yard, and four years later, having in the meantime risen to the position of traveling auditor, he accepted a position, with another firm at higher salary. He became city salesman for the Chicago Lumber Company at Omaha, later going on the road as salesman for C. T. Nelson & Co., of Columbus, Ohio. With this concern he remained until its failure in 1896, when, in the midst of a financial panic and a political campaign, the young man found himself out of a position—a blessing in disguise as subsequent events proved.

Deciding that he had worked for others long enough, Brother Spangler resolved to go into business for himself.

Equipped with a strong determination to succeed, a stock of good habits and an inherited tendency toward thrift and industry, he started in a small way, which speedily grew larger. The Frank Spangler Company, Toledo, Ohio, manufacturers of and wholesale dealers in colonial porch columns, composition capitals and southern hardwoods, prospered from the start. The business was incorporated in July, 1904. The company gives special attention to large colonial columns, generally made to architects' details. Columns of this character are shipped to every state east of the Rocky Mountains, and recent shipments were made to Oregon, Utah and Prescott, Arizona. The main offices of the company are located in the Smith & Baker Building, corner Superior and Adams Streets.

FRANK SPANGLER.

Twelve years ago Brother Spangler began to introduce cypress in the market as a substitute for white pine in the northern territory, which has been a success. Large quantities of cypress are now handled.

Although a very busy man, Brother Spangler finds time to engage in many enterprises of benevolence and charity. He is a member of the Unitarian Church and is an earnest church worker. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, and also is a prominent member of the Toledo Commerce Club and interested in everything that pertains to the progress of the city. Brother Spangler is married, and the family home is located on a twenty-acre farm up the river, recently purchased for a permanent home.

Brother Spangler has been a Hoo-Hoo since 1895. Needless to say he is an enthusiastic member and a faithful worker. He is doing a great deal to uphold and forward the Order's interests in the Northwestern District of Ohio. He held a concatenation in Toledo, January 6, and although there was one uninvited and unwelcome visitor in the city at the time (the blizzard) the meeting was a very pleasant and successful affair. The full report of this concatenation appeared in the January issue of The Bulletin.

A burglar broke into a Euclid Avenue mansion early the other morning and found himself after wandering about the place in the music-room. Hearing footsteps approaching, he took refuge behind a screen. From 8 to 9 the eldest daughter had a singing lesson. From 9 to 10 the second daughter took a piano lesson. From 10 to 11 the eldest son got his instruction on the violin. From 11 to 12 the younger boy got a lesson on the flute and piccolo. Then, at 12:15, the family got together and practiced chamber music on all their instruments. They were fixing up for a concert. At 12:45 the porch-climber staggered from behind the screen. "For heaven's sake, send for the police!" he shrieked. "Torture me no longer!" and in the evening papers there was the headline: "Nervy Children Capture Desperate Burglar."

WHITE HOUSE IRISH TREES.

An Irish paper prints the interesting report that on the White House grounds in Washington several Irish trees have recently been planted, coming from the estate of the Knight of Kerry on the Island of Valencia. They are the gift to Mrs. Taft of Cincinnati by friends who have been visiting in Ireland, and they are cuttings from three of the largest and oldest flowering trees in the world. One is from the fuchsia tree, long past a century old and two and a half feet round; another is from an oleander which two hundred years ago was transplanted from an island in the Ionian Sea, and the third is from an acacia tree, which towers over oak and sycamores, and is a mass of pink feathery blossoms in July. All the cuttings have been rooted, and it is believed that they will thrive in the soil of the White House grounds, where trees are especially cared for.

Know Yourself.

There is something that a man can do thoroughly well. It should be the first business of his life to find out what that something is. One man may have a talent for mathematics, another for mechanic arts, a third for commercial pursuits. But if all were to insist upon keeping books there would be no books to keep.

Genius is often judgment. The enthusiastic brother who dreamed that he saw the letters G. P. C. written upon the sky believed that it was a divine call to him to "go preach Christ." But, after his dreary sermons had driven away the congregation he concluded that the letters meant "Go plant corn."—Los Angeles Times.

THE OFFICIAL HOO-HOO PENNANT.
Price 99 Cents.

THE HOO-HOO JEWELRY

PRICES.

No. 1, (Wishbone)	$6 00
No. 2, (Horseshoe)	6 50
No. 3, (Crescent)	8 00
No. 4, (Clover Leaf)	12 00
No. 5, (Bar)	4 00
Souvenir Spoon	3 00

THE SOUVENIR SPOON.

The cut gives but a faint idea of its beauty and artistic elegance. In addition to bearing the Hoo-Hoo emblem, it is adorned with nine cat-tails, such as grow in the marshes in the South, enameled in the natural color of brown, with green leaves. The workmanship is of the highest quality. It is no cheap affair, but is hand-painted, and hand-enameled. This spoon itself is sterling gilt, which means that it is sterling silver, plated with gold. To all intents and purposes it is a gold spoon. The price is about right, I think, considering what you get.

THE HOO-HOO BROOCHES.

In addition to being artistic and beautiful, these are all "lucky" pins, and I guarantee them to bring success to the purchaser and make his wish come true, provided he wishes for the right thing, and is willing to work.

The simple "bar" brooch is recommended as a present to a practical-minded girl. It carries with it a suggestion of solid worth and is calculated to impress her with the idea that you are about as good a chance, all things considered, as she will be likely to get. The WISHBONE design was made with a view to marrying-off the confirmed bachelors of Hoo-Hoo. THE HORSESHOE PIN is the luckiest of all. It will be observed that this horseshoe is not the old-fashioned kind, such as a common "plug" would wear, but is the up-to-date shoe worn by a running horse. It is, therefore, symbolic of the speedy realization of the purchaser's brightest dreams. THE CRESCENT PIN is intended for presentation to a romantic maiden, and may be accompanied by a speech about the moon—"the inconstant moon that monthly changes in its circled orb"—and entreaty that her love be not likewise variable. THE CLOVER-LEAF PIN is for widowers with children, who are trying to marry young girls. It is absolutely irresistible—"a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The clover-leaf has a border of Roman gold, with the center enameled in the natural clover green. Any one of these pins would make an appropriate present from a man to his wife. The horseshoe pin might prove effective as a present to one's mother-in-law, as it would carry with it a delicate hint to "walk away."

THE HOO-HOO GRIP TAG.

This, also is guaranteed to bring good luck to any traveling man and to keep him from journeying on the downhill road towards failure or disaster. It will be seen that lost grips with this tag on them will probably be sent in to me. In every such case the greatest secrecy will be maintained as to the contents. If your bag contains only a collar button and your other pair of socks, nothing will be said to humiliate you. Price 25 cents, and cheap at the money.

THE LADIES' PIN.

I have yet to see a lady, old or young, who did not want one of these pins the minute she saw it. To have these pins in the hands of pretty women—and a good Hoo-Hoo knows no other sort—is the best possible advertisement for the Order. Every Hoo-Hoo ought to buy one of these pins, have his number engraved on it, and give it to some good woman. Price $1.00 by registered mail—$1.50, flat, if taken f. o. b., Nashville. Loosen up, boys, and give the women a chance.

THE HOO-HOO WATCH CHARM.

The new design being alike on both sides it will never hang "wrong side out." The edges are smooth, which is also a great advantage. We once had a most beautiful design, to which we thought there could be no possible objection. It had, however, some sharp points, and numerous kicks began to reach us from married brothers who said the charm "scratched the baby's legs all up." This watch charm is perfectly harmless, as well as very beautiful, besides being appropriately suggestive of Egypt, the birthplace of Hoo-Hoo. That part of the design which looks like the top of a gate or door represents the "Propylon." The Propylon was the great gateway erected in front of the temple of Osiris. It was massive in proportion and rich in sculptural design and inscriptions. In shape it was like the Pylons of the temple, from which it took its name. It served as a kind of introduction to the temple, and beyond it was sacred ground. From beneath its portal, on account of its position, the temple in all its glory was seen. Leading from it was the sacred way, bordered on each side by the recumbent sphynx. Once a year, when the earth in its circuit around the sun had reached a certain point in the ecliptic, the rays of the rising sun, cutting across the desert, shone through the great Propylon down the avenue of sphynx into and down through the temple until it lighted up the place of the Most Holy and glittered on the gilded horns of the sacred bull—and the Egyptian new year had begun. The rest of the design is made up of a continuous border of the lotus, symbolical of the resurrection—the lotus sleeps and awakens. The Egyptians believed that their spirits would return to earth after a lengthy sojourn elsewhere and that they would inhabit their old bodies—hence mummies. (You don't have to remember all this, if you buy the charm, but ought to.)

Now, then, none of this Hoo-Hoo jewelry will be sold to other than members in good standing, and only for cash. There is a profit in it to the manufacturer, but none to Hoo-Hoo. It is handled for the accommodation of our members and the good of the Order. None of it will be sold without the buyer's number. Address all orders to J. H. BAIRD, Scrivener, Nashville, Tenn.

The Fattest Are the Truest.

Oh, how true it is that nobody loves a fat man! When fat comes up on the front porch, love jumps out the third-story window. A fat man's heart is supposed to lie so far inland that the softer emotions cannot reach it at all. Yet the fattest are the truest, if you did but know it, and also they are the tenderest; and a man with a double chin rarely leads a double life. For one thing, it requires too much moving 'round.—Irvin S. Cobb, in Saturday Evening Post.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE.

The men whose Hoo-Hoo names appear in the notices below are out of work and want employment. This is intended as a permanent department of The Bulletin, through which to make these facts known. It is, or should be, read by several thousand business men who employ labor in many varied forms, and it can be made of great value in giving practical application to Hoo-Hoo's central theme of helping one another. It is hoped the department will receive very careful attention each issue.

Some of our members advertising in The Bulletin fail to advise me when they have secured positions, so an old ad keeps running for months and months. To avoid this I have adopted the plan of running the ads as long as three months and then if I have heard nothing from the advertiser I will cut his ad out. If at the end of the three months he still wishes me to continue it, he must advise me.

ROBINSON YEATMAN JOHNSON

Ex-Vicegerent Snark
Northern District of Virginia
STAUNTON, VA.

BROTHER JOHNSON is of Scotch-Irish ancestry. He was born at Salisbury, Botetount Co., Va. His father and grandfathers were all lumbermen. Except for the time in school, his entire life has been spent in the lumber business. He succeeded very well until carried away by the boom-tide which swept Virginia in 1890 and 1891, when he lost everything he had by investing in town lots.

With renewed energy, he went to West Virginia and accepted a position with the K. & M. R. R. Co. as tie inspector. He only remained with them a short time until a wider and better field presented itself, when he went with Mr. D. G. Courtney of Charleston, W. Va., who, he always says, is one of the purest and best men that God ever made. He remained with Mr. Courtney for fifteen years as superintendent.

Since 1906 he has been very successfully doing business for himself in lumber and tight barrel cooperage. He is now located on his native heath and says if one is suffering from ennui or insomnia, just follow him a few days; it will prove a magic cure.

Brother Johnson was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Charleston, W. Va., on January 13th, 1905, and has always been a very enthusiastic member and hard worker for the best interests of the Order.

Brother Johnson is also a member of the Staunton, Va., Lodge of Elks.

DUES FOR 1913

At 9:09 on September 9, 1912, dues became payable for 1913. The Hoo-Hoo year begins and ends on Sept. 9. Look up your cards, and if you find that you have not paid 1913 dues, send $1.65 to the Scrivenoter at once.

THE BULLETIN

Published Monthly by the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, at St. Louis, Missouri.

WILLIAM M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at St. Louis, Missouri, as second-class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year.....66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO., OCTOBER, 1912.

JAMES H. BAIRD.

THE BULLETIN takes great pleasure in presenting on its front cover this month a likeness of Brother J. H. Baird, No. 408, who retired from the position of Supreme Scrivenoter on September 9th, after nearly seventeen years of distinguished and faithful service to the order in that most important office. There are thousands of Hoo-Hoo that feel that they know "Jim" Baird personally who yet have never seen him or his photograph. His modesty has prevented the appearance of his likeness in THE BULLETIN, even though for many years the other members of the new Supreme Nines have been thus properly introduced to our readers. But now that THE BULLETIN has passed out of his hands we are able to "put one over" on him.

When Brother Baird was first elected to the office of Scrivenoter, along in the early '90's, the order was in its infancy. He has seen it grow to its present membership of about 15,000, scattered throughout seventeen countries, and now retires from office when the order has passed its twenty-first birthday and has come into the full strength of manhood. When Bolling Arthur Johnson and the other five brothers founded Hoo-Hoo away back in 1892 at Gurdon, Arkansas, they little knew what a monument they were building for themselves. But it is no reflection on any of the good and true men who have served Hoo-Hoo officially to say that to Brother Baird more than to any other man is due the greatest credit for the growth and character, the unity and influence of the order. Into the formative years of the fraternity he put his indelible impress, and strove to make it the means of promoting a more friendly and fraternal spirit among the men engaged in the lumber trade and its allied industries, a purpose which has made the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo absolutely unique among all the secret societies.

Our order has no lodge room and no regular meetings except the Annual; neither are we bound together with red tape or through a strong organization. The word Concatenated means "linked together" and the tie that binds us is mostly a sentiment but it has such vitality that it has held us in the bonds of brotherhood for these many years, and friendships have been made in Hoo-Hoo that will last as long as life itself. This success is largely due to J. H. Baird, who as Scrivenoter has been the chief executive officer of the order and the connecting link between our members. Through THE BULLETIN and by his personal letters he has kept up enthusiastic interest in the order on the part of the Vicegerents and the rank and file. No member who has received an always welcome letter from the Scrivenoter has failed to feel there was a strong and winning personality behind it which made Hoo-Hoo a thing of life.

J. H. Baird has those qualities of mind and heart and that personal magnetism which denote the natural leader of men, for this devotion of his friends throughout the world is felt just as strongly by his fellow-townsmen and the assistants in his own office. The order tried to express its appreciation and esteem for Brother Baird at the recent annual meeting at Asheville by presenting to him a handsome gold watch and chain suitably inscribed. He there stated that although he would be out of office his interest and activity for Hoo-Hoo would not cease and that he intended to visit each recurring annual.

THE BULLETIN is moved to write this acknowledgment of the loyal service which Jim Baird has rendered to the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo because we know we but voice the thoughts of thousands of our members, and also because THE BULLETIN believes the bouquets should be presented during the life of those who deserve them and while they can be appreciated. Such an event as the retirement of Brother Baird from the Supreme Scrivenoter's office after seventeen years of success marks a most important milestone in his life and in that of the order, and we feel it is entitled to the suitable recognition which this space in THE BULLETIN can give it.

David Warfield, our greatest living American actor, sometimes when in the company of congenial friends recites a beautiful and simple little poem touching on the love and devotion of an old man toward his favorite son. The father is one of those "buttoned-up" sort of people who cannot express in words their deepest thoughts, and so when he parts from the boy at various important times as the youngster goes away from home to school and to business and then to the war, about all the old man can say is, "Good-bye, Jim. Take keer of yerself." But into these simple words Warfield throws a wealth of meaning and affection, which those who have heard him never forget. So THE BULLETIN wishes J. H. Baird Health, Happiness and Long Life, and says to him as he leaves the high position in the order which he has adorned, "Good-bye, Jim. Take keer of yerself."

I HAVE endeavored to acknowledge by personal letter, all the letters received since my election as Scrivenoter, but for fear I may have overlooked some am going to make this public. I have endeavored to acknowledge, by personal letter, all the letters received since my election as Scrivenoter, but for fear I may have overlooked some am going to make this public acknowledgment and ask that it be accepted in the same spirit that it is written. To all who have sent their best wishes for success and their kind offers of assistance and to those who have not I am addressing this article. I intend to do everything in my power to build Hoo-Hoo and make it a thorough and distinctive representative Lumbermen's Order.

I solicit the hearty co-operation and support of all members and unless I can have your assistance, advice and criticism I cannot expect great success.

Let us all get together, stay together and work together for the interest of the Order and if we do this we will all be most agreeably satisfied at the result.

When you meet a member ask him if he has his card, if he is receiving and reading THE BULLETIN and if he is taking the proper interest in the Order.

Every member should join the Death Emergency Fund. If you are already a member, talk it to others. If you are not, come in, and if there is anything about this fund you do not understand write me and I will endeavor to explain it fully to you.

The Supreme Nine is now busy working on a new ritual and this should be in use shortly and will, we feel sure, satisfy all the members.

The one great trouble the officers of the organization have experienced in the past is to get the local members of the order in each jurisdiction to realize that they are the order and that it is up to them to see that everything is done in the proper way and when it is not to report the same to the Supreme Nine for action.

If each member of the order would constitute himself a member of the Good of the Order Committee and be willing and ready at all times not only to criticize but to offer suggestions for the advancement of the order, then it would not take long to realize the higher ideals of our membership. There is no order in existence today that is as democratic as the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo and none that gives each individual member the rights and advantages in the government of the order. It will therefore be seen that it is up to the members of the order to make it just what they want it to be. Every member who attends the annual meetings, and all are urged to do so, has the same rights as any other member. The officers of the order want to make the order a great success and want the hearty co-operation of every individual member to that end, and at all times welcome suggestions for the good of the order. The possibilities of the good of the order to the lumber industry are unlimited and if all will get together on that basis then will it be possible for the order to be the grand success its founders intended. The following quotation covers the situation in a nut-shell: "A man can keep up his own batting average and make the world a little more cheerful by laying down an occasional sacrifice hit."

No man can stand alone, each needs the co-operation and assistance of others, and if the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo can in its fraternal way bring men engaged in one industry together, get them acquainted with each other, teach them to look on the best side of one another, get them to know each other and appreciate the fact that each has rights that the other must not only respect but help to protect—then the order has accomplished a great deal for mankind.

I have never met a man who did not believe in the principles of the order and who did not believe that the order could be of vast benefit, not only to the lumber industry, but to every individual engaged in any of the many branches thereof. Health, Happiness and Long Life! What a grand salutation, and who does not wish for it? Let us all remember our obligation assumed at the altar of the Great Black Cat and then let us all take stock with ourselves and see if we have lived up to our promises. Hoo-Hoo will live and will grow stronger each day and will continue to do its good work! We want the hearty co-operation of every member to the end that Hoo-Hoo will prove all that its founder intended.

Now all together for the Good of the Order!

Wishing every member Health, Happiness and Long Life, I am

Fraternally yours,

W. M. STEPHENSON,

Scrivenoter.

The Scrivenoter extends a most hearty invitation to all members of the order to visit the Scrivenoter's office when in St. Louis and assures them a cordial welcome.

Come in and see us and see for yourself just how the business of the order is conducted.

Ask all the questions you wish and we will, to the best of our ability, endeavor to satisfy you fully.

Make this office your headquarters while in St. Louis and have your mail addressed in our care. This is your office and you should use it.

Come in and get acquainted.

The Scrivenoter extends his most hearty thanks to Brothers Frank G. Hanley (8744), F. G. Hanley Cypress Co.; J. M. Schloenbach (21255), American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill., and

Wm. F. Ebbing (6551), the Ohio Knife Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, and Vicegerent Snark, Eastern District Missouri, for their many acts of kindness and assistance in helping us get straightened out in our new offices.

The Scrivenoter also extends the thanks of the order to Mr. Guy H. Wright, manager Wright building, for his kindness and assistance.

THE BULLETIN is published for the members of the order. It belongs to you, and we are trying to please and give you what you want.

We will appreciate criticism and suggestions, for by this means alone can we give you just what is wanted.

Every member should take an active interest in THE BULLETIN and assist us in making it attractive. Write and send us articles of interest for publication.

Advise us promptly of any items that you think would be of interest.

Let us all get together and make THE BULLETIN a great success.

THE BULLETIN will be mailed on the 9th day of each month hereafter and in order to do this we are compelled to close our copy on the 5th of each month. Please take note of this and get your news items in before the 5th of each month so that we can avoid delay.

If you have not as yet paid your 1913 dues or remitted to cover the fifth call of Death Emergency Fund DO SO NOW.

On account of moving the office of Scrivenoter from Nashville, Tenn., to St. Louis, there has been some delay in acknowledging receipt of dues and responses to the fifth call of the Death Emergency Fund. The Scrivenoter asks the kind consideration of all the members. We are handling everything as promptly as possible, and as soon as we get caught up will see that every remittance is acknowledged the day it is received.

IMPORTANT

On account of printed address pasted on envelopes containing notice of dues for 1913 and also containing Fifth Call for Death Emergency Fund not having been pasted on securely, a great many have been returned to this office. As I am unable to check up correctly and not knowing just who was missed, I am now making request that all Brothers who did not receive their notice consider this as their notice and remit to this office.

Below find copy of letter mailed.

Nashville, Tenn., September 9, 1912.

Dear Brother—This is First Notice of dues for year ending September 9, 1913, becoming payable this date. The amount is $1.65. If you have not a card for 1912, remit $3.30 to cover the two years.

This is also Fifth Call for the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund, effective October 1st. The call is sent out now a little in advance in order to effect saving of postage by sending the Call along with Dues Notice. This fund has worked splendidly, as you will note from enclosed statement, and is amply worth the support of every Hoo-Hoo. It has carried a ray of light into a good many homes. The amount to remit on Death Fund is $2.00. If you do not fully understand the plan of this fund, write and explanatory booklet will be mailed you.

In remitting use the enclosed blank and do not fail to make remittance payable to W. M. Stephenson, Scrivenoter, mailing same to him at 1219 Wright Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Fraternally yours,

W. M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter.
J. H. BAIRD, Retiring Scrivenoter.

I M P O R T A N T

THE following letter has been sent to all Vicegerent Snarks and is now published in THE BULLETIN for the information of all members.

The Supreme Nine respectfully requests all members to give their hearty support to their Vicegerent Snark in carrying out the recommendations made at the last annual meeting.

St. Louis, Mo., September 9, 1912.

TO ALL VICEGERENTS:

The new Supreme Nine extends hearty greetings and good wishes to all of the Vicegerents as we enter upon the New Hoo-Hoo Year. Many of you, like most of us, are serving our great order officially for the first time. We of the Supreme Nine strongly realize that the success we all so much hope for this year depends very largely upon the earnest, faithful, enthusiastic work of the Vicegerents. The nature of our order does not require very much administrative machinery, but for that very reason a very large responsibility rests upon the comparatively few officers we have. Let each one of us do his best to put Hoo-Hoo upon a firm and lasting basis.

As we thus enter upon our new duties we have had placed before us some guiding principles which it is hoped will be faithfully followed during the year. We call your especial attention to the closing paragraph of the report of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws at the late annual held at Asheville, N. C., which reads as follows:

"Your Committee further recommends that at its earliest convenience the Supreme Nine carefully prepare additional suggestions and instructions to be sent each Vicegerent, urging upon him that greater care be exercised, both as to the character and standing of men initiated and the conduct of Concatenations, to the end that the personnel of Hoo-Hoo shall be brought to a higher standard, and all of its meetings be invested with greater decorum and dignity."

This committee also expressed itself as "believing that what the order most needs is a more rigid enforcement of its laws and regulations rather than the enactment of new laws." We also call your attention to the latter portion of the report of the Resolutions Committee at the annual, dealing with the same subjects, as reported on page 17 of the July BULLETIN.

The reports of both of these committees were adopted unanimously. Not only were these sentiments thus expressed in the regular sessions of the annual meeting, but they were heartily endorsed at the various committee meetings and in the informal talks among groups of members gathered at Asheville. Everywhere it was recognized that upon the proper handling of these two most important matters of character and standing of initiates and the conduct of initiations, depended to a very large degree the future prosperity and usefulness of our order. We want you to use your influence and best efforts to have all delinquent members to pay their dues and be re-instated.

The clause in the constitution covering the ELIGIBILITY OF INITIATES is broad and plain enough to permit the entrance of any worthy man properly identified with the lumber business and its allied industries. The order has been greatly harmed in the past by a lax enforcement of the eligibility clause. Men who have surely not added strength to Hoo-Hoo have been allowed to join, and others who were personally men of good character were initiated, although their connection with the lumber business was so remote as to be almost unknown. The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo is distinctively a lumbermen's order, and it must be kept such if it is to preserve its unique character and standing.

Vicegerents are often tempted to help out on expenses by initiating men who are just on the border line of eligibility. It is far better for the order and its future for every Vicegerent to cut his expenses in some way, such as going back to "crackers and cheese" at the on-the-roof sessions, or getting some of his friends who are suffering from an enlarged pocket-book to contribute a little to the success of the concatenation. We want initiates who are men of such personal qualities and business standing that they will be welcomed into fellowship with the representative men of the trade. One of the times when these improper applications for membership are liable to slip through is in the busy hour just prior to calling the concatenation to order, when the Vicegerent is so occupied with other matters he has little time to properly scrutinize such applications as are signed and offered at the last moment. To avoid this, try to get all applications for membership signed up well in advance of the meeting. Also see that the applications are read carefully by the Scrivenoter, so that all present may hear of the applicant's business connections and the names of the three members vouching for him. The passing of the ballot box should be done in a dignified and thorough manner.

If there is any doubt about the eligibility of a candidate, give the order the benefit of that doubt, and let him wait until he is better qualified to join. This administration is very anxious that every Vicegerent will do his utmost to get into the order every good and eligible man in his district this year, but we do not want this accomplished by initiating a lot of men who are on the ragged edge, both as to personal standing and their connection with the lumber trades. We must remember that once such men get into the order, like the poor, they are always with us. Let us not secure quantity of membership at the expense of quality.

The matter of proper CONDUCT OF CONCATENATIONS has caused every friend of the order serious thought. Obviously we cannot go into this subject in detail in this letter, which may later appear in print. But you have all doubtless seen or heard of initiations of Hoo-Hoo which did positive harm to the order, by reason of certain features of the initiatory work and the language of a few of the officers and members present. Oftentimes members have been so offended by incidents of this sort that they have never attended another meeting and have lost interest in the work of the order, with the result that their example has a dampening effect on the enthusiasm of their friends in the order and on prospective new members. While the Vicegerent is primarily responsible for the conduct of the whole concatenation, yet most of the blame for such occurrences as suggested above rests on the Junior Hoo-Hoo and his assistants. It behooves every Vicegerent to choose officers who will always remember to do their work like gentlemen. We are glad to note that such deplorable incidents have become increasingly rare, but the harm they do and the reputation they give are entirely out of proportion to their number.

We want to keep up our concatenation to the standard where they will deserve and receive the enthusiastic interest and support of the most representative men in the trade. This does not mean that our meetings must be molycoddle affairs. Hoo-Hoo are healthy, red-blooded men and we can enjoy plenty of wholesome, clean fun, kittenish pranks and play of the wits without giving offense to any member present.

The rule against permitting intoxicants to be served at a concatenation or on-the-roof session has in many communities toned up our gatherings to a large degree. This clause of the constitution was adopted several years ago and has been thoroughly discussed and strongly re-indorsed at succeeding annuals until this policy is now accepted as a permanent law of Hoo-Hoo, just as it is of most of the other high-class fraternities. Many of those who first opposed this legislation have come to realize its benefit and are willing to sacrifice their personal desires for the good of the order. There are still some members who would prefer to leave this matter to the option of the local Vicegerent. But as officers of the order it is our plain duty to faithfully observe the letter and spirit of our constitution and by-laws regarding this subject as well as others. Under no circumstances must you permit an intoxicated man to be initiated or any member under the perceptible influence of liquor to be admitted to a concatenation.

If at any time it becomes your duty to take a firm stand in carrying out the foregoing instructions of the last annual meeting, we assure you of our hearty support, and we want you to realize that the overwhelming sentiment of the fraternity is behind you. In a short time you will be furnished with copies of a new arrangement of the ritual whereby the character and purpose of the order is put before the initiates early in the course of the ceremony. In the past it has been almost impossible to get the mind of the candidate back to serious thoughts after the hilarity of the initiation has begun. By this new ritual we hope to add to the dignity of the concatenation and leave on the mind of the new member a better impression of the serious side of the order.

We urge all Vicegerents to secure the widest possible participation of members in working up concatenations. We commend to you the plan adopted in preparing for the recent Portland meeting and used also by a few other Vicegerents. Several committees of not over nine members were appointed to handle various details of the work. A Committee on Applications took charge of securing the kittens; a Committee on Publicity advertised the meetings to all members within a wide radius and also secured good write-ups of the coming affair in the lumber and daily press; a Committee on Hall and Arrangements looked after the securing and preparing of a meeting place and the details of the on-the-roof session including speakers and special entertainment features; a Committee on Stunts and Torture worked up new initiation ideas, and the Finance Committee secured enough voluntary contributions to care for the extra expense so that the burden of making up a deficit should not fall on the Vicegerent. The great advantage of this plan is that it gets many members interested and trained in the active work of the order and prevents Hoo-Hoo from becoming a one-man affair, which is not desirable no matter how able or willing that one Vicegerent may be.

We must get away from the idea that Hoo-Hoo can not have a meeting unless there are candidates to initiate. The initiations of course furnish the life-blood of the order and we want to increase our numbers by adding every good man eligible. But in the large centers, at least, we can have occasionally a get-together "Dutch-treat" lunch or dinner, replete with good talks and stories or other features. Such affairs promote the objects of the order by gathering the men of the lumber trade together in more friendly fraternal relations.

We commend to you the occasional adoption of the plan so successfully carried out at the recent Concatenation held at Marlinton, W. Va., when ladies were invited to the on-the-roof session held in a leading hotel and several prominent citizens, not members of the order, delivered interesting speeches. Arkansas Hoo-Hoo adopted this idea years ago and it has been followed in other States, and the result is an added respect for the fraternity among the citizens of the community, an added interest in our order by the ladies of our households and therefore an increased pride in our splendid organization among our own members.

We earnestly desire that into the work of the new year and among all Hoo-Hoo shall be carried the old-time good-fellowship and enthusiasm which dominated the recent Asheville Annual and which spirit called forth from the earnest workers for our fraternity gathered there the resolutions mentioned in the foregoing letter.

Wishing you all health, happiness and long life, we are,
Fraternally yours,

FRANK W. TROWER, Snark of the Universe.

Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund

WE WILL publish in November issue a complete detail statement covering this fund. The fifth call was issued October 1, 1912, and we are receiving responses to this call at present.

If you have not as yet responded to fifth call DO SO AT ONCE.

Every member of the Hoo-Hoo should become a subscriber to this fund and share in its benefits. If there is anything you wish to know regarding this Death Emergency Fund, write the Scrivenoter and he will be glad to give you full information in regard thereto.

THE BULLETIN is pleased to publish the following letters from present subscribers and asks that you read them carefully:

* * *

"The more I think of this excellent move in Hoo-Hoo, the more I am impressed with the smallness of the cost in comparison with the good it accomplishes. I hope the fifth call will receive more responses than any previous call, and that the Fund will always be maintained. I think every member of Hoo-Hoo should interest himself in the maintenance of the Fund and respond to every call."

GEO. K. WARNER, (13264)

Treasurer St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co.

St. Louis, Mo.

* * *

"I enclose check to cover fifth call. I trust that every member of Hoo-Hoo will respond to this call as I regard it the greatest feature of our order."

E. F. JONES, (8418)

The Hampton Stave Co.

Fordyce, Ark.

"Enclosed find my check for $2.00 covering fifth call. Will try and meet each call for the Emergency Fund. Think this is the best thing Hoo-Hoo has taken up."

E. D. WILDER, (9257)

C. E. Wilder & Co.

Brazil, Ind.

* * *

"Hand you herewith check for $2.00 to cover fifth call. Death Emergency Fund and beg to say that it is with great pleasure that I am permitted to send this ray of sunshine into the home of some deceased Brother, and think it not only a privilege but a duty for every Hoo-Hoo to join in."

JAMES M. ADAMS, (18281)

President, Adams-Gunnels Lumber Co.

Birmingham, Ala.

PERSONAL

AMONG the non-resident members who visited the Scrivenoter's office were:

George R. Ford (23157), Lumber World Review, Chicago, Ill.

Raymond W. Irwine (13241), Centralia, Ill., Vicegerent Snark, Southern District, Illinois.

Prospective Concatenations

OCTOBER 5, WATSONVILLE, CAL.

Vicegerent Snark P. M. Dimmick, of the Central District of California, will have charge of this concatenation, assisted by Snark of the Universe Trower and many others. THE BULLETIN is expecting great things. Full account will be published in our November issue.

OCTOBER 9, BUFFALO, N. Y.

Bernard Brady, Vicegerent Snark, 1409 Seneca street, Buffalo, New York.

On September 3 Supreme Gurdon George J. Michelsen, of Rochester, N. Y., held a social session of the Buffalo Hoo-Hoo in Buffalo. Twenty-one of the faithful gathered together around the festive board and the good fellowship of Hoo-Hoo was renewed. The meeting was a most successful one in every way, and Brother Bernard Brady, of Buffalo, was the unanimous choice of all present for Vicegerent Snark for the Western District of New York. At first Brother Brady declined the honor, but upon the assurance of all that they would give him their most hearty support, Brother Brady accepted and his acceptance was greeted with great cheers of the old time enthusiasm of the Buffalo Hoo-Hoo.

Snark Brady got busy at once with the result of a great concatenation to be held on October 9. Full account of this in November issue.

OCTOBER 18 OR 25, BAY CITY, MICH.

Vicegerent Snark Fred J. Verkerke, of the Western District of Michigan, advises he will hold a concatenation at Bay City, Mich., on either October 18 or 25, and whenever Verkerke gets busy there is something doing. Look for report of this concatenation in November issue.

OCTOBER 22 OR 23, EL PASO, TEXAS

Vicegerent Snark R. A. Whitlock advises that he will hold concatenation at El Paso on either October 22 or 23. From past record of Snark Whitlock there will certainly be something doing in El Paso and all who can get there for this concatenation will miss a great time if they fail to be there.

OCTOBER 30 OR 31, ORANGE, TEXAS

Vicegerent Snark E. V. Folsom has announced a concatenation to be held at Orange, Texas, on October 30 or 31, and from the Scrivenoter's knowledge of the Texas concatenations he is satisfied that this will be a great success, and we urge all members who can attend to do so and to assist Snark Folsom in securing a good class.

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE

Vicegerent Snark H. B. Weiss, of Memphis, Tenn., writes that he is working hard on a concatenation to be held the latter part of October. No definite date set as yet.

MOBERLY, MO., DECEMBER 7, 1912

Brothers L. D. West, of Fayette, Mo., H. G. Buckner and N. E. Wood, of Moberly, Mo., are hard at work on a concatenation to be held in Moberly, Mo., on December 7. This is to be held in connection with the meeting of the North Central Missouri Lumber Dealers' Association. This promises to be one of the best concatenations ever held in the "show me" State.

FLORIDA, EASTERN DISTRICT

Vicegerent Snark D. A. Reid, Jacksonville, Fla., is busy working up a concatenation and advises that he expects to hold at least three concatenations during the year. This is good news and we wish Brother Reid success.

ALABAMA, NORTHERN DISTRICT

Vicegerent Snark Wm. F. Bixby, Decatur, Ala., advises that he is at work arranging a concatenation for his district and states it will be a good one and from what we know of Brother Bixby we are satisfied it will be one of the best ever held in Alabama.

The Scrivenoter asks that all Vicegerent Snarks advise him as far in advance as possible of dates on which they expect to hold concatenations. This to enable us to give the concatenation publicity through THE BULLETIN and the lumber press and to see that trunk and full supplies are on hand in good shape in plenty of time.

THE NEW HANDBOOK

The 1913 handbook will be issued shortly after January 1st and is to be sent only to those who make request for it. This is in accordance with the action taken at joint conference of House of Ancients and Supreme Nine, held at Chicago, in November, 1909.

In order to get an idea of how many handbooks to be ordered printed the Scrivenoter requests that all members who desire a copy of the new handbook advise him now.

Remember, that to secure the handbook requires that you write the Scrivenoter requesting that it be sent you. A postal card request is sufficient.

NOTES & COMMENTS

IF GOOD wishes and kind words can contribute to the prosperity of the order, this Hoo-Hoo year will surely break all records. Literally and figuratively, bouquets have been thrown at the Great Black Cat in his new abode. A floral offering in the form of a horseshoe made of asters conveyed the good luck message of Snark Trower, and an immense bunch of scarlet gladioli expressed the welcome of Vicegerent Ebbing of St. Louis. Other earnest of regard and signs and symbols of the glad hand have warmed the heart and cheered the spirit of everyone in the Scrivenoter's office. Many members have called in person, and numerous acts of neighborly kindness have served to make easier the work of getting straightened up in the new quarters.

The correspondence has been very large in volume—evidence of widespread interest; and from all parts of the country have come reports of preparations for the forwarding of Hoo-Hoo's interests. The following from ex-Snark E. Stringer Boggess is typical of the spirit manifested throughout the Black Cat's domain. After some remarks concerning the success of Vicegerent Woodward's concatenation at Norfolk, Va., September 19, Bro. Boggess says:

"This marks the start on the Atlantic Coast, for this Hoo-Hoo year. I predict that every part of the country will have a concatenation this year, from Mobile to Boston, and that our worthy Snark will look toward the East with a smile of satisfaction, as he hears of the reports from this part of Hoo-Hoo land.

A Western member sends THE BULLETIN the following "human-interest" story in the form of a news item clipped from a San Francisco paper dated September 18:

"Scotty," a well-known character in the streets of downtown San Francisco, died yesterday morning, homeless and penniless, while being rushed in an ambulance to the central emergency hospital, and with him died the truest friend he had—a nameless black cat.

"Scotty" was one of the city's unfortunates. He had suffered the loss of both legs, and in their place had a heavy leather pad at the base of his trunk.

"Scotty" has eked out a poor existence by selling newspapers and assisting the men who operate the various news stands of the vicinity. He was a night hawk, and was to be seen as often during the small hours of the morning as during the afternoons.

At 4 o'clock yesterday morning "Scotty" was found by two policemen of the southern district in a dying condition at Third and Tehama streets. An ambulance was called, but he died on the way to the hospital. When found by the policemen he was all alone save for a black cat, and it was the piteous mewling of the animal that first attracted the attention of the policemen to him.

When "Scotty" was taken into the ambulance the cat followed and every effort to get rid of it was unavailing. When death had taken "Scotty" the cat remained by his body until it was finally necessary to shoot the animal.

It is surprising what one can learn nowadays by reading the high-class magazines. A recent article in the Atlantic Monthly is entitled "Who Are the Japanese?" The author, Mr. A. M. Knapp, proceeds to answer his own question, his conclusion being that the Japanese are neither yellow nor a peril; they are, he contends, descended from a branch of the white race and they were in the beginning closely akin to the Greeks or "Hellenes," as was their ancient name.

"The trend given to this ethnological inquiry in my own mind," observes Mr. Knapp, "was suggested by my first visit to a Japanese theater."

It seems that in Boston, about twenty years ago, Mr. Knapp witnessed at Harvard a Greek play in which the "Hellenic methods and features of dramatic representation" had been reproduced "with most faithful attention to detail." Then some years later he went to Tokio and discovered that a native drama was staged and performed for all the world like the imitation Greek drama he had seen at Harvard. "There was the Greek chorus," declares Mr. Knapp—and immediately concludes that the Japanese are descended from the same race that produced Homer. Marvelous! as Dr. Watson always said of Sherlock Holmes' feats of reasoning.

It would be interesting to know just how much older the chorus idea is than either Greece or Rome. Probably there were choruses and chorus girls long before the time of Pharaoh. The chorus, however, was not the only thing that reminded Mr. Knapp of the Hellenic drama which he had seen at Harvard. When he came out of the Tokio theater, "the passers-by, in their graceful, flowing robes, took on the semblance of a throng of Greek philosophers in a street of old Athens." Presently along came a band of young men clad in white tunics, their heads encircled by blue fillets with the knots tied in front. They were on their way to their annual carouse under the falling cherry blossoms. But the sight of this gang suggested to Mr. Knapp the Bacchic procession of ancient days, and he began to feel sure that he had the solution to what he calls the most puzzling problems that ever perplexed the brain of the ethnologist—the same being "Who are the Japanese?"

The answer is that the Japanese trace back to the Aryan ancestry, whence came all the white races. To be sure, the slanting eyes of the Japs seem to indicate Mongolian blood. But this does not bother Mr. Knapp. He says that the Japanese are now a long way from their original home, that their journey extended over many centuries and followed a trend northward, and that the obliquity of the eyelids suggests merely a long lingering in high altitudes where nature protects the eyes of animals in the same way." Why the Swedes and Norwegians are not similarly slant-eyed, Mr. Knapp does not say. As to the complexion of the Japanese, he says it is as white as that of any of the peoples of southern Europe. Still if a race lingers in the far north long enough to become slant-eyed, it does seem that the complexion would be uncommonly fair.

Perhaps you do not know what Bahaism is; and you may be likewise unaware that Abdul Baha Abbas, Persian prophet and teacher of Bahaism, has lately visited the United States.

"He who is now in our midst," observed the New York Independent in a recent issue, "is by many millions of people regarded as a prophet. In spite of the lofty position ascribed to him by his followers, his interest in human affairs is keen." This is most gratifying. It is delightful to learn also that the leader of Bahaism was very pleased with America. So many Americans are dissatisfied with conditions here! And every time one hears or reads a political speech, the impression that the country has been going to the dogs for a long time is intensified.

As to the practical value of Bahaism, a New York magazine says: "Bahaism is not to be classed with the freak or fake religions which arise among us or are brought to us from abroad. Perhaps there are among its American disciples some of the class who take up with Bahaism because bridge is going out. If so we may at least congratulate them on the change."

It does not appear that the disciples of Bahaism have been recruited from the ranks of poker players. This fact may or may not have special significance.

Bahaism has no creed, no ritual, no dogma. Apparently, there is nothing very positive about it. The Bahaist "must be free from religious prejudice, national prejudice, racial prejudice." Bereft of all these springs of action, a man would naturally be peaceable, not to say tame and flabby. Courage to face the cannon's mouth is inspired by the soldiers' belief that their country is in the right or that their own faith is the true faith. Joan of Arc chose a path and went down it like a thunderbolt. These latter-day philosophers seem to teach us nothing except how to stand at the cross-roads!

The leading tenet of Bahaism is peace, universal peace.

Apparently it would attain this end by taking out of man's nature all the "go" principle. Which probably, at this stage of our progress as a race, is the only way to do it. Abdul Baha Abbas explains why he is sure that nations do not degenerate in times of peace:

"I was in Africa and found warring tribes and much degradation. I went to Switzerland and found peace and enlightenment."

This is the sort of flimsy argument usually set forth by the universal-peace advocates.

The fact is that the whole of Europe is an armed camp. Switzerland is safe because of its small size and because no one of the European nations would permit any other one to seize Switzerland, thus disturbing the "balance of power"—a hair-trigger proposition. Switzerland, however, was not always so tranquil. In the past the little country was repeatedly invaded by foreign foes; and along about the year 1531 Switzerland suffered internal dissensions, religious and political, which continued for nearly two hundred years.

As for the warring Africans, they will soon be peaceful enough. The white man is taking the black man's continent. Mr. Dooley once remarked: "On these dark races, the sun of England sets and sets hard." But this is not true of England alone. It is merely the great white way. Italy has recently taken Tripoli. France is "subduing" the wild tribes and is putting them to work building railroads in Algeria and other territory in north Africa, which French armies took—for love of France. Germany has lately acquired a large slice of territory in the Kongo district, and so it goes and will continue to go, according to the pitiless logic of events. As for Americans—everybody remembers the old joke: "When the Pilgrim Fathers landed, they fell upon their knees, and then immediately afterward, they fell upon the aborigines."

There may come a time when the human mind will be free from "national prejudice," but by that time there will be no unexplored or unappropriated territory on the face of the earth.

And after all, it is probably true that the earth belongs to those who can make the most of it. Certainly with the present high cost of living, there is no land to spare for savages to roam over. It has been computed that it required twenty square miles for one Indian to live on, by hunting buffalo and other game, as he did before the white man came. It would be difficult to estimate how much celery and onions and beans and potatoes could be raised on twenty square miles in the Mississippi valley, leaving out of account the larger crops.

It is, however, easy to understand why the area of market gardens is increasing and why buffalo hunting is no more.

Rightly viewed, a market garden is an inspiring sight, not only for what is in it, but for what lies back of it, so to speak. Behind every such garden are long chapters of history in which are recounted the struggles of men who were incited to action by national prejudice—if one is minded to call it prejudice." The opposite of prejudice is usually the feeling that prompts warriors to go forth to battle. It has been truly said that soldiers do not fight because there is something in front of them that they hate; they fight because there is something back of them that they love.

If one looks at a market garden anywhere in the United States—in the suburbs of St. Louis, for instance, it will not require much stretch of imagination to see back of it two great nations that clinched in a desperate struggle for possession of America. One had more so-called race prejudice than the other, and the one that had most was the victor in the struggle. There were other things that contributed to this end, but the one mentioned was a by no means unimportant factor.

The French in America had a magnificent dream of empire, and at one time they seemed in a fair way to make the dream come true. Their territory far exceeded that of the English.

The French had spread forts and missions through all the western wilderness at a time when the English colonies were confined to the Atlantic coast. The historian, Parkman, says: "The Virginia planter and the farmer of Massachusetts were conversant with only a few bordering tribes when the emissaries of France were roaming the prairies with the buffalo-hunting Pawnees or lodging in the winter cabins of the Dakotahs." And not only that; France labored with eager diligence to conciliate the Indians and win them to espouse her cause. Her agents were busy in every village studying the language of the inhabitants, complying with their usages, cajoling them. When a party of Indian chiefs visited a French fort they were greeted with the firing of cannon and rolling of drums. The Indians sat at table with the officers and were decorated with medals and French flags. And yet—French dominion is but a memory in America today.

The story of the two nations' contest for supremacy in the new world is of absorbing interest. The background of a market garden reaches into a realm of utmost fascination. And in the wake of the conqueror there is found no trace of Bahaim!

Although the English were victorious in the great contest, there is a romantic attraction about France in connection with the new world that must ever appeal strongly to the student of past events. The valor of France's soldiers, the zeal and fortitude of her missionaries and the dauntless courage of her explorers illumine many pages of history.

In a sense, the city that is now the home of Hoo-Hoo is commemorative of those who planted in the western wilderness the lilies of France. St. Louis was founded in 1764 by a party of Frenchmen under Auguste Chouteau, who was a stepson of Pierre Laclède. The latter had sent the party from New Orleans to establish a settlement on a site already selected as a post for trading with the Indians. The village was named in honor of Louis the Ninth, king of France, who died in the year 1270 after reigning thirty-four years. At the time the settlement called St. Louis was made, France had already by secret treaty ceded the entire territory west of the Mississippi to Spain, but no knowledge of the treaty was received in Louisiana for some years, and the settlement remained French. In 1770 the Spanish took formal possession. The village remained under Spanish control for thirty-three years, when by another secret treaty Spain ceded the territory back to France.

As everybody knows, or used to know before growing "rusty on history," Napoleon Bonaparte in 1803 sold the entire territory to the United States, the transaction being known as the "Louisiana Purchase." Neither buyer nor seller realized at the time the magnitude of the deal. Napoleon was the extreme opposite from Bahaim; he was permeated with national prejudice and personal ambition. He wanted the earth, and had succeeded in conquering a considerable portion of Europe. In 1803 he was involved in war with England and was hard pressed for money. So he made the biggest real estate deal ever recorded. President Thomas Jefferson wanted New Orleans in order to control the mouth of the Mississippi on the east side. He offered to guarantee to Napoleon all the territory west of the Mississippi if this inducement became necessary in order to get that town. It has been said that, looking for a city, he had an empire thrust upon him; the territory purchased now comprises twelve States. The price paid, fifteen million dollars, was less than what some of our American multi-millionaires have given away in charity. But money went farther in those days—although as some newspaper wit has said, a dollar now makes up in speed what it lacks in distance.

Poor Napoleon! England made two moves which checkmated him. She issued a lot of paper money and she started an Irishman (the Duke of Wellington) out after the enemy.

Really the view from the Wright building is extremely comprehensive; the vista that stretches back into the past is most entrancing.

A very eminent literateur, Mr. Edward Gosse, is distressed as to the future of poetry. He thinks that if there is to be great poetry in the future (which he doubts) it will be in languages which have been subjected to less wear and tear than ours. In short he is of the opinion that English is worn out and is no longer a fit medium for poetical expression. If the frayed condition of the language would but stay the output of fiction, we could all afford to be dumb for a few years. As for popular songs, there is probably no hope of relief—for when the song writers run out of words that are in good standing, they forthwith coin new words. According to an authority on the subject, this is the way many popular songs are written:

Two fellows, one a piano player and the other a lyric writer, get together at a piano. The piano player runs his fingers over the keys, strikes a chord, leans back and looks up at the ceiling. With rag-time ecstasy in his eyes, he murmurs: "Listen to that, bo. Some bear, huh!" "You baby!" ejaculates the lyric writer. "It's a bear cat rag." "What's the matter with that for a title?" suggests the piano player. "Go to it!" says his partner. "Bang! Bang!" goes the piano, and the piano player leans over the keys, humming softly to the tune he grinds out. "It's a bear, it's a bear, it's a bear." Bang! Bang! "It's a bear cat rag, you ba-by, it's a bear cat rag." "Great kid, kill it," shouts the lyric writer above the din, and the piano player plays it three ways across the board, and winds up with a hot finish that sends the lyric writer into a state of coma until he emerges with words that fit the fine frenzy of the musician's efforts.

That's all except the publishing and the reaping of royalties. And the royalties sometimes amount to enormous sums. The man who perpetrated "Alexander's Rag Time Band" is said to have made $100,000 during the last three years from his alleged songs. The same man is guilty of "Everybody's Doin' It Now." The language was not so worn out when Milton labored seven years on Paradise Lost, and sold it for $75.

Commenting on Mr. Gosse's remarks, a writer in a London paper says:

"The trouble, we must believe, is not that the language is hackneyed, but that conditions of life are not such as bring great poets to the fore." A great poet in a rag-time age would be more or less of a misfit. But when a writer has something indispensable to say, he will, no doubt, find fitting words wherewith to frame his thoughts.

Some of us are a bit weary anyway of the constant striving on the part of writers after piquant novelty of phrase. We could get along well enough with the good old words if only there were substance to the thought. Occasionally one runs across a refreshing bit, like the following from Arnold Bennett:

"Prepare to live, but don't forget to live. You will never have a better chance than you have at present. Hopes are never realized; for in the act of realization, they become something else. Ambitions may be attained, but ambitions attained are rather like burnt coal—ninety per cent of the heat generated has gone up the chimney instead of into the room. This that you are living now is life itself, it is much more life itself than that which you will be living twenty years hence. Settle down at once into life."

“CLIPPINGS” FROM THE LUMBER JOURNALS

"Hoo-Hoo forever" was the slogan at Asheville.—The Lumberman's Review, New York, N. Y.

There are some lumbermen who believe that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo is a dead letter. It may be in some states, but certainly California is still alive to the advisability of keeping the order of the Black Cat alive and progressive. There are many of us who have our differences of opinion relative to policies and our likes and dislikes for individuals, but Hoo-Hoo is today just what it was yesterday, if we get together and make it so. Will you all help?—Pioneer Western Lumberman, San Francisco, Cal., June 15, 1912.

The twenty-first Hoo-Hoo annual meeting at Asheville, N. C., last month, though not as widely attended as it was hoped it would be, was nevertheless thoroughly enjoyable. The outcome of the meeting is distinctly gratifying to those who are determined to see that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo shall continue to contribute even more effectively in the future to the building up of a personal acquaintance and a spirit of fraternity among men in every branch of the lumber trade.

The hundred and fifty or more men who attended and took part in the meeting were at Asheville to promote the interest of Hoo-Hoo and to dedicate themselves anew to a determination that the order shall continue and be augmented. That men, representing more than thirty states, and coming from every part of the country, from one coast to the other and from Canada to Florida, were present, is sufficient to attest the vital interest felt in Hoo-Hoo. For the first time the great mid-western section of Canada was represented, and was given recognition in the selection of the new Supreme Nine, by the election of Mr. E. D. Tennant, of Winnipeg.—Retail Lumberman and Western Builder, Winnipeg, Manitoba, August, 1912.

REHABILITATION OF HOO-HOO.

Early reports from the annual concatenation of Hoo-Hoo at Asheville, N. C., this week indicate that the revival of interest in the order is widespread. Hoo-Hoo has been sick for years, and it is not at all likely that all of its ailments can be diagnosed and cured in one annual meeting. But reasonable evidence of convalescence in the way of elimination of politics will be sufficient to hold the membership in line while plans are laid for future improvement. It is to be hoped that eventually the order will provide for a revision of the ritual and for the elimination of certain objectionable features to which the American Lumberman has called attention on previous occasions.

It will suffice to say that the Hoo-Hoo fraternity has a place in the lumber industry which could hardly be filled by any other organization. If put upon a sound, substantial foundation it will grow in numbers and in usefulness, and early returns from Asheville indicate that the necessary work is under way.—American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill., July 20, 1912.

HOO-HOO'S SECOND WIND.

There is a remarkable contrast between the annual concatenation of the great Order of Hoo-Hoo which has just been concluded and that of a year ago. On the previous occasion wild predictions were freely current that the end of the order was in sight, and that it would not be able to survive the dissensions which had arisen and the defections which had occurred or were threatened. Nevertheless, the order has gone serenely on its way. The result of a year's hard work has been to give the substantial friends and supporters of the order a clearer insight into the real value of its deeper principles, and has caused them to rally around the Hoo-Hoo banner with greater energy and determination.

The annual concatenation held last week was not the largest in the history of the order, and not the smallest. It beyond question was the most enthusiastic and harmonious. There were one or two sharp contests, none of which left any sting behind it. No one went away from the annual meeting with anything but the kindest and most fraternal feelings for everyone else who had been in attendance. Although the order suffered the loss of that officer who has had most to do with its work for the last sixteen years, this was in a large measure compensated for, as he himself pointed out, by the fact that hereafter the Scrivenoter is to devote his entire time and energies to the upbuilding of the order. In the contest between Chicago and St. Louis for the headquarters of the Scrivenoter and of the order many believed Chicago to be the most logical point, but St. Louis won in the voting, and really it probably makes little difference to the future prosperity of the order which of these two important cities shall be the working center.

The real accomplishment of the annual, however, and the one which marks the beginning of a new period for Hoo-Hoo, was the universal determination to raise the standard of Hoo-Hoo to the highest attainable ideal—to secure dignity and decorum for every concatenation hereafter held and, while opening wide the doors of Hoo-Hoo to every worthy applicant, to bar the entrance into its gardens to everyone ineligible under its laws or undesirable when measured by the great spirit of the order.

The record of the last year shows that everywhere the best men in lumberdom are flocking to the support of the order and are taking up its work.

The Supreme Nine elected is of a high order of merit, and adequately represents all parts of the United States and recognizes also our sister country, Canada, in which lies a fruitful field for the future growth of the order.

The work of the last year in Hoo-Hoo has been carried on faithfully and successfully in the face of difficulties, and has now brought the order out to a point where the outlook was never brighter and more hopeful. The American Lumberman congratulates all those who have had a part in this work of reform and revivication, and cordially commends and indorses the determination to which the annual gave formal expression of raising the personnel of initiates and the conduct of ceremonies to the higher plane which properly exemplifies and perpetuates the vital principles of this great fraternal organization.—American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill., July 27, 1912.

STRENGTH IN QUALITY.

As time passes it becomes increasingly evident that the Hoo-Hoo renaissance is attracting the attention of lumbermen of the better class everywhere. The watchword as announced for this year's administration is "Quality Before Quantity," and the character and the eligibility of initiates are to be scrutinized more closely.

In any organization of this sort a lowering of the standard for the purpose of procuring a larger membership defeats its own purpose because it lessens the active enthusiasm of those upon whom success must largely depend. The organization has adopted an effective rallying cry and there should be immediate and hearty response from every loyal member. Hoo-Hoo will progress not by superhuman efforts on the part of a few but by wakened interest and activity upon the part of all.—American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill., August 31, 1912.

HOO-HOO ANNUAL.

Hoo-Hoo has held another annual meeting. Harmony reigned throughout the session and excellent results were obtained. This was just the antithesis of what happened a year ago when certain disputing factions well nigh disrupted the organization of which so many are very fond. The troubles of 1911 have been swept aside and Hoo-Hoo bids fair to enter upon a continuation of its successful career of the past twenty years. This is true particularly with Frank W. Trower at the helm, as he has an excellent idea of what should be and with his numerous friends behind his efforts the Black Cats will surely make the fur fly in 1912-13.

While on this subject of Hoo-Hoo, it might be well to bring forward an idea which should meet with favorable reception everywhere within the growing confines of that order. The government of Hoo-Hoo is vested in a body of nine members, called the Supreme Nine, with the Snark at the head. Instead of having local lodges, the states and countries are divided into jurisdictions, each having a presiding member, called a Vicegerent Snark. The latter holds the local concatenations and secures the candidates. He receives no compensation and accepts the position because of his regard for the order. It is no idle statement to make: That there never was a Vicegerent Snark who served his entire term without coming out several dollars behind because of the concurrent expenses attached to his office. The Pioneer Western Lumberman makes the suggestion right here that, upon the conclusion of his term of office, every Vicegerent Snark be given a life membership in Hoo-Hoo as a token of the realization of the members that he has been an able and efficient officer. This reward should also be given to the members of the Supreme Nine, and should be retroactive in its function. It will be well for the order to consider this suggestion which, if initiated, will spur on the present and future Vicegerents to their utmost.—Pioneer Western Lumberman, San Francisco, Cal., August 1, 1912.

HOO-HOO IN NEW HEADQUARTERS.

On September 9, "Hoo-Hoo Day," the term of office of all the officers of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo elected at the annual meeting a year ago on the "City of Cleveland" expired, and these men quietly and gracefully drifted back into the placidity of private life, while the officers elected at the annual meeting at Asheville in July as quietly assumed their official duties. Only one of the officers serving last year was re-elected, that being Junior Hoo-Hoo Frank W. Trower, of San Francisco, who was unanimously promoted to the Snarkship.

The new Scrivenoter, Mr. W. W. Stephenson, came to Nashville and spent ten days in thoroughly familiarizing himself with all the details of the office with which he was already familiar through two years connection with the order as Supreme Representative. All the books and records and other property of the order were shipped to St. Louis on September 7, so that on the morning of the 9th the work of the Scrivenoter's office could begin work without hitch or hindrance in the new headquarters chosen for the organization.

The retiring officers have the consciousness of work faithfully and effectively performed. They have reason to feel highly gratified over the results of their efforts. The past year witnessed a remarkable revival of interest of lumbermen in Hoo-Hoo from one side of the country to the other, and the inception of an era that will carry the order to a higher plane than it has ever occupied and a greater usefulness in its unique field than it has ever had. The new Supreme Nine is composed of able men, well chosen to carry forward the good work of last year. They are men of ability and high character, and are well located geographically to cover the whole of this country and Canada. They have had two months in which to familiarize themselves with the situation and lay plans for the year's work, and consequently go into office better fitted for effective work than any officers ever before chosen.

The Southern Lumberman predicts that the coming year will see the biggest and best record ever made in Hoo-Hoo, and that the next annual meeting, being the twenty-second in the order's history, will be the biggest, best and most enjoyable ever held.—The Southern Lumberman, Nashville, Tenn., September 14, 1912.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON

VICEGERENT Snark J. H. Ehrmantraut of the Eastern District of Washington arranged a "GET-TOGETHER-MEETING" for September 9.

The following account of this meeting was sent the Scrivener and is published in full:

"Hoo-Hoo day was observed by forty of the faithful on the evening of September 9. After dinner at the Inland Club, most of those present attended the Orpheum Theatre. The event of the evening was "The Story of Hoo-Hoo," told by Mr. Bolling Arthur Johnson. It was very interesting and entirely new to practically all present. Mr. Johnson was loudly applauded and every one was positive in showing their appreciation and considered it a rare treat to have with us one of the founders of the order, or better say, the Father Hoo-Hoo.

"Mr. George W. Duffy led the singing as well as the yelling, and the way the Irish and Swedes gave that Hoo-Hoo call in German was something awful to hear. Our premier poet, Mr. Geo. W. Hoag, was so busy Bull Moosing on this day that we were unable to enlist his services in the cause of Hoo-Hoo on this occasion. He was however present and sang with the rest to the tune of Auld Lang Syne, but we believe he was detected in saying "slam" instead of the more forceful word used by the author.

"Mr. George W. Duffy put the steam roller to work and had the meeting endorse Mr. J. H. Ehrmantraut to succeed himself as Snark for the coming year. This was hardly fair to others that may have wanted the job, but showed that Mr. Duffy is learning the political game only too well. Mr. Ehrmantraut declined to accept the recommendation and requested them to endorse some other member engaged in some other branch of the industry. The appointment is of course up to Mr. Trower, the Snark of the Universe, and it is possible that he may consider Mr. Ehrmantraut's recommendations in making it.

"The dinner was "dry," as all true Hoo-Hoo affairs have been for the past few years, and the caterers even went so far as to leave off the cigars. However, Mr. Theo. H. Koerner of the M. & St. L. was there with a box of his special brand and supplied the deficiency.

"The Orpheum bill was not the best that has been shown here, but it was fair, and two German comedians gave the Hoo-Hoo call as it is printed on the program, then the Hoo-Hoo present followed them with the call in English.

"The meeting was pronounced by all present a decided success and a fraternal spirit was aroused that will bring them all out next time."

Supreme Custocatian L. R. Fifer, of Seattle, Wash., has instructed the Scrivener to send Vicegerent Snark Ehrmantraut a certificate of reappointment as Vicegerent Snark for Eastern Washington and it is with great pleasure that we announce this appointment. THE BULLETIN also takes pleasure in publishing in full "The Story of Hoo-Hoo," told at this meeting by Bolling Arthur Johnson of the "Lumber World Review," Chicago, Ill., the Father of Hoo-Hoo, and ask that it be carefully read by all members.

THE STORY OF HOO-HOO

By BOLLING ARTHUR JOHNSON
Seer of the House of Ancients

FOR a child that was to live through its infancy and arrive at the age of maturity, Hoo-Hoo was born in an extraordinary manner and after such fashion that but FEW people ever consider it anything but a chance happening, but its subsequent history has been such that if its birth had occurred in the land of the Mystics there would have long since been sweet temple bells ringing to encourage its priestly followers. It WAS, however, born in the workaday of the Western Hemisphere and has grown up to maturity in health in all its parts, with its followers glad that it happened, and by no means showing supernatural handiwork in its bringing forth.

The word "Hoo-Hoo" was coined by myself without any previous thought on the subject, a month before the birth of Hoo-Hoo at Gurdon, Arkansas, in the very early days of January, 1892. It was used first as a noun and applied to the naming of a tuft of hair growing from the exact center of the bald head of Charles Henderson McCarer, then living at Evansville, Indiana, and at the time of the birth of the word, engaged as traveling correspondent for the Northwestern Lumberman.

The episode of the birth of the word occurred at a banquet of the then Missouri and Kansas Retail Lumber Dealers' Association in the Midland Hotel at Kansas City, Missouri, where Mr. McCarer, with many others were to appear in various costumes improvised for the occasion, Mr. McCarer's costume, however, not being in the nature of eccentric dress, but simply an adornment to his cranium by the twisting together in a top knot of a few hairs on the top of his head which those present never remembered to have seen before, on account of the fact that they were so inconsequential that they had been overlooked or had been so tonsured as to escape attention.

Mr. McCarer came into the banquet unadorned by any costumer's hand and when he was set upon by his fellows and upbraided for being out of tune for the occasion, he remarked that he could easily fix all that, and passed his hand over the top of his head with the result mentioned, the thin disguise being immediately nominated a "Hoo-Hoo." The word passed around in the silly popular way in which many new thoughts of no very great brilliancy sometimes endure a butterfly existence, like the latest Waltz Song or Ragtime Melody.

It was a hard winter, but the word lived through the cold snap, and banded about at a meeting of Arkansas lumbermen at Camden, Arkansas, about three weeks later and came out of the wash as a component part of the title of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo when the order was founded at Gurdon, Arkansas, on January 21, 1892.

The newspaper party with a few friends was journeying from Camden, Arkansas, on that morning, and on their way to various assignments of their papers and was to have made connections with the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern train at Gurdon, but the rails spread or there was a hot box, or the engines wouldn't steam, or something, and the train was held up a few miles out of Camden, putting the party at Gurdon early in the forenoon of the day, with utterly nothing left for it to do until the evening train should come along going north toward St. Louis.

There were more lumber meetings in those days than there are now, if that could be possible, and there were fewer newspaper men, and the few newspaper men were compelled to do very arduous tasks. Some one of us was to go to Omaha and yet another was to go to Chicago, I was to go to Duluth, and we were all to be in New Orleans within a fortnight or within three weeks at most, to attend the annual session of the Yellow Pine Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

C. H. McCarer was not one of the party, but was ill at Camden. He had nothing to do with the organization of the order and although he is credited with having been the first Snark of the Order, he never held that title, but during the few remaining years of his life, or until the first annual meeting, which occurred in St. Louis on September 9th of that year, he was known as the Senior High Hoo-Hoo. He was the first chief officer, but was not strictly a member of the House of Ancients, which was not organized until the Kansas City annual meeting in 1894.

At Gurdon that day when all the stories had been told, and all the papers had been read, and all the cigars had been smoked, some one suggested that the whole scheme of annual meetings of lumbermen was a bore and nuisance and that everybody interested ought to meet in some central spot, and make one grand hurrah of the whole affair so that the newspaper people and other camp followers like railroad men and supply people and the like might have the remainder of the year for the peaceful pursuits of trade.

Someone suggested that there was not enough fraternal spirit among lumbermen to permit of such a gathering, at which juncture I proposed that a fraternity be organized, and some one suggested that it be called the Ancient and Honorable Order of Camp Followers, whereupon I suggested that we should call it the Order of Hoo-Hoo, and then in the next hour came the laying down of the principles of the Order, and it is strange to relate that all the vital points were discussed and settled with the enthusiasm and excitement of the occasion.

Major Buckley, landlord of the Hotel Hall, didn't think much of the party from the beginning. He had never had quite so many calls for such accommodations as genuine Key West cigars and perfectly new playing cards, fires in the rooms, and the like, and when W. E. Barns, of St. Louis, proposed some of the odd and peculiar names which were afterwards utilized for the titles of the officials of the order and these new words came to the ears of the landlord, they sounded like pirates' language to him, and we narrowly escaped being arrested for train robbers on information which the landlord tried his best to lodge with the local constable.

On that day at Gurdon the full name of the order was settled; it was determined that a black cat should be the insignia; and that every possible thing about the order which could submit to any connection with the figure nine should be mixed up with the figure in some WAY. The Hoo-Hoo day was chosen, a hand book was determined upon, and it was settled that each member should have a number and as nearly as possible the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo was to be entirely unlike all other orders. There were to be no lodges, no enforced attendance at meetings, or marching in the streets was to be allowed, and above all things else it was to be a fight against superstition, which dominating principle controlling the thought of those present is the reason why they conjured so specifically with the use of the figure nine and endeavored to go so directly counter to the policies of other orders in their ritualistic affairs.

There were present throughout the whole preliminary organization W. E. Barns of St. Louis, editor of the St. Louis Lumberman; George W. Schwartz, of the Vandalia road; W. Starr Mitchell, of Little Rock, Ark.; George K. Smith, secretary of the Yellow Pine Lumber Manufacturers' Association, St. Louis, and myself.

It was not planned in the first place that it should be anything but a league of camp followers of the lumber trade and acting paid officers of lumber associations; but it was determined at last to take in lumber manufacturers, and Mr. Strauss, who had been one of the party earlier in the day, was invited to participate; so, by just THAT much the great Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo came near missing being a lumber fraternity ALTOGETHER.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Kinematograph, the inventors called it; also, cinematograph, kinetograph, kinetoscope, bioscope, biograph, tachyscope, vitascope, vitagraph, phenakistoscope, zoopraxiscope, praxinoscope, zoetrope, animatograph, theatrograph and kinemacolor.

But the people, they call it "the movies."

Now the name of a thing is what it is called by. There's no getting around that. And any common name may get to be a proper name if it lives long enough. By that time it comes to be realized even by the philologists themselves that the reason why the name they gave in the beginning did not stick was because it was really an improper name. This christening job undoubtedly belongs by rights to the philologists. It is their business to supply new words as needed by the demands of advancing civilizations, but they either neglect the duty altogether or when they are called upon for professional services in this line they are apt to make such a botch of it that their fabrication is rejected by a unanimous popular vote expressed viva voce.

If a word is long, cumbrous or pedantic, people will not use it. They will smash it and use one of the pieces, or else hunt up another one for themselves. People refused to ride on the elevated railroad; they took the L instead. An omnibus was built for them, but they prefer a bus. In London, instead of the underground railway, they take the "tube." In Paris they take the "Metro" instead of the Metropolitan. It is shorter. By what miracle of common sense did we get a Subway in New York instead of a "Subterranean Viaduct"? If an attempt had been made to foist that upon us, we would now be traveling daily in the "Duct."

One of the reasons why the metric system is so slow in coming into use is because it was handicapped from the beginning by an ingenious but impossible set of names. In countries where it is in vogue roads are measured and corn is weighed alike by the "kilo." The people are really not unreasonable in this matter. They are willing enough to submit to the dictation of experts as to what words they shall employ provided only that the experts use common sense in catering to their needs.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM PENN DAVIS (No. 11998)

Brother W. P. Davis died at his home in Dallas, Texas, on September 12th, after a short illness and within a few days after his return from a visit to Missouri.

Brother Davis was born at Clarksville, Tenn., May 12, 1843, being 69 years of age at the time of his death. He was initiated into Hoo-Hoo January 27, 1904, at Kansas City, Mo., and was an enthusiastic member. Brother Davis was for years engaged in the lumber business at different places in Missouri and later traveled for D. T. Morton Lumber Company, and W. T. Ferguson Lumber Company. Later he removed to Texas and retired from active business.

The funeral services were conducted from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. C. L. Martin, 3228 Carlisle street, Dallas, under the auspices of Camp Sterling Price, United Confederate Veterans. Brother Davis was also a member of A. F. and A. M., and he was a subscriber to the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund.

WILLIAM FREDERICK GOESSLING (No. 12276)

Brother William F. Goessling, of this city, died on Tuesday, October 1, 1912, at 10:10 p. m. He was born at St. Louis, Mo., on August 3, 1859.

Brother Goessling was president of the William F. Goessling Box Co., one of the oldest and largest box factories in St. Louis. He was a member of Erwin Lodge, No. 121, A. F. & A. M.; Bellefontaine Chapter, No. 25, R. A.; Missouri Consistory, No. 1, A. A. S. R.; Moolah Temple, Mystic Shrine, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo February 20, 1894, at St. Louis, Mo.

The funeral was from the late residence of Brother Goessling, 2938 University Street, Friday, October 4, at 1:30 p. m., to St. Paul's M. E. Church. The interment took place at St. Peter's Cemetery.

ROBERT CHAPMAN WILLIAMSON

(Honorary Member No. 33)

Brother R. C. Williamson, Honorary Member No. 33, died at his home in Memphis, Tenn., August 5th last. Brother Williamson was born at Memphis, Tenn., in November 1873. No particulars of his illness and death have yet been received by The Bulletin.

ROY MICHAEL McCARTHY (No. 11324)

Brother R. M. McCarthy, of Chicago, Ill., while at Asheville, N. C., on Sunday morning August 25th, became suddenly ill at the breakfast table and died within an hour. His health had been failing for about a year, but for several months before his death he seemed to be much improved and his sudden death came as a great shock to his family and friends.

Brother McCarthy was born at Chicago, Ill., January 27, 1879. At the time of his death he was a member of the order in good standing and was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund. He became a Hoo-Hoo at Portland, Ore., September 9, 1903.

Brother McCarthy is survived by a widow and two children.

JOSEPH HENRY KOHLER (No. 13172)

Brother J. H. Kohler, of Mounds, Ill., was stricken with paralysis on the 23d of July and died in Laurel, Miss., on the first of August, and was buried at Dongola, Ill., on August 4.

Brother Kohler was born in Germany, on the 2d of March, 1853. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, Charles, of Oakland, Cal.; Herman and Agnes, of Mounds, Ill., and Mary, of Marion, Illinois.

Brother Kohler became a Hoo-Hoo at Mobile, Ala., August 31, 1904.

CARLOS GUSTAVO SCHRADER (No. 4186)

After a lingering illness, Brother C. G. Schrader, died at Bremen, Germany, on July 23, 1912. Brother Schrader was born at Bogota, Columbia, S. A., March 11, 1867. He became a Hoo-Hoo at Knoxville, Tenn., May 2, 1896.

THOMAS FREDERICK LEINENWEBER (No. 24090).

Brother T. F. Leinenweber, Hoo-Hoo No. 24090, died at his home in Portland, Ore., Saturday, September 21. No particulars of his illness and death have yet been received.

Brother Leinenweber was born at Astoria, Ore., on August 14, 1876. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

EVANSVILLE, INDIANA

VICEGERENT Snark Carroll L. Beck held his first concatenation on the steamer "Wanderer" on the Ohio River on Monday, September 9, 1912.

Vicegerent Snark Beck was assisted in his arrangements by Brothers Paul W. Luhring, Thomas Hanley and Harry Massie.

Snark Beck advises that he had signed applications of eight candidates, and expected a class of twelve or fifteen, but only four kittens came across on the final call. Snark Beck had provided for a large number on the boat and was disappointed on the attendance. The extreme hot weather prevented larger attendance of both "cats" and "kittens."

Snark Beck, assisted by the Evansville Hoo-Hoo, had arranged for all to meet at the New Vendome Hotel at 6 p. m. They then marched in a body to the river, where the boat "Wanderer and Barge" were in waiting.

The following well written account of this concatenation sent to THE BULLETIN is printed in full.

Shortly after we were clear of the heat and dust of the city and well out in the midst of the cool breezes on the water. We found on the barge a bountiful spread of good things to eat, and everyone was in proper mood to do full justice to the opportunities of the moment. The "Session-on-the-Roof" was held immediately. After everyone was satisfied with this part of the program, the decks of the barge were cleared, and the cats and kittens proceeded to concatenate.

The Nine was made up of an exceptionally good bunch of "up to the minute" cats, and they proceeded to make things very lively and interesting for the next two or three hours. Chas. B. Carothers, the popular salesman of the Natalbany Lumber Co., with headquarters at Centralia, Ill., was our Gurdon. His work was especially important owing to the peculiar location of the Gardens and was exceptionally well done. Harry Massie, who in his working hours represents the Evansville Sash & Door Co. in Kentucky, was the Arcanoper. There was some hesitation about having Harry don the Robes of the Order and parade down Main Street—as you all know, Harry is an exceptionally handsome fellow, and we were afraid we might have a repetition of our troubles at the concatenation held in 1911, when someone on the street saw Harry in the march down the street, and, thinking he was a lady, attempted to kidnap him right from our midst.

Paul Wood Luhring, the Junior Brother of the Luhring end of the Wolfin-Luhring Lumber Co., was Custocatian. Everybody in the vicinity of Evansville and remotely connected with the lumber business, knows Elmer: D. Luhling, and we all love our Elmer—but, Oh, you Paul. It is not the least exaggeration to say that Paul worked day and night for some weeks ahead of time to make this concatenation a success. This was his first concatenation since the one he attended where he was one of the tender kittens, and he knows all about the real workings of Hoo-Hoo, and is jealous of the Good Name and the Good Fame of the order.

Will H. Bultman, our former Vicegerent of Southern Indiana, was our Jabberwock. "Bill Bultman" carries himself like he was accustomed as a regular everyday thing to command the standing armies of the whole United States of America. He is a fine fellow for the office of Jabberwock—in fact, he was probably built for the purpose of being a Jabberwock. "Bill Bultman" left Evansville to go to Indianapolis and sell Yellow Pine for the Natalbany Lumber Co., and it goes without saying that everybody in Evansville was sorry to see him go, and it is worth while to hold a concatenation once a year at least just for the purpose of getting him back to Evansville for a day or two.

A. C. Karges, manager of the Evansville Sash & Door Co., attended to the arduous duties of the Scrivenoter's office. "Karges" is another of the class of 1911 that is rapidly absorbing the light of Hoo-Hoo Land; he is a constitutional Hoo-Hoo, which is to say that he always was interested in seeing every lumber dealer that come to Evansville have the finest time possible.

We were fortunate in having with us Mr. J. H. Glass, who officiated as Bojum. Mr. Glass makes his headquarters most of the time in Chicago, and he makes people happier all the time by taking care of what little trouble accumulates for the Wm. Buchanan and Wm. T. Ferguson Lumber Company. We all congratulated the "Glass" on spending the day in such jovial company.

Elmer D. Luhring of the Wolfin-Luhring Lumber Co., after giving us all the most solemn assurance that he was not equal to doing the work of the Junior Hoo-Hoo, turned himself loose and delighted us all by doing the work better than we had ever seen it done before. It is a good thing Elmer does not know his own capacity for doing things; if he did, he might soon be doing such big things and so high up in the world that the rest of us would not get as close to him as we do now, and as stated above, we love our Elmer and like to have him with us as much as possible.

J. C. Greer, the popular Evansville Lumberman, after being as busy as he knew how all day showing the visitors a good time, made a successful Senior Hoo-Hoo. To him also considerable credit is due for preliminary work in getting up the concatenation.

Carroll L. Beck, of the Curtis Door & Sash Co, for the first time in his life had the opportunity of presiding at a concatenation, and he hopes that he did not let the boys know how much puffed up he was with this chance to swing a gavel.

We cannot close this article without special mention of that good Hoo-Hoo, Brother Charles Wolfin of the Wolfin-Luhring Lumber Co., ex-member of the Supreme Nine and a Past Vicegerent Snark. Brother Wolfin did everything a human being could do to make this concatenation the success it was, and his good work is most highly appreciated.

Snark Beck was greatly pleased to have Brother C. E. Bentley, of the Curtis Door & Sash Co., with him, and Brother Bentley did good work in helping line up everything in ship shape.

The Evansville Courier of September 10 gave quite a write-up of this concatenation.

The committee assisting Brother Beck got out a very unique invitation and announcement of this concatenation.

TOLEDO, OHIO

VICEGERENT Snark Frank Spangler held his second concatenation at Toledo, Ohio, on Monday, September 9, 1912. Brother Spangler had made great efforts to make this concatenation a success and his arrangements were perfect. The extreme warm weather, however, cut into the attendance of members, also of the "kittens" who had agreed to be present.

Brother Spangler was well pleased with his concatenation. The Scrivenoter is in receipt of letters from members attending praising Brother Spangler most highly on his work as Vicegerent Snark and also complimenting him on the success of this concatenation.

Brother Spangler was pleased to have with him Brother Fred J. Verkerke of Grand Rapids, Mich., Vicegerent Snark for Western District of Michigan. Brother Verkerke is one of our most enthusiastic members and we never had a better Vicegerent Snark than this same Fred Verkerke.

NORFOLK, VA.

VICEGERENT Snark W. J. Woodward held his second concatenation at Norfolk, Va., on Thursday, September 19, 1912.

Snark Woodward writes that he expected a larger class, but as he had the Hoo-Hoo number he was well pleased and advises that the personnel of the kittens initiated is from some of their best lumber manufacturers and that he was delighted to enroll them in Hoo-Hoo.

We also had a very pleasing report of this concatenation from Past Snark E. Stringer Boggess, who was present. He advises that this concatenation was the best yet held in Norfolk and marks the start on the Atlantic Coast for this Hoo-Hoo year, and he predicts that it is only a starter as to what is to come later on.

He advises that Vicegerent Snark Woodward was unanimously endorsed for re-appointment at this concatenation.

Brother Woodward has set a high standard and has made good in every way, and it was with great pleasure that Snark Trower and Senior Hoo-Hoo English complied with the request of the Virginia Hoo-Hoo and certificate of re-appointment has been forwarded to Brother Woodward, and we wish him continued success and look forward with much pleasure to future reports from him.

Among the out-of-town members present we are pleased to note, Chas. H. Adams of Grand Haven, Mich.; Dan W. Richardson, ex-member Supreme Nine, of Dover, N. C.; S. Robb Eccles, Vicegerent Snark Eastern District of Maryland, Baltimore, Md., and N. S. Richardson, of Dover, N. C.

Concatenation was held at the Monticello Hotel, Norfolk, Va. and was a success in every way and every one present had a most delightful time and thoroughly enjoyed it.

A conservative estimate of the money to be spent on the Panama-Pacific Exposition is $50,000,000. This includes the initial capital of the exposition company, $17,500,000, of which $5,000,000 was pledged by the state, $5,000,000 by the city, and $7,500,000 by private subscribers. The next biggest item in the cost of the fair will be the money to be invested by the various states of the Union for buildings and exhibits. Thus far the sums appropriated by states for these purposes range from $750,000 down to $150,000. One or two of the larger states are expected to vote $1,000,000 or more. Taking an average of $250,000 as a fair estimate of the per state expenditures, the exhibits of the forty-eight states will represent a total of $12,000,000. The county appropriations from California, estimated on a low basis, are expected to exceed $500,000. One of the biggest items of the exposition will be the foreign displays and buildings. Comptroller Pollak of the exposition company estimates that the other nations of the world will spend $20,000,000 here.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Baseball is the greatest of all civiliziers, even more potent than the time-honored three R's or spelling book, according to Professor William Pierce Gorsuch of the University of Chicago, who has just returned from a tour around the world. American teachers in the Philippines have recognized the "civilizing" influence of the national game, Professor Gorsuch says, and are daily giving instruction in baseball just as they do in reading and writing. According to the teachers, love for this pastime is causing a rapid decrease in the number of cock and bull fights in the islands.

The "pili" nut tree grows in the southern part of the Island of Luzon, and nowhere else in the Philippines. It is a large tree, and its seed is described as extraordinarily rich in flavor. All the Americans in the Philippines think it the finest nut grown. When the nuts are roasted, if a lighted match be touched to one of them, it will burn like a lamp, so rich is it in oil.

A cat may have nine lives, but a cow can kick the bucket a dozen times and continue to hold her job.

OUR VICE-GERENT
SNARKS

JOSEPH HENRY EHRMANNTAUT

Vicegerent Snark, Eastern District of Washington
SPOKANE, WASH.

THE Hoo-Hoo of Eastern Washington appreciating the good work of Brother Ehrmanntaut for the Order requested his re-appointment as Vicegerent Snark for the year 1913.

Brother Ehrmanntaut was born November 17, 1879, at Fairbault, Minnesota, and started in the lumber business tallying lumber on the docks at Ashland, Wisconsin, in 1899. He went to Minneapolis, Minnesota, in 1901 and was connected with J. and W. C. Shull. In August, 1903, he went to Everett, Washington, with Pendleton & Gilkey and was around about Darrington, Everett and Mukilteo, Washington, until the spring of 1905, when, after spending six months in Seattle with a wholesale firm, he went to Spokane for the H. O. Seiffert Co., and with G. H. Curtice, now deceased, entered the wholesale business.

In 1908 the Pine-Fir Co. was organized by Brother Ehrmanntaut and Mr. F. R. Woodbury. Brother Ehrmanntaut manages the Pine-Fir Co. and Mr. Woodbury takes no active interest in this company, but manages the F. R. Woodbury Lumber Co., in which company Brother Ehrmanntaut is also interested.

Brother Ehrmanntaut was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Concatenation No. 1221, held at Spokane, Wash., on February 7th, 1906, and is a Hoo-Hoo through and through.

THE BULLETIN is expecting great things in the Eastern District of Washington this year and wishes Brother Ehrmanntaut the best of success.

A MONTHLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF HOO-HOO

THE PRACTICAL SIDE OF HOO-HOO

The men whose Hoo-Hoo names appear in the notices below are out of work and want employment. This is intended as a permanent department of The Bulletin, through which to make these facts known. It is, or should be, read by several thousand business men who employ labor in many varied forms, and it can be made of great value in giving practical application to Hoo-Hoo's central theme of helping one another. It is hoped the department will receive very careful attention each issue.

Article III of Constitution, governing membership, says:

"Section 1. Active membership.—The membership in this Order shall be limited to white male persons of full age of twenty-one (21) years, of good moral character, who possess one or more of the following seven qualifications: Lumbermen, Foresters, Officers of Lumber Associations, Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies, Newspaper Men, Railroad Men, Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men, and so definitely shall the line of qualification be drawn in each class that the occupation under which persons apply for membership shall be their main or principal occupation, and it shall be the business of the person recognized in the community in which he resides as his principal vocation.

Specific Definition of Eligibility

"(a) Lumbermen.—Lumbermen shall be those who are engaged either in the ownership or sale of timber lands, timber or logs, or the manufacture or sale, at wholesale or retail, of forest products, either as owners, officers, managers of departments, general superintendents, sales managers or traveling salesmen.

"(b) Foresters.—This class shall include those persons graduated from recognized schools of forestry, officials of the forestry service and members of forest commissions or boards, either state or national.

"(c) Officers of Lumber Associations.—Regularly organized lumber associations, state or national.

"(d) Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies.—Officers or representatives of mutual or inter-insurance companies placing risks on lumber property exclusively.

"(h) Initiation.—Such persons as above mentioned may be initiated under proper application, payment of initiation fee and election to membership.

"(i) Limited Active Membership.—The active membership shall be limited to 33,999 members in good standing.

Admission of Paint, Cement, Tiling, Roofing and Oil Men

(j) Manufacturers, wholesale dealers and salesmen of cement, roofing, paints, oil, tiling and other staple articles cannot become active members, but will be welcome as honorary members."

The above is printed for the information of all members, and we urge you to read it carefully. We are working to make the Order a representative one, and in order to do this, we must comply fully with the above. In case of doubt, please take up with the Scrivenor and he will ask the Supreme Nine to rule.

We want every member of the Order to watch this closely and before voting for a candidate be sure he is eligible. Give the Order the best of the doubt. We want members, but we want quality and not quantity.

A PERSONAL STATEMENT

Since my election as Supreme Representative two years ago I have given to the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo the best thought of which I am capable and I have, in my travels, which covered nearly all of North America, met a great many members personally and can state that never have I met a man, a lumberman or a representative of the allied industries, who did not believe and admit that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo had been of great value not only to its members but to the lumber industry as a whole.

I found many, of course, who did not approve of everything that had been done and no one could expect that every member would be pleased with everything no matter what had been done.

No one can deny the fact that it is of the utmost importance to every man engaged in the lumber trade to have an organization along the lines of Hoo-Hoo and I do not believe that any one can successfully dispute the fact that Hoo-Hoo has made possible the success attained by the different lumber associations.

Who can place a monetary value on the many lasting friendships made through Hoo-Hoo?

Who can place a monetary value on the many pleasant hours spent in Hoo-Hoo?

Who can cite an order or an organization that has done as much for its members as has Hoo-Hoo at anywhere near the same cost of membership?

In addition to what it has done for its own members who can place a monetary value on the good it has accomplished to the lumber trade?

Now, if we are agreed that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo is good for its members and is of value to the lumber trade, and realizing the good it has accomplished, appreciating the good it is doing and wanting it to continue to succeed and to continue bringing together in close personal, fraternal relations, the men engaged in the lumber and allied industries, then I ask you to show your appreciation by giving your Vicegerent Snark and the Supreme Nine the benefit of your most valuable co-operation, advice and assistance. Your Scrivenoter is not blind nor is he deaf and he believes he is familiar, somewhat, with what is being said and done. In this issue of THE BULLETIN appears a financial statement covering year 1911-1912 up to the time the office was turned over to me by Brother Baird and I want every member to read it carefully and if it is not satisfactory, write me and I will endeavor to give you all information you desire.

In the January issue of THE BULLETIN I will publish a financial statement covering the first three months of my term of office and after that I intend to publish in each issue of THE BULLETIN a financial report to the end that every member of the Order will know just what is being done.

As Scrivenoter of the Order I want to say that every member of the Order will receive the same treatment at my hands and I want every member to know just what is being done and why it is being done and want every member to feel free to write me at any and all times and ask any and all questions they deem of interest to the Order and your Scrivenoter will advise you fully in regard thereto.

This is your Order and it is up to you to see that everything is conducted along the right lines. Your Scrivenoter has heard reports that a committee should be appointed to inspect the books, etc., of the Order and he has no objection whatever to this and will welcome any committee that is selected and give them his most hearty assistance in their work. The auditor appointed by Snark Boggess inspected the books before the Annual Meeting held at Asheville, N. C., July 18-20, 1912, and the following auditing committee was appointed by Snark Boggess at the Annual Meeting: J. C. McGrath, Little Rock, Ark., chairman; J. F. Judd, St. Louis, Mo. and W. T. Latham, of Mt. Sterling, N. C. This committee made the following report which was accepted:

"We, your auditing committee, have examined the books and statement of J. H. Baird, Scrivenoter, so far as totals are concerned, and have compared balance shown in statement with bank pass book, and find same to agree.

(Signed) J. F. JUDD,
J. C. McGRATH,
W. T. LATHAM."

The same auditor who has been appointed by the different Snarks for many years, Mr. Jo Edwards, of Nashville, Tenn., made examination of the books when they were turned over to me by Brother Baird and has certified that books were correct and I have this certificate on file in this office and will be pleased to show same to any member on request.

This is a long article, but I believe it is necessary in order that every member will fully understand the situation and know that there is no question but that everything is correct. This is not written as an apology, excuse or defense. The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo as an Order has no apologies to offer, no excuses to make and needs no defenders. It stands for itself and all members should be proud of its record. This office contains no secrets and all the books and records contained herein are open to inspection of any and all members of the Order. I am employed by you as Scrivenoter and I am conducting the affairs of the Order, to the best of my ability, to the best interests of the Order. I am human and as such do not claim, and never have claimed, that I am perfect, neither do I believe that the Order is now, or ever has been, perfect. I do, however, promise that I will use my best endeavors and ability to make the Order as nearly perfect as human beings can make any order perfect. The Supreme Nine are giving me their most hearty support and we want and must have the hearty co-operation and support of each individual member in order to accomplish what we all desire.

As a human being at the present writing I have nothing but the best of feeling toward all mankind and have no ill, or personal feeling against any human being. I intend to so conduct the affairs of this office as to merit the approval and good will of all members and I intend to treat every man honestly, fairly and squarely and in return I ask that every man give me the same treatment.

I will defend the Order in every way, to the best of my ability, from any attacks that may be made upon it. This is said kindly but I mean every word of it. The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo was built upon the foundation of goodfellowship among the men engaged in a particular line of business and has for its motto, "Health, Happiness and Long Life," and there is no room anywhere in Hoo-Hoo for anything but the kindest of fraternal feeling and it is this spirit I intend to adopt and follow.

Hoo-Hoo is all right in every way and is going right ahead to the splendid success it deserves. It is going to be an Order that every lumberman and every representative of the allied industries will be proud of and consider it an honor to be a member of. We want all representative lumbermen and all representatives of the allied industries with us and we want them with us in that fraternal goodfellowship that will make Hoo-Hoo one happy family.

The above is written without the knowledge or consent of any member of the Supreme Nine. It covers my personal opinion only and I alone am responsible.

Fraternally,
W. M. STEPHENSON.

 THE OPEN DOOR

THE Scrivenoter extends a most hearty invitation to all members of the order to visit the Scrivenoter's office when in St. Louis, and assures them a cordial welcome.

Come in and see us and see for yourself just how the business of the Order is conducted.

Ask all the questions you wish and we will, to the best of our ability, endeavor to satisfy you fully.

Make this office your headquarters while in St. Louis and have your mail addressed in our care. This is your office and you should use it.

A complete file of the lumber trade journals is kept in this office for the information of visiting members.

Come in and get acquainted.

THE BULLETIN is mailed on the 9th day of each month and in order to do this we are compelled to close our copy on the 5th of each month. Please take note of this and get your news item in before the 5th of each month so that we can avoid delay.

* * *

Every member should read carefully, each month, "THE PRACTICAL SIDE." This refers to unemployed members and we can show our best nature and our fraternal spirit by not only reading this page, but by doing all in our power to place our brother in line for a position.

EVERY HOO-HOO who employs MEN can find the MAN he is looking for through the columns of THE BULLETIN.

If you want a man for any position, advise the Scrivenoter and he will put you in touch with the man you want.

Remember, it is your duty as a loyal Hoo-Hoo to assist a worthy brother to employment.

THE MAILING LIST

Our mailing list is made up from latest data at hand and is corrected monthly.

Each member is requested to report to the Scrivenoter promptly any error in his address, or any change made or contemplated, that THE BULLETIN may reach every member regularly.

 1913 HANDBOOK

THE 1913 Handbook will be issued shortly after the first of the year and is to be sent only to those who make request for it. This is in accordance with the action taken at joint conference of House of Ancients and Supreme Nine, held at Chicago, in November, 1909.

In order to get an idea of how many handbooks to be ordered printed the Scrivenoter requests that all members who desire a copy of the new handbook advise him now.

Remember, that to secure the handbook requires that you write the Scrivenoter requesting that it be sent you. A postal card request is sufficient.

In the 1913 Handbook we want the correct address of every member and we will, about January 1st, send out notices to all members asking them to advise their correct address and it is important that this information be given prompt attention and that return card be sent the Scrivenoter without delay.

No name will appear in the 1913 Handbook unless dues for year 1912 have been paid.

You will want your name and address in this book and you are urged to send in your dues AT ONCE, so there will be no question of your name appearing in handbook.

Get in line now and do not kick after handbook is printed.

 "CLIPPINGS" FROM THE LUMBER JOURNALS

THE following communication from the Supreme Nine of Hoo-Hoo should be carefully read by every member of the Order. It points out the reforms and improvements discussed at the last annual meeting of the Order and points out the way for their accomplishment. The effort of the present administration of Hoo-Hoo to put everything appertaining to the conduct of the Order's affairs on a higher plane should have the earnest support of all lumbermen, whether members of the Order or not. Hoo-Hoo is a lumbermen's Order that has amply justified its existence.—The Southern Lumberman, November 9, 1912.

[The communication referred to is the letter published in THE BULLETIN, October issue addressed to Vicegerent Snarks.]

HOO-HOO

Frank W. Trower, Snark of the Universe, and other members of the Supreme Nine, have issued an important letter to all Vicegerents, urging upon them earnest, faithful and enthusiastic work for the Order. The latter also urges a most rigid enforcement of the laws of Hoo-Hoo, rather than the enactment of new laws. Particular attention is demanded covering the eligibility and character of initiates, and in the conduct of initiations.

The letter also calls attention to the rule against permitting intoxicants to be served at Concatenations or on-the-roof sessions. It urges soliciting the interest of all old members of Hoo-Hoo in Concatenations, and getting the Order again together into enthusiastic and commendable work, which shall tend to build it up into a medium of good fellowship, enthusiasm and advantage to its members.

The new Scrivenoter, W. M. Stephenson of St. Louis, seems to be taking hold of the work of the Order in a forceful way, and if members will thoroughly co-operate with him, Hoo-Hoo should be made an institution with which every lumberman might be proud to be allied.—Hardwood Record, November 10, 1912.

THE PERSONNEL OF HOO-HOO TO BE CAREFULLY LOOKED AFTER

Eligibility of candidates is becoming a matter of much concern in the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, and in conformity with a clause in the report of the committee on constitution and by-laws at the last annual meeting, at Asheville, N. C., Snark of the Universe Frank W. Trower, of San Francisco, Cal., and other officials of the Supreme Nine have sent a letter to each Vicegerent Snark advising them to scrutinize closely each application for membership and exert themselves to elevate and maintain the highest possible standard of personnel in the Order. The clause in the constitution covering the eligibility of candidates permits the entrance of any worthy man properly allied with the lumber business and allied industries, and the letter urges that the membership be confined strictly to lumbermen. Widespread activity in working Concatenations is also urged upon the Vicegerents.—Lumber World Review, November 10, 1912.

TO BUILD UP ORDER

The following is a part of the letter sent out by the Supreme Nine of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo to all Vicegerents.

The new Supreme Nine extends greetings and good wishes to all of the Vicegerents as we enter upon the new Hoo-Hoo year. Many of you, like most of us, are serving our great Order officially for the first time. We of the Supreme Nine strongly realize that the success we all so much hope for this year depends very largely upon the earnest, faithful, enthusiastic work of the Vicegerents. The nature of our order does not require very much administrative machinery, but for that very reason a very large responsibility rests upon the comparatively few officers we have. Let each one of us do his best to put Hoo-Hoo upon a firm and lasting basis.

As we thus enter upon our new duties, we have had placed before us some guiding principles which it is hoped will be faithfully followed during the year. We call your special attention to the closing paragraph of the report of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws at the late annual held at Asheville, N. C., which reads as follows:

"Your committee further recommends that at its earliest convenience the Supreme Nine carefully prepare additional suggestions and instructions to be sent each Vicegerent, urging upon him that greater care be exercised, both as to the character and standing of men initiated and the conduct of Concatenations, to the end that the personnel of Hoo-Hoo shall be brought to a higher standard, and all of its meetings be invested with greater decorum and dignity."—Packages, November, 1912.

HOO-HOO HOUSE AT SAN FRANCISCO

The proposal that Hoo-Hoo should become a factor at the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915 by maintaining a "House of Hoo-Hoo" during the fair was made shortly after San Francisco was fixed upon as the place for holding the Panama celebration. Now definite plans are under way and in the hands of men who will see them through.

Hoo-Hoo is gaining ground and the maintenance of headquarters at San Francisco will serve to revive the interest of many lumbermen who have not yet awakened to the recent changes in the Order.

The San Francisco exposition is going to break all sorts of records. It could not be given in San Francisco and fail. So there could be no better place and time for some promotion work by men who believe in Hoo-Hoo and who appreciate the need of the fraternity and the good it can do. And every loyal member, wherever situated, should lend a hand, that the credit for the breaking of all records for Hoo-Hoo hospitality may go to the Order as a whole.—American Lumberman, November 23, 1912.

UPBUILDING HOO-HOO

Mr. W. M. Stephenson, the newly elected Supreme Scrivenor of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, has started his administration of the affairs of the famous organization in a most meritorious manner and one that will unquestionably meet with the hearty approval and co-operation of the earnest members throughout the world. "Southwest" has had some very interesting letters from Mr. Stephenson in the past month requesting the co-operation of this paper and its officials in the work of creating additional interest in Hoo-Hoo in the Southwestern territory, and the advice and assistance of all good members of the Order are earnestly solicited by Mr. Stephenson.

A letter has also been received from the Supreme Nine relative to the co-operation that Hoo-Hoo needs on the part of the lumber journals of the country in the boosting of Hoo-Hoo affairs. The letter is signed by all members of the Supreme Nine and solicits the assistance of all trade journal editors in exploiting matters of interest to the Order through the lumber territories of the world. That the trade journals will all be as glad to assist in the manner suggested, there can be no doubt, and "Southwest" has expressed its desire to do everything in its power to facilitate the work of the new Supreme Scrivenor and assist him in making his administration great in the annals of Hoo-Hoo and continue to build up the Order as a power in the lumber world. As Mr. J. A. Baird expressed it in saying goodbye to the office of Scrivenor, which he held so long, Hoo-Hoo has lived too long and served too faithfully to be permitted to lose its hold on the minds and hearts of the men in its lumber industry and associated industries. "Southwest" hopes to see Mr. Stephenson work hard and produce good fruit and will earnestly endeavor to assist him in anything that he may attempt.—Southwest, November, 1912.

The following letter has been sent to all the district officers of Hoo-Hoo and will be of interest to members of that Order throughout the West. The high standards relative to future membership will be readily recognized as necessary to the future of Hoo-Hoo and every member should exert his strongest endeavors to contribute to the upbuilding of the Order.

The Supreme Nine respectfully requests all members to give their hearty support to their Vicegerent Snark in carrying out the recommendations made at the last annual meeting.—Pioneer Western Lumberman, November 1, 1912.

[Letter referred to is the letter published in the October BULLETIN from the Supreme Nine to Vicegerent Snarks.]

OBEY THAT HOO-HOO IMPULSE

Whatever's due to Hoo-Hoo pay it, for the good old concatenated order of great feline darkness is going to be well worth while this next year. The dues for 1913 amount to only $1.65, and the members not having a 1912 card will receive the 1913 credentials of membership upon sending a check for $3.30 to W. M. Stephenson, the Scrivenor, Wright building, St. Louis, Missouri.

Along this line Mr. Stephenson, the new Supreme Scrivenor, and Jim Baird, the retiring Scrivenor, have some excellent suggestions. In an open letter to Hoo-Hoo they say:

"We want to keep up our Concatenation to the standard where they will deserve and receive the enthusiastic interest and support of the most representative men in the trade. This does not mean that our meetings must be mollycoddle affairs. Hoo-Hoo are healthy, red-blooded men and we can enjoy plenty of wholesome, clean fun, kittenish pranks and play of the wits without giving offense to any member present.

"The rule against permitting intoxicants to be served at a Concatenation or on-the-roof session has in many communities toned up our gatherings to a large degree. This clause of the constitution was adopted several years ago and has been thoroughly discussed and strongly re-indorsed at succeeding annuals until this policy is now accepted as a permanent law of Hoo-Hoo, just as it is of most of the other high-class fraternities. Many of those who first opposed this legislation have come to realize its benefit and are willing to sacrifice their personal desires for the good of the Order. There are still some members who would prefer to leave this matter to the option of the local Vicegerent. But as officers of the Order, it is our plain duty to faithfully observe the letter and spirit of our constitution and by-laws regarding this subject as well as others. Under no circumstances must you permit an intoxicated man to be initiated or any member under the perceptible influence of liquor to be admitted to a Concatenation.

"The officers of the Order want to make the Order a great success and want the hearty co-operation of every individual member to that end, and at all times welcome suggestions for the good of the Order. The possibilities of the good of the Order to the lumber industry are unlimited and if all will get together on that basis then will it be possible for the Order to be the grand success its founders intended. The following quotation covers the situation in a nut-shell: 'A man can keep up his own batting average and make the world a little more cheerful by laying down an occasional sacrifice hit.'—Pacific Lumber Trade Journal, November, 1912.

Below is printed copy of letter Scrivenoter has written to all who responded to fourth call and have so far failed to respond to fifth call.

Dear Brother—You responded to the fourth call of the Death Emergency Fund but so far you have failed to respond to the fifth call. This call was made October 1, 1912.

We are now working under the 5th call and unless you respond to this call you will not be in line to share in the benefits of this fund.

I take it that your failure to remit to cover fifth call has been an oversight on your part, and, therefore, take the liberty of calling this to your attention. This Death Emergency Fund is doing good work and every member of Hoo-Hoo should share in this. Kindly send me your check for $2.00 to cover fifth call. You can, if you desire, remit to cover future calls and you will be given proper credit and cards mailed you to cover.

With kindest personal regards and wishing you Health, Happiness and Long Life, I am,

Fraternally yours,

W. M. STEPHENSON,

Scrivenoter.

This letter was sent, under two-cent postage, so that all who responded to the fourth call and had not responded to the fifth call would know that they had no claim on the Death Benefit Fund unless they responded to the fifth call and your Scrivenoter trusts that all who responded to fourth call and have yet not responded to fifth call will do so AT ONCE.

"I am enclosing check herewith for fifth call to the Death Emergency Fund. It seems to me that this feature is unique with Hoo-Hoo inasmuch as I cannot remember another organization that has an emergency benefit that is paid quickly enough to be of use in an emergency. I cannot but feel that if all other virtues of Hoo-Hoo were removed, it would still continue to exist honorably on the strength of the Death Emergency Fund alone."—Stanley S. Sheip (20204), Mobile, Ala.

"I have very much pleasure in contributing to Death Emergency Fund as we never know whose turn next and I am sure that a little ready cash coming at such a time is welcome. I think every Brother should support this fund, if only for the sake of the other fellow."—Robert Hamlin, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Christmas Greetings

LET those love now
Who never loved before;
Let those who always loved
Now Love the more."

O, God, we thank Thee for Christmas and what it means—peace on earth and good will toward men.

We are thankful that at this time of the year our judgments are gentler, our good impulses are freer and our will to make other people happy is stronger.

May all bitterness and whatever is mean and unkind have no place among us.

Open our eyes today to find our fellow beings who may be in need. Let us remember the poor.

Let this be a day wherein all quarrels may be adjourned, all grudges forgotten; and, if there be any angers or other evil heats in us toward any human being, let them today be quenched in love.

Make this a day that we shall remember with a smile in days to come, because it was so full of heart's sunshine and because hands were joined in sincerity and fraternal affection.

We wish all a Merry and Happy Christmas.

Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Carroll L. Beck (13682), Bloomington, Ind., Vicegerent Snark for Southern Indiana, made a change in his business effective December 1st. Brother Beck has been representing Curtis Door and Sash Co., and leaves them to become sales manager of Showers Bros. Co., Bloomington, Ind. Brother Beck writes:

"It is with a good deal of regret that I give up my very pleasant relations with the Curtis Door and Sash Co., and with the Lumber Business in general. In the past ten years I have come pretty generally to the conclusion that the Lumber Trade contains in its make up the 'Salt of the Earth,' a lot of the finest of fellows.

"The Showers Bros. Co. are manufacturers of furniture, the factory site is the Exact Center of Population of the United States. The business was established in 1868, and has gradually increased until at the present time they have the most modern, well-equipped and largest factory of the kind in the United States. They are building an enormous addition to the plant this year, which will be turning out goods by April or May, and this addition will almost double their present output, and incidentally will give the writer plenty of exercise in finding the best market for the increased output."

Past Snark C. D. Rourke (421), Urbana, Ill., who has been ill for some time, is improving rapidly and we trust will soon be entirely restored to good health. The Scrivenoter has received one of Past Snark Rourke's always cheerful letters and is indeed pleased to know that Brother Rourke will soon be enjoying good health and THE BULLETIN is sure that every Hoo-Hoo joins us most heartily in extending to Brother Rourke our sincere good wishes for health, happiness and long life.

Brother Campbell K. Sharp (26431), has made a change in business. He has moved from Jackson, Tenn., where he was connected with the Jackson Lumber Co., and he is now located at West Point, Ark., where he is general manager and one-third partner of the Star Lumber and Transportation Co., of West Point, Ark. We understand that they will soon be in the market and that they are going to make a specialty of quartered oak fitches.

THE BULLETIN extends to Brother John H. Kirby (7778), of Houston, Texas, congratulations and best wishes on his election to membership of the House of Representatives of the State of Texas.

Brother Kirby is known to all lumbermen as the head of the Kirby Lumber Co. of Houston, Texas. He has been prominent for several years in Democratic politics in the State and has been mentioned from time to time as a probable candidate for Governor. He will advocate the passage of several measures by the Legislature, each having for its purpose the advancement of the business and industrial interests of Texas. It is expected that Mr. Kirby's influence in the matter of bringing about the enactment of certain laws which will be of benefit to the business interests of the State will be strongly felt.

We wish him success, Health, Happiness and Long Life.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Vicegerent Snark Wm. F. Ebbing, of the Eastern District of Missouri, has sent out notice of dinner and Concatenation to be held at the Mercantile club, Seventh and Locust streets, St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday, December 14th, 1912. Dinner will be at 6:30 p. m., and Concatenation will follow the dinner.

Brother Ebbing is most anxious to make this dinner and Concatenation a great success in every way, and urges all members to attend. Brother Ebbing has a good class in prospect and everyone will have a good time.

As announced in the November BULLETIN this will be a get-together Concatenation for the St. Louis Hoo-Hoo and will afford your Scrivenoter a chance to get acquainted with you.

At this Concatenation a new Vicegerent Snark will be selected to succeed Brother Ebbing. Give this your earnest thought; let us select the right man and then let us all get in behind him and give him all the support and assistance in our power.

Vicegerent Snark F. T. Peitch of Northeastern Ohio, will hold a Concatenation at Cleveland, Ohio, during the meeting of the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber Dealers and the Union Association of Lumber and Sash and Door Salesmen, January 21, 1913.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Vicegerent Snark Louis Hector of Western Missouri, will hold a Concatenation at Kansas City, Mo., during the meeting of the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association, January 22-24, 1913, date has not yet been set.

The January BULLETIN will contain notice of many Concatenations to be held during January and February in connection with the different lumber association meetings. Get in touch with your Vicegerent Snark and give him the benefit of your most valuable advice, co-operation and support.

(The Scrivenoter asks that Vicegerent Snarks advise him as far in advance as possible of date on which they expect to hold Concatenation. This to enable us to give the Concatenation publicity through THE BULLETIN and the lumber press and to see that trunk and full supplies are on hand in good shape in plenty of time.)

 WEDDING BELLS

CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

A DELIGHTFULLY varied evening was experienced by the many friends of Brother and Mrs. Jerome H. Sheip, who gathered at their pretty home in Wyncote, Friday evening, October 11, to give enthusiastic impetus to a function which was of great interest to them all. It was the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Sheip. Not the least interesting feature of the affair was the large number of beautiful gifts which were presented to the couple. Mr. Sheip is the well-known Philadelphia lumberman, and notable among the guests were a number of lumbermen, relatives and associates in his many enterprises connected with the lumber business.

Brother Sheip (13431), was Vicegerent Snark for Eastern District of Pennsylvania for years 1905-1906 and was a member of the Supreme Nine for year 1910-1911.

Brother Sheip was most active in making arrangements for the annual meeting held in Atlantic City in 1907.

THE BULLETIN extends to Brother Sheip and Mrs. Sheip congratulations and sincere good wishes for Health, Happiness and Long Life.

(We solicit prompt advice of the marriage of our Brothers, to the end that their fellow members may be advised of the good news through THE BULLETIN.)

THE OFFICIAL HOO-HOO FLAG

This Flag is printed on Red, White and Blue Cloth, and three flags make a set.

Brother Arthur B. Long, vice-president of the Fresno Flume & Lumber Co., with headquarters in Fresno, Cal., and mills at Clovis and Shaver, died at his home in Fresno November 9, after an illness of several months. Services under the auspices of the Christian Science Church were held. He was an Elk and a member of the Sunnyside Country Club and the Sequoia Club of Fresno. The remains were cremated in Oakland.

Brother Long was born at Grand Rapids, Mich., on March 10, 1876, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Fresno, California, on September 1, 1906.

JAY L. PECK (No. 247)

1850—1912

Brother Jay L. Peck died at his home, Indianapolis, Ind., on November 7, 1912, from pleuro-pneumonia. Brother Peck was for many years Secretary-Treasurer of the Central Association Lumber and Sash and Door Salesmen, also of the National Association Lumber and Sash and Door Salesmen. In the spring of 1890 Brother Peck moved his home to Indianapolis, Indiana, and there engaged in the wholesale commission business, selling a full line of Northern and Southern stock, and he continued this work practically up until the time of his death.

Brother Peck was born in Bennington, N. Y., on September 28, 1850, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Camden, Ark., on January 23, 1893.

IMMINENT DISTRESS FUND

ITS HISTORY FROM ESTABLISHMENT AND FULL STATEMENT OF HOW FUND HAS BEEN HANDLED

CALL IS HEREBY MADE UPON ALL MEMBERS OF THE ORDER ASKING THAT THEY SEND THE SCRIVENOTER A CHRISTMAS OFFERING FOR THE IMMINENT DISTRESS FUND. THIS IS A PURELY VOLUNTARY OFFERING AND THERE IS NO OBLIGATION UPON ANY MEMBER TO RESPOND UNLESS HE BELIEVES IN THE GOOD WORK THAT THIS FUND COVERS.

The Scrivenoter takes the liberty of printing extracts from Snark Rourke's Annual address at the Portland Annual of 1905, also extracts from remarks made at that Annual by Brothers R. D. Inman and M. C. Banfield in regard to this fund.

The letter printed below from Brother James H. Baird explains fully how this fund has been handled. We also publish statement showing receipts and disbursements of this fund in full. This statement shows a book balance of $3,199.85 to the credit of this fund September 6, 1912. If this balance was intact this call would not be necessary. We have several cases now that should be given attention and money is needed for this purpose and I sincerely trust and hope that all members will make a liberal Christmas offering to this fund.

I mind me of what Jeanie Deans, the poor Highland lass in Scott's "Heart of Midlothian," said to Queen Elizabeth, to present to whom in London, her pitiful petition she had walked from the braes of Balquhiddier: "An' when the hour of trouble comes, as comes it does to maist of us; and when the hour of death comes, as comes it does to all of us, it is not what we ha' done for oursel's, but what we ha' done for ithers that we think on maist pleasantly."

No disbursements are made from this fund without the approval of the Snark, Senior Hoo-Hoo and Scrivenoter.

Now, altogether, in the true Hoo-Hoo spirit, and let us make this Christmas offering one that we will not only be proud of but an offering that will show our true love for our brother in need.

Fraternally,

W. M. STEPHENSON,

Scrivenoter.

Extract From Snark Rourke's Address at Portland Annual, 1905

There is another feature of Hoo-Hoo work to which I desire briefly to allude—lest we forget, lest we forget. Our Imminent Distress Fund is pitifully small, and the limitations necessarily thrown around it have no doubt at times seemed harsh. The object of this fund and its limitations are not, I believe, fully understood by our membership at large. Its object is to assist our living members from whom all other source of assistance is gone—not as a burial fund or to help some one travel from one end of the country to the other in search of a position, as some have seemed to think. The fund is maintained wholly by voluntary contributions and its limitations must of necessity always be narrow. Despite these limitations, however, I am impressed that a vast amount of good has been done where but for our fund nothing would have been done. There comes to me the pitiful wail of distress from a deserted wife around whose skirts clung three little ones. Her husband, a Hoo-Hoo once, but not so now, was undeserving 'tis true, but a little assistance from our Distress Fund, recommended by a resident member who knew all the facts helped momentarily to dry the good woman's tears and enabled her to join her relatives, too poor to pay her fare, but willing to share with her little store in support of life, until the little boys in time will become wage earners. An afflicted brother clinging desperately to life—and suffering from that dread disease that sometimes moves with laggard steps and sometimes with a giant's stride, but whether swift or slow is always sure and certain—passed into the great beyond calling on God to bless Hoo-Hoo for the comfort it had given. Another brother stricken with a terrible malady, the only remedy for which was the surgeon's knife and a lengthy stay in a hospital under the care of high-priced specialists, was helped from the fund. A long illness had exhausted his resources. The local physicians had given up the case. Death stared him in the face. The surgeons said there was but one chance in a hundred. Would Hoo-Hoo help him try that last desperate chance—throw out a life line to a brother sinking for the third time? His piteous appeal for aid met with a prompt response. He went to the hospital and the operation was performed. Weeks of agony followed—and then came a consultation of eminent physicians whose verdict must have sounded to the sufferer like clods falling on a coffin. The operation had been a failure. Another operation might save him—otherwise it was a question of only a few days until the end. The money was all gone, what was to be done? Another appeal was made to Hoo-Hoo and once again the response came quick. Before it was through with, five severe operations were performed and five times Hoo-Hoo paid the bill. And now comes the best part of the story. The man, saved almost as by a miracle, got well, went to work and paid back every dollar advanced by Hoo-Hoo, with interest at six per cent. I could go on naming other instances, but these suffice. The fund could be increased and its opportunities for doing good enlarged, if only all our members who are perfectly willing to contribute the little 99 cents would always keep it in mind to do so. I know of no way in which the matter can be presented to our members more strongly than has been done. Extra dues of 33 cents or 66 cents have been suggested, but in my judgment it is better to continue on a purely voluntary basis, believing that in time most of our members will come to remember to make contribution to the fund when their dues are paid. Sentiment is an important factor in all orders, and this is true of every man who is anything more than "a brother to the ox." Reason is the guide that shows the way—sentiment is the sunshine on the path without which our journey would be a cold and barren trail. Life becomes a vulgar thing when bereft of sentiment. What more worthy or beautiful than that which is the fundamental sentiment of Hoo-Hoo, of giving to a brother in "actual distress."

MR. INMAN—I believe heartily in providing a fund, for the benefit of our members who are unfortunate, and who may need help. Sometimes, possibly, we might be imposed upon a little, but all organizations have such a fund. Sometimes we might be imposed upon, but these things come along in the life of every man. There is no question but that if this organization had a fund of $8,000 or $10,000 it would be one of the best advertisements for the organization. I have always been in favor of that. I would be in favor of making the dues twice ninety-nine cents a year, setting apart one-half of it for a fund of that kind. As one gentleman said, there are few men in Hoo-Hoo that need it, but we never know where adversity is going to strike. When we find a family destitute our hearts lead us to take care of them until they can help themselves. Once in a while some sharp adventurer may get in on us. But what is the difference if they do? They get in on us individually once in a while anyway. (Laughter) Even if we do get a little out of that, we only get a little human nature; and I would rather half a dozen sharps would get into me than to feel that I had turned down one deserving person. I hope this matter will not be passed over without full consideration.—(Applause.)

MR. BANFIELD—Let it be understood that we make a Christmas offering for the benefit of the Distress Fund of Hoo-Hoo and let Mr. Baird send every one a notice to that effect—say a Christmas offering of ninety-nine cents. You could appoint a committee to look after it, and the applications for assistance could come from the Snarks of the different jurisdictions. They could be held responsible and would know who is deserving. A fund contributed in that way would not be an assessment, and coming at Christmas time, it would be very opportune. I suggest that this ninety-nine cents offering be given every year, by every Hoo-Hoo.

Nashville, Tenn., November 1, 1912.

Mr. W. M. Stephenson, St. Louis, Mo.:

Dear Billy—I have yours of October 24 asking that I write for THE BULLETIN a full history of the Imminent Distress Fund, with full statement of how this fund has been handled. I note further that you desire this to meet certain criticisms that have been made of the way this fund has been handled.

I never heard a word of criticism along this line in my life, at an annual meeting or elsewhere, and this fund, as you know, has been often discussed at our annual meetings.

I am only too glad to comply with your request. It is a pleasant thing for me to write of, believing, as I do, that this fund has done a mighty good work, and has proved a real and effective help to many good men and women.

In the beginning there was no Distress Fund. I suggested the thing and gave it the two names under which it has been operated. All my ideas, however, grew out of the appropriation at the first few annual meetings of Hoo-Hoo of $99.99, to be put into the hands of the Snark, to be used at his discretion in relieving emergent distress.

This annual appropriation of $99.99 worked all right as far as it went, but I suppose it was found not to go very far. At any rate, the practice grew up of sending our special calls for contributions for relief of specific cases of distress. All this was before my time as Scrivenoter, and I have only a general knowledge of it.

I did not think much of calls for specific cases. I thought the arrangement likely to be abused; our members be annoyed by numerous requests for small donations; that the money would become available too slowly for the sort of cases we were most called upon to take care of; and that the expense of handling the contributions would be disproportionately high. Out of such ideas grew the suggestion of the establishment of a more permanent fund, to be recruited as needed by calls for contributions. This suggestion was made first to the Supreme Nine, but got to the Annual Meeting in due time and was approved.

As a matter of fact, I think that before the matter had ever got up to an annual meeting, we had gone ahead and got out a call and made several disbursements. As I recall it this was in the year preceding the annual meeting at Denver in 1899.

At any rate, I find that at Denver annual meeting I reported receipts and disbursements to the "Permanent Fund for Relief," which was the name originally suggested, but which later was changed to "Imminent Distress Fund."

This fund seems never to have been made any part of the Constitution and By-Laws. If it was, it was stricken out in some later revision, as I can find no reference to the matter whatever in the present Constitution and By-Laws. My recollection is that from the beginning the fund was established as an adjunct to the general work of Hoo-Hoo, to be handled as a purely administrative matter. I do know, however, that something was said or done whereby the Snark and the Scrivenoter had the disbursement of this fund, to pay it out after investigation as to worth and need of the applicant. At any rate this is the way the thing has been handled. No disbursement was ever made that did not have the approval of the Snark.

It was early agreed that so far as possible the money would be paid out, not as donations, but as loans, notes to bear interest and to be renewed in whole or part, as circumstances might govern. Whenever one of these notes was paid in whole or part, or whenever any interest was paid, the money went back into the fund.

I do not think any special or formal call for contributions to this fund was ever sent out as a separate and distinct proposition. I think all calls were sent out with dues notices, most often, as I remember. As a sort of postscript or reminder tacked on to dues notice. What I do know is that not a cent for postage, stationery, clerical work, or anything else was ever charged against this fund. In the beginning I think the calls sent out specified no amount, merely suggesting that anything from nine cents up would be welcome.

We ran along on this basis and got in enough money each year to take care of approved applications for that year—all as reported at each annual meeting. Disbursements were always held down to a small sum, very seldom exceeding $100.00 to any one man, and very seldom was even $100.00 given to a man at any one time. In three or four cases successive disbursements were made to the same man. This was in the case of illness, and the money went to pay hospital and doctor bills.

The biggest disbursement ever made to any one man was in the case of the Minnesota man—the man who underwent several successive surgical operations. We continued to back this man from the Distress Fund when his doctors gave little hope of his recovery. But he did finally recover, went to his old job and repaid every cent of the several hundred dollars he had borrowed, with interest. If this fund never did anything else but to tide this man over a terrible ordeal, its record would be a sufficient recompense to every man who contributed to it.

The Distress Fund received a great boost at the Portland annual meeting (1905), partly as result of what Snark Rourke said in his annual address, but more as result of two speeches made by Brothers R. D. Inman and M. C. Banfield during discussion on the floor.

Brother Banfield closed this discussion by offering a resolution which was adopted, instructing the Scrivenoter to get out in December following, about Christmas time, a call to every member, suggesting a contribution of ninety-nine cents.

This was done and we got in over five thousand dollars. This fixed the Imminent Distress Fund from that day to this. No further calls have ever been necessary.

As to how this fund has been handled. The cash book you are using was made to order, and is ruled to fit the business. It is identical with the several cash books previously used, all of which you have, numbered serially.

The debit side of this cash book is ruled for five columns—for "Dues," "Imminent Distress Fund," "Merchandise," "Concatenations" and "Sundries" in the order named, these words being printed at the head of the respective columns. In the "I. D. F." column (to use its exact title as it appears on the cash book), has been entered every contribution that has ever been made to the fund, whether purposely made or otherwise. There has been put into this column all the little "overs" remitted on dues, merchandise, or in any other connection, where the "over" was too small to refund to remitter.

This "I. D. F." column was posted to the Imminent Distress Fund account on the ledger just the same as the "Dues" column, "Merchandise" column and "Concatenation" column.

The money was deposited in bank along with that received from all other sources and was checked on by the regular voucher check of the Order, the Voucher for each disbursement made from this fund being approved by both the Snark and the Senior Hoo-Hoo, just as all other disbursements.

At every annual meeting since this fund was started, receipts and disbursements have been reported—a part and parcel of the Scrivenoter's financial report, which has not only been printed in full in THE BULLETIN, but in practically all the lumber papers, and of which reports hundreds of printed copies have been distributed to the members present at the meeting. These receipts and disbursements have always been audited, just as have all other receipts and disbursements.

At every annual meeting, whatever balance there was to this Distress Fund account was reported as a part and parcel of the general balance. On several occasions, however, either in my printed report or verbally, I called attention to the fact that a portion of this general balance belonged to the Distress Fund, leaving the other as a "free balance to the general fund," as I find several times I expressed it.

At San Francisco I attempted to bring out this fact very clearly, mainly for the reason that I anticipated new legislation at that meeting, that would, in my judgment, increase the expense of Hoo-Hoo between five and six thousand dollars a year, without increasing its revenues.

In attempting to set forth at the San Francisco meeting just what part of the balance there reported belonged to the Distress Fund, I either made an error, or one occurred in printing the report in THE BULLETIN. According to the report as published in THE BULLETIN, the total balance reported at San Francisco was $10,083.79, which is correct, but the statement that $3,021.15 of this belonged to the Distress Fund, leaving a "free balance" of $7,101.14, is incorrect. The figures should have been $3,982.65 and $6,101.14, respectively.

The legislation anticipated at the San Francisco meeting was adopted with result that at the next annual meeting—that on the City of Cleveland (1911)—the total balance on hand was down close to that to the credit of the Distress Fund.

A year later, or rather nine months later, at Asheville, the total balance on hand was less than the balance to credit of the Distress Fund.

I suggest, however, that no member need feel any particular concern on this score. When the 9th of September has rolled around and the dues notices of Hoo-Hoo have gone out, the money has always come in with a rush. I am pleased to note that you say it has been no different this year. When you get through with this rush of dues money, you will find Concatenations coming along in the same old way they have come for nearly twenty years, and due to the same old sort of work by the same old sort of men appointed as Vicegerents to carry on the work.

With the heavy salary and traveling expenses legislated at San Francisco cut off, you will have all the money you need to meet every legitimate purpose, and the record of Hoo-Hoo will remain unbroken—of having lived longer and accomplished more or less money than any similar organization that ever existed.

To a certain extent the Death Emergency Fund, which as you know, is a wholly separate and distinct proposition with a set of books of its own, has taken care of cases that would otherwise come against the Distress Fund. The Death Emergency Fund can never wholly take the place of the Distress Fund, of course, but it has undoubtedly operated to reduce the number of applications for relief from the latter.

If the above does not cover every point, I will be glad to have you drop me a line, or I will be mighty glad to reply to any criticism that may be made by any member who will address a communication to THE BULLETIN.

In the meantime it might not be a bad idea to append to this communication a statement of this Distress Fund showing receipts and disbursements for each year, and the balance at end of each year.

Yours very truly,
J. H. BAIRD (No. 408).

IMPORTANT

THE Scrivenoter has been advised that a few men claiming to be members of the Order are going about soliciting aid in the shape of loans from our members. The Supreme Nine requests members of the Order that if anyone, personally unknown to them, applies to them for aid, claiming that he is a member of the Order, and asking for aid on account of such membership, that the member immediately take the matter up by wire with the Scrivenoter, giving as full particulars as possible and always giving number claimed by party who is asking for aid. The Scrivenoter will, if the party is entitled to aid on account of membership in the Order, advise you promptly what action to take. The Order has an Imminent Distress Fund for this purpose. If the applicant is worthy and entitled to assistance, it will be given promptly. Please bear this in mind and assist the Supreme Nine all in your power to stop this practice.

The Scrivenoter hereby notifies all members to be on their guard in extending aid to No. 5667. This man has recently been soliciting aid in different sections of the country, claiming to be a member of the Order. He was expelled from Hoo-Hoo in 1908. If this man applies to any Hoo-Hoo for assistance, please advise the Scrivenoter by wire immediately.

A man representing himself to be C. G. Hascall (12859), of St. Louis, Mo., applied to Vicegerent Snark J. H. Ehrmanntraut, of Spokane, Wash., for assistance. Brother Ehrmanntraut took matter up with the Scrivenoter and was advised that the man was an imposter, as Brother Hascall was in St. Louis. The Scrivenoter requested Vicegerent Snark Ehrmanntraut to have party arrested and prosecuted to full extent of the law for misrepresentation and securing money under false pretense. A warrant has been issued for this imposter, and we hope that he will be apprehended before long. The Scrivenoter is of the opinion, from description of this man, that this is the same person who in different sections of the country has represented himself to be different men who are members of the Order and has secured money on his false representation to the embarrassment of not only the men whom he misrepresented but to the Order itself.

This party has used following names in the past: H. L. McCormick, W. H. Matthias, C. G. Hascall, L. H. Haskins and perhaps others of whom the Scrivenoter has not been advised. We want to catch this man and want to publish his photograph so that all members can be fully protected. As above stated, the Order has an Imminent Distress Fund to take care of worthy cases, and we do not want our members imposed upon. In case you are approached by this party, please wire J. H. Ehrmanntraut, Spokane, Wash., also the Scrivenoter, as the Order intends to see that he is arrested and prosecuted.

A "DON'T" AND A "DO"

Don't say unkind things because they sound clever.
Do one kind thing, at least, to somebody every day.

Why not ask the Order of Black Cats to take care of all the cats? It is just as reasonable as to ask the Order of Elks to take care of the wild elks. Look at the matter from a national standpoint.—The Jolly Elk (St. Paul, Minn.).

National Federation of Retail Merchants

NEARLY four hundred representatives from all parts of the United States and representing every line of retail business were present at the first session of the first annual convention of the National Federation of Retail Merchants, which opened for three days at the Planters Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., Tuesday morning, November 19, 1912.

The main object of the federation is to enlarge and solidify the retail merchants' business, particularly the business of the "small men."

President Martin J. Maloney, of Detroit, Mich.; Secretary J. R. Moorehead, of Lexington, Mo., and Treasurer Arthur L. Holmes, of Detroit, Mich., presented their annual reports, which covered fully the work of the association for the past year.

The following addresses were delivered during the meeting: "Rural and Urban Development," Hon. L. C. Boyle, ex-Attorney General of Kansas, of Kansas City, Mo. Mr. Boyle also touched on the cases that the government is now trying against the different retail lumber dealers' associations.

"The Retail Dealer—the Probable Effect of the New Parcel-Post Law on His Business," John W. Barry, of Cedar Falls, Iowa.

"Parcel Post," Mr. Saunders Norvell, St. Louis, Mo.

"The Effect of Bulk Sales Legislation on the Retailer and Community," Mr. J. Black, St. Louis, Mo.

"The Sherman Anti-Trust Law as a Menace to the Retail Dealer," Mr. F. H. Freericks, Cincinnati, Ohio.

"The Future of the Retailer and the Small Town," Mr. Elmer C. Hole, American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill.

"The Retail Merchant and the Country Newspaper," Mr. W. H. Miller, of Ottawa, Ill.

"The Relation of the Trade Press to the Dealer," Mr. Roy T. Soule, of New York, N. Y.

"Rural Community, Co-operation and Improvement," Mr. B. F. Biliter, Huntington, Ind., and Mr. R. V. Holland, Dallas, Texas.

"Retail Price Regulation a Curb to Restraint of Trade and Unfair Competition," Mr. W. H. Ingersoll, New York, N. Y.

"Retail Merchants' Need of an Honest Advertising Law—How It Could Be Secured and Enforced," Mr. H. D. Robbins.

"Greetings, Advice and Good Wishes From Canada," Mr. E. M. Trowern, of Toronto, Ont., Secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

"The Retailer and the Traveling Man," Mr. W. D. Murphy, Terre Haute, Ind.

The Committee on Resolutions reported resolutions on the Sherman anti-trust law, an honest advertising law, parcel post, Oldfield bill, appreciation of the founder of the federation, Arthur L. Holmes, of the committee's, the Press, the St. Louis Sales Managers' Association, the speakers, the hotel and the federation's officers, all of which was adopted.

The following Hoo-Hoo were in attendance: 293, 363, 485, 1894, 2092, 2676, 5575, 8677, 8793, 9967, 10013, 10263, 12140, 14137, 14702, 16827, 23678, 23741, 23944, 26298.

THE BULLETIN wishes to bring the National Federation of Retail Merchants to the attention of all Hoo-Hoo who are retail lumbermen and suggests that they write Mr. J. R. Moorehead, Secretary, Lexington, Mo., for copy of proceedings of this convention. We feel sure that you will enjoy and profit by reading these proceedings and that you will realize the importance of giving this association your most hearty support.

NOTES & COMMENTS

IF YOU don't know what to buy for Christmas gifts, it is not the fault of the December magazines. They came out weeks ago, heavy with advertisements and brimming with the good cheer stored up ever since the dog days.

Christmas stories, poems and special articles must need be written a long way ahead in order that the magazines may come out in time to catch the advertisers who wish to bring their wares to the notice of the early-bird shoppers. It must be a hard job to write of snow flakes and sleigh bells while the mercury is trying to spill out at the top of the tube. Somebody has said that writing is not so much a matter of inspiration as of perspiration, and no doubt many authors of Christmas magazine stories could testify to the truth of this. In the first place, the theme of such stories has been threadbare these many years. As early as July, the gentle reader, if challenged to it, could forecast the contents of most of the December magazines. A perfectly safe midsummer bet is that in one or more of the holiday publications there will be a poem about "Noel." Noel is one of the stand-bys—as much a part of a Christmas outfit as mistletoe or holly. It is proper for a poet to say Noel instead of Christmas when writing of the Saviour's birthday. Noel is sometimes used also in the sense of a Christmas carol, the word being a contraction of nouvelles (tidings) and in old English written nowells. One of the old-time Christmas carols ran thus:

A child this day is born,
A child of high renown,
Most worthy of a sceptre,
A sceptre and a crown.
Nowells, nowells, nowells!
Sing all we may,
Because that Christ the King
Was born this blessed day.

It will be seen that in this carol, the word nowells is used as a shout of joy. Although noel traces back to the Latin "natal" (to be born), the word in its present form is more directly allied to French. And so, notwithstanding noel may be found in that inspiring book, Webster's Unabridged, the poets always, in fancy, transport themselves to France when bursting into a Noel poem. Thus we have in one of the December magazines this year the following:

A FACE AT NOEL

In my own Provence (how well I remember!),
When we all were sat at the Christmas feast,
Warm light on faces of greatest and least,
There would come a long cry outside the door,
Keen as the wind of the bleak December:
"Give to us poor from your Yule-log's store!"

In my own Provence (how well I remember!)
There was one who, smiling, would rise from her seat,
And, heaping a platter with bread and meat,
With figs and fugasso, would open the door,
While in blew the wind of the bleak December,
And snow came sifting along the floor.

In my own Provence (how well I remember!)
Those at the door I never once saw—
They were God's poor, to be held in awe!
But the angel-face my Mother wore,
Fronting the night and the bleak December,
Her face—how it grows on me more and more!

It isn't much of a poem; from a literary standpoint it is not up to the usual standard of the one who wrote it, which really is a high standard. But the scene is laid in the right place, according to magazine ideals—the figs and "fugasso" (whatever that is) lend a sort of foreign touch to the whole and doubtless they proved very acceptable to the poor folks, shivering out there in the cold, cold, wind. And we must not expect too much of a poet who probably was writing somewhere in New Jersey last August, maybe with mosquitoes buzzing all about.

Provence, in southeastern France, is supposed to be a very romantic spot. It was the first Roman "province" outside of Italy, and its language, Provençal, was the first of the languages derived from the Latin or Roman tongue and afterwards called "romance" languages. Provençal was the medium of the love lyrics of the troubadours from the eleventh to the fifteenth century. And so it came about that a romance meant a love tale told in the popular language, or language of the common people—a romance language as distinguished from the Roman from which it sprang. Provence, then, as you might say, brought romance to the world. Wherefore it is deemed fitting for a poet, in writing of Noel, to drag in something about Provence, even though his footsteps have never strayed outside the United States. Not that the magazine readers demand anything of the sort—the object of it all is to get past the editors!

Editors are Tories—intensely opposed to change. They are used to certain things and are uncomfortable if bereft of them. They feel uneasy, and what's worse, they get suspicious, if they come upon something that runs counter to accepted standards and tradition. A southern story, for instance, would likely be declined if the characters did not go about saying "Yes, Sah" and "No, Sah" every little while. It would be like trying to pass the picket without giving the countersign.

Occasionally, however, a writer succeeds in spite of being original. This is notably true of Mr. Irvin S. Cobb. A Kentuckian by birth, he formed the daring project of picturing Kentucky people as they really are. This audacious scheme was carried out—after Mr. Cobb had made good in other lines of work in New York. For quite a while after taking up his residence in the metropolis, he wrote humorous stuff for a newspaper—that is, it was humorous according to New York newspaper standards; there are some hide-bound rules about that, too, one of them being that the point of the joke must not be drawn too fine. Mr. Cobb says he wrote his first story by accident, that the people liked it and that this was an accident, too. He is clearly wrong. We do not always know whither we are going, but the place we land at is the place we have been headed toward all the time, unbeknownst! After so long a time, Mr. Cobb "arrived" to the extent that he could be a law unto himself. His stories in the Saturday Evening Post made an instantaneous hit with the people. And now he has published two books at a time—another unheard of procedure. "Back Home," is a book of Southern stories and "Cobb's Anatomy" is a humorous dissertation on "tummies," hands and feet, hair, teeth, etc. Speaking of his work, Mr. Cobb said recently:

Nearly all the Southern fiction I had ever read dealt with a certain stage colonel whom every one thinks he knows; and then there was the old nigger who would not leave the place, and the Southern girl, and other set stage properties. I am just as good a Southerner as anyone, and was raised in the blue-grass section, but I had never seen those people.

Instead, the people there in Kentucky and in the South resemble people in any other part of the country which has been long settled.

Next to editors, the most rabid Tories are tourists—those who fare forth strange countries for to see are always strenuous on the point of those countries staying just as they have always been. When we think of a thorough-going conservative, we are likely to picture him as a stay-at-home person, a barnacle fastened to one spot. But this is all a mistake. The true enemy to innovation is the traveler who sets out to view historic lands. This profound truth is set forth in a very interesting article by Samuel McCord Crothers, in November Atlantic Monthly, Mr. Crothers says:

"The moment anyone packs his trunk and puts money in his purse to visit lands old in story, he becomes a hopeless reactionary. He loves the good old ways and he has a curiosity to see the bad old ways that may still be preserved. The American who in his own country is in feverish haste to improve conditions, when he sets foot in Europe becomes the fanatical foe to progress. The Old World, in his judgment, ought to look old. He longs to hear the clatter of wooden shoes. If he had his way, he would have laws enacted forbidding peasant folk to change their ancient costumes. He would preserve every relic of feudalism. He bitterly laments the division of great estates. He is enchanted with thatched cottages which look old and picturesque. He seeks dungeons and instruments of torture, and he frequents scenes of ancient murders and places where bandits once did congregate."

It is not necessary to go abroad in order to become a Tory. See "America first," and you will understand how irritating it is to find electric lights in an old mission in California and a Yale lock on the door. Surely nothing is so prosaic and commonplace as a Yale lock! One might rhapsodize about electricity—"harnessed lightning," etc., etc. But a Yale lock is hopelessly matter-of-fact. Then, too, a cowboy on a bicycle is not an inspiring spectacle—everybody knows that a cowboy should stride a bucking broncho.

Alas, for the Toryism of travelers! Soon it will have nothing to feed on. For the whole face of the earth is undergoing rapid changes, and all the old countries are getting to be woefully up-to-date. Turkish women are discarding their veils, steam launches probably will soon replace the gondolas of Venice; already there is a railroad from Jerusalem to Joppa. And if the programme of Mr. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer of Great Britain, is carried out, most of the big estates in England, will in time be chopped up and market gardens will take the place of deer parks. This is an agonizing thought to the tourists as well as to the English nobility. The plan of taxing the vast estates according to their real value at the present time was the hardest jolt the Tories have had for many a day. But the deer parks must go, even as the happy hunting grounds of the American Indians have passed away. So if you have in mind to globe-trot, do it now, before all the foreign places get to looking just like your home town.

Changes are taking place even in the remote corners of the earth. From Arabia comes the news that electricity will hereafter light the streets through which Aladdin is supposed to have wandered with his magic lamp. Ice-making plants have been set up in a number of towns in Asiatic Turkey. In India and other countries of the Far East the use of the "punkah," or overhead fan, hung from the ceiling and agitated by a "coolie" (in ancient times by a slave), is gradually disappearing. Its place is taken by the electric ceiling fan. One reason for this is that the cost of coolie labor has risen. The time is past when a haughty Oriental monarch could sit on a gold sofa or "divan," or whatever it was they sat on all day with their legs crossed, and have slaves keep him cool with fans made of peacock's feathers, while dancing girls and houris, or something like that, beguiled his fancy. The slaves are transformed into factory hands. The dancing girls have gone into vaudeville and are beguiling Johnnies instead of Sultans. And the electric fan business is flourishing.

It is safe to predict that the time is coming when a traveler in England can get a glass of ice water. Ice is popularly thought to be the last thing an Englishman wants, except in his bath tub in winter time. It has not been so very long ago that the first refrigerator ever seen in England was exhibited in London. It was made in America, land of the ice-water habit. An American newspaper correspondent who was in London at the time, said that the people crowded around the exhibit "as if it had been a two-headed calf."

One of the greatest factors in bringing about the rapid changes that now are taking place in the Old World is the increased facility in the matter of traveling. Difficulty in "getting over the ground" is a great barrier to the acquirement of new ideas and new ways. An English writer reminds us:

It is, in reality, but a short time since the various European countries have enjoyed much opportunity to get acquainted with one another. Railroads, telegraphs and universal traveling have become commonplace so rapidly that we often forget how extremely novel they are. It is hardly more than half a century since England and Germany were farther apart and more strange to each other than England and China now are.

One of our members wants to know the meaning of the Egyptian symbol which appeared at the bottom of the "obituary" page in October issue of The BULLETIN. Also he suggests that some of the more recent members would probably appreciate an explanation of the design on the cover page.

The particular symbol referred to is a combination of the royal asps and the sun, with its spreading rays, the whole carrying with it the suggestion of immortality. As for the border on the front page, the general character of the design is suggestive of the "propylon" or the great gateway erected in front of the temple of Osiris. The Hoo-Hoo emblem at the top of the design is supported on either side by the royal asps; and dividing the date line are the sacred beetles (signifying existence or being) which appear so often on Egyptian architecture. They are represented as covering an egg and supporting the sun, emblematic of transformation and immortality. The pedestals at each side support sepulchral jars. In the jars was sometimes interred the heart of the deceased, and frequently the sacred cat was enclosed in similar jars. The body of the pedestals is decorated with the sacred lotus and buds, symbol of the evolution of the seasons and the return of life where everything had seemed barren or dead.

As is well known, Osiris is the patron saint of Hoo-Hoo, and his teachings of good cheer are epitomized in the Order's motto, "Health, Happiness and Long Life." Osiris was the original apostle of optimism. Centuries before the Hebrew prophet sang, "A merry heart doeth good like medicine but a broken spirit drieth up the bones," Osiris had sought to teach men to "charm their leisure and to forget." It is a great lesson—to charm one's leisure. Any man can get along pretty well as long as he is busy; it is only when he starts out to charm his leisure that he eats and drinks too much or otherwise runs amuck. Leisure is indeed a dangerous thing. The first man made a mess of it.

The propylon or great gateway erected in front of the temple of Osiris was massive in proportion and rich in sculptural designs and inscriptions. From beneath its portals, by reason of its position, the temple in all its glory could be seen. Leading from the portal was the sacred way, bordered on each side by the recumbent sphinx. Once a year, when the earth in its circuit around the sun had reached a certain point in the ecliptic, the rays of the rising sun, cutting across the desert, shone through the great propylon down the avenue of sphinx, into and down through the temple until it lighted up the place of the Most Holy and glittered on the gilded horns of the sacred bull—and the Egyptian New Year had begun.

It will be seen that the temple of Osiris served not only as a place of worship but also as a calendar. The Egyptians knew a good deal about astronomy, but there was one thing they did not know—that the law of nature is change, constant change. The star that is the pole star now was not the pole star when the Pharaohs reigned.

In one form or another, man has always worshiped fixity. He has always fondly dreamed that somewhere, somehow, he will find something that will stay put. Traces of this belief are strewn all over the world.

The Great Pyramid was a giant tomb. It is the mightiest building on earth. Hundreds of thousands of lives were sacrificed in building it; and its founder went to sleep in it believing he had secured an everlasting resting place. And today the Great Pyramid stands empty. An English writer in a recent book says:

"There is no corpse of any slave (huddled into the sand—till the hyena comes to scratch it up) that is not more secure than that proud Pharaoh."

The Great Pyramid was the embodiment of pure measure, the idol of fixity, the denial of change.

It was also an astronomer's building, meant to be an eternal calendar.

And since it was built, the very pole of the heavens has shifted and the calendar has been twice revised!

"What efforts soever men may make," observes an ancient historian, "their nothingness will always appear."

The very word pyramid is alien to Egypt. The Greeks gave the great structures that name, thinking of their own "pyre," or funeral pile. It was appropriate, too; for was not the pyramid a granite flame?

Modern science teaches that the only difference between rusting, rotting, burning and exploding is the speed of the chemical re-action. The process is the same; it consists of the combining of oxygen and carbon. A body that is burned on a pyre undergoes the same sort of change that comes to the body that lies within the tomb, only in the one case the process is swift, and in the other, very slow.

Notwithstanding their struggles against change, the ancient Egyptians were firm believers in a future state. That is why they embalmed the body; they wished to preserve it for reunion with the spirit, for their conception of the hereafter involved the reuniting of soul and body. They did not understand the lesson Nature has been silently teaching for ages—that decomposition is recomposition. The only idea that Nature has is change, ceaseless change; nothing is kept, neither is anything destroyed. Everything changes and is rearranged and made up again.

"All conservatism" declares Mr. Gilbert K. Chesterton in one of his very entertaining essays, "is based upon the idea that if you leave things alone, you leave them as they are. But you do not. If you leave a thing alone, you leave it to a torrent of change. If you leave a white post alone, it will soon be a black post. If you particularly want it to be white, you must be always painting it again. Briefly, if you want the old white post, you must have a new white post."

According to this line of reasoning, if we want to keep our old body, we must be constantly having a new body. And this is Nature's plan—the human body is said to be renewed every seven years. The old cells are cast out and replaced by new ones; and the measure of our dying is the measure of our living. Old age is brought about by retained waste matter, which stiffens the limbs and clogs the brain. A body that cannot change must be changed by what we call death. Change is the law of life. There is no law of death.

"Thank God for that old, old fashion, death," says Charles Dickens, "and for that older fashion still of immortality!"

The beliefs which led the Egyptians to devote so much wealth, time, skill and energy to the erection and equipment of the "eternal house" are the oldest conceptions of a real life hereafter of which we know. If there had been no religion there would have been no monuments or temples—nothing that could really have been called architecture. There is no force in the life of ancient man the influence of which so pervades all his activities as the religious faculty. Its fears are his hourly master, its hopes his constant Mentor and its outward usages are to a large extent the education and the motive toward the gradual evolution of art, literature and science. Also its feast days are his calendar. "It is only when we have made a Holy Day for God that we find we have made a holiday for man."

In a land where a clear sky prevailed and rain was rarely seen, the incessant splendor of the sun was an insistent fact. It was natural enough, therefore, that sun-worship was almost universal in Egypt. The chief center of this cult was at On, afterward called by the Greeks Heliopolis. Here the sun was known as Re, which was the solar orb itself; or as Atum, the name of the decrepit sun, as an old man tottering down the west. Again his name Khepri, written as a beetle in hieroglyphics, designated him in the youthful vigor of his rising.

Although the Egyptians did not have the true faith, of course, and were but as the heathen in his blindness, the symbolism by means of which their beliefs were set forth is very beautiful and expressive. "The Egyptian religion," says Draper, "provided for the vulgar a suitable worship of complex idolatry, but, for those emancipated from superstition, it offered true and even noble conceptions."

No other country can offer such noble edifices to the gods—temples and avenues of sphinxes, massive pylons adorned with obelisks in front, which even imperial Rome and modern Paris have not thought it beneath them to appropriate. "The granite statues have outlived the gods."

The great pyramid occupies thirteen acres and is 450 feet high. M. de Chazelles, when he measured the pyramid in question found that the four sides of it were turned exactly to the four quarters of the world and showed the true meridian of that place.

In England, on Salisbury plain, in Wiltshire, is "Stonehenge," a group of standing stones, forming two circles and two ovals. Nobody knows who placed them there. The stones are six feet in height. The outer circle is about three hundred feet in circumference and, when entire, consisted of sixty stones, of which only thirty-two remain. It has long been believed that the circles were formed in connection with some ancient religion. The most popular theory is that Stonehenge was built by Druids, the Celtic priests of Gaul and Britain. They reverenced the mistletoe because its berries and its leaves grow in clusters of three, their sacred number. The Druids were the most formidable enemies of Christianity, and they had very great authority among the ancient Britons, as lawgivers, judges and leaders. And so it has come about that although we may decorate our houses with mistletoe, we may not hang mistletoe in a church; for it is a heathen symbol, not suitable for a church. The subject of symbolism is very interesting, indeed, and very far-reaching in its ramifications.

But to go back to Stonehenge, another theory of its origin is given by Mr. Allen Upward, in his remarkable book, "The New Word:"

"The English language has more sources than the English philologists dream of. Only the other day an astronomer measuring Stonehenge, after measuring the Great Pyramid, learned what Massey had long before learned from folk-lore, that Pharaoh has left his mark in Britain."

Dickens is a good author to "read after" at Christmas time. He is so close to the hearts of the people, so warmly human. As an English critic says, "Dickens is allied to the real poor, who love nothing so much as to take a cheerful glass and to talk about funerals. He is close to religion, which has never allowed the thousand devils on its churches to stop the dancing of its bells. The extremes of his gloom and gaiety are the mark of religion and democracy. There is nothing odd in the fact that the same man who conceived the humane hospitalities of Pickwick should also have imagined the inhuman laughter of Fagin's den. The whole human tradition has tied up together, in a strange knot, these strands of festivity and fear; it is over the cups of Christmas Eve that men have always competed in telling ghost stories."

There was one thing in particular that Dickens understood and which latter-day writers have failed to grasp, and that is that joy tends to express itself in forms of the grotesque and not in the beautiful or classic. Thus we have, as symbols of exuberant joy, such things as goblins, or the boar's head of old Yuletide. The poet who said, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever" was altogether wrong. In beauty there is something almost allied to sadness. (Is it because we feel it soon must fade?) The corpulence of Falstaff suggests hilarity, but Arcadian poets and Arcadian painters have striven in vain to express happiness by means of beautiful figures. Dickens knew that happiness is best expressed by ugly figures. As one of his warmest admirers has said: "There is only one set of goblins wild enough to express the wild good-will of Christmas. Those goblins are the characters of Dickens."

BOLLING ARTHUR JOHNSON (No. 2)

THE BULLETIN is pleased to present on cover page, this issue, the picture of the "Father of Hoo-Hoo," Brother Bolling Arthur Johnson.

Brother Johnson is so well known in the lumber trade that it is indeed hard to write anything concerning him that is not already known and there is no doubt but that every member of the Order realizes and fully appreciates the great value of all that Brother Johnson has done in building the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo and bringing together in fraternal brotherhood the men engaged in the lumber trade and allied industries.

Brother Johnson was born August 5, 1862, at Moons P. O., Fayette Co., Ohio, which was, until it was taken off the map, so small a place that he has always maintained it to be perfectly legitimate to leave the letters "P. O." after the name, however inelegant an expression it might be.

Brother Johnson's father was a Virginian and his mother a Kentuckian, and, on the Johnson side of the family he came from a long line of Quaker ancestry, reaching back to George Fox, the English founder of that faith. The Johnson family remained Quakers until Cyrus F. (Bolling Arthur Johnson's father) married out of the Quaker Church into the Methodist Church to Clarinda Tivus Adams, who was Brother Johnson's mother.

Brother Johnson's parents moved from Ohio to Illinois in the autumn of 1867, locating in Mercer county, near North Henderson.

Brother Johnson went to a country school, worked on a farm, canvassed for the "Youth's Companion," and John Clark Ridpath's History of the United States, divided his neighborhood into two factions, one of which expected that he would become President of the United States, the other quite as vigorously protesting that he would surely come to some bad end before his majority; and did all the things that a country boy does.

Some time in the corn-planting, Ray's-Arithmetic-McGui-ey's-Reader period of his life he came within an eighth of one per cent, or something about as dangerously close, to becoming a West Pointer, and finally, in September, 1879, he entered the Preparatory end of Monmouth College, where until March, 1883, he put up a day and night fight to obtain prowess in athletics, proficiency in Latin and Greek verbs, distinction in declamation, prowess in baseball organization and other things which brought him into more faculty meetings than had been credited before against any student of that fifty-seven year old United Presbyterian institution.

In his youthful vocation days Brother Johnson amassed considerable sums of money with which to finance his collegiate work by the selling of books—great illustrated Bibles, the "Royal Path of Life," the "Museum of Antiquity," "Wit and Humor of the Age," etc. These early book selling experiences resulted in his first introduction into the publishing business which has claimed so much of his thought and life ever since. He became a member of the publishing firm of Huffman & Johnson in the early winter of 1884, the firm being the general agents of the Western Publishing House, with headquarters at Lexington, Ky. This partnership lasted until December of the following year, when the death of his father required his return to Illinois to look after family matters.

As soon as circumstances made it possible for him to do so, he came to Chicago and associated himself with the "Chicago Mail." That experience lasted something like two years, when he with several others started the "Chicago Democrat," a daily paper which was published for something like 183 days.

Following that publishing experience Brother Johnson gave his attention to some commercial lines for a short time, but the lure of the publishing business was strong upon him and in 1886 or 1887 he became associated with our late Brother James E. Defebaugh, writing articles, editorials and selling advertising, etc., etc. He remained with Brother Defebaugh until August, 1889, when he formed an alliance with Brother Walter C. Wright of the "Lumber Trade Journal," then printed in Chicago. In 1894, Brother Johnson and Brother Wright purchased the "Lumber Trade Journal" and moved it to New Orleans. In 1895, Brother Johnson sold his interest in the "Lumber Trade Journal" to Brother Wright and returned to Chicago, going to work for Brother James E. Defebaugh on the "Timberman."

Brother Johnson worked with Brother James E. Defebaugh and was active in the consolidation of the "Timberman" with the "Northwestern Lumberman" until January, 1889, when he resigned his position. In the latter part of 1897 he had become very much enamored of the lecture platform, having created the stereopticon lecture, "The Story of Hoo-Hoo," which was produced by him on September 12, 1898, at the Broadway Theatre, Denver, Colo., as a function of the Annual Concatenation of 1898.

So, when Brother Johnson resigned his position on the American Lumberman, he organized and took active management of the American Lecture Association, of which he was President, its purpose being the creating and giving of stereopticon lectures in America.

Brother Johnson went to Europe in 1900 and secured material from the Oberammergau Passion Play for his lecture, "The Passion Play of 1900," and also spent some time in Paris studying the Fair, and gathering material for "The Paris Fair of 1900" stereopticon lecture. Upon his return to America he created still another lecture, "Stories of the Old South and the New;" and until the 1st day of May, 1902, occupied the deficit end of the lecture platform, when all along he had planned to occupy the asset end. It was a beautiful series of mental athletics, calculated to either strengthen one's mind or drive him into the mad house. However, he regrets no portion of this experience.

Fate has several times directed Brother Johnson away from the newspaper and publishing work, tempting him in the early months of his stay in Chicago to follow the circus or vaudeville, later to enter the charmed circle of negro minstrelsy, finally leading him to the lecture platform in 1900, but he returned to newspaper work in May, 1902, as staff representative of the "American Lumberman," and later on as General Staff Representative of that paper, which position he held until the expiration of his contract with the company on July 6, 1911.

"In the latter months of 1911, Brother Johnson purchased the Lumber Review of Kansas City, and brought it to Chicago, consolidating it with the Lumber World, the result of that consolidation being the LUMBER WORLD REVIEW, of which he is now editor and publisher."

Brother Johnson is a Fellow Craft and Royal Arch and Knight Templar Mason and a member of Medinah Temple. Ancient Noble Order of the Mystic Shrine. He has been a member of the Chicago Press Club for about twenty-five years, and is also a member of the Southern Club of Chicago.

Brother Johnson's contributions to general literature have been of a personal nature and for private distribution, not for gain; chiefly among which have been "The Birth of Art," a sketch of the late John W. Kelley, the "Rolling Mill Man," "His Dreams Came True," a story of the life of Kirke LaShelle; "The Rudolph of Hapsburg of His House," an appreciation of the late J. E. Defebaugh; a three act play produced as a public ceremonial of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, given in Denver, Norfolk, Milwaukee, Oklahoma City, and last at the Studebaker Theatre in Chicago on September 12, 1908; and an address entitled, "Thoughts Are Things," given upon the dedication of the memorial of the founding of the Order of Hoo-Hoo, at Gurdon, Ark., on September 9, 1909.

AN APPRECIATED LETTER

THE Scrivenoter acknowledges and appreciates the following letter from 294:

"You have struck a pace with THE BULLETIN * * * Glad to see the 'Practical Side' come first, not last, and special attention called to it, and the Emergency Fund well exploited!

"Our hearts burn with fervent joy when we can lend a helping hand, whether in a business way or in the hour of darkest trial.

"You can safely swallow the Bate fish story. I have caught big fish at Catalina Island, but never tell about them, as my reputation is not as well established as his. He is naturally attractive to large fish, being all 'BATE.'

"Your likenesses are excellent and your bucking bronchos would charm a cowboy!

"We are in a good work. 'PUSH IT ALONG.'"

"Why, the size of your bill," cried the angry patient to the doctor, "makes me boil all over!"

"Ah!" said the eminent practitioner calmly. "That will be twenty dollars more for sterilizing your system."

A YOUNG FINANCIER

A WELL-KNOWN member of Parliament has a little daughter who has the making of a great financier in her. One day her father called her to him.

"My dear," said he, "a man this morning offered me this room full of gold if I would sell your little brother. Now that means gold enough to fill this room from wall to wall, and from floor to ceiling. If I sell your little brother for that sum, I shall be able to buy everything in the world you want. Shall I sell him?"

"No, papa," answered the little girl, promptly; and then, before her delighted father could embrace her for expressing so much unselfish affection, she went on:

"Keep him till he's bigger. He'll be worth more then."

Mrs. Fork says that her husband is all right when he goes out, but when he stays home he has a disagreeable habit of acting natural.

THE ETERNAL LIFE

"The elm lives for two hundred years, the linden for three hundred, the oak lives for five hundred years—" "And the chestnut," interrupted the other half of the sketch, "lives forever."

HE PASSED

"I see you passed a candy store on your way here this evening."

"How in the world did you know that?"

"Because you didn't bring any candy with you."

A DANGEROUS HABIT

A man went to an insurance office to have his life insured the other day.

"Do you cycle?" the insurance agent asked.

"No," said the man.

"Do you motor?"

"No."

"Do you then, perhaps, fly?"

"No, no," said the applicant, laughing. "I have no dangerous—"

But the agent interrupted him curtly.

"Sorry, sir," he said, "but we no longer insure pedestrians."

A small, but very black, negro was standing very erect at one side of the door of a house where a colored man had just died. The services were about to begin, when the negro clergyman appeared at the door and said to the little fellow:

"The services are about to begin. Aren't you coming inside?"

"I would if I could," said the small boy, "but, you see, Ise de crape."

AN ERROR, ON THE WHOLE

The ladies stopped the little boy whose legs were briar-scratched and marveled at the funny way his little pants were patched.

"Why did they patch with white?" they asked, "and not use brown, instead?"

The small boy scowled and touched the spot. "That ain't no patch," he said.

TERRE HAUTE, INDIANA

VICEGERENT SNARK CARROLL L. BECK, of Southern Indiana, held his second Concatenation of the current year at Terre Haute, Ind., on Wednesday, November 13, 1912, and you can believe us when we say it was some Concatenation. It has never been the privilege or pleasure of your Scrivenoter to attend any Concatenation since he has been a member of the Hoo-Hoo where more Hoo-Hoo enthusiasm was displayed by all in attendance, both "cats" and "kittens" than was shown at Terre Haute.

The Terre Haute Star and the Terre Haute Tribune of November 14 contained full account of this Concatenation and they were well written and should convince any one who will read them that Hoo-Hoo is very much alive and is doing the good work that it was organized for, and is bringing the lumbermen and the representatives of the allied industries together in a social way, making them better acquainted with each other and getting them to appreciate more fully the all important fact that they must get together, know each other personally and stand together if the lumber industry is to continue on the high standard it should be on. These social gatherings are most important to the lumber industry and all representative lumbermen and all representatives of the allied industries fully realize and appreciate this fact.

Hoo-Hoo in its social way has done more than anything else to get the lumbermen together and has shown them the importance of knowing each other personally and all lumbermen now more fully appreciate the vast importance of the good work that Hoo-Hoo has, can and will continue to do for the lumber industry and realize that it is their Order and that it is their duty as representatives of the lumber industry to not only support the Order but to see that it is conducted along the right lines.

The Terre Haute lumbermen were the hosts and they were fully equal to the occasion and all present appreciated and enjoyed their warm hospitality.

The Indianapolis Hoo-Hoo had a special sleeper on the Big Four and they certainly had a most delightful trip and fully enjoyed every moment of the trip, banquet and Concatenation.

The following Indianapolis Hoo-Hoo made up the party: Jos. G. Braumm, Jack Brantley, C. O. Rogers, O. T. Haskett, L. G. Miller, Geo. L. Maas, E. H. Greer, Thos. H. Nelson, H. A. Knapp, Wm. H. Bultman, Wm. H. Hamilton, W. B. Dripps, Thos. R. Lewis.

The following prominent visitors from other points were also present: H. C. Scarce, of Mooresville, Ind., secretary of the Indiana Retail Lumber Dealers Association; Paul W. Luh-ring, Evansville; A. B. Tresslar, Bedford; W. M. Simpson, Vincennes; E. D. Wilder and W. M. Anderson, Brazil; Fred Hixon, Greencastle; R. M. Pentreath and R. L. Ammerman, Clinton; Messrs. Martin and Kessler, Clinton; C. B. Hooten, Danville, Ill.; Carroll L. Beck, Bloomington, Ind.

Local lumbermen participating were: August H. Fromme, Robert D. Snider, W. B. Steele, John P. Steele, Louis D. Walker, Homer L. Wilson, Walter C. Cook, Harry Haring, Mat. Franszwa, W. J. Stuebe, Charles F. McCabe, Charles Runyan.

The proceedings were opened with an elaborate banquet at the Elks' club rooms at 6:30 p. m., which was given by the Terre Haute lumbermen. Vicegerent Snark Beck acting as toastmaster, called on the following who responded in true Hoo-Hoo spirit:

H. C. Scarce, Mooresville, Ind.; Jack Brantley, Indianapolis, Ind.; Jos. G. Braumm, Indianapolis, Ind.; Geo. L. Maas, Indianapolis, Ind.; L. D. Walker, Terre Haute, Ind.; W. M. Simpson, Vincennes, Ind.; Paul Luh-ring, Evansville, Ind.; H. A. Knapp, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. M. Stephenson, St. Louis, Mo.

It is to be regretted that we cannot publish in full the able speech of Brother Geo. L. Maas, of Indianapolis, Ind., on the importance of Hoo-Hoo to the lumber industry.

Although the coming of the "black cats" was unexpected, the register at the Terre Haute House during the day was decorated with the emblem of the Order, as every out-of-town visitor took a delight to draw a picture of a big black cat opposite his name. It was a continuous stream of lumber dealers during the entire day. When the list was checked up around the banquet table it developed that sixty visitors were on hand.

In addition to the speeches the Terre Haute lumbermen had provided appropriate vaudeville entertainment from the local theaters which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. At 9:09 adjournment was made to the lodge room while the Concatenation was held.

PALATKA, FLORIDA

Vicegerent Snark D. A. Reid of the Eastern District of Florida, held his first Concatenation at Palatka, Fla., on November 23rd, bringing twelve purblind "kittens" from the outer-darkness to the bright light of Hoo-Hoo Land. As a number of the local Hoo-Hoo were also members of the Elks, they secured and most generously offered the use of their hall for the initiation, this kind offer was accepted, and was highly appreciated by Vicegerent Snark Reid and all present.

Brother Reid advises that this was a veritable love feast and writes as follows:

The declaration of ceremony was announced at 8:15 p. m., after going through the preliminary work we got down to business. After petitions for membership were read and the balloting was over we found thirteen purblind kittens had been elected. But unfortunately only twelve entered in the class for first section of work, about the time half the work was over the thirteenth candidate returned to the anteroom and wanted to be rushed through, useless to say "Nothing was Doing." The work went along smoothly and all had a fine time. At no time during the Concatenation was anything done, or said, to mar the pleasure of any one present. After the closing exercises, the whole bunch repaired to the Hotel Putnam across the street, and at 11:05 p. m. we entered the banquet hall for a good time. We had an innovation which the writer has never seen before at a "Session on the Roof," and that was the presence of the ladies, wives and girls of the Hoo-Hoo present and I must say, don't think any session was ever spent more pleasantly. Every man was at his best and the ladies enjoyed the affair immensely. Our banquet was excellent and beautifully served. We expect a repetition of this kind in Jacksonville sometime in January or February. Below is a menu of our repast which was interspersed with a few short talks.

WHO ARE ELIGIBLE

Article III of Constitution:

"Section 1. Active membership.—The membership in this Order shall be limited to white male persons of full age of twenty-one (21) years, of good moral character, who possess one or more of the following seven qualifications: Lumbermen, Foresters, Officers of Lumber Associations, Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies, Newspaper Men, Railroad Men, Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men, and so-definitely shall the line of qualification be drawn in each class that the occupation under which persons apply for membership shall be their main or principal occupation, and it shall be the business of the person recognized in the community in which he resides as his principal vocation.

Specific Definition of Eligibility

- "(a) Lumbermen.—Lumbermen shall be those who are engaged either in the ownership or sale of timber lands, timber or log, or the manufacture or sale, at wholesale or retail, of forest products, either as owners, officers, managers of departments, general superintendents, sales managers or salesmen.
 - "(b) Foresters.—This class shall include those persons graduated from recognized schools of forestry, officials of the forestry service and members of forest commissions or boards, either state or national.
 - "(c) Officers of Lumber Associations.—Regularly organized lumber associations, state or national.
 - "(d) Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies.—Officers or representatives of mutual or inter-insurance companies placing risks on lumber property exclusively.
 - "(e) Newspaper Men.—Publishers, proprietors or persons regularly connected with the editorial or business departments of newspapers.
 - "(f) Railroad Men.—General officers, general and assistant freight, passenger, claim, purchasing, commercial, soliciting and station agents, chief dispatchers and train masters and members of railroad commissions.
 - "(g) Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men.—Persons engaged in the manufacture or sale, to lumber manufacturers, of sawmill or planing mill machinery and mill supplies.
 - "(h) Initiation.—Such persons as above mentioned may be initiated under proper application, payment of initiation fee and election to membership.
 - "(i) Limited Active Membership.—The active membership shall be limited to 33,999 members in good standing.
- Admission of Paint, Cement, Tiling, Roofing and Oil Men
- "(j) Manufacturers, wholesale dealers and salesmen of cement, roofing, paints, oil, tiling and other staple articles cannot become active members, but will be welcome as honorary members."

The above is printed for the information of all members. We must comply with the above. In case of doubt take up with the Scrivenoter and he will ask the Supreme Nine to rule.

Watch this closely and before voting for a candidate be sure he is eligible.

DUES FOR 1913

Address all communications for THE BULLETIN to W. M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, 1219 Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO., JANUARY 9, 1913.

1913 GREETINGS

"Times change in many ways, and we with time, but not in ways of friendship."

WE BID a fond farewell to the old year, with full appreciation of its many blessings and we welcome the new year and trust and hope that it will bring to us all increased Health, Happiness and Long Life. Let us all resolve with this New Year to cement anew our loyalty to the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, and let us promise ourselves that we will do our full duty towards making our Order the Order we all want it to be and an Order that all men will be proud of and an Order that all eligible men will consider it an honor to be a member of.

Let us take a few moments to ourselves, and let us remember the many pleasant hours spent in Hoo-Hoo, and then let us call to mind the many warm friendships made through Hoo-Hoo. If we will do this, we will be proud of our Order and will take a renewed interest and will make it OUR Order by doing our duty as members and assisting our Vicegerent Snarks and our Supreme Nine in their efforts to make our Order of more benefit, not alone to our members, but also to the great lumber industry, which it represents.

Let us all, with the New Year, call to mind "The Lord's Prayer," and let us remember the petition therein: "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." And let us get a little closer together in fraternal brotherhood and make Hoo-Hoo one happy family.

The Scrivenoter is pleased to make acknowledgement through THE BULLETIN of the many Christmas cards sent him by the members, and he highly appreciates their kind remembrance and good wishes. The Scrivenoter wishes all members and their families a most Happy and Prosperous New Year and wishes all Health, Happiness and Long Life.

We want to make THE BULLETIN the best fraternal paper published, and we want all our members to read each issue, and not only read it, but give the Scrivenoter their hearty support by sending in items of interest. Let us all pull together, and if we do this we will all be most pleasantly surprised and pleased at the results obtained.

When you meet a Hoo-Hoo, ask him if he reads THE BULLETIN, and if he says "no," advise us and we will endeavor to awaken his interest. DO THIS FOR HOO-HOO.

THE Scrivenoter extends a most hearty invitation to all members of the Order to visit the Scrivenoter's office when in St. Louis, and assures them a cordial welcome.

Come in and see us and see for yourself just how the business of the Order is conducted.

Ask all the questions you wish and we will, to the best of our ability, endeavor to satisfy you fully.

Make this office your headquarters while in St. Louis and have your mail addressed in our care. This is your office and you should use it.

A complete file of the lumber trade journals is kept in this office for the information of visiting members.

Come in and get acquainted.

* * *

THE BULLETIN is mailed on the 9th day of each month and in order to do this we are compelled to close our copy on the 5th of each month. Please take note of this and get your news item in before the 5th of each month so that we can avoid delay.

THE MAILING LIST

Our mailing list is made up from latest data at hand and is corrected monthly.

Each member is requested to report to the Scrivenoter promptly any error in his address, or any change made or contemplated, that THE BULLETIN may reach every member regularly.

WE ARE now at work correcting our records for the 1913 handbook. This is a big job, and in order to see that book is correct and contains the names and addresses of all members in good standing, it is going to require a little patience on the part of our members. We are working as hard and as fast as possible and will get book out at earliest possible date.

In order to get an idea of how many handbooks to be ordered printed, the Scrivenoter requests that all members who desire a copy of the new handbook advise him now.

Remember that to secure the handbook requires that you write the Scrivenoter requesting that it be sent you. A postal card request is sufficient.

In the 1913 Handbook we want the correct address of every member and we will shortly send out notices to all members asking them to advise their correct address, and it is important that this information be given prompt attention and that return card be sent the Scrivenoter without delay.

No name will appear in the 1913 Handbook unless dues for year 1912 have been paid.

You will want your name and address in this book and you are urged to send in your dues AT ONCE, so there will be no question of your name appearing in handbook.

GET IN LINE NOW AND DO NOT KICK AFTER HANDBOOK IS PRINTED.

YOU AND YOURSELF

Just stand aside, and watch yourself go by; Think of yourself as "he" instead of "I." Pick flaw; find fault; forget the man is you And strive to make your estimate ring true. The faults of others then will dwarf and shrink. Love's chain grows stronger by one mighty link. When you with "he" as substitute for "I" Have stood aside and watched yourself go by.

Prospective Concatenations

OMAHA, NEB.

January 15, 1913

VICEGERENT SNARK S. M. EATON, Eastern Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb., assisted by Brother J. W. Chase of Lincoln and Brothers L. Wentworth and J. F. Gresley of Omaha, have arranged to hold a Concatenation at Omaha, Neb., on Wednesday evening, January 15, 1913. At this Concatenation a new Vicegerent Snark will be selected for Nebraska. This Concatenation will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the Nebraska Retail Lumber Dealers' Association.

Brothers Eaton and Chase expect a large attendance of Hoo-Hoo at this Concatenation and a large class of "kittens."

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

January 14-16, 1913

A meeting was held at Minneapolis, Monday, January 6th, of members there to select a Vicegerent Snark for Southern Minnesota and to arrange for a Concatenation to be held in Minneapolis during the meeting of the Northwestern Lumbermen's Association. Definite notice of date of Concatenation will be given later through the lumber press.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

January 21, 1913

Vicegerent Snark F. T. Peitch, Northwestern Ohio, Cleveland, Ohio, will hold Concatenation at Cleveland, Ohio, Tuesday evening, January 21st. This Concatenation will be held in connection with meeting of the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber Dealers and the Union Association of Lumber and Sash and Door Salesmen.

Get in touch with Brother Peitch and give him the benefit of your valuable assistance and co-operation and make this Concatenation a big success.

DENVER, COLO.

January 21-23, 1913

Vicegerent Snark R. M. Handy of Colorado has announced a Concatenation to be held in Denver, Colo., during the annual meeting of the Colorado and Wyoming Lumber Dealers' Association. Brother Handy is being assisted by Brother J. E. Preston of the C., M. & St. P. Ry., Denver, Colo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

January 22-24, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Louis Hector, Western Missouri, Kansas City, Mo., will hold a Concatenation at Kansas City during meeting of the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association, January 22-24. Brother Hector is hard at work on this Concatenation and has selected committees to assist him and Concatenation promises to be one of the best ever held in Kansas City. Get in touch with Brother Hector and give him your co-operation and assistance.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

January 23-24, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Harry Wise, Southeastern Tennessee, Chattanooga, Tenn., announces Concatenation to be held at Chattanooga, Tenn., on January 23-24, 1913. This will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the National Lumber Exporters' Association.

ALTON, ILL.

January 30, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Raymond W. Irvine, Southern Illinois, Centralia, Ill., has announced Concatenation to be held in Alton, Ill., on January 30, 1913. This Concatenation will be held in connection with the meeting of the Southern Illinois Lumber Dealers' Association. Brother Fred W. Crandall (18748) of the Crandall Lumber and Hardware Co., East Alton, Ill., is assisting Vicegerent Snark Irvine in arranging for Concatenation. The Southern Illinois Lumber Dealers' Association is noted for its successful Concatenations, and Alton is going to keep the good work up.

Get in touch with Brothers Irvine and Crandall and give them your hearty support and assistance.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

February 1, 1913

Vicegerent Snark H. B. Weiss, Western Tennessee, Memphis, Tenn., has announced Concatenation to be held Saturday evening, February 1st, at Memphis, Tenn. Brother Weiss is busy making arrangements and has selected good assistants to help him and is anxious to make this Concatenation one of the best ever held in Memphis.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

February 4-5, 1913

Vicegerent Snark S. J. Rathbun, Southern Michigan, Battle Creek, Mich., advises that he will hold a Concatenation at Kalamazoo, Mich., during the meeting of the Michigan Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, which will meet at Kalamazoo on February 4 and 5, 1913.

Brother Rathbun expects a good attendance of members and a large class of "kittens." Brothers Jeff B. Webb, Fred J. Verkerke and a number of other prominent Hoo-Hoo will be on hand to assist Brother Rathbun.

CHICAGO, ILL.

February 11-13, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Harry B. Darlington, Northern Illinois, American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill., announces Concatenation to be held in Chicago during the annual meeting of the Illinois Lumber and Builders' Supply Dealers' Association on February 11-13.

This Concatenation will be largely attended by old members, and Brother Darlington expects good class of kittens. He will be assisted by Past Snark A. H. Ruth.

Get in touch with Brother Darlington and give him your co-operation and assistance.

SPOKANE, WASH.

February 14, 1913

Look out for the BIG NOISE at Spokane, Wash., on February 14th. Vicegerent Snark J. H. Ehrmantrout of Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho is going to hold this Concatenation in connection with the annual meeting of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association and the Western Pine Manufacturers' Association.

Snark of the Universe Frank W. Trower of San Francisco, Cal.; Supreme Custocatian L. R. Fifer of Seattle, Wash., and High Priest of Isis R. A. Hiscox will be on hand to assist Brother Ehrmantrout with the Concatenation.

Brother A. L. Porter, Secretary of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association, expects this meeting to be one of the best ever held, both in number of members present and in good work accomplished. See the January issue of the Western Retail Lumberman for full particulars of this great meeting of lumbermen and this Concatenation.

Vicegerent Snark Ehrmantrout has extended personal invitation to all Vicegerent Snarks in his section to attend, and he wants them with him on this gala occasion.

All past members of the Supreme Nine and Past Vicegerent Snarks in the Western States are urged to attend this Concatenation and assist Brother Ehrmantrout to make this the greatest Concatenation ever held.

The new ritual will be used at this Concatenation.

Now, all together. Spokane will be the bright light in Hoo-Hoo on February 14, 1913.

The Western Retail Lumbermen's Association is not only one of the largest, but it is also one of the best retail associations, and its great success is due to the intelligent efforts of Secretary A. L. Porter, who not only knows the needs of the retailers, but knows how to bring them together in association work and to accomplish the greatest amount of good for all. THE BULLETIN wishes Brother Porter success and Health, Happiness and Long Life.

DO NOT FORGET THE DATE
FEBRUARY 14, 1913
THE PLACE
SPOKANE

SASKATOON, SASK., CANADA

Vicegerent Snark H. A. Manning, Northern Saskatchewan, Canada, is busy figuring on a Concatenation to be held in Saskatoon shortly and the Scrivenoter is advised that Brother Manning is going to make Brother Cooke of Moose Jaw sit up and take notice. Brother Cooke held a mighty fine Concatenation at Moose Jaw, which is reported in this issue, and Brother Manning has set out to beat the good record made.

IOWA

Past Vicegerent Snark J. M. Furlong of Keokuk, Iowa, of the Lothman Cypress Co., St. Louis, Mo., advises that they will hold a Concatenation at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Iowa Lumber Dealers' Association. Date and place of meeting has not yet been announced.

Brother Furlong is one of the old faithful Hoo-Hoo and is always on the job when he can advance the best interests of the lumbermen.

Place and date of this Concatenation will be announced later.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA

February 10-15, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Alan M. Stewart of Manitoba, assisted by Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo E. D. Tennant and all the Winnipeg loyal Hoo-Hoo, will hold what Brother Hooper calls a "monster" Concatenation at Winnipeg, Manitoba, during the meeting of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association (Canada), which will be held in Winnipeg February 10-15, 1913. Definite date for Concatenation has not as yet been set. This Concatenation will be one that every Hoo-Hoo who can possibly do so should attend. There will be something doing every second.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Vicegerent Snark H. G. Wells, Northern Oregon, Portland, Ore., advises that he will hold a Concatenation at Portland about March 1st. This will be a get-together meeting for the Northern Oregon Hoo-Hoo, and we expect it to be one of the most successful ever held in Portland, and some mighty fine Concatenations have been held there.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

Vicegerent Snark E. T. Robie, Sacramento Valley District, California, advises that it was necessary to postpone Concatenation which he had expected to hold in Sacramento, Cal., on December 14, 1912, until after first of this year. This Concatenation will be held shortly and Brother Robie expects a large class.

JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA

Vicegerent Snark D. A. Reid, Eastern Florida, Jacksonville, Fla., advises that he is at work arranging to hold a Concatenation in Jacksonville about February 15. He expects to have a large class of "kittens" and good attendance of members.

Exact date will be announced in the February BULLETIN

JUNIOR RITUAL

THE Scrivenoter has received many letters from members in different jurisdictions suggesting that the Junior Ritual be revised and that any and all objectionable matter be eliminated and that the ritual be brought up to date.

Now every member of the Order is, and should be, interested in this revision.

We want a ritual that will cover this section of our initiation in a satisfactory manner.

The Scrivenoter therefore asks that all members, and this means YOU, give to the revision of the Junior Ritual their most careful thought and that they write the Scrivenoter fully, giving him the benefit of their most valuable suggestions as to what they wish covered in this ritual.

Every member has some valuable ideas, and we want them.

Now let us all get busy and make the new Junior Ritual a great success.

DO THIS FOR HOO-HOO.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE

EVERY member should read carefully, each month, "THE PRACTICAL SIDE." This refers to unemployed members and we can show our best nature and our fraternal spirit by not only reading this page, but by doing all in our power to place our brother in line for a position.

EVERY HOO-HOO who employs MEN can find the MAN he is looking for through the columns of THE BULLETIN.

If you want a man for any position, advise the Scrivenoter and he will put you in touch with the man you want.

Remember, it is your duty as a loyal Hoo-Hoo to assist a worthy brother to employment.

Let us all get a little closer together, and let us help each other.

Read all the advertisements in this issue and advise the Scrivenoter promptly of any opportunity where we can place our members. Do this in a true fraternal spirit.

The Scrivenoter is in receipt of a letter from a firm in Colorado, in which they advise:

"We need a manager for our yard at * * * and would prefer one who could invest a little money with us. Want an experienced man."

If interested, drop a line to the Scrivenoter.

There is no need for Hoo-Hoo to argify or explain. It is enough for goodfellowship to know that it is—and that settles it.

* * *

Many an honorable career has resulted from a kind word spoken in season, or from the warm grasp of a friendly hand.

PERSONAL

Among the non-resident members who visited the Scribe-noter's office during the past month were:

* * *

Sidney Clemons (25718), American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill.

* * *

J. G. Wells (4872), Frost-Johnson Lumber Co., Aurora, Ill.

* * *

F. Crandall (18748), Andrews & Crandall, Alton, Ill. Bro. Crandall was accompanied by Mrs. Crandall.

John B. Allen (14003), Centralia, Ill., representing W. T. Ferguson Lumber Co. Brother Allen is a Past Vicegerent Snark for Southern Illinois.

BUSINESS CHANGES

Brother L. R. Fifer, Supreme Custocatian, Seattle, Wash., has made change in his business and on January 1st started in the wholesale lumber business for himself, operating under name of the L. R. Fifer Lumber Co., with headquarters at 1133 Henry Bldg., Seattle, Wash.

Brother Fifer thoroughly understands the lumber business and THE BULLETIN predicts that he will have great success. Brother Fifer has always been a very active worker for Hoo-Hoo and has a large circle of friends, who will be pleased to know that "Lew" has gone into business for himself, and we all wish him Health, Happiness and Long Life.

THE BULLETIN extends hearty congratulations to Brother H. A. Sargent (2179) upon his being made Vice-President of the Simonds Manufacturing Co. Brother Sargent is one of the popular business men of the West and stands high in lumber and machinery circles. He has devoted his life to the interests of the Simonds people and his recognition as Vice-President is in line with the company's policy in this respect. Brother Sargent will continue his headquarters at Portland, Ore.

Brother H. M. McCall (7923) has been appointed traveling representative of the Western Retail Lumber Dealers' Association and will make his headquarters in California. THE BULLETIN wishes Brother McCall success.

Brother E. G. France (26194) of Cairo, Ill., with the Singer Mfg. Co., has been transferred from Cairo to South Bend, Ind. THE BULLETIN wishes Brother France continued success.

Brother Fred W. Fearman (27093) of Vancouver, Canada, has severed his connection with the North Pacific Lumber Co. and has associated as partner with Geo. M. Madden in the Apex Lumber Co., Dominion Building, Vancouver, B. C. THE BULLETIN wishes Brother Fearman success.

* * *

Brother H. S. Y. Galbraith (13065) Winnipeg, Manitoba, who has been over fourteen years connected with the B. C. Mills Timber and Trading Co., has formed a new lumber company, to be known as "The H. S. Galbraith Company, Limited." Brother Galbraith will be President and General Manager. He will have his headquarters in the McIntyre Block, Winnipeg. THE BULLETIN wishes Brother Galbraith success.

ILLNESS

It is with sincere regret that THE BULLETIN announces the illness of Brother Cliff S. Walker (738) of Covington, Ky.

Brother Walker served two years as President of the Cincinnati Lumbermen's Club and is the author of the famous "square deal" slogan and policy. He is Vice-President of the Bayou Land and Lumber Co., and also of the Tensas River Lumber Co.

Brother Walker is well known to the members of Hoo-Hoo and has always been a very enthusiastic member. His work as Junior Hoo-Hoo made him many friends. THE BULLETIN extends its best wishes to Brother Walker for a speedy recovery.

Supreme Bojum and High Priest of Hathor, Brother John Oxenford (1346), Indianapolis, Ind., who has been ill for some time, is now improving and THE BULLETIN hopes that the New Year will bring good health to Brother Oxenford.

THE BULLETIN is pleased to advise that Brother Cadwallader H. Beal (400) of Montgomery, Ala., is rapidly improving in health and expects soon to be enjoying good health again. Brother Beal is connected with the Moore Dry Kiln Co. of Jacksonville, Fla., and is one of the best known and best liked men in the South. THE BULLETIN joins all in extending to Brother Beal our best wishes for Health, Happiness and Long Life.

* * *

Brother L. J. Fleury (9307) of Morgan City, La., has been very ill for some time, and THE BULLETIN trusts that the New Year will bring Brother Fleury Health, Happiness and Long Life.

* * *

Brother A. W. Echart (267) is now living at Shell Rock, Iowa, and has been ill for some time. THE BULLETIN hopes that the New Year will bring good cheer and renewed health to Brother Echart.

* * *

Brother S. F. Mitchell (10408) of Bismark, Okla., had a bad fall from a tree while gathering holly in the woods near Bismark and fractured his spine, which resulted in paralysis of his lower limbs. Brother Mitchell is now at the Sacred Heart Hospital in Eau Claire, Wis., where he is receiving treatment.

THE BULLETIN wishes Brother Mitchell a complete recovery and hopes the New Year will bring him Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Brother C. J. Delaney (17939) is ill at Los Angeles, Cal. He is now living at 1357 Valencia street, Los Angeles, Cal., and THE BULLETIN extends its best wishes to him and hopes that the New Year will bring him Health, Happiness and Long Life.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

THE BULLETIN is pleased to acknowledge, and thanks the members for their kind remembrance:

* * *

1913 memoranda book from Frank A. Arend & Co., Inc., Wholesale Lumber, Boston, Mass. This book is up-to-date and, among other valuable information, contains the new Parcels Post regulations.

* * *

1913 calendar and best wishes from E. S. Hooper Lumber Co. (wholesale yellow pine), Fort Worth, Texas. This is a large office calendar, and if the picture shown thereon is a sample of Fort Worth, the Scrivenoter will heartily second a motion to move the headquarters to Fort Worth.

* * *

1913-1914 memoranda book from The Graton & Knight Mfg. Co., Worcester, Mass. This firm has branches in many cities and the memoranda book is full of useful information.

* * *

1913 calendar from The National Lumber Co., Minneapolis, Minn., who make a specialty of white cedar posts and poles. This is an office calendar and the smile of the lady should certainly bring the orders.

* * *

Box of pencils in the national colors from The J. B. Doppes' Sons Lumber Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. These are highly appreciated.

1913 calendar from the Florida Woodenware Co., Palatka Fla. This is adorned with the picture of "An American Princess" with an armful of American beauties.

The following verses, written by Capt. "Jack" Crawford under the title of "Just a Tip," are welcome at this season of the year:

There isn't much in this old world
But sunshine, after all;
The smiles and tears, the hopes and fears,
The wormwood and the gall
Are all mixed up, and when I come
To analyze the whole,
I find the sunshine dominates
My heart and broncho soul.

Ye grouchy pessimist whose eyes
Reach not the skies of blue,
Join eyes with mine, where God's sunshine
Will meet your lengthened view,
Then let your face reflect it back
In smiles of sweet content,
And shame should roll athwart your soul
For all the growls you've spent.

By ROBERT E. MASTERS (71)

I WILL be a new coon in town to many readers of THE BULLETIN, but what o'that? We are all one big family and if you will just cast your eye at the above number you will see I am one of the old guard and wear a button as big as the one on Bolling Arthur Johnson.

Didn't he loom up fine as a front page decoration of December BULLETIN? Good for him, that was a good piece of work and I was mighty glad to see it and I could appreciate how gently time had dealt with him for I have known him over a quarter of a century and see no change.

A number of years ago I used to send a fish story (or rather a story about a fish which is quite different)—now and then to "Jim" Baird. I felt sure he published them "with a grain of salt," until in 1905 he "spoke right out in meetin'" and gave me a square deal and this is what he said in THE BULLETIN.

"Six or eight years ago a member of Hoo-Hoo, Robert E. Masters by name, began to write me letters of the wonderful fishing off the California coast. I published a good many of his letters in THE BULLETIN, and in time came to have a good deal of fun out of the communications. I always derided the statements he made as it is customary to do with fish yarns. Now I take back all I ever said about this man's fish stories, they were true, every one of them."

Fishing off the California Coast or sea fishing anywhere don't need any "Council for the Defense." In fact I will believe any story about a fish that any true sportsman tells me, whether it is an experience on salt or fresh water, the actual experience is so far beyond the hell-begotten fancy of any romancer he don't have to exaggerate or create any fiction or friction.

I have fished in salt water at different places along the Atlantic from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to lower Florida, around the Gulf of Mexico from San Carlos Bay, Florida to Yucatan, Mexico; on the Pacific from Coronado Islands to the Columbia River, and considerable in foreign waters, but to confine ourselves to this continent I have fished in fresh waters, lakes, rivers and streams from Lake St. John and the Rainy Lake country to Lake Okeechobee. I began fishing when a boy from the docks for Tom Cod in New York, my native city. I did not go for a week or ten days, when I went I kept at it for months at a time through a number of years.

Now this will make you think I am a fisherman—but I am not, not even a near fisherman. There are two kinds, the real fishermen who follow it from necessity for a living and who supply the markets of the world. We need them same as we do men in any other branch of industry, for it is a larger and more hazardous industry than many of us conceive of.

Then there is the near fisherman who set traps and trawls, and dynamite for sport, and about all of this poaching is done where the professional fisherman does not work and where the fish cannot be spared.

I feel like soaking anyone with an old over-ripe juicy tomato who calls a real angler a fisherman—out on him. An old friend of mine—president of a National Bank at that—who had been reading some of my angling experiences sent me a postal card as follows:

"Positive—Common Liar,
Comparative—Damn Liar,
Superlative—Fisherman."

Now, don't you think he deserved one of them sickly tomatoes landed on his diamond? I am just merciful enough not to mention his name, because he is known to many Hoo Hoo and I don't want to make him ashamed of himself.

So I am an angler, if you please. The title of this article is original and I have used it for years as my motto—one man with one rod and reel with one hook to one fish shows what I stand for.

I have seen and had many strange experiences both with professional market fishermen, and with rod and reel, some of them I know, if I was a tenderfoot and new at the game I don't believe I could swallow, but I am going to tell them in the course of time, and if any of you get out and get after them right, you will say with Bro. Baird: "They are true, every one of them." About a year ago Bro. Baird wrote, asking me to contribute some stories about fishing, but I had just returned to California and was busy having my home built and getting place fixed up, did not seem to find the time; lately I took his request up with Supreme Scrivenoter Stephenson and to-day I received the most cordial letter from our worthy Snark of the Universe Frank W. Trower, hoping I could get one ready for the January Bulletin, and let me whisper in your ear the snap, vim and go in our Snark's letter worries me; I get an inkling from it that he is a true sportsman himself and I wonder if I can meet the situation and fill the bill, but this is a kind of come up close and get acquainted article, and I will get over my scare and do better in the second round.

A story that always seems to stir up a great deal of interest with ladies as well as gentlemen, and to many sounds almost beyond belief is about a little fish, one that has been served at most every table, and one that very few people have not eaten of, and that is the Sardine—the most harmless innocent fish in any water, the natural prey of sea birds, fish and man; between their fin, feather and man enemies they have a hard time, but my, how they multiply with all that to contend with. Did you ever stop to think how many factories and people are employed both on land and sea catching and canning them? I have seen the whole process on the Mediterranean Sea, Pacific Ocean and elsewhere and will tell you all about it in my next, and hope you will be good and hungry for it.

Osirian Cloister

THE Scribe has up with Chief Priest Hadley, matters of importance concerning the future of the Cloister and hopes to be able to make publication of plans in next issue of THE BULLETIN.

We want to make the Osirian Cloister more active than it has ever been and we want the hearty co-operation and assistance of our members to this end.

A statement will be mailed each member of the Cloister.

IMPORTANT

THE Scrivenoter has been advised that a few men claiming to be members of the Order are going about soliciting aid in the shape of loans from our members. The Supreme Nine requests members of the Order that if anyone, personally unknown to them, applies to them for aid, claiming that he is a member of the Order, and asking for aid on account of such membership, that the member immediately take the matter up by wire with the Scrivenoter, giving as full particulars as possible and always giving number claimed by party who is asking for aid. The Scrivenoter will, if the party is entitled to aid on account of membership in the Order, advise you promptly what action to take. The Order has an Imminent Distress Fund for this purpose. If the applicant is worthy and entitled to assistance, it will be given promptly. Please bear this in mind and assist the Supreme Nine all in your power to stop this practice.

W. J. HARAHAAN (4960)

THE BULLETIN is pleased to present on cover page, this issue, the picture of Brother W. J. Harahan, president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, Norfolk, Va.

Brother Harahan was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Paducah, Ky., on April 28, 1897, and is a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund, having responded to the First and all subsequent Calls.

From an apprentice in the Louisville and Nashville shops at Louisville, Ky., to the presidency of the Seaboard Air Line is the remarkable record of Brother William J. Harahan, son of the late James T. Harahan, former president of the Illinois Central Railway system. Brother Harahan is a product of the South, and spent three-fourths of his life in the southern states. He was advanced to the presidency of the Seaboard from the Vice-Presidency of the Erie system, where he was considered one of the ablest men on the staff of President Underwood.

Speaking of Brother Harahan, Mr. Underwood said:

"The Erie Railroad regrets exceedingly to lose his services, for the reason that he has constantly been placed in delicate and responsible positions, and has invariably made good. He is a man of conspicuous ability and tact.

Brother Harahan was born at Nashville, Tenn., in December 1867, and his first work was during a vacation in 1881 as an office boy in the Louisville and Nashville superintendent's office at New Orleans, La. In 1884, as an apprentice, he entered the Louisville and Nashville shops at Louisville, Ky., to learn the trade of a machinist. In 1886 he entered the engineering department, where he remained until 1892, having filled the positions of chainman, rodman, levelman, resident engineer and assistant engineer of maintenance of way for the Louisville and Nashville.

Subsequently he was engineer of maintenance of way for the Chesapeake and Ohio, and engineer of bridges of the Baltimore and Ohio lines. In 1892 he entered the operating department of the Illinois Central, and was trainmaster, assistant superintendent, superintendent, chief engineer, assistant general manager, general manager and vice-president before leaving the system in 1907 to go with the Erie.

One of the most important pieces of road work constructed under the supervision of Brother Harahan was to four-track the entrance of the Erie into New York City. The task was of an extremely delicate character, and the most important work involved the carving of a rock canyon 4000 feet long, 60 to 100 feet deep, only twenty-two feet away from a double-track tunnel in active use by several hundred trains each day. The work was accomplished without an accident. He has displayed conspicuous ability in emergency work of every character, such as washouts, fires, etc. A notable piece of work he performed was after the destruction by fire of the Illinois Central docks in New Orleans, La., in 1905. This fire occurred about March 1. It necessitated the rebuilding of 3600 feet of dock and about 3000 lineal feet of brick and concrete warehouses, the building of grain elevators of large capacity, and the rebuilding of many miles of yard track, all to be in operation for the fall business. This was accomplished so that the Illinois Central did as large an export business as usual when the next season opened. Work was started on rebuilding before the fire had burned out.

In his relations with the public and the public authorities, Brother Harahan has been conspicuously successful, due to the fact that he is a thoughtful student of the attitude of the people and their representatives toward railroads. He has observed the tendency on the part of the public thought toward regulation of railroads, and has felt that as long as the acceptance of regulation was necessary that the railroads should bow gracefully to it, and advance toward a solution of the question by helpful co-operation.

“WE HAVE LOVED THEM DURING LIFE, LET US NOT FORGET THEM IN DEATH”

JAMES L. HALE (6553)

Brother James L. Hale, a prominent lumberman of Memphis, Tenn., died suddenly at Oscola, Ark., on November 28, 1912, from heart failure. In addition to other companies in which Brother Hale was interested, he was President of the Boeuf River Land & Lumber Co., of Logtown, La.

The funeral was held from Brother Hale's residence, 360 South Camilla street, Memphis, Tenn., at 2 p. m., November 2nd. Rev. A. B. Curry D. D., Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of which Brother Hale was a member, officiated at the funeral services. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery.

Brother Hale was born at Osceola, Ark., on September 28, 1872, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Cairo, Ill., on June 9, 1899.

JOHN K. SOWERS (11832)

Brother John K. Sowers, President of the Sowers-Leach Lumber Co., Columbus, Ohio, was found dead in bed at his home on the morning of November 15, 1912, with a bullet hole in his head.

An open door at the rear of the house, a raised window and a sideboard in disorder, found by the maid when she arose that morning, is advanced by members of the family as evidence that Mr. Sowers was murdered.

The fact that Mr. Sowers kept a revolver under his pillow and that it was accidentally discharged also is advanced.

Brother Sowers was born in Champaign County, Ohio, on April 22, 1873, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Columbus, Ohio, on January 12, 1904.

EDWARD BURNHAM CURTIS (384)
1862—1912

Brother Edward Burnham Curtis died at his home in New Orleans, La., on November 26, 1912. Brother Curtis had been in ill health for some time. He died of heart disease. Brother Curtis represented the Revere Rubber Company. He had a most attractive personality and was a genial companion.

Brother Curtis was born at Irvine, Ky., on April 23, 1862, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at New Orleans, La., on February 14, 1893.

Brother Curtis was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

HENRY THEODORE MEYERDING (174)
1850—1912

Brother Henry Theodore Meyerding died at his home in Chicago, Ill., on December 8, 1912, he has been in poor health since last April and was confined to his room for four weeks from heart trouble, previous to his death. He was buried in Graceland cemetery. Brother Meyerding entered the lumber business in 1871 with Ruddock, Palmeter & Co., Chicago, Ill., in 1887 he and C. H. Ruddock transferred their interests to Minneapolis, Minn., under firm name of C. H. Ruddock & Co., and several years later they became interested in the Cypress lumber interests of Louisiana and incorporated the Ruddock Cypress Co., with mills at Ruddock, La. He retired from business in 1907 and returned to Chicago to live.

Brother Meyerding was born in Chicago, Ill., on June 27, 1850, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at New Orleans, La., on November 23, 1892. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

JOHN BENEDICT NEWMAN (7026)
1873—1912

Brother J. B. Newman was injured on December 27, 1912, while attempting to get on or off a moving train near Olivier, La., no one knows how accident happened. Brother Newman was found near Olivier Station about two hours after train had passed. The accident will perhaps remain a mystery. Brother Newman died from injuries received and was buried at New Iberia, La., on December 29, 1912.

Brother Newman was born in New Orleans, La., on March 21, 1873, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at New Iberia, La., on January 20, 1900.

CHARLES FREDERICK PANNEWITZ (1395)
1845—1912

Brother Charles F. Pannewitz died at his home in Orange, Texas, on December 12, 1912.

Death occurred after a failing spell of about three weeks' duration, in which heart failure was an important factor, the deceased being subject to light attacks of this malady quite frequently in the latter years of his life.

Brother Pannewitz was one of Orange's most loved and respected citizens. His funeral was conducted by Iris Lodge, I. O. O. F. He was also a member of Orange Lodge B. P. O. E., and members of the B. P. O. E. were also present at funeral to pay their tribute to their deceased brother.

Interment was at Evergreen Cemetery. Brother Pannewitz was in the Confederate service, and served throughout the late unpleasantness as a powder boy on the warship Alabama. He was connected with the Orange Lumber Co. as superintendent, until the dissolution of this company. He was interested in the Crown Mercantile Co., of Orange.

Brother Pannewitz was born in Iserlohn, Germany, on April 14, 1845, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Beaumont, Texas, on February 16, 1894. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

WILLIAM BERTRAM LAWTON (6290)
1875—1912

Brother William Bertram Lawton, died at Archer, Fla., on December 24, 1912, after a long illness from a complication of diseases, chief of which was congestion of the liver. He was buried at Archer, Fla., on December 25, 1912.

Brother Lawton was born in Toronto, Canada, October 7, 1875, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Mena, Ark., on March 9, 1899.

FRANK WILLIAM GILCHRIST (4355)
1845—1912

Brother F. W. Gilchrist died at Memphis, Tenn., on December 13, 1912, while he was visiting his son, William A. Gilchrist, of the Three States Lumber Co., Memphis, Tenn.

At the time he was stopping at the Peabody Hotel in Memphis, and while his condition had been regarded as serious for several days, the shock of his demise was none the less seriously felt throughout the lumber trade. As a pioneer in Michigan lumbering, as one of the ablest organizers and directors of transportation on the Great Lakes, as a lumberman interested in both northern and southern operations, his passing away leaves a void in the business world and the lumber industry that can not be filled.

Aside from his lumber interests, Mr. Gilchrist promoted many enterprises for the good of his adopted city, Alpena. He was president of the Alpena National Bank and had various investments in the Alpena district. He was a member of the Masonic order and had received all of the degrees in both the York and Scottish rites.

The remains were taken from Memphis to Detroit, Mich., where funeral services were held on Monday, December 16, in the chapel of Woodlawn cemetery. During the time of the funeral at Detroit the business men of Alpena, by proclamation of the mayor, closed their stores, while the bells of the churches tolled a requiem to the memory of their departed townsman. The remains were placed in the Gilchrist mausoleum in the Detroit cemetery.

Brother Gilchrist was born in Concord, N. H., on February 27, 1845, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Alpena, Mich., on July 14, 1896.

EUGENE OSBORNE McGLAULFIN (23076)
1856—1912

Brother E. O. McGlauffin, General Manager of the Northwestern Lumber Co., Hoquiam, Wash., died suddenly December 18, 1912, from the bursting of a blood vessel following an attack of gastritis. He was one of the most prominent lumbermen in Washington and was deeply interested in association work for the welfare of the lumber industry.

Brother McGlauffin was born at Anoka, Minn., November 20, 1856, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Hoquiam, Wash., August 29, 1908.

JAMES HENRY BARR (733)
1853—1912

Brother J. H. Barr, died at his home in Hyde Park, Cincinnati, Ohio, on December 21, 1912, from acute indigestion.

Brother Barr had not been in good health for about a week. He had been connected with the yellow pine business practically all his life and up to two years ago represented the Kaul Lumber Co., Birmingham, Ala., at Cincinnati, Ohio.

He was a member of the Union Association of Lumber and Sash and Door Salesmen. Since leaving the Kaul Lumber Co., he has been selling yellow pine lumber on commission, representing various concerns in the South. He was buried at Spring Grove cemetery, December 24. His lumber friends sent a beautiful floral piece.

Brother J. P. Bartelle (1060), Secretary-Treasurer of the Union Association of Lumber and Sash and Door Salesman pays a feeling tribute to Brother Barr in saying he was a splendid man, and that the members of the association will miss him for many a day to come.

Brother Barr was born at Strawberry Point, Iowa, on June 12, 1853 and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Cincinnati, Ohio, on November 17, 1893. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

1875—1912

Brother C. T. Benedict, died at the General Hospital, Knoxville, Tenn., December 6, 1912, after a brief illness. Interment at Maryville City cemetery. He was a Master Mason and Knight Templar, both Maryville lodges attending the funeral in a body and conducted the services at the grave. Brother Benedict was connected with the Alaculsy Lumber Co., of Conasauga, Tenn.

Brother Benedict was born at Nevada, Ohio, on October 10, 1875 and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Nashville, Tenn., on February 22, 1902.

HOO-HOO HOUSE

PANAMA PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION,
SAN FRANCISCO, 1915.

DEFINITE plans towards building a Hoo-Hoo House at the Panama Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco in 1915 were made at the Hoo-Hoo banquet and Jinks held at the San Francisco Commercial Club, Saturday evening, December 7, 1912.

This was arranged by Vicegerent Snark Paul M. Dimmick of the Central District of California, and he was most ably assisted by the committee on arrangements consisting of Brothers C. S. Brace (24836), F. S. Palmer (17610), W. A. Hammond (14883), F. W. Burgers (6695) and J. Homer Fritch (26438).

Brother W. A. McGrill (17607), did good work as the Press Committee.

More than three score loyal Hoo-Hoo, representing the principal lumber interests of the coast gathered around the decorated tables in the big dining room of the Commercial Club.

A sumptuous course dinner was served, and songs were sung and toasts were drunk under the jovial direction of Fairfax H. Whelan as toastmaster and chairman of the evening. The best of feeling prevailed and the get-together spirit generated rendered the unanimous indorsement of the Hoo-Hoo house project a foregone conclusion. As a foil for the serious business of the evening, Mr. Whelan introduced Press Woodruff, the humorist, who readily caught the Hoo-Hoo spirit and told a number of western anecdotes in his happiest vein.

Snark of the Universe Frank W. Trower, introduced the subject of the Hoo-Hoo house, outlining the course of the project during the last year since it had been broached at a summer Hoo-Hoo dinner. At that time it was thought best to leave some of the details to be decided upon after the plans for the exposition grounds and buildings were further advanced and the securing of the 1915 Annual had become a certainty.

"Some of the northern lumbermen and lumber newspaper men have asked what we are going to do in the matter of a Hoo-Hoo house," he continued. He said that he desired to have an expression of opinion from those present. "Now," he explained, "there are no longer any reasons for delay and prompt action is needed in order to secure a proper location on the exposition grounds." Some little time ago Brother Trower took up the subject of a site with the exposition management and it recently offered Hoo-Hoo the choice of one of two very superior sites. Hoo-Hoo is to be the only fraternal order granted the privilege of having a special building within the world's fair enclosure.

The Speechmakers

Brother J. R. Neylan gave an enthusiastic talk on broad lines. He referred to his experience on Hoo-Hoo committees in previous affairs when considerable sums of money were to be raised. He then advised proceeding on broad lines. While it might be very hard for Hoo-Hoo of California to build the house unaided, let them take in the lumbermen generally—on broad lines—and then there will be no difficulty. In conclusion he said: "Let the eastern lumber associations join in furnishing the house and then we can easily raise from $50,000 to $75,000."

Brother R. T. Buzard, of the Cottoneva Lumber Co., spoke strongly in favor of going ahead with the plans for the Hoo-Hoo house. He said he had been around among the lumber dealers and while canvassing on the subject he became convinced that they stand ready to subscribe liberally to the fund when a definite proposition is presented.

Brother Fred S. Palmer, a former Vicegerent Snark, made a spirited speech, in the course of which he stated that the exposition in San Francisco in 1915 will be larger than any previous world's fair and that "we should have a Hoo-Hoo house on an equally large scale." There should be no fear of failure to raise ample funds for the purpose. At the annual here in September, 1910, San Francisco Hoo-Hoo raised $5,500 for entertaining visitors. San Francisco alone was interested in getting up that affair. But this Hoo-Hoo house now interests the whole United States and much greater sums should readily be secured by proper efforts.

He then made a motion to the effect that the Supreme Snark of the Universe and the Vicegerent Snark be appointed a committee with full power to act in the matter of the Hoo-Hoo house.

After further discussion, it was unanimously voted that Supreme Snark F. W. Trower and Vicegerent Snark P. M. Dimmick be given authority to proceed in the selection of a committee, or a board of governors, with full power to act and device ways and means to bring the matter of providing for a Hoo-Hoo house to a successful conclusion.

Vicegerent Snark Dimmick made an optimistic talk in favor of the Hoo-Hoo house. Once a tangible plan is outlined the project will grow. He and Supreme Snark Trower will now proceed to arrange for preparing the details of the proposition, which, when launched, will finally bring results the same as in the case of the Seattle House of Hoo-Hoo.

Brother R. W. Chamberlain, of San Francisco, was the only one out of a number who spoke upon the subject at issue who seriously discouraged the erection of a Hoo-Hoo house, and he was evidently laboring under the impression that San Francisco would have to bear all of the expense connected with the project. It is a fact that liberal contributions were secured from other States, including California, Oregon and even Eastern States for the construction of the Hoo-Hoo house in Seattle. In fact, promises of taking a liberal interest in San Francisco's Hoo-Hoo house have already been sent to the Pacific coast lumber press by many prominent lumbermen representing several States. There is no doubt that many subscriptions can be obtained from lumbermen outside of California. Besides that, it is conservatively estimated that at least 1,000 people in the East and elsewhere will subscribe for membership in the house at $10 each. A large amount was realized in this way for the house that was built at Seattle's Alaska-Yukon exposition.

The Hoo-Hoo Jynx

A lively vaudeville program occupied the remainder of the evening, after each good Hoo-Hoo had pledged the others to get to work and boost for the biggest Hoo-Hoo house on record at the greatest international exposition ever held. The program committee received many compliments on its good taste.

Two sprightly lady entertainers from the vaudeville stage rendered some catchy songs.

Between acts several pairs of gracefully-proportioned Hoo-Hoo, including Messrs. McGibbon, of the Pacific Lumber Co., and Hammond, of the Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co., did some waltzing. Two fairly good sparring matches were pulled off by local amateur fighters. As a side diversion, Brother Bert Neylan and Fred Burgers, representing Hoo-Hoo, put on the gloves and indulged in a struggle that made war in the Balkans look like 30 cents during three rounds.

Brother Charles S. Brace, representing the Peninsula Lumber Co., sang "My Rosary" acceptably.

Finally, Prosper T. Reiter, the secretary of the commercial club, favored his guests with some baritone solos in the French language. He was heartily applauded.

The House and Site

According to the Supreme Snark's ideas, the Hoo-Hoo house should be planned on a generous scale, and while a building similar to the one at Seattle would be satisfactory, it should be larger, so as to admit of holding lumbermen's conventions and the Hoo-Hoo Annual in 1915 in its assembly hall. There should be a rest room for men as well as rest and recreation rooms for women. It should be a rendezvous for all visiting lumbermen. There being no forestry building at the exposition. it would be appropriate to co-operate with the National Lumber Dealers' Association. It could be arranged to make of the Hoo-Hoo house an exhibit in itself, as favored by A. C. Baker, the director of exhibits. Different rooms in the building could be finished in various woods by the corresponding branches of the association. For instance, the California Sugar & White Pine Co. would be willing to fit up a room with the products of its mills. The organization of redwood mill owners would similarly finish another room, while the manufacturers of fir lumber would follow suit.

The question of building a Hoo-Hoo House at the Panama Pacific International Exposition was discussed with Snark Trower when the Scrivenoter was on the Coast last spring. Snark Trower took the matter up with Brother Fred Gilman, of the American Lumberman, Seattle, Wash., and procured all possible information regarding the Hoo-Hoo House at Seattle.

The American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill.; The Timberman, Portland, Ore., and The Pioneer Western Lumberman of San Francisco, Cal., have all published full account of this meeting and all have endorsed the idea of having a house at St. Francisco in 1915. Brother Geo. M. Cornwall of the Timberman has taken the matter up and is doing all possible to get the Oregon lumbermen interested. Brother Wallace Everett of the Pioneer Western Lumberman thinks it would perhaps be better not to call it the Hoo-Hoo House, but to go further and make it a building large enough to make a proper display of all coast lumber.

THE BULLETIN believes it the better plan to call it the Hoo-Hoo House and feels sure that all the coast lumbermen will do their full share towards making this house a great success and a credit to the lumber industry, and we know that Brother Everett will be only too glad to do all in his power to boost it. Brother Fred Gilman will do his share with the Washington, Montana and British Columbia lumbermen.

This house can be built and can be made of great value to the lumbermen of the Coast States.

THE BULLETIN is satisfied that all members of the Order will be glad to join hands with the coast Hoo-Hoo in the same manner they did in the erection of the Hoo-Hoo House at St. Louis and Seattle.

The banquet and jinks was a great success and the Scrivenoter hopes that more gatherings of this kind will be held not only in California, but in every Hoo-Hoo district. These are the kind of meetings that bring the lumbermen closer together in that spirit of fraternal goodfellowship that will not only make them better acquainted with each other personally, but will be of great value to the lumber industry.

GET TOGETHER.

DESERTERS

THE BULLETIN is pleased to publish the following extract from letter of the Board of Directors of the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association sent to members of that association, calling their attention to the Silver anniversary meeting of the association to be held in Kansas City, Mo., January 22, 23, 24, 1913.

DESERTERS

What do you think of the soldier who deserts the cause in time of war? What do you think of an association member who would refuse to support his association at a time when it is making a fight which involves not only his financial interest, but his very self-respect? We, as lumber dealers, and members of the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association, claim the same right as is accorded merchants in other lines, to associate together for our mutual good. Because of this, we have been unjustly criticised and abused and have been branded by the sensational press and self-seeking politicians as a class of men who are extortionists, and undesirable citizens. Your association has said that it would not stand for this abuse heaped upon it's members, and is now engaged in a contest in your behalf, the result of which will be to establish beyond a question of a doubt in the minds of the people generally, what we all know; that the retail lumbermen are as good citizens, as good business men and as honest and law-abiding as any class of merchants. Notwithstanding this, we regret to advise you that there have been a few deserters. We are happy to say that there have been very few who have failed to stand the acid test. This indicates, however, that even in as honorable and prominent a calling as that of retail lumber dealer, there are a few persons who think only of themselves, who are not broad-minded enough to realize that in failing to stand by their association in its time of need, they are helping to cast an odium on an organization which, for nearly twenty-five years has been working valiantly in their behalf, and who, by deserting, indicate that they are not willing to do their small share to support the association, morally and financially, at the most critical period in its history. We know that practically every member on our list can be depended upon to stand loyally with us and contribute not only his financial support, but likewise moral support, good wishes and encouragement to the men behind the guns who have to bear the brunt of this fight.

THE BULLETIN fully endorses the above sentiments and believes that they will find a hearty response from all loyal Hoo-Hoo.

The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo stands for the lumber industry and will do its duty in protecting the lumber industry from all unjust attacks.

The true spirit of fraternal brotherhood is needed in the lumber industry and all representative men appreciate this fully and realize that Hoo-Hoo is doing good work in bringing the lumbermen closer together, getting them acquainted with each other and showing them the beauty of the lessons taught by Hoo-Hoo.

A Few Short Lengths

IF YOU go forth with bitterness in your heart, there is a screw loose somewhere. Take another good look.

IMMINENT DISTRESS FUND

The following call was printed in the December BULLETIN:

CALL IS HEREBY MADE UPON ALL MEMBERS OF THE ORDER ASKING THAT THEY SEND THE SCRIVENOTER A CHRISTMAS OFFERING FOR THE IMMINENT DISTRESS FUND. THIS IS A PURELY VOLUNTARY OFFERING AND THERE IS NO OBLIGATION UPON ANY MEMBER TO RESPOND UNLESS HE BELIEVES IN THE GOOD WORK THAT THIS FUND COVERS.

The Scrivenoter regrets to state that the response to this call has not been as generous as expected and call is again published.

THE BULLETIN for December covered this matter fully and if you failed to receive same, advise us and we will be pleased to advise you fully.

This fund is worthy of the support of all members and your Scrivenoter is sure that if the members appreciated the good accomplished by this fund, the urgent need of funds to meet immediate needs, that they would be pleased to join hands with us.

The amount to be contributed is voluntary, but it has been suggested that 99 cents be the offering.

Your Scrivenoter has no desire or intention of forcing this of any other matter. He is simply calling you attention to the good that this fund can accomplish and will be governed by your wishes.

For the information of members who did not see December issue, below is again printed the financial statement covering this fund.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Year.	Receipts.	Disbursements.	Balance.
1899...	$918.00	$258.33	$ 659.67
1900...	925.82	585.00	1000.49
1901...	72.99	510.00	563.48
1902...	733.37	1296.85
1903...	342.00	203.00	1435.85
1904...	179.38	533.75	1087.48
1905...	860.74	271.35	1670.87
1906...	5086.93	2704.22	4053.58
1907...	2264.37	363.65	5954.30
1908...	599.39	964.52	5589.17
1909...	104.29	885.10	4808.36
1910...	101.24	926.95	3982.65

1912...	127.22	290.00	3199.85
	$12745.72	$9545.87	$3199.85

As previously stated the above statement shows a book balance of $3,199.85. There is however no balance to the credit of this fund, outside of contributions received since September 6, 1912, report of which is shown in financial statement printed elsewhere in this issue.

The Supreme Nine intend, as far as they are able, to reimburse this fund from dues collected this year. We are holding down expenses to the lowest possible minimum consistent with the good of the Order and all surplus will be applied to this fund until fund is fully reimbursed.

From correspondence received your Scrivenoter is of opinion that some of our members have confused this fund with the Death Emergency Fund. The Imminent Distress Fund is not a part of, or in any way connected with the Death Emergency Fund.

The Imminent Distress Fund is a separate fund and is being kept separate and no money is or will be expended from this fund without the approval of the Snark, Senior Hoo-Hoo and Scrivenoter.

Let us remember the teaching of Hoo-Hoo and let us make this fund one we can all be proud of and feel that we have done our share to lighten the burdens of our brothers.

The Scrivenoter will do his share. Will you do yours? DO THIS FOR HOO-HOO.

CORRESPONDENCE

(This is intended as a permanent feature and THE BULLETIN requests that members write us and give some of their experiences in Hoo-Hoo. No names will be printed unless requested.)

MY DAUGHTER has been reading our BULLETIN, and every time a new issue arrives she says "Dad, have you paid up in the 'Cats?'" This evening when I came home, my daughter greeted me with "The kittens came today and I want you to pay up and find out what the Osirian Cloister is. Have they a branch degree for ladies?"

I told her I did not know, but would write and ask. In this neck of the woods I have only met four or five Hoo-Hoo. This is not a lumber town; it is fruit and hot air; that is what brought us from Spokane three and a half years ago, "hot air."

While Spokane has plenty of "hot air," it also has the "goods."

I was in the saw mill business some miles east of Spokane, in Idaho. 1907 struck me, knocked me down, stamped on me, picked me up and threw me out of the "woods" with much experience and enough to take me back to Spokane.

I sure enjoyed the initiation into Hoo-Hoo at Spokane. It was sure going some. I remember once getting caught in a log jam and fighting for my life, but that was tame compared to my initiation.

Received my card for dues for 1913, also card for fifth call D. E. F., and THE BULLETIN. My wife reads THE BULLETIN and enjoys it just as well as I do. The Death Emergency Fund is simply great, as there are some of us members who are not so well off in this world's goods. I sincerely hope that it will keep up. Please send me the new handbook. It is so pleasant to look up our old friends from long time ago.

Let me at this time congratulate you on THE BULLETIN, and may you keep up the good work, and also may Hoo-Hoo live until lumbermen cease to be no more.

While we have only one yard here, there are three Hoo-Hoo in the city. Two who were lumbermen before us and have retired with enough of the world's goods to live on in comfort for some time to come. But any "cat" hitting * * * will know a Hoo-Hoo is near, as we have the old black boy on our sign on the shed. Also a pennant hanging on our wall, besides a card over a card rack asking "What is the address?" with the cat under it. Then we put an asbestos board between the stove and wall and it looked so bare that I took my paint brush and a can of black paint and have a cat on it three feet in diameter. Customers who do not know what it stands for say we are cat fanciers, but the traveler who drops in knows, and the one who can show the "Button" gets the favors also.

NOT A HOO-HOO

A good Iowa Hoo-Hoo sends us the following clipping:

C. Stanford Must Support His Cat

Notice—If Charles Sanford does not pay board and lodging for his black cat for one year, same will be sold for charges. H. N. Barker.—Sycamore (Ill.) Tribune.

A VALUABLE TREE

THE BULLETIN is under many obligations to Vicegerent Snark, Edwin Haynes, Southern District of England, of The Timber Trades Journal, London, England, for photograph and following article concerning "The Celebrated Wood Street Tree" of London, England. THE BULLETIN believes that this will be of interest to our members.

THE CELEBRATED WOOD STREET TREE

The plane tree in Wood Street, in the city of London, a narrow turning leading out of Cheapside, has been a conspicuous object in that thoroughfare for a couple of centuries. It is stated to have been planted on the site of the church of St. Peter-in-Chepe, which was destroyed by the memorable fire of London in 1666, the year after the dreadful plague, and the endowment was joined to that of the near-by parish of St. Vedast, Foster Lane.

There are many little nooks in the narrow streets of London city, in which trees have been planted or sprang up on the sites of ancient churches destroyed by this fire and never rebuilt, forming verdant oases in the wilderness of dingy offices and warehouses. After each of the periodical visitations of plague and sickness in old London, there was an exodus of citizens to the suburbs and surrounding country, and it appears likely that after each of these migrations the churches were considered too numerous for the population, and the endowments of those not rebuilt were joined to one or more of the neighboring parishes.

The site of the old church of St. Peter-in-Chepe is only about 50 feet by 50 feet, and is now hemmed in by warehouses on the north and west sides, and on the south side, which has a frontage to Cheapside by three low shops, each with one floor above. The site therefore is of no value for building purposes being overlooked by windows on three sides, which having existed there for more than twenty years become, according to English law "ancient lights," and interference with them would carry compensation or purchase. Furthermore, the plot on which the tree stands is consecrated ground and can not easily be diverted from the religious purpose for which it was set apart.

A number of old trees still linger in the city of London, but they are shorn of much of their natural beauty and comeliness. The tree in Wood street owes its celebrity to its situation. It is a noble specimen of the plane species, although with lower branches missing, and it reared its lofty head most luxuriantly towards the South, leaning well over the low built shops right into view up and down Cheapside until a few years ago, when it was considered dangerous if struck by a violent gale. The branches were therefore lopped, and its foliage no longer relieves the view in that busy thoroughfare.

Cheapside is the main artery of traffic east and west in the city of London, and site values there and in the vicinity are exorbitantly dear. This plot, if available for building purposes, would realize a high price, but Wood street, the home of the Drapery trade, would look strange to the Londoner if its celebrated plane tree disappeared. The photograph sent is the only available one, but it gives merely a partial view of this giant of the forest, the refreshing greenness of whose spring foliage, in striking contrast with its drab surroundings, has brightened the heart of many a jaded citizen, and reminded him of rural scenes and the joys of the forest.

WEDDING BELLS

LEECH-MANLOVE

WE ARE pleased to acknowledge card from Mrs. Laura Manlove announcing the marriage of her daughter, Margaret Isabel Manlove, to Brother Albert Edwin Leech (9707) on Monday, December 9, 1912, at Pueblo, Colo.

Brother Leech and his charming wife will be at home after January 9th at The Densmore Hotel, Kansas City, Mo.

ALBERT EDWIN LEECH

Brother Leech is a Past Vicegerent Snark and is always working for the best interests of the Order, and THE BUL-LETIN is glad to publish his photograph to show what a handsome man he is, and we congratulate Brother Leech on his good move, and we wish him and his good wife Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Brother Leech is a faithful Hoo-Hoo and is a member that the Supreme Nine has always found on the job, doing his full duty towards making Hoo-Hoo a representative Order and one that all lumbermen were proud of and considered it an honor to be a member of.

Brother Leech was married on Hoo-Hoo Day, the ninth.

YOST-WOOD

Brother James H. Yost (16020), Secretary and Treasurer of the R. E. Wood Lumber Co., Baltimore, Md., was married on December 11, 1912, to Miss Olive W. Wood at the residence of her brother, R. E. Wood, 1729 Park. ave., Baltimore, Md. The bride was given away by Brother R. E. Wood (11487), and Brothers C. E. Wood (22264) and G. L. Wood (25068) acted as ushers.

THE BULLETIN wishes them Health, Happiness and Long Life.

DALY-WILLIS

Brother John Godfrey Daly (22151) Vicegerent Snark, Eastern District Mississippi, Meridian, Miss., was married at Vicksburg, Miss., on December 21, 1912, to Miss Hazel Cameron Willis of Vicksburg, Miss. Brother T. L. O'Donnell (14385) of Sanford, Miss., past member of the Supreme Nine, was best man.

Brother Daly and Mrs. Daly will make an extended tour of the East, after which they will return to Meridian, their future home. THE BULLETIN wishes them Health, Happiness and Long Life.

MACKAY-GEORGE

Brother Walter B. Mackay (2396), manager of the North Pacific Lumber Co., Portland, Ore., was married on December 11, 1912, to Miss Anne George. On account of recent death in the bride's family and illness in the groom's family, the wedding was a quiet affair, attended by only immediate relatives.

A feature of the happy event was the fact that the bride and groom after the wedding, instead of having a wedding feast of their own, sent to the Children's Home dinners for 90 children, the bride and groom omitting their wedding supper for this thoughtful act of charity and kindness to the little inmates of the home. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay left for a short wedding trip on Puget Sound, after which they will be at home in Portland. THE BULLETIN wishes them Health, Happiness and Long Life.

THOMAS-WILEY

Brother Charles A. Thomas (24003) of the Western Pine Association, Spokane, Wash., was married to Miss Catherine Wiley of Spokane, Wash., at 2 o'clock, Christmas morning, December 25, 1912, after midnight mass, at St. John's Episcopal Church. The ceremony was read by the Rev. Robert S. Gill in the presence of the families and a few intimate friends. The wedding came as a surprise to the friends of the couple.

The church was specially decorated for the Christmas services and the couple were married under a pretty arch of evergreens.

THE BULLETIN wishes them Health, Happiness and Long Life.

A mean insinuation is often more harmful than an open charge. Be sure you know what you are talking about before you begin, and then keep quiet.

NOW that it is all over, some of us feel that perhaps there was too much pity expended on the saleswomen and the mail carriers. If we must be "spugs," restricting our Christmas shopping in order to save wear and tear on clerks and dray drivers, the business of the country will suffer and many persons will be out of work. Once there were two estimable maiden ladies in whose house a rat was caught in a trap. They very much wished to get rid of the rat, but were too kind-hearted to kill him. And for many days they kept the creature half submerged in a tub of water, in the hope that he would peacefully pass away!

On the whole, it was a very happy season; reports from all over the country are to the effect that the holiday trade was unprecedented in volume. Over most of the central and southern states there was snow on the ground—the first "white Christmas" in those sections for twelve years. Then there was a full moon—which has not happened at Christmas time, they say, for twenty years! What more could be asked for?

The New Year contains the number thirteen, but for Hoo-Hoo thirteen is regarded as peculiarly fortunate, and the prospects are that the coming twelve months will be a very successful period in the Order's history. The country is prosperous. Everybody has settled down to business, and nearly everybody takes a cheerful view of the future. Here's hoping that 1913 will deal kindly with us all.

While we are learning all about the "zones," the limit of weight, the rates, etc., we should like to be informed also whether the post that carries the parcels is the parcels post or the parcel post. Some newspapers print it one way and some the other. It is not a vital matter, but it should be settled once for all.

The weight of authority seems to be on the side of the singular—"parcel," instead of "parcels." We would not say "letters post." We do not say "letters box." The English say "pillar box" instead of letter box or mail box—as though the pillar were of any importance. But the English speak a strange language anyway—it is said that England is the only country in Europe where an American has any trouble in understanding what is said to him or any difficulty in getting about.

So far as derivation is concerned, however, "pillar box" follows the orthodox rule; the way of a word is often circuitous. but the path, though winding, is well traveled and covered deep with footprints of those that went before. Pillar and post are ancient twins, as you might say. They have journeyed together down the years and are conjoined in the old saying "from pillar to post." If we follow the trail of the post we shall land far back in the picturesque past, at a time when there were in England no roads, as we understand the term, for there were very few wheeled vehicles and even these few had no springs. Only those persons who were very well-to-do could ride in wheeled vehicles; the poor folks skulked through the woods as best they could; some of them rode on sleds drawn by an ox. In the whole country there were, as one historian expresses it, "only horse-track paths." Four of these were very long, and were called high roads, "high" being used in the sense of better or superior, as we would say high-grade goods. On these high roads, relays were necessary—some place to stop for food and a change of horses. These places, in time, became known as inns, or houses of entertainment for man and beast. But the word "inn" did not, originally, mean a tavern; it is a Saxon word and meant "house," the habitation of man. One can readily understand that, aside from food, man's first and greatest need was shelter. He needed a habitation a long time before he had any use for a place to tarry for refreshment whilst on a journey. The latter came along when civilization was beginning to be complex, when man's wants were increasing. Naturally, a word meaning house or habitation would be in the language long before such a word as tavern or hotel was needed. Language was born of human needs.

So when the English people, away back in the dim days of long ago, reached the point in development where they could travel on the high road, making a journey of several hundred miles, they needed a word that meant a "stopping" place. They had no such word and couldn't think of any; so they used their old word "inn" in a new sense, and the plan worked very well indeed. The word "hotel" came along much later, from France.

These inns on the high roads were very crudely fitted up. There was no elaborate equipment, of course, for it was a rough age and everything was in keeping with the times. The system of bookkeeping at the inn was simple—the score or reckoning of the traveler was chalked up on the door post. And thus the word "post" became the father of many words: The man that carried the mail was the most regular guest, the one whose reckoning was most frequently posted, and in time he became known as the postman. Later, the stage coach in which the mail was conveyed was called the post—hence to send by post, to post a letter; to receive information was to be posted, etc.

And all the time, the actual post had little to do with it; for, of course, the people got away from the post, literally—the inn keeper, in course of time, bought a register and quit "chalking up" the reckonings of the guests; all sorts of improvements came about and also some drawbacks such as big tips, bell hops and souvenir "post" cards. And the thing that brought these changes was the improvement in the roads, which was due to the growing and expanding mind of man. Back of it all was that which is not tangible, not visible—not perceptible by any of the physical senses, yet, figuratively, we are still tied to the post. English suffragettes are mutilating London "pillar" boxes and here we are, in the United States, thrashing around and trying to find out whether to say parcel post or parcels post.

We are sure of the post, though. It has been our friend and companion since the days when our ancestors, hairy-legged savages, quit prowling through the forests on the shores of the Baltic sea. The post marked an epoch in their history. It is fitting that the word should have a prominent place in our language. (This is a safe thing to say—because if it were not "fitting" it wouldn't be there.)

Out of the stress of human need came the post in the first place. In a sense, everything comes in answer to prayer—the soul's sincere desire unuttered or expressed, is the greatest force there is. The human mind is so circumscribed, however, so pitifully limited, that it can not always grasp the real desire of the soul. The mind sees a post, with charges chalked on it, but can not glimpse the mighty go-spirit that brought the post, the inn, the coach, the road, into being. Nothing daunts the soul, but the mind is easily frightened. Like a half-blind horse it "shies" at a shadow. It cannot perceive reality. Of the soul it is written:

My feet are mortised and tenoned in granite.
I laugh at what you call dissolution.
And I know the amplitude of time.

The parcel post has been a long time a coming. But it has always been on the way. There was never a time when it was not inevitable. It is mortised and tenoned with the basic principles of life, riveted to the supreme desire of man to annihilate distance. And whatever is allied to the universal go-spirit is irresistible; it can not be averted and it would not even be delayed but for the fact that we are like children groping in the twilight, not knowing how far the unknown transcends the what we know.

The most acute and painful impression of which the mind is capable is a sense of limitation. The eye focuses on form—that is, on that which is restricted, bound, confined. Its limitations give an object shape and size. We can not see that which has no form; and since form is the acme of limitation, naturally we are hedged in and penned up. Still there is something inside of us that recognizes no bounds. We are afraid of change, yet are constantly changing everything. We are being pushed forward by a sort of fierce urge that we do not understand and which scares us when it takes form; that is, when it reaches the point where we can see it with our mortal eyes.

How many good men were scared stiff when the linotype first came into use! From the dark predictions made, one would have thought that soon the bodies of starving printers would strew the ground. Labor-saving devices have frightened more men than ever trembled at the dread vision of war or pestilence.

But now more printers are at work than ever. For, somehow, the bounds always "give" a little. The iron lid lifts and we can see through a wider crack a little further. Then comes another push from behind. And we are scared again.

This is a short but true history of mankind from the beginning of the world.

Starting timidly with our eleven-pound limit parcel post, the weight will probably soon be increased and then again perhaps until it approaches the weight limit of Germany's parcel post, 110 pounds, or of Belgium's, which is 132 pounds. It is the nature of limits to stretch out. As for the rates, as the initial rates established in this country are necessarily experimental and as we aim simply to make the postoffice pay its way, it is probable that as our service develops we shall make reductions that will place our rates below those of other countries, although their greater density of population gives European countries an opportunity of cheaper operation.

We may expect to see a great increase in direct dealing between the producer on the farm and the consumer in the city, which will make for economy of distribution. The "middle man" is appalled at this prospect, but presently, looking through the space under the lifted lid, he will co-ordinate a wider range of vision and will cease to quake. Whatever relieves the farmer from his isolation and the city dweller from the high cost of living must be a factor for general good—a long stride in National co-operation. A thoughtful editorial in the Oregonian presents this view:

Any misgivings which the country merchant or the merchant in small towns has felt about the inroads which the parcel post would enable mail-order houses to make on their business will be quieted by the adoption of the zone system of postage rates. For 14 cents a Portland merchant can send a ten-pound parcel to any point in the city or on any of the rural routes radiating from this city. A country merchant can send a parcel to any person on his own rural route at the same rate. To send the same parcel from Chicago would cost $1.20. The local merchant thus enjoys protection against the merchant in the remote city equal to the difference between the railroad freight rate and the parcel post rate, which is about $9 per 100 pounds. The parcel post, instead of injuring, will help the country merchant by enabling him to give quick delivery, while his customer must now spend time in going to the store to make his purchase.

The parcel post is a step even greater in importance than the postal savings bank in making the postal service a real servant of the people, enabling them to do their business with the greatest economy and ease.

It is sometimes easier to trace the origin of words than of things; clothes, for instance—how did they come to be worn? Mr. Huxley and other scientists maintain that apparel first came into use as adornment, not as protection. The human race originated in a warm country, and for a time no covering was really necessary. Yet there is evidence that some sort of raiment was adopted long before the various emigrations took place.

In time a distinctive costume came to be cherished as a sort of badge of nationality. This is particularly true of the "kilt," the ancient costume of the Highlanders of Scotland. The different patterns of the tartan had to begin with a distinct family or tribal signification, and the origin of the "plaid" may be ascribed to a kind of "totemism" or primitive heraldry found among many nations. The origin of the kilt is lost in the obscurity of the past. In a way, such a garb must have lent itself readily to a swift skurrying over the mountains; but it must have been rather a cool costume for a bleak and foggy country. At any rate, at the present day there is no necessity for the particular kind of dress used by the Highlanders of old. Nevertheless, the people of Scotland are endeavoring to preserve the custom of the wearing of the kilt. The adoption of the national costume is an appeal to national Scottish sentiment, which is said to be growing stronger every year. A recent issue of the Highland weekly which affords the writer of these lines so much diversion is authority for the following:

"There are many hundreds of societies throughout the United Kingdom which have for their object the popularizing of the Scottish dress; in London alone there are nearly one hundred Scottish societies, and a great number of these exist for the purpose of making this dress popular."

A few weeks ago there was a big gathering of Highlanders in Glasgow, a sort of round-up of native sons of the Isle of Skye. The meeting was presided over by Sir Alexander MacDonal of the Isles, who made a very eloquent speech, referring to Skye as one of the early homes of the Celtic race. It appears that the Isle of Skye (which means isle of gaps, from a Gaelic word signifying an indented coast line) is a charming place in many ways—a good place to come from. "Skye," said MacDonal of the Isles, "has never proved a gold mine to its inhabitants. If you want to make your way in the world, you leave Skye." From his talk it is evident, however, that the hand of change has laid hold on the misty isle. A Board of Agriculture is trying to help things along and the general outlook is improving. Speaking of the Board, Sir Alexander said:

"They seem to have a veritable craze for barbed wire fences. When you visit the north of Skye, you will find that the hills and the peat bogs simply bristle with barbed wire. Now, barbed wire may be a necessary thing, but it does not encourage the wearing of the kilt!"

Sentiment for the past is beautiful in itself, and without sentiment, life would be very barren and desolate. But it is difficult to cherish the customs of a bygone age in the face of such palpable obstacles as barbed wire presents to a man in kilts. Change rules us all, however much we fear and dread it. Our ancestors came by a path along which is no traveling backward.

In the columns of the same paper that contained the speech of the son of Skye appears a notice of the approaching social meeting of the Clan Gregor, which will occur in Glasgow, January 24. It seems that this society was incorporated as far back as the year 1822 and has done a great deal for charity and education. In announcing the meeting, the Highland paper says:

"There was a time when members of the Clan Gregor were not allowed to meet in greater number than four and they were prohibited from carrying weapons except a pointless knife to eat their victuals with. By an act of government dated April 3, 1603, the name of MacGregor was expressly abolished, pain of death being pronounced against those who should call themselves Gregor or MacGregor, the names of their fathers."

This takes us back to some dark chapters in English and Scottish history. But times have changed. The MacGregors can assemble now, and the chief of their clan, Sir Malcolm MacGregor of MacGregor, is going to preside at the meeting. But the MacGregors will not be allowed, let us hope, "to eat their victuals" with their knives! After all, is there any such thing as real freedom?

One more except from the engaging record of interesting events in the Scottish newspaper:

"We learn that the Skyemen in distant Calgary, Canada, are to hold a banquet on the 31st. We hope they may have a good Hogmanay."

What is Hogmanay? It looks like a typographical error.

Americans so often are accused of a gross lack of sentiment and a preponderance of the commercial spirit that it is refreshing occasionally to see a news despatch like the following, which appeared under recent date from Tulsa, Oklahoma:

Tradition and sentiment have saved a giant tree, known as the Creek Council Tree, which stands in the center of South Cheyenne street in this city. An ordinance to pave the street was adopted recently and some citizens wanted the tree destroyed, but a decision to spare it has been reached.

Beneath the tree, according to tradition, are buried the ashes of the Cherokees brought from the old council ground in Georgia, when the Creeks came to the Indian Territory more than seventy-five years ago. Where the tree stands the first important meetings of the tribe were held.

In the mass of special articles and editorials on the subject of the war between Turkey and the Allied Balkan States, the name of St. Sophia's, the magnificent mosque, or Mohammedan church, in Constantinople frequently appears. Apparently there is a wide-spread misapprehension in regard to the name of this edifice. The following paragraph from an editorial in a New York paper is a specimen of many of a similar tenor:

Though for some centuries the largest and most splendid of mosques, St. Sophia was built for a Christian church, built in the form of a Greek cross and still bears the name of a Christian saint.

No one has as yet come forward with any information concerning the St. Sophia who gave her name to the great church at Constantinople, although one would imagine that some enterprising American editor would have turned loose a special writer on such a subject. According to the best authorities, there never was a saint named Sophia. Of the mosque of that name, the London Chronicle says:

It is not named after a saint at all, its correct designation Agia Sophia, meaning "House of Divine Wisdom." According to tradition an angel inspired this name. Shortly after the foundation of the church had been laid by Justinian, a boy set to watch the workmen's tools was visited by a celestial figure, with wings reaching to heaven. "Go and tell the emperor," commanded the angel, "that this church is to be named 'The House of Divine Wisdom,' and on hearing the boy's story Justinian obeyed the angelic command.

Whether named for a saint or not, the church known as St. Sophia's was the great cathedral of the Eastern Christians before Constantinople was taken by the Turks in 1453. It is a beautiful building, with dome and minarets after the pure style of Byzantine architecture. St. Sophia's is surmounted by the crescent, emblem of Mohammedanism, which supplanted the cross when the Turks took the city of Constantinople. It is the ambition of the Balkans to drive the crescent back into Asia whence it came. The religion of the inhabitants of the Balkans is mainly Greek Catholic. A well informed writer says of the religious element in the present war:

It is simply impossible for a Westerner to realize the depth and intensity and pervasiveness of the religious motive in Near Eastern life. In the Levant, religion is all and in all—though by religion is not meant necessarily personal piety. Everybody adheres to some form of religious faith. In the four nations which are now turning a warlike front toward Turkey the Greek Orthodox Church is the state religion. Having this in common,

Bulgarians and Greeks, who not many years ago talked of war between themselves, find the tie that binds stronger than all considerations that separate.

The magnitude of the Greek Orthodox Church is surprising to Americans. In the region under discussion the mighty Greek Orthodox Church, which likewise sways the Russian Empire, dominates the people.

Why should anyone read the trashy novels of the day when there is so much of romance in the record of current events? The meetings of the Kilt association in Glasgow, the assembling of the erstwhile outlawed MacGregors, the centuries-old religious conflict between the Crescent and the Cross which has been romantically chronicled in hundreds of books—how much more appealing all this than the story of some semi-degenerate man and woman, each lawfully married to some one else, but planning to elope with each other. Strange that anybody with red blood in his veins will read mushy fiction when facts are so much more romantic.

The Powers of Europe sitting in conference at St. James' Palace in London to decide the terms of peace between the Turk and the Balkan Allies—that is another romantic news item. St. James' Palace is the terminus of St. James' street and all around are historical associations. The buildings in St. James' street are mostly clubs and a few men's shops, most famous of which in the past was that of Hoby, the bootmaker. Hoby claimed to have won the battle of Waterloo by virtue of the boots he made for the Duke of Wellington and the prayers he offered in Islington, where he was a Methodist preacher. St. James' Palace, now the home of court officials, was the royal abode from the reign of William the Third (1689-1702), in whose reign Whitehall was burned, to the time of George the Fourth. Charles the First was imprisoned in St. James' before his execution (1649), and on the fatal morning he walked to Whitehall—to bow his head upon the block.

In order thoroughly to enjoy reading the newspapers nowadays, one should read, or re-read, the "Arabian Nights;" Byron's poems; "The Talisman," by Walter Scott; and the "Conquest of Granada," by Washington Irving.

When the Mohammedans were pushed back from Western Europe centuries ago, they continued increasing in power and numbers in the East. The Caliph at Bagdad was one of the most puissant monarchs of the Orient, and in the "Arabian Nights" a clear and comprehensive picture is given of the court of Haroun al Raschid. The "Conquest of Granada" tells the story of the ten years' struggle between Cross and Crescent in Spain, in the days of Ferdinand and Isabella. "The Talisman" describes the strife between Richard The Lion-hearted, of England, and Saladin, the Sultan, for the possession of Jerusalem.

Always one of the tenets of war has been: To the victor belongs the booty. A Pacific Coast paper has discovered that also to the victor belongs the beauty:

The handsomest of the commanders in the Balkan war is Prince Danilo, of Montenegro, whose moustache is simply fascinating. But according to the pictures in current periodicals, all the allies are handsome. Even the Bulgarian peasant soldiers are ideally proportioned, with faces of an ethereal charm. Beauty seems to belong to the victors in modern warfare. The Turk used to be portrayed as an Apollo in the days of his prosperity, but now he looks more like a scarecrow.

Keeping the peace between the Greeks and Turks in Cyprus is a task which calls forth a high degree of diplomacy and integrity. Cyprus is the third largest island in the Mediterranean Sea, situated sixty miles from the coast of Asia Minor. It belongs to Turkey, but by convention of 1878 it has been under "British administration"—in other words, Cyprus is nominally Turkish but really British in government. About a third of the inhabitants are Mohammedans; the rest belong to the Greek church. A police official in the town of Famagusta, in Cyprus, found himself in a difficult position recently when waited upon by a body of Greeks, asking if they might have a procession the following Tuesday. According to Paris correspondent, this is what happened:

"Why do you wish a procession?" he asked. "To commemorate the everdistressful taking of Constantinople by the infidel Turks," was the mournful reply. Half an hour later a Turkish deputation called upon the same official. Had they the permission of his excellency to fire the cannons the following Tuesday? "Why do you wish to fire the cannons?" he asked. "To celebrate the ever-glorious taking of Constantinople by the true believers of the Prophet," they replied. After some consideration he gave the required permission to both parties, on their solemn assurance that there would be no infringement of law and order, and it says much for the prestige of the British government that no heads were broken when the rival celebrations took place in due course.

MOOSE JAW, SASK., CANADA

VICEGERENT SNARK S. P. W. COOKE of Southern Saskatchewan held his first Concatenation at Moose Jaw, on November 22, 1912, and believe us, it was a "cuckoo."

Brother Cooke may not have discovered the North Pole, but he certainly would if he had started after it.

Brother Cooke advises "We have a couple more Concatenations in view before summer, the success of which are assured inasmuch as Hoo-Hoo seems to have greatly revived during the last few months."

Our good brothers in Canada have set a pace and it is up to us to get in the game and show our renewed interest and enthusiasm and keep the "pot boiling" with that spirit of fraternal goodfellowship that governs Hoo-Hoo.

The following account appeared in the December issue of the Retail Lumberman and Western Builder of Winnipeg, for which we tender Brother Hooper our thanks and wish him continued Health, Happiness and Long Life.

SOUTHERN Saskatchewan Hoo-Hoo are praising their Vicegerent, S. P. W. Cooke, for the excellent Concatenation held by him at Moose Jaw on Friday evening, November 22nd. To the degree of "M. D." the famous Doctor is now entitled to the affix "D. D." (delivery degree), for he certainly delivered the goods in fine style and woke up all the sleeping cats from Portal to Hudson's Bay. He was ably assisted by Supreme Officer W. H. Tennant, from Winnipeg, and one of the best staffs that ever donned the robes.

And in the notification of outside Hoo-Hoo Doc Cooke pulled off a stunt that has probably never been thought of before. The stunt was not only novel, but it was effective, inasmuch as it taxed each receiver of the invitation four cents in current coin of the realm. It appears that Doc had passed many sleepless nights as to how would be the best way to make the sleepy Hoo-Hoo in Winnipeg and other places wake up. He had the pile of invitations all before him in nice large, heavy yellow envelopes. Inside the envelopes were placed the big, heavy four-page cards, 6x9 S. 1. S. Had the envelope been sawged or without a gummed flap, Doc would not have been able to put one over the outside Hoo-Hoo. As the pile lay there, neatly addressed in a beautiful Spencerian hand, he gave the order to stamp each one with King George's perforated labels, red in color, two cents in value. Then, as he eyed the pile, he said to himself, "These printed cards must weigh over two ounces each, and will need a two-cent stamp," as the rate is one cent per two ounces if the flap is left open, which was entirely correct. Then a wave of inspiration came over Doc, as he gave the order, "Seal 'em up!" The fatal order was obeyed and the cards mailed—letter rate!

Winnipeg Hoo-Hoo were all presented with a demand by the P. O. letter carriers for "four cents, please," before they would give up the fat yellow envelopes, labelled "Big Cat Fest at Moose Jaw;" but the boys all fell for it, and forked out the four cents "postage due."

When we received ours, not having any coppers on us, we borrowed some from our stenographer. Brother Tennant says he paid five cents and got no change, whilst Alan Stewart gave up four green one-centers to balance account. Sandy McDonald was out, and the carrier couldn't leave it. Springate says it was a "put-up job to attract attention."

Doc created talk all right, but the cards were only received a few days before the actual "Fest" on November 22nd, and after we had received our bulletin stating that the affair had been pulled off on the 15th. Consequently a lot missed going; but our cat was despatched per fast freight, and got there "with bells on" in time to note some of the important occurrences.

Here is the notice as sent out from the Hoo-Hoo "caterwaulery" at Moose Jaw:

PROCLAMATION:

Be it known to all who walk in the light of Hoo-Hoo Land that: A Concatenation will be held at Moose Jaw, Sask., on Friday evening, the 22nd of November, 1912, in the Temple of Ptah, Elks' Hall, 8½ Main street.

You are commanded to leave everything to be present at sharp eight o'clock, as on the stroke of nine will commence a solemn exemplification of the Biographical Degree and the Degree of the Playful Kitten—S. P. W. Cook, Vicegerent of Southern Saskatchewan.

Forget you ordered cedar doors
To be shipped with pine two by fours;
Or that car sixty six four nine
Was a C. P. and not Soo Line;
Last night's game, this morning's head,
What Simey held or Candy said.
Forget pat straights and loaded dice,
Old Craig's grouch and Nelson's price.
Sherry's Shorts and Manning's boards,
Or how Bill Tomlinson affords
To keep a luxury like Lew,
When he can engage me or you.
Forget that Bernie runs a car—
The day may not be so afar
When even Thorpe may break his snout
By falling from his runabout.
Be not envious. Look at Dell,
With nothing but shiplap to sell.
Even L. P. was known to smile
When O'Neil sent in one worth while.
Don't you care what Julian does.
What Harris says or Ryan owes,
Or deals that Hasselfield put through—
Forget them all. Be a Hoo-Hoo.
Forget your two by fours and eights
And scandalous construction rates;
Six by sixes and ten by tens;
Ledgers, pencils, journals, pens;
Your one by two, and two by twice;
Past due accounts and Eaton's price;
Number five boards and saw-edged stuff.
Salesman's salve, contractor's guff.

Forget the draft that's due today—
Let it go back the same old way.
Forget odd lengths and T. and G.,
S. 4 S. and S. and E.,
And S. 2 S. and D. & M.,
And maple flooring run E. M.,
And oak veneer floor three-eighths thick;
Or that you failed to get a stick
Of twelve by twelve by forty-three,
Sound fir, S. 1 S. 1 E.,
Needed on that cut-priced bill
For Jones' stable on South Hill.
Forget your troubles and your woes.
Or that your wife needs some new clothes.
Only one thing do not forget—
You're a Hoo-Hoo and living yet.
Forget your troubles and your woes,
To make you think he never lies,
When he says he figured Smith's bill
Full list price—cash in the till.
You know he lied—it can't be true—
For you cut your profit in two.

The Concatenation was one of the most successful ever held in Western Canada. A splendid class of twenty-five cats was initiated into the mysteries of Hoo-Hoo. It was a class that was thoroughly representative of the lumber and sash and door business of Southern Saskatchewan, and will make a worthy addition to the ranks of Hoo-Hoo in Canada.

Brother Cooke, with the help of the Moose Jaw Hoo-Hoo, had everything arranged most satisfactorily, and deserves great credit for the smooth and impressive manner in which the Concatenation was carried out.

After a most interesting and enjoyable meeting, an adjournment for a session on the roof was made to the Royal George Hotel, where Host Mead had prepared a splendid Dutch lunch, after partaking of which a very interesting and enjoyable programme toasts, speeches and selections by vaudeville artists was heard.

The meeting was attended by a large number of Old Cats, eighty-one all told, who have evidently made up their minds that Hoo-Hoo is very much alive; and from the spirit with which everyone joined in the proceedings is quite evident that Hoo-Hoo has taken a new lease of life in Western Canada and will be a vital force in bringing together the lumbermen of the West for their mutual Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Vicegerent Manning, of Saskatoon, who was present, made the interesting announcement that he intended holding a Concatenation in Saskatoon in January, which has every promise of being a "crackerjack."

Brother Tennant in his speech, dwelt on the objects of the Order. All the speeches were happy and snappy, keenly enjoyed by all present.

The account of "the blow-out" on the roof was thus itemized by our special correspondent under the heading: "The Stuffing was Knocked Out of Turkey?" as follows: "The question of the Balkan War was solved by the Hoo-Hoo at midnight. There were many Hungarians gathered round the board; fortunately Servians were not wanting. It was an appropriate moment for roasted Turkey to appear, and an opportune occasion for the presence of Greece. At the close of the meal many Bul'jarians evidenced their satisfaction at the way the Hoo-Hoo Brigade had charged on the trenches under the General Cook. The heroes of the famous charge were Del Meater and his Pal Meater. They did not Balkan the onward rush and the tents found no Tennant."

The following was the toast list: "The King," National Anthem; "The New Members," proposed by S. P. W. Cooke, response by E. C. Davis and E. D. Kimball; "The Salemen," proposed by O. M. Akers, response by L. J. Palmetier; "The Retailers," proposed by H. A. Manning, response by W. E. Moore; "The Press," proposed by S. A. Hamilton, response by E. J. McMillan.

Between toasts the company was admirably entertained by Miss Bessie Brownall and Chas. Cross, of the Bijou Theatre, several stirring numbers by Clifton's orchestra, and by Harry Foy's fine singing.

Humorous stories were excellently told by Brothers Stryker, Tennant, McMillan, Catherwood, Manning, Palmatier, Delamater and others, and at 3:30 a. m. the enthusiastic gathering broke up by singing "Auld Lang Syne."

Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo Tennant wishes to thank the Southern Saskatchewan Hoo-Hoo for the cordial reception they gave him, and also for the honor of presiding as Snark at the Concatenation and as toastmaster at the "session on the roof."

Each guest at the Royal George banquet was presented with a menu card and toast list, which were tied with a silk cord in a neat cover. Doc again showed his originality in his menu card, which was gotten up in the form of an order, the name of each guest being written in as purchaser, while his Hoo-Hoo number was used as an order number.

MOBERLY, MO.

Vicegerent Snark L. D. West, Northern District of Missouri, held his first Concatenation at Moberly, Mo., on Saturday, December 7th.

This was first Concatenation held in Missouri since Scrivenoter's office was moved to St. Louis and Brother West has set a high mark for the other Vicegerent Snarks to follow.

Brother West was most ably assisted by Brothers H. G. Buckner (20571) and E. N. Wood (6353).

This Concatenation was held in connection with the Fourth Annual Convention of the North Central Missouri Retail Lumber Dealers' Association. The association meeting was a great success and promises to be one of the best associations in the account of good accomplished for its members.

While Concatenation was being held the committee had arranged a theatre party for the ladies. The Concatenation was opened at 7:30 p. m. and seventeen lively kittens crossed the gardens. At 10 p. m. a banquet was served at the Merchants' Hotel. This was a joint banquet of the Association and Hoo-Hoo. All the ladies were present at the banquet and everyone had a most enjoyable time. Over two hundred were present.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Vicegerent Snark Wm. F. Ebbing, St. Louis, held Concatenation at Mercantile Club, St. Louis, Mo., Saturday evening, December 14, 1912. Dinner was served at 6:30 p. m., and Concatenation followed immediately. Brother Ebbing got up a very unique notice of this Dinner-Concatenation and same was mailed to all members in St. Louis and East St. Louis, and nearby points in Missouri and Illinois.

Brother Ebbing was disappointed in number of members present, as well as small class of kittens. All present, however, appeared to have had a most enjoyable time.

Another Concatenation will be held after the first of the year.

MARSHFIELD, OREGON

Vicegerent Snark W. J. Conrad, Western District of Oregon, held his first Concatenation at Marshfield, on September 27, 1912. Report of this Concatenation has been delayed. The Concatenation was held at the Eagles Hall.

All the candidates were taken through the various steps of the initiatory work and were thoroughly enlightened as to all of the mysteries of Hoo-Hoo land. Special work was reserved for several of the "kittens." They were given about all that can be applied in the way of knowledge of the Black Cat. Those upon whom the extra degrees were conferred were Stanley Bartlett, Roy Wernick and William Eckblad.

At the conclusion of the business meeting the party went to the Chandler and there enjoyed a supper which was served about 11 p.m. The menu was as follows:

Crab Cocktail.

Olives.

Assorted sandwiches.

Pickles.

Cold meats.

Salad.

Ice Cream and Wafers.

Coffee.

There were informal talks made by quite a number. M. C. Maloney introduced A. H. Potter, Manager of E. C. Atkins Co., Inc. of Portland and Seattle, who came here especially to attend the meeting and who acted as toastmaster. Brother Potter was introduced as a man who probably had attended more Hoo-Hoo meetings than any one else on the coast.

Brother Potter said he had some telegrams which he wanted to read and make fun reading them, as from President Taft, Governor West and Gifford Pinchot. Brother Potter called for expressions from a number including Messrs. Wernick, Brouillard, Geisendorfer, Powers, Conrad, Maloney, Glazier, Guyton and Kehoe.

The members extended a vote of thanks to Brother Potter for coming to Coos Bay to attend the Concatenation and assisting in the arrangements.

Lee Webster was asked to give the benediction and paid quite a fitting tribute to the organization.

Brother Conrad is to be congratulated upon the success of this Concatenation and we are expecting good news from his district this year.

EL PASO, TEXAS

Vicegerent Snark R. A. Whitlock, Western Texas, held his first Concatenation of the 1912-1913 Hoo-Hoo year at El Paso, Texas, on October 23, 1912. Report of this Concatenation has been delayed.

This Concatenation was held in connection with the annual city celebration known as the Os-Aple Jubilee. Extra robes were furnished and all Hoo-Hoo present joined in the big parade. They had a black cat, ten feet high, mounted on a wagon, and this was pulled by the kittens. This was a great "stunt" and originated with Brother W. R. Miller (9077).

Concatenation was held in the Chamber of Commerce Building, and Brother Whitlock advises us that this was one of the best he has held; that it was a great success in every way, and that all present had a most enjoyable time.

The following committees assisted in making the Concatenation a success: "Kittens"—A. G. Nelson, A. L. Lathrop and W. A. Schriver. "Session-on-the-Roof"—J. T. Fletcher and J. H. Meece. "Onion-bed"—C. L. Sirmans, E. A. Henning and Ross Jennings.

Brother W. E. Black of Dallas, Texas, acted as "Junior" and Brother Whitlock states that his work was the best ever and of a high order and that he has heard nothing but the highest praise of Brother Black's good work.

Brother Whitlock is to be congratulated on the success of this Concatenation.

EUREKA, CALIFORNIA

Vicegerent Snark Marshall C. Wood, Humboldt District, California, of Scotia, held his first concatenation at Eureka, on December 21, 1912.

Snark Trower, San Francisco, expected to attend this concatenation, but as Eureka, at present, has no railroad connections and on account of bad weather on the coast, delaying the boats, he was unable to get there.

Eureka is the largest city in the United States which has no connection by railroad with the outside world. The Overland road over the mountains is closed during the winter months and all traffic with Humboldt Bay is by sea. Within another year Eureka and the Humboldt country will be connected up by rail with the outside world, about seventy-five miles of a gap over the mountains being yet unfinished.

Snark Trower advises that there are some wonderful bodies of immense redwood timber in that county and that the ride by automobile from San Francisco to Eureka is a treat and that he will surely attend the April Concatenation and will make the trip by auto and will be accompanied by a good many of the San Francisco Hoo-Hoo.

This is the first Concatenation held in this section of California for six years and was such a success that Brother Wood has been urged to hold another soon and he has promised to hold a Concatenation on April 19, 1913, at Eureka.

The following article is from The Weekly Californian, Eureka, December 28, 1912:

THE MEETING OF THE HOO-HOO

The Hoo-Hoo are an organization of full grown men, and yet from the pranks they play at an initiation of the order one might well be certain that they have had boyhood days and have not forgotten them even in the sterner duties of manhood. The order is composed of men who are directly or indirectly connected with the lumber industry, but that is forgotten when they array themselves in the panoply of the mystic rites and sally forth to capture stray kittens.

The meeting and initiation in this city last Saturday night will long be remembered by the newly made cats, and it is safe to say, by the old cats as well. As a meeting it was more than a success. It was a mirth producer, a dispeller of clouds, and though the shades of night had at the time wrapped themselves like a mantle around this portion of the earth, there can be no question that there was added somewhat to the sunshine of the world.

At all events that meeting at the Pavilion created more laughter than any similar meeting has for many a long day past.

In order to appreciate the extreme friendliness of the old cats for the little kittens one would necessarily have to be initiated or experience an adoption; but suffice it to say that there was hardly a moment during the two and a half hours of meowing that was not mirth provoking, interesting and entertaining. In order to amuse the kittens the old cats had prepared and played all kinds of funny stunts. The butt of these funny stunts was most frequently one or more of the newly made kittens, of whom there were in the neighborhood of forty-five. Tying two together by their tails and throwing them over a clothes line was about the only feature familiar to cat life that was omitted.

After the old cats had satisfied their spirit of playfulness, they showed their kindness to the kittens by taking them, one and all, to the Hotel Vance, where all listened to the pleasing meows of the Hawaiian quartette and the Royal Italian Band. The tables were loaded with such delicacies as were most likely to tempt the appetites of well regulated kittens, and indeed so well was that part of the program carried off that Mr. J. J. Richards, the manager of the Vance House, was thrice toasted as the right man in the right place.

It was well toward the dawn before the cats and kittens, feasted to sufficiency, decided to retire from cat life and resume the stations in life to which the morrow would soon call them, but it is safe to say that when the old Tom cat calls again there will be 39 kittens, now fully grown to cats, who will respond with a glad meow. And they will endeavor to carry into common life the jovial spirit of good fellowship and good to all men that seems to prevail in the circle of the Hoo-Hoo.

This Concatenation was in connection with an important meeting of the lumbermen of the Humboldt District held at the Chamber of Commerce, Eureka, for the purpose of discussing matters of interest to the lumber industry of that section. Among other matters discussed at this meeting was the Employer's Liability Law, which is effective in California. It is desired that changes be made in this law so that it will be better for both employees and employers.

Cassey Fillmore entertained the "kittens" by giving a number of Swedish dialect stories. Songs were sung by the Hawaiian Quartette, and music furnished by the twenty-piece Royal Italian Band.

Remarks were made by a few of the newly made kittens, H. E. Crawford of Scotia stated that the order should not be allowed to die, but that they should have a "get-together" meeting again in order that the members of Southern Humboldt could find out what their brother members are doing elsewhere. Brief remarks as to the initiation were made by H. W. Cole of Bulwinkle, Jerry Millay of Eureka, and G. W. Fenwick of Samoa.

It was remarked by old members that the banquet was the best ever attended, as not one drop of liquor was served—only good spring water. It was a surprise, as Millay thought it would be a "wet" banquet.

WHO ARE ELIGIBLE

Article III of Constitution:

"Section 1. Active membership.—The membership in this Order shall be limited to white male persons of full age of twenty-one (21) years, of good moral character, who possess one or more of the following seven qualifications: Lumbermen, Foresters, Officers of Lumber Associations, Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies, Newspaper Men, Railroad Men, Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men, and so definitely shall the line of qualification be drawn in each class that the occupation under which persons apply for membership shall be their main or principal occupation, and it shall be the business of the person recognized in the community in which he resides as his principal vocation.

Specific Definition of Eligibility

"(a) Lumbermen.—Lumbermen shall be those who are engaged either in the ownership or sale of timber lands, timber or logs, or the manufacture or sale, at wholesale or retail, of forest products, either as owners, officers, managers of departments, general superintendents, sales managers or salesmen.

"(b) Foresters.—This class shall include those persons graduated from recognized schools of forestry, officials of the forestry service and members of forest commissions or boards, either state or national.

"(c) Officers of Lumber Associations.—Regularly organized lumber associations, state or national.

"(d) Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies.—Officers or representatives of mutual or inter-insurance companies placing risks on lumber property exclusively.

"(e) Newspaper Men.—Publishers, proprietors or persons regularly connected with the editorial or business departments of newspapers.

"(f) Railroad Men.—General officers, general and assistant freight, passenger, claim, purchasing, commercial, soliciting and station agents, chief dispatchers and train masters and members of railroad commissions.

"(g) Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men.—Persons engaged in the manufacture or sale, to lumber manufacturers, of sawmill or planing mill machinery and mill supplies.

"(h) Initiation.—Such persons as above mentioned may be initiated under proper application, payment of initiation fee and election to membership.

"(i) Limited Active Membership.—The active membership shall be limited to 83,999 members in good standing.

Admission of Paint, Cement, Tiling, Roofing and Oil Men

"(j) Manufacturers, wholesale dealers and salesmen of cement, roofing, paints, oil, tiling and other staple articles cannot become active members, but will be welcome as honorary members."

The above is printed for the information of all members. We must comply with the above. In case of doubt take up with the Scrivenoter and he will ask the Supreme Nine to rule.

Watch this closely and before voting for a candidate be sure he is eligible.

DUES FOR 1913

At 9:09 on September 9, 1912, dues became payable for 1913. The Hoo-Hoo year begins and ends on Sept. 9. Look up your cards, and if you find that you have not paid 1913 dues, send $1.65 to the Scrivenoter at once.

Published Monthly by the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, at St. Louis, Missouri.

WILLIAM M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at St. Louis, Missouri, as second-class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year.....66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

THE BULLETIN is the only official medium of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo recognized by the Supreme Nine.

Address all communications for THE BULLETIN to W. M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, 1219 Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO., FEBRUARY 9, 1913.

The following article appeared in American Lumberman, under date of August 10, 1912. Under heading of "RANDOM WIDTH COMMENT." This is to the point and we want every member to read it carefully, give to the idea advanced therein your most careful thought and write us fully your views. DO THIS FOR HOO-HOO.

"Whatever the destiny of Hoo-Hoo may or may not be, it can not be denied that its average of membership is as high as that of any similar organization in this or any other country. Whatever may be in store for the organization there is no denying that if ultimate failure awaits it, that destiny will be due to defective organization and not to concrete personal incapacity. Whether or not the success of which this body of men is thus clearly capable is impending will depend upon whether or not its organic and administrative future shall be shaped in a manner effectively to invoke the latent powers of good that are in it. It remains to be seen whether or not the ranks of the Order include a man or set of men with the statesmanship and the resourcefulness needful to stir the dormant individual capabilities, aspirations and energies of the fraternity into a united and rational force vitalizing and cohesive enough to redeem it from its past and present lack of the attributes mentioned. As a fraternity merely, or as an organization providing a means of relief for the needy and unfortunate principally, the Order has not only lacked the necessary means to that end, but perhaps because so largely not individually needed it also has failed to arouse the necessary incentive. The existing funeral benefit is a good and gracious thing, but not of a degree of importance alone to justify the continued maintenance of the organization. The now available social and fraternal sides of a purely voluntary texture are the additional features of any value and in the minds of many in the light of available possibilities these are deplorably inadequate. Who is the coming statesman?"

ON ACCOUNT of the illness and death of High Priest of Hathor, Brother John Oxenford, Indianapolis, Ind., your Scribe has been delayed in his plans for the future work of the Cloister. However, we believe that we will shortly have our plans outlined so that we can submit them to all members of the Cloister. Statements have been mailed to all members. It is our intention to publish the Cloister membership in the 1913 Handbook.

SCRIVENOTER'S REPORT

THE BULLETIN for January contained a full financial report covering period from September 7, 1912, to December 31, 1912, and it is the intention of your Scrivenoter to publish statement in each issue of THE BULLETIN showing receipts and disbursements in full.

We are, however, unable to publish statement in this issue, as your Scrivenoter has been absent from the office larger part of January attending the different association meetings. Report will be published in March issue and in each issue thereafter. These reports are published for the information of all members, and if there are any items you do not understand or wish further information, write and we will be pleased to explain same fully. This is your Order and the Supreme Nine are endeavoring to so conduct the Order as to meet with your hearty approval.

Give us the benefit of your most valuable co-operation and assistance, and don't fail to criticize freely and fully anything that you do not believe is being handled as it should be. When you criticize, however, kindly endeavor to give us suggestions as to how to improve. Criticism is always welcome, and we will endeavor to meet your wishes.

WILLIAM J. CONRAD (26708) Viceregent Snark, Western Oregon, Marshfield, Oregon

Brother William J. Conrad, although a young man, is widely known in lumber circles. He is 29 years of age and is a native of Wisconsin. His first experience in the lumber business was with the Shevlin-Carpenter Company at Minneapolis. Five years ago he went to Coos Bay with the C. A. Smith Lumber & Manufacturing Company when that concern opened operations in Oregon. Brother Conrad held positions of responsibility in the office of the Smith Company for three years and for the past two years had been identified with the Coos County Tax Association and the Coos County Fire Patrol Association. Being secretary of both organizations.

The tax association looks after the tax matters of the members which comprise most all of the leading timber owners of Coos and neighboring counties. On account of his association with the timber owners, Brother Conrad is probably one of the best informed men in Coos county on timber conditions in that part of the State.

Prospective Concatenations

Concatenations reported in THE BULLETIN for January to be held at Chattanooga, Tennessee, during the meeting of the National Lumber Exporters' Association, January 23 and 24, 1913, and at Kalamazoo, Michigan, during the meeting of the Michigan Lumber Dealers' Association, February 4 and 5, 1913, were not held.

Vicegerent Snark Harry Wise, Southeastern District Tennessee, Chattanooga, Tennessee, was compelled to be absent from the city at that time. Vicegerent Snark S. J. Rathbun, Southern District Michigan, Battle Creek, Michigan, after consulting with members thought best not to hold a concatenation at Kalamazoo on account of the association holding only a two-day, instead of three-day session. Vicegerent Snarks Wise and Rathbun will hold their concatenation at a later date.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, February 11, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Harry B. Darlington, Northern District Illinois, Chicago, Illinois, will hold his concatenation at the New Sherman Hotel, Chicago, on February 11, 1913. This will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the Illinois Lumber and Builders' Supply Dealers' Association and we are advised that Vicegerent Snark Darlington expects to have a large attendance of old members as well as a large class of kittens and Brother Darlington assures all who attend, a good time. Look for a report of this concatenation in the March BULLETIN.

BURLINGTON, IOWA, February 11, 1913

Past Vicegerent Snark J. M. Furlong, Iowa, has arranged to hold a concatenation at Burlington, Iowa, at 7:30 p. m., February 11, 1913. This concatenation will be held in connection with the meeting of the Southeastern Iowa Lumber Dealers' Association. Look for a report of this meeting in THE BULLETIN for March. Brother Furlong is noted for his successful concatenations held in the past, and we are sure that this concatenation will prove one of the best ever held by him.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, February 13, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Alan M. Stewart, Manitoba, will hold a concatenation at Traveler's Building, Winnipeg, on Thursday, February 13, 1913. This concatenation will be held in connection with the annual meeting of the Western (Canadian) Retail Lumbermen's Association. Brother Stewart has issued the following proclamation announcing this concatenation:

Look at the bunch; the Noble Nine,
Training kittens is in their line.
As Junior Hoo-Hoo, with silver voice,
Mouldings Tennant will be our choice.
Car Load Little, judge of Scotch,
Will act as Gurdon and make no botch.
Custocatian, honest must be,
So Factory Knight is the man to see.
Senior Hoo-Hoo will sit in the corner,
That is the place for Ship Lap Warner.
Fir Door Morton, friend of Rum,
Is the man to have for Big Bojum.
Edge Grain Galbraith, quite a floater,
Will be the solemn Scrivenoter.
The Jabberwock is some smooth rambler,
We therefore, have big voice Chandler.
Horsey McDonald is a Scotsman tight,
As Arcanoper, he'll be a fright.

Golfer Stewart, Father to all
Snarks of Universe, but that's not all.
In fact, the bunch you can not beat,
So get there early and cinch a seat.

This concatenation promises to be one of the best ever held in Canada and all members are urged to get in touch with Brother Stewart and give him the benefit of their hearty co-operation and assistance.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON, February 14, 1913

Vicegerent Snark J. H. Ehrmantraut, Western District Washington and Northern District Idaho, will hold his concatenation on February 14, 1913, in connection with the annual meeting of the Western Retail Lumber Dealers' Association. Look for a report of this concatenation in the March BULLETIN. It will pay you to read this. Snark of the Universe, Frank W. Trower, of San Francisco, and Supreme Custocatian L. R. Fifer, of Seattle, will be in attendance at this concatenation to assist Vicegerent Snark Ehrmantraut.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA, February 25, 1913

Vicegerent Snark H. C. Spengler, Northern District Iowa, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, announces concatenation to be held at Cedar Rapids, on Tuesday evening, February 25, 1913, in Knights of Columbus Hall, Jim Block, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. This concatenation will be held in connection with the Central and Eastern Iowa Lumber Dealers' Association joint convention to be held in Cedar Rapids, February 26, 1913. Brother Spengler has sent out a very unique proclamation announcing this concatenation and we are in receipt of advice from him that he expects to have a most successful concatenation.

All Hoo-Hoo are requested to get in touch with Brother Spengler and give him the benefit of their hearty co-operation and assistance.

JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA, February 27, 1913

Vicegerent Snark D. A. Reid, Eastern District Florida, has announced concatenation to be held in Jacksonville, Florida, on February 22, 1913. This will be held in connection with the monthly meeting of the Georgia and Florida Saw Mill Association. Brother Reid advises he expects a large crowd at this concatenation and that he is going to make a record that will make his brother Vicegerent Snarks sit up and take notice.

All Hoo-Hoo are requested to get in touch with Brother Reid and give him the benefit of their hearty co-operation and assistance.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., February 28, 1913

Vicegerent Snark H. H. Hoyt, Northwestern District, St. Joseph, Mo., announces concatenation to be held at St. Joseph, on Friday, February 28, 1913. Brother Hoyt advises this is going to be a cracker-jack and all Hoo-Hoo are requested to get in touch with Brother Hoyt and give him the benefit of their loyal co-operation and assistance in making this concatenation a great success.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., March 7, 1913

Vicegerent Snark James G. Robson, Coast District British Columbia, has announced a concatenation to be held on the evening of March 7, 1913, at St. Patrick's Hall, New Westminster, B. C., and advises he is figuring on a big time and a large number of kittens.

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS, March 8, 1913

At a meeting held in Little Rock, Arkansas, February 1, Brother T. J. Gay was selected as Vicegerent Snark for the Central District of Arkansas and arrangements were made to hold a concatenation at Hotel Marion, Little Rock, Arkansas, on March 8. Committees were appointed to make this concatenation one of the greatest ever held in the South. The following committees were appointed to assist Brother Gay in making arrangements for the concatenation:

Arrangement Committee—J. C. McGrath, chairman; A. B. Cox, R. T. Clarkson, J. C. Powell, Frank Neimeyer, Ira Klein, C. P. Nicoll, J. H. Carmichael and W. P. Grove.

Reception Committee—W. C. Norman, chairman; P. F. Witherspoon, F. K. Darragh, U. Nolin, J. A. Bowman, C. A. Reynolds, W. P. Gulley, E. C. Thompson and A. C. Davidson.

Finance Committee—H. F. Reiff, chairman; Gus. K. Jones, C. N. Lemon, A. C. Becker, R. O. Bone, J. A. Carmer, F. I. Brown, C. E. Shoemaker and A. C. Webb.

Advertising Committee—A. W. Park, chairman; J. B. Webster, C. A. Reynolds, F. W. McMiller, Carl J. Baer, R. E. Smith, A. G. Overman, W. C. McGinley and W. P. Grace.

All Hoo-Hoo are earnestly requested to get in touch with Brother Gay and give him the benefit of their valuable co-operation and assistance.

EL PASO, TEXAS, March 11, 1913

Vicegerent Snark R. A. Whitlock, Western District Texas, El Paso, advises that the Lumbermen's Association of New Mexico and Arizona will hold a meeting in El Paso, on March 11-12, 1913, and that he expects to hold a concatenation during this meeting. Date of concatenation will be announced later.

SASKATOON, SASKATCHEWAN, March 12, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Harold Manning, Northern District Saskatchewan, has announced concatenation to be held at Saskatoon, on March 12, 1913. As previously stated in THE BULLETIN, Brother Manning is going after the record recently made by Brother Cooke at Moose Jaw and THE BULLETIN is expecting a great report from this meeting.

EUREKA, CALIFORNIA, April 19, 1913

Vicegerent Snark Marshall C. Wood, Humboldt District California, announces another concatenation to be held at Eureka, April 19, 1913. Vicegerent Snark Wood held a most successful concatenation at Eureka, on December 21, 1912, and this was such a success that the Hoo-Hoo of that section have demanded another one and Brother Wood has set it for April 19, 1913. From past experience we look for this to be a great gathering of the California Hoo-Hoo.

MARSHFIELD, OREGON

We are in receipt of advice from Vicegerent Snark W. J. Conrad, Western District of Oregon, Marshfield, Oregon, that he expects to hold a concatenation in Marshfield the latter part of February or the first part of March and he expects a class of at least fifteen kittens. Exact date of concatenation will be announced later.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS

Brother W. G. Blake, of Corpus Christi, has had up the matter of holding a concatenation in Corpus Christi shortly, and Brother Blake advises that he is busy making arrangements for this concatenation. Date will be announced later.

All Texas Hoo-Hoo are requested to get in touch with Brother Blake and give him the benefit of their valuable co-operation and assistance.

LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA

The Scrivenoter is in receipt of advice from past Snark of the Universe E. Stringer Boggess, that Vicegerent Snark A. Lynch Ward of the Western District of Virginia, Lynchburg, Virginia will hold a concatenation at Lynchburg, Virginia, some time in March. Exact date will be announced later.

Brother Boggess advises that Vicegerent Snark Ward is being most ably assisted by Brothers T. L. Setzer, of Lynchburg, Virginia, and Brother L. S. Gillespie of Roanoke, Virginia, and many others.

All Virginia Hoo-Hoo are requested to get in touch with Brother Ward and give him the benefit of their valuable co-operation and assistance.

OUR DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS

T. C. WHITMARSH (9538)

WE TAKE pleasure in printing, on cover page, this issue, the picture of Brother Thomas C. Whitmarsh, General Manager of the W. T. Ferguson Lumber Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Brother Whitmarsh was unanimously elected President of the Lumbermen's Club of St. Louis at the annual meeting held on December 10, 1912, and THE BULLETIN feels confident that the Lumbermen's Club with Brother Whitmarsh at the wheel will have a most successful year. The club is in excellent shape and has the hearty support of all St. Louis lumbermen—it has been and is of great value to all branches of the lumber industry.

St. Louis is one of the largest lumber centers of the world and St. Louis lumbermen owe it to themselves to see that the Lumbermen's Club is one of the, if not the, best lumbermen's clubs in the world.

Let us all get together, put our shoulders to the wheel and make the St. Louis Lumbermen's Club the most successful of all.

Brother Whitmarsh was born in Chicago, Ill., on July 15, 1870, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at St. Louis, Mo., on September 4, 1902. Brother Whitmarsh has been connected with the W. T. Ferguson Lumber Co. since 1893 and moved to St. Louis in 1897. He is well known to all lumbermen and all who have been fortunate enough to know him personally not only have a high regard for him as a lumberman, but also love him as a man. Not many men in the lumber industry have as many or warmer friends than Brother Whitmarsh.

The following are the officers of the Lumbermen's Club of St. Louis for the current year:

- President—Thomas C. Whitmarsh.
- First-Vice-President—Robert B. McConnell.
- Second Vice-President—Stephen J. Gavin.
- Treasurer—Eben C. Robinson.
- Secretary—John B. Kessler.

A Few Short Lengths

Be so square that when you speak in meeting no man can say "Yes, that is all right, but you cheated me when you sold me that lumber."

The self-appointed superior class is an awful handicap to civilization.

WEDDING BELLS

PEASE-STRANG

We are pleased to acknowledge card from Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Sanford Strang, Chicago, Illinois, announcing the marriage of their daughter, May Carolyn Strang, to Brother John Daniel Pease on Saturday, February 1, 1913, at Chicago, Illinois.

Brother Pease is on the staff of the American Lumberman, Chicago, Illinois, and has many warm friends in the lumber industry. "Jack," as he is familiarly called by all who know him, is one of the bright stars of the lumber press, and THE BULLETIN joins all in wishing Brother Pease and his good wife Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Brother Pease was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Chicago, Illinois, on February 16, 1905, and is a member of the Osirian Cloister and has been a true Hoo-Hoo and a hard worker for the best interest of the Order.

HILL—BUJOL

Brother H. D. Hill was married on December 22, 1912, at Donner, La., to Miss Ola Emily Bujol.

They made a trip through Georgia and Alabama.

THE BULLETIN wishes them Health, Happiness and Long Life.

The three sweetest words in the English Language are: "Enclosed find Check." Have you paid your dues?

“WE HAVE LOVED THEM DURING LIFE,
LET US NOT FORGET THEM IN DEATH”

JOHN OXENFORD (1346)
1847-1913

Brother John Oxenford died at his home, 915 Capitol ave., North, Indianapolis, Ind., on Monday, January 27, 1913. He had been ill since November 7, 1912. Death caused by complication of diseases. Brother Oxenford was born at Lincoln,

JOHN OXENFORD

England, on November 5, 1847, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Chicago, Ill., on February 16, 1894.

Brother Oxenford had been engaged in the wholesale lumber business in Indianapolis, Ind., for the past twenty-five years and had many warm friends.

--	-----------------------------------	---

THE December BULLETIN contained a call for voluntary contributions to this fund. This was repeated in the January issue. The purpose of the fund was explained fully and statement was published showing in full condition of the fund. Since I have been Scrivenoter this fund has received up to and including January 31, 1913, total of $95.67. This is made up account part payment of loan made and from small "overs" on remittances for dues, etc., which were placed to credit of fund. The total voluntary contributions to the fund is $40.30, which has been contributed by the following members: 294, 979, 1316, 2640, 2676, 5518, 6941, 8084, 9307, 9508, 9538, 9800, 10408, 12524, 12835, 13523, 14633, 14720, 15045, 17347, 18822, 19747, 21056, 23153, 25871, 26600, 26102, Hon. 78.

On account of having no money to the credit of this fund it has been necessary to turn down several most worthy Brothers who were in need of temporary assistance. All of them being deserving of assistance.

This is published for the information of all members so that all will understand the matter fully.

Your Scrivenoter, as previously stated, has no intention or desire to force this matter. It is up to the members and if they do not desire to continue this feature of the Order there will be no complaint.

Personally the Scrivenoter does not want any member to contribute to this fund unless he fully approves of the good work that has and can be accomplished through this agency and is satisfied that it is being handled in a proper manner and to the good of the Order. The call will not be repeated. If any member desires any information in regard to this fund the Scrivenoter will be pleased to furnish it.

No money will be paid out of this fund without the approval of the Snark, Senior Hoo-Hoo and Scrivenoter.

This fund is worthy of the support of all members. It is up to YOU to say what its future shall be.

---	---------------------------	---

EVERY member should read carefully, each month, "THE PRACTICAL SIDE." This refers to unemployed members and we can show our best nature and our fraternal spirit by not only reading this page, but by doing all in our power to place our brother in line for a position.

EVERY HOO-HOO who employs MEN can find the MAN he is looking for through the columns of THE BULLETIN.

If you want a man for any position, advise the Scrivenoter and he will put you in touch with the man you want.

Remember, it is your duty as a loyal Hoo-Hoo to assist a worthy brother to employment.

Let us all get a little closer together, and let us help each other.

Read all the advertisements in this issue and advise the Scrivenoter promptly of any opportunity where we can place our members. Do this in a true fraternal spirit.

---	------------------	---

THE Scrivenoter has been advised that a few men claiming to be members of the Order are going about soliciting aid in the shape of loans from our members. The Supreme Nine requests members of the Order that if anyone, personally unknown to them, applies to them for aid, claiming that he is a member of the Order, and asking for aid on account of such membership, that the member immediately take the matter up by wire with the Scrivenoter, giving as full particulars as possible and always giving number claimed by party who is asking for aid. The Scrivenoter will, if the party is entitled to aid on account of membership in the Order, advise you promptly what action to take. Please bear this in mind and assist the Supreme Nine all in your power to stop this practice.

1913 HANDBOOK

WE ARE now at work correcting our records for the 1913 handbook. This is a big job, and in order to see that book is correct and contains the names and addresses of all members in good standing, it is going to require a little patience on the part of our members. We are working as hard and as fast as possible and will get book out at earliest possible date.

In order to get an idea of how many handbooks to be ordered printed, the Scrivenoter requests that all members who desire a copy of the new handbook advise him now.

Remember that to secure the handbook requires that you write the Scrivenoter requesting that it be sent you. A postal card request is sufficient.

In the 1913 Handbook we want the correct address of every member and we will shortly send out notices to all members asking them to advise their correct address, and it is important that this information be given prompt attention and that return card be sent the Scrivenoter without delay.

NO NAME WILL APPEAR IN THE 1913 HANDBOOK UNLESS DUES FOR YEAR 1912 HAVE BEEN PAID.

You will want your name and address in this book and you are urged to send in your dues AT ONCE, so there will be no question of your name appearing in handbook.

GET IN LINE NOW AND DO NOT KICK AFTER HANDBOOK IS PRINTED.

THE OPEN DOOR

THE Scrivenoter extends a most hearty invitation to all members of the Order to visit the Scrivenoter's office when in St. Louis, and assures them a cordial welcome.

Come in and see us and see for yourself just how the business of the Order is conducted.

Ask all the questions you wish and we will, to the best of our ability, endeavor to satisfy you fully.

Make this office your headquarters while in St. Louis and have your mail addressed in our care. This is your office and you should use it.

A complete file of the lumber trade journals is kept in this office for the information of visiting members.

Come in and get acquainted.

* * *

THE BULLETIN is mailed on the 9th day of each month and in order to do this we are compelled to close our copy on the 5th of each month. Please take note of this and get your news item in before the 5th of each month so that we can avoid delay.

* * *

THE MAILING LIST

Our mailing list is made up from latest data at hand and is corrected monthly.

Each member is requested to report to the Scrivenoter promptly any error in his address, or any change made or contemplated, that THE BULLETIN may reach every member regularly.

AN AWFUL APPROACH

"Son, why don't you play circus? It's great fun. First you make a sawdust ring."

"Where'll I get any sawdust, dad?"

"Here's the saw. Just saw some of that cordwood into stove lengths. You can have all the sawdust you make."

JUNIOR RITUAL

THE Scrivenoter has received many letters from members in different jurisdictions suggesting that the Junior Ritual be revised and that any and all objectionable matter be eliminated and that the ritual be brought up to date.

Now every member of the Order is, and should be, interested in this revision.

We want a ritual that will cover this section of our initiation in a satisfactory manner.

The Scrivenoter therefore asks that all members, and this means YOU, give to the revision of the Junior Ritual their most careful thought and that they write the Scrivenoter fully, giving him the benefit of their most valuable suggestions as to what they wish covered in this ritual.

Every member has some valuable ideas, and we want them.

Now let us all get busy and make the new Junior Ritual a great success.

WILLIAM FREDERICK EBBING (6551)

THE BULLETIN is pleased to publish photograph of Brother Ebbing who served two terms as Vicegerent Snark of Eastern Missouri.

Brother Ebbing was born in Batesville, Ind., September 14, 1875, and has lived in St. Louis for twenty-seven years. His first business experience was with the well-known firm of Hall & Brown Wood Working Machine Co., St. Louis; he was with them about nine years. He has been with The Ohio Knife Co.

(machine knives), of Cincinnati, Ohio, since April, 1906, representing them in St. Louis and the Southwest.

On November 1, 1912, Brother Ebbing was elected a director, also secretary, of The Ohio Knife Co. He will continue his residence in St. Louis and will have full charge of all their business in St. Louis and the southwestern territory.

Brother Ebbing was married on February 24, 1897, to Miss Mary A. Booth of St. Louis and they have six children. (See photograph.) Brother Ebbing was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Cairo, Ill., June 9, 1899, and received the Osirian Cloister degrees at Hot Springs, Ark., on September 9, 1909. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus and of the United Commercial Travelers.

	<h2>What is the Matter With the Lumber Industry?</h2>
---	---	---

THE men engaged in the lumber industry are of as high a character and are as honest and intelligent as are men engaged in any other industry.

There is, however, a lack of cordial good understanding and good fellowship among the men engaged in the different branches of the lumber industry, the timber owner, the manufacturer, the wholesaler, the salesman and the retailer.

The root and core of the trouble is that there is too much personal suspicion and consequent inability of the men who are engaged in the lumber trade to do good team work.

We haven't different sort of men in the lumber business from those of any other business. Our men do not look any different from other business men, but lumbermen are not acquainted with each other as are the men engaged in many other lines of industry.

Those who differ don't meet each other face to face and talk their difficulties over. They gather together, all the people of one branch of the business, in one place, and those of other branches of the business in another, and pass resolutions about each other—or each other's plans. The men engaged in all the branches of the lumber industry are in a sense partners in a business that is one of the greatest industries of the world.

The cure is not a "federation of federations." It needs something a little more human and personal than that.

When the men who desire to see the lumber business prosper and succeed care enough about the matter to meet personally those whose ideas, in their opinion, stand in the way, then and not until then will conditions begin to get better.

In all communities under the sun there are too many selfish "big" men and too many unreasonable "little" ones. But in between these unlovely extremes there is a larger number—"big" and "little" who have good, warm sympathies, who can learn to work together and get results. The lumber industry has enough of such men; they only need mixing and stirring 'round.

The one irresistible thing in this world is a man. Face to face encounters between men of unlike ideas will make the lumber business a far greater success and will relegate the "what's the matter with the lumber business" to the scrap heap of oblivion.

Each branch of the lumber business has its own business association and they gather together in these associations, but they do not come in close personal contact with men in the other branches of the trade.

You, Mr. Lumberman, are in the lumber business to succeed and you are entitled to succeed and will do so if you will conduct your part of the business to the best interests of all. You are entitled to and should receive a good profit for your intelligence, investment and labor. Are you getting this? If not, why?

Now the trouble with so much of this "get together" talk that resounds eternally is that it utterly lacks the ring of reality. It is dealt in by men who have no idea of paying the price of "getting together" with those separated from them by interest, prejudice or misunderstanding. Therefore, it merely agitates the air.

What so many of the "get together" prophets mean is simply that the other fellow should come to them. There is in the proposal no thought of conciliation, of compromise, of that investment of time and energy necessary to search out the other man's good qualities, enter into the reasons for his viewpoint, understand the source of his prejudices, come to see his ideas as they appear to their possessor. We talk lightly and easily about a process which requires time, thought, sympathy, self-denial.

Really to "get together" with the man of opposite ideas, prejudices than clash with ours, training we know nothing of, is a task that evokes sweat and blood. And down at the bottom of it must be something larger than enthusiasm for our own selfish gain:

The kind of getting together that counts has the real hunger for human fellowship at the bottom of it. It sees the human element in life as its chief riches. It finds life lonesome, except as the other fellow feels the need of us and meets us half way.

The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo offers to the lumberman who is deeply interested in the welfare of his business an opportunity to meet and know his fellowmen who are engaged in the same line of business. It has the organization and can accomplish great good if you will do your share.

See to it that no one not eligible is permitted to join. See to it that Concatenations are conducted along lines that will meet with the hearty approval of all representative men. It is your Order and it is up to you to see that it is conducted along the right lines and is made to represent the best thought of the lumber industry.

The Supreme Nine are doing their duty, and we want the hearty co-operation and support of all so that we can accomplish greater good for all.

Let us lay aside our personal prejudices and come together in that spirit of fraternal good fellowship that will not only make our own lives longer and happier but will make the lumber industry a greater success in all ways.

Give the Supreme Nine the benefit of your idea of how you think the Order should be conducted and along what lines it should lead. Learn to forget and build for the future. BE A MAN.

Get together and know each other.

ONE MAN AND ONE HOOK TO ONE FISH

By ROBERT E. MASTERS (71)
A REGULAR SARDINE

WHEN one wants to convey a complimentary idea of a jolly good fellow, it is a common occurrence to hear the expression, "He's a regular sardine." While I know that just fits many a good fellow who reads this article, there is no use to buck up and get chesty over it, for I am talking about the genuine—the sardine of commerce. They are classed in the herron family—and in some factories the small herrings are canned and put on the market as sardines.

Vast quantities of sardines are caught off the coast of Norway and smoked and canned. Those caught in the Mediterranean and off the coast of France and put up in the French style—boneless, skinned and boned and in spices—but one is not always sure of the sardine.

It is quite an industry in the United States, though if the catch of sardines is running shy, they don't seem to stand back at herring some places on the east coast.

Along the Pacific Coast there are several factories and a number of men and vessels engaged in the industry. The California sardine is the true sardine, identical with his European brother—the blue back and bright silvery color underneath. In a line part way down each side, beginning back of the gills, are several black dots about as large around as the lead in a pencil and equally spaced apart. These spots are not so readily found in the canned goods for various reasons—if the sardines run large, only the end is used for canning and the balance can be made up into sardine paste for sandwiches, etc. All fish lose their most beautiful colors and markings when they die, and the process of canning helps further to diminish them. Then, too, there are sections like in the Caribbean Sea and a couple of places in Europe, where they have the real sardine without the black spots, or so indistinct they are scarcely noticeable. So when you tap your next can of sardines and are unable to find these markings, don't imagine they are not the real thing. They may be, and anyway, all the small fish put up in that way taste fine, so it don't make a great deal of difference. Did you ever buy a ticket in a lottery? Well, you had lots of enjoyment in anticipating where you would travel and what you were going to get with the prize—before the drawing. Then what did you say?

Now that we have some idea of this ready-to-eat picnic delicacy, we will go out in one of the vessels, say, just off the California coast, for a catch. And if you have never had the opportunity, just be prepared to open your eyes at what you will see on an actual trip.

The vessels make an early start, often before daylight. They are driven by gasoline engines. Sails are used nowadays only to get in port in case of a break down. A power boat can whip around here, there and yonder and cover so much more territory searching for a school, and get there when they find it. Even with a power boat, they cannot go too far out at sea for their catch, as the fish spoil so rapidly. Even with salting them, they must reach the factory in a few hours. I know of no fish that spoils so quickly if not taken care of at once as the sardine. They will not stand shipping fresh to the markets at all.

A well equipped boat capable of taking care of twenty or twenty-five tons of sardines at a haul will be manned by about eight men, including captain and engineer. Then there is likely to be a check weighman on board from the factory, as the catch is usually made under contract at so much per ton.

The boat trails two skiffs always in readiness. The larger one has the seine at the rear end, folded up back and forth, so it will run out easily. This seine is from eight to ten feet deep for several hundred feet from each end, then a gradual belly toward the center, up to twenty or more feet, owing to its length. It has a cork line large enough to support it, with a lead line heavy enough to hold it perpendicular in the water. At each end of the net is attached a rope several hundred and up to a thousand feet long.

Notice that man up in the rigging. He is the lookout, watching for a bluer patch on the ocean than the ocean itself, or a motion that would indicate a school. Ofttimes they can be found by the pelicans, gulls and other sea birds hovering over them and sitting on the water among them in the hopes of getting a good dinner.

At times the catch is made close in shore, within a few hundred feet of the breakers. Again, it may be out in the open sea, thirty or more miles from shore, where the blue water is hundreds and perhaps thousands of feet deep. The writer has witnessed a catch made so close to a small resort that we could talk to the people on the pier. Another in the lee of one of the Channel Islands close up to the mountain side. Still another away out in the open sea, where the swell was running twenty feet high. Talk about being "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

As soon as the man on watch sights a school, a'hoj below, and usually points in the direction to steer! The watchman must be able to distinguish between a school of sardines and other fish, and remember, there is a large variety. The boat is then brought up as close as they dare without alarming the school, and the captain must judge if it is large enough for a haul; if not, they continue the search, for they cannot make part of a cargo and continue out. However, if he decides it is a haul, the vessel is hove to, and two men get in each of the trailers and row toward the school for position. The seine rope is fastened to the empty skiff, and the men row it around the school, the seine paying out. One man in the seine boat steadies the skiff while the other watches the seine to clear any chance tangle. In this way, the circle is made till the smaller skiff is back to the larger one with all the rope and seine out in the sea, but no time is lost. The small boat is tied up to the larger, with all four men in the seine boat drawing in the ropes until they get hold of the end of the seine. Now we have a seine fence around the sardines, but open below, and care must be exercised in drawing it in for fear they will sound and go under before the men get hold of the belly part of the seine. The lead line is then drawn in and the cork line left out. This draws the seine under them until you readily see they have the fish in a big bag, with thousands of bright silvery scales glittering, shimmering and scintillating under the sun through the meshes of the net on the blue background of the sea.

The captain, from mental measurements of the diameter and depth of the bag and density of the fish, makes an estimate of the catch. "How many, Captain?" and the reply is "Between forty and fifty ton." As the vessel's capacity was a little over twenty tons, he backed his row boat away from the net and put the end of an oar on the cork line and pressed it under. The fish going over that submerged cork line were actually so thick, some of them were raised above the level of the sea, resembling a flood of molten silver, a cataract of gorgeous tints in a rush for liberty and life.

The object in letting the excess escape before loading is to really give them life in the hope of catching them again. The sardine is a very tender fish and easily scales itself, and if held in the net until the loading was finished, thrashing and rushing around, every one of the excess would be entirely scaled and would die. So you see it is really a humane act in the captain giving them their lives—in the hope he will catch them next trip.

The vessel is brought up aside the net. The deck is laid off in open bins. A dip net with a very long handle and iron bail connected with a block and tackle in the rigging is dipped into the fish and "Haul away" is given and lifted on deck and emptied in one of the bins. The fish naturally flutter and spread themselves out, and another man sprinkles salt on them as fast as they are hauled up. This dip net brings up one hundred pounds on an average and is checked up at that, each dip. This is kept up until the load is completed and seine bundled into the trailer and a run under full pressure is made for the factory, where the fish are taken care of, but that is a part of the work I will not undertake, only to say factories of this kind that I have visited are kept scrupulously clean.

Don't imagine from this account that the trips are always a success. The seine is small mesh and very light threads. Every now and then, when the sardines are bagged ready to dip, a school of big fish will come along, attracted by the commotion in the net, and plunge right through it after the sardines, riddle it full of holes and let them all out. The big game fish just make round holes that are easily mended, but if some tigers of the sea, the big sharks, come along, they seem to get tangled up in the net and tear it all to pieces.

There are a few fish that confine themselves to sand crabs, etc., and will not touch fish bait. With that exception, there is no fish that swims that will take a bait that is not partial to sardines, but I have never known a sardine to bite at a hook, no matter how tiny or what the bait was. They are often snagged or caught in drop nets for bait, and to eat. I have done it myself. Take a net on a six-foot square iron frame and drop it down about six feet under the surface, and scatter a little pulverized baked potato on the surface over the net. They take to anything starchy, but they are very wary and scatter at the least jerk of the seine, and it takes quick work to get 'em. The only thing I know that will make them lose all sense of caution is the eggs of fish roe. It's even better to grind them up and scatter them lightly over the net. They pile in after it so thick they lose sight of the net, and I have often seen from a peck to a bushel of them taken at a time. Salted down, they make a ready handy bait for many fish. The average length is less than six inches. Specimens running up to a foot long are not scarce.

We have heard the edible qualities of that famous little fish, the brook trout, extolled in story and song, and they are good. There's no denying that, but that much vaunted fish is not 1-2-3 in the quintessence of delicious flavor with the fresh sardine, killed and in the pan inside of an hour after it is taken from the water.

From this dainty little fellow I will go to the other extreme in my next, and give some observations and personal experience with sharks.

A Few Short Lengths

HIS CLAIM ON FAME

There is a copy reader on a New York newspaper who has one hold upon fame. Years ago he was the Sunday editor of a San Francisco newspaper. One night a modest-looking young man, who wore spectacles and shabby clothes and had an English accent, walked in and tried to sell him, at space rates, a story of Indian life, which he said he had written some time before for an Indian newspaper, but which had never been published in America. The Sunday editor took the story and read it, and then refused it on the ground that it was not interesting enough to entertain an American public.

The name of the young Englishman was Rudyard Kipling, and the story he tried to sell was one called The Man Who Would be King.

NOTES & COMMENTS

A CERTAIN English writer of very original viewpoint declares: "The kindest saying I have heard is this: 'What's one man's meat is another man's poison.'"

He means that the beginning of tolerance is the willingness to allow that the nature of one man is not as the nature of another, and that the recognition of such differences goes along with a certain degree of unselfish regard for the rights of others. So there really is a good deal in the old adage. Sometimes a trite and crude saying contains a world of deep meaning. Once in a while you hear somebody (frequently an elderly person) say: "I hate to get up early because it makes the day seem so long." How much of dreariness these words reveal—what vast expanse of dull, gray desolation! For those of us to whom no day is sufficiently long, for whom no week has days enough, the other view of the matter seems almost grotesque; we cannot realize that any day that is empty is too long! Slammed up against a time schedule as we are, the hours race by with incredible swiftness and we can "scarcely turn around" ere comes the dusk.

Few of us can hope to be a "continuous head-liner in the happy days class," as Shorty McCabe would say; but as long as we are busy, we haven't time to be miserable. So the kindest wish we can have for a friend is this: I hope you are glad that the days are growing long.

As for myself, the shortening days of autumn produce a feeling that is almost akin to physical pain; the early descending darkness seems to portend something ominous. Not that an autumn day isn't beautiful, for it is—what there is of it. And the nights are glorious; the winter constellations are far more brilliant than those we see in summer skies. But there is a period of each day, between 4:30 and 6 o'clock, when it seems that something is lacking, when there is an indefinable sense of discomfort, a sort of blankness. Is it a survival of old fear that Norse and Saxon and Celtic pagans felt when they saw the sun going farther and farther south and daylight lasting a shorter time each day? (No wonder they made sacrifice and offerings to placate the dreadful deities they worshiped to induce them to let the sun come back!) Or is this strange feeling that comes to me with the shortening days only a dim memory of a childhood on the farm, when, as the days grew shorter, we began to have two meals a day instead of three? Along about the middle of October the grown-ups would say, "It will soon be time to have two meals a day." Dismal tiding to the children! Not that the plan was to economize on food. Far from it. On the contrary, we ate more than ever, for the plan really resulted in our having five meals—breakfast, a luncheon at noon to tide us over till three o'clock, when the deferred "dinner" was served; then another luncheon at six and "a few bites" just before bedtime. "It certainly does not save food," said all the housekeepers in the neighborhood, "but it does save time and work, for it takes less cooking. With three regular meals a day, the servants hardly get through with one till it is time for the next; and other things are neglected that we want done—the days are so short now!"

So the children were always "munching" on something grabbed out of the cupboard. But somehow it did not divide the time right—this two-meals scheme. It left a gap. Aviators say there is such a thing as falling into an air hole. I can testify that there is such a thing as falling into a time hole. It is a melancholy experience. The two-meals-a-day proposition nearly blasted my bright young life. There was a gloomy interval between five o'clock and the time for romps and games after the lamps were lighted, an interval which "supper" ordinarily would have filled.

And now, although the certainty of a six o'clock dinner offers sweet solace to a mourning mind, the swift shadows of a November day bring with them still that curious sensation of something missing, something gone. True, this feeling may come from memories more remote than those of childhood. Perhaps it goes back to the primitive terror. At any rate, I can understand the rush of joy the pagans felt when the days began to lengthen after they had feared the sun would soon be gone for good and always, after they had thought their finish was in sight. No wonder they honored with song and feast their goddess of light and springtime, Easter, whose festal day, by a happy coincidence, synchronized with the Christian celebration of the resurrection, which in turn coincided with the Jewish feast of the Passover, in progress at the time of the Crucifixion. The first Sunday after the first full moon after the 21st of March was when the Passover was celebrated, for the Jewish calendar went according to the moon. We still keep the heathen name, but slightly modified, for our Christian day of rejoicing. But what of it? The pagans were in the world a long time before we came. And so was joy. Fear, too. These are elemental, human emotions. In the last analysis, the three celebrations mean the same thing—thankfulness for deliverance from peril. And it signifies nothing that the dread the pagans felt was unfounded, that there never was the slightest danger of the sun's forsaking its place in the sky. The danger was real to them!

And so, while there may be many reasons why we should feel glad when the days grow longer, there can be but one reason for regret, and that is idleness. An idle mind breeds discontent. There is no comfort for anybody who is permanently lodged in a time hole. But that empty-gap feeling should not come to any normal person except for brief intervals in the fall (or maybe occasionally on Sundays!) before the period of extreme old age. Any fairly healthy man or woman should be ashamed that time "hangs heavy"—any person moderately well off financially should blush to feel lonesome. Idle hands and a vacant mind—these constitute a menace horrible to contemplate. Wherefore it is truly a token of much good will to say, "I hope you are well these days—these February days—and that you are glad each day is a little longer than the last."

Among the signs of approaching springtime are the automobile advertisements in the newspapers and magazines. Some of these "ads" are really gorgeous, more brilliant than the blooms of May. Colored pictures, highest type of the lithographer's art, present the most alluring scenes of happy parties about to set forth, from a splendid colonial mansion, for a run in a magnificent touring car; or perhaps the illustration shows a limousine waiting at the theater for the owner and his guests. Time brings many changes. Fifteen years ago the February magazines were filled with advertisements of bicycles. There were pictures of handsome young men and pretty girls out for a spin on the most enchanting country roads. Fifteen years hence perhaps airship ads will make our eyes bulge wide with wonder and admiration.

An aged lady once said to me a short time before she died, at eighty-three: "I have never been afraid to die, but I do wish I could live eighty years or so longer, because so many wonderful things are just getting started, and I should like to see them through." She was one of those who loved long days—she was always busy, always interested. To everyone, his own times seem the most fraught with marvels, but every epoch of the world's history has seen the wonderful starting of big things. Probably we do not yet realize all the potentialities of the automobile. The actual number of these vehicles in use in the United States is one to every 110 of the population. A western paper says:

In Denver there is an electric car for every 217 inhabitants, to say nothing of gas motors. No doubt the capital of Colorado is a singularly pleasure-loving city, where wealth more abounds than it does elsewhere, but the figures are significant. Relatively speaking, in those parts of the country where roads are at all decent, motors are as common among the farmers as in town and their popularity is increasing every day.

Not long ago various newspapers mentioned that several hundred country churches had been shut up in Kansas within a year or two. A country correspondent to one of the city papers explained the phenomenon by saying that the people had not become irreligious all of a sudden, but that with their new automobiles they had formed the habit of going to town to church. This is significant of the changes that will probably come, in time. Perhaps the country store and other rural institutions will be affected by the popularity of the motor car. "We should not be surprised," remarks a Kansas editor, "to learn that a movement had started among the farmers to live in the suburbs of the big cities and go to their land every morning in their automobiles. Either they will do this or they will manage somehow to create the best of city conditions in the country."

Some of the changes that are coming soon will bring temporary hardship to a few, while affording relief and comfort to the many. There are those who are always dismayed at the prospect of change. Within the next few years there will be many great changes, vast industrial development, enormous extension of commerce. Not all the changes can be prophesied, for the unexpected always happens. But it is a certainty that in the great revolution in methods and conditions, timid persons will see a dire fate in store for the world; and the voice of the croaker will be heard, as of old the Saxons lamented that the sun was about to leave them!

If talk can save a country, England surely will be rescued from all the ills that now beset the nation—"unemployment," rampant suffragettes, war scare, etc. According to statistics compiled by the editor of the Parliamentary Gazette, between the commencement of the session on St. Valentine's Day, 1912, and the Christmas adjournment, Mr. Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, spoke 165,500 words; and Mr. Bonar Law, the unionist leader, during the same period spoke 155,000 words. The words of either would fill more than a hundred columns of the ordinary newspaper, and this constitutes quite a spiel, as the slang phrase goes. It would be interesting to know how this amount of eloquence compares with the output of some of our American spell-binders, but probably we shall never know, since nobody will ever take the trouble to plow through the speeches in the Congressional Record.

The oratory of Mr. Lloyd-George was expended along the line of the advocacy of the various policies of his party, the Liberals—such as old-age pensions, the taxation of the big landed estates of the noblemen (hitherto practically exempt from taxation) as a measure of financial relief to the Government, etc. Mr. Bonar Law held forth on the subject of "tariff reform," by which is meant what we in the United States mean when we speak of "tariff for revenue." The question of how to raise money to run the government is one in which every nation is vitally interested and which none of them has solved, since all the countries in the world are heavily in debt.

Another subject that inspired much British eloquence, for and against, is the matter of "home rule" for Ireland, which the Liberal party favors, nominally at least. The home rule bill has passed the House of Commons and is ready to be presented to the House of Lords, which body in the past has always turned down a similar measure. It is expected that this bill will be vetoed. The veto power of the Lords, however, has recently been greatly restricted, and it is now possible, under certain conditions, to pass a bill over the veto of the upper house of Parliament.

Probably no piece of proposed legislation has excited so much interest for so many years as the home rule measure. The history of that bill reaches far into the past and involves much of the political and ecclesiastical history of three countries. It will be interesting to watch the results of recent developments in connection with a question that has been discussed and wrangled over for generations past.

A Pacific Coast paper chronicles the arrival of a spoiled chicken by parcel post from Nebraska and asserts that this "shows us the limitation of the new system as now operated." The incident should not be taken too seriously. Spoiled eggs have for years "arrived" daily—by freight and by various other modes of transportation; they come sometimes in wagons straight from the farm! Perhaps in time there will be refrigerator parcel cars for poultry, game, fish, eggs, butter, vegetables and fruit.

Turkish landscapes are dreary, says an English traveler who has viewed the scenery from the windows of a railway car. "There are few signs of cultivation and fewer of human habitants. Oriental railroads have a way of only skirting the edge of cities, and stations are sometimes several miles from the places whose names they bear." There is at least one railroad in America of which the same might be said. Its terminus is a town in one of the Gulf Coast States. The station is three miles from the town, and the reason why it was so placed is because the people were afraid the train might run over a negro. The road was built before the war, in slavery days. Negroes constituted a form of property, and very valuable property at that. A negro man of sound physique and good disposition was worth two thousand dollars or thereabouts. Any sort of blemish took off a good bit of his selling value. The mark of a lash took off a hundred dollars; several such marks cheapened him in proportion. Naturally, the slave owners wanted to protect their property. But changes have come with the passing years. Slavery is no more, which is well; nobody doubts that. And now there is nothing to prevent negroes from being run over and crippled, or white folks either, for that matter. If you are run down by an automobile in Paris, France, the police will arrest you for obstructing traffic. There is no speed limit in the "finest city in the world." And there are ten thousand taxicabs there, to say nothing of other forms of motor vehicles. Let us hope that the perfecting of air ships will not come about until mankind has reached the point in civilization where human life will be held more dear. It is bad enough to have to dodge automobiles and street cars, let alone having a biplane cave in on us through the roof.

An Oregon "farmer and capitalist" has recently returned from an automobile tour of Europe and Asia, with a total of 28,000 miles registered on the speedometer. He says every mile was level as a floor. One of the Portland newspapers, in delight at the prospect, inquires of its readers: How would you like to start out on an 18,000-mile tour and never get stuck in the mud, never strike a bump that would send you up to Heaven, never think of shifting gears for hundreds of miles, never strike a stretch of road that was not smooth and wide and as good as the best city pavement?

It is indeed a pleasing picture. The "farmer and capitalist" gave out an interesting "interview," in the course of which he said:

"Ninety per cent of the attractiveness of motoring in Europe is due to the perfect roads. The main difference between America and Europe is that the latter's scenery is accessible. The Switzerland mountains are beautiful, yet no more so than the Canadian Rockies; there is nothing in the whole of Europe to rival our own Crater Lake; the Grand Canyon of Colorado is a thing of beauty unsurpassed. Put a good road from British Columbia to Mexico and you have more of a variety of picturesque scenery than on the whole continent of Europe."

The favorite paving material for country roads in America is good intentions. The best known highway where this material is employed is said to begin in Paris, but its terminus is elsewhere. It is much traveled, though in one direction only. All the traffic goes downhill; nobody ever comes back. The country it leads to is described as being extremely undesirable as a residence section, but once there, the settler never tries to get away. He makes up his mind that it is better to stay, in spite of the climate, rather than to attempt to return uphill over such a road. This is the reason given by some philosophers why the population of Hades does not emigrate. Uphill roads paved with good intentions and nothing else have kept a large part of America's rural population in a state of isolation socially and commercially. Still there have been things said about bad roads that are not true. Strange as it may seem, it is possible to exaggerate the evil. For instance, the following from a western paper:

The worst enemies to religion in America are mud roads running up and down steep hills. They were laid out by the devil, every one of them, and his object was to keep people at home from church. Millions of souls in the United States now irretrievably lost would today have been rejoicing in a happy salvation if they had not been kept from the means of grace by mudholes in the road.

Country roads are very much better now than they were ten years ago, but it probably is quite safe to say that more people went to church then than now. Preachers are complaining that the people, instead of going to church on Sunday, get into their motor cars and go out for a spin. Here is another excerpt from the same editor just quoted—he seems to be in bad temper over the whole business:

Sad is the fate of the farmer living at the end of a bottomless road. His sons leave him and go to town; his daughter never has a beau and grows up an old maid; his wife goes crazy, his house goes to ruin, and he goes broke.

Alas, for such generalities! According to statistics, so we have been told often, forty thousand spinsters live in Boston. Bachelors, too, reside in comfortable city apartments; they do not grow on bushes in the backwoods. There is much marrying and giving in marriage in the districts where the tall grass grows.

Nevertheless, good roads are a means of grace. And they are among the improvements and changes that lie in the immediate future. There is no telling what changes the good roads will bring with them, but some of the things that won't happen may be guessed at—one is this: The number of marriages will not be increased, but rather diminished.

Most astonishing are the occurrences that are reported in the news columns of the daily papers—they would be utterly amazing if we were not so accustomed to the marvels of this miraculous age. The following paragraph, for instance:

Although mountains 20,000 feet high intervene, Peru and Brazil, heretofore isolated from each other, have been linked by wireless telegraphy.

This is truly the day of strange phenomena, but perhaps nothing more wonderful or so nearly approaching the uncanny has yet been reported than the stopping of a speeding train by a wireless wave. The news of this came in a press dispatch from Ottawa some little while ago. The stopping of the train was the culmination of experiments made by a Canadian railroad. The automatic train-control system is the invention of a Toronto man. The engine, drawing a train of twelve cars and rushing over the rails at a speed of 45 miles an hour, was brought to a quick standstill, with the throttle wide open and the engineer standing on his cab, a mere spectator, like those present with him to view the wonder. The bare newspaper account of the incident is thrilling:

The brakes had been applied on the big locomotive and train of cars by a wireless wave of electricity. It seemed as if a giant had seized the equipment and held it with ease.

Nearly all the great railroad wrecks of the past half century have been caused by the misunderstanding of orders and the inability of those who discovered the error to catch the flying trains. The Westinghouse air brake made high speed on railroads possible, and the block system contributed largely to the safety of fast trains. If wireless control over the trains turns out to be practicable, it will be the most important aid to the other safeguards that has yet been invented. Think of having an invisible giant seize the equipment and hold it with ease! But even that will not make travel entirely safe. The wireless is a great aid in the matter of rescuing the perishing at sea. But the biggest ship of modern times was lost, with all her crew, a victim to speed mania. No invisible giant can be invoked to stop man in his wild career! Perhaps some day he will have sense to slow himself down. In the meantime, the energy that is back of his fierce going is sublime.

What is believed to be the last lottery drawing authorized by the Italian government has been held at Rome. "Thus," says a London paper, "Italy falls in line with those enlightened governments which refuse to swell their revenue by pandering to the gambling passion among the people.

Incidentally, the winning ticket in this last drawing has never turned up; it is supposed to have been on the Titanic when that ship went down. The amount of the prize was $100,000. Just for the "looks of things," it seems as if it might be well for the government to give the money to the holder of the next highest ticket, but so far no such action has been chronicled. There are always ill-natured folks ready to say that a lottery is fixed!

It is very wicked to gamble, but the gambling spirit is almost universal, and this proves that it is a natural instinct and one which might serve a useful purpose if turned in the right direction. It has been said that men gamble because their lives are monotonous. But some of the greatest gamblers are soldiers in the field—and certainly their lives do not lack change and color! A German philosopher goes to the bottom of the subject and explains the matter as follows:

The simple truth of the matter is that we are hereditary worshippers of the goddess fortune. Nothing delights the unregenerate human heart so much as to stake its all on a cast of the dice to win or lose as chance may decide. The exigencies of race development have made us so. Those races of men have survived which were ready at any moment to risk everything for something better. The others have perished. Hence the passion for gambling, which is nothing less than playing with fate, is as much a part of our psychology as the hunger for food. Nor is it quite certain that we are entirely ready to dispense with it. Willingness to stake fortune and reputation in enterprises for the public good is a form of the gambling passion, of course very greatly modified. But it is these modified survivals of primitive traits upon which society must rely for some of its best achievements.

HIS SHAKY MEMORY

The lawyers got a Tartar when, in a recent trial in a Southern city, they summoned to the stand an aged darky who had been an eyewitness of a fight that had occurred between a number of persons.

"Tell us what you know about this fight," said counsel when old Mose had been placed upon the stand.

"Fight?" asked Mose, apparently greatly surprised. "What fight?"

"You know very well what fight is meant," said counsel. "Tell us about it."

"I don't know nothin' about no fight," insisted the witness. "When was it?"

"See here, Moses!" exclaimed the lawyer; "no trifling! The fight day before yesterday. You know all about it. Tell us—"

"Oh de fight day befo' yisterday," said Mose. "Well, suh, you see, I'se slept since de day befo' yisterday, and I never kin rick-ollet anything after I'se been asleep."

And that was all they could get from him.

"My dear," said the eminent surgeon's wife, "I shall need a new fur coat this year."

"All right," said the great man, "I'll look over my list and find some one who can afford an operation for appendicitis."

PARENT'S VIEW

Photographer (to young man). It will make a much better picture if you put your hand on your father's shoulder.

The Father. Huh! It would be much more natural if he had his hand in my pocket.

UNANSWERABLE.

At the dedication of a new fire engine in a little town on the Massachusetts coast, the following toast was proposed:

"May she be like the dear old maids of our village—always ready, but never called for!"

Dr. Watts says it hurts Henry Plank so much to pay for a meal that the food doesn't do him any good.

He had had bad luck fishing, and on his way home he entered the butcher shop and said to the dealer: "Just stand over there and throw me five of the biggest of those trout!"

"Throw 'em? What for?" asked the dealer in amazement.

"So I can tell the family I caught 'em. I may be a poor fisherman, but I'm no liar."

Soubrette. Why do the leaves turn red in autumn?

Comedian. Blushing because they've been so green all summer.

A QUITTER

Years ago a former United States senator from one of our western states was foreman of a gang of lumberjacks, mostly Swedes. One day he had three or four with him on a raft.

"You better gat some one to tak Ole's plaise," one of the men addressed him.

"What's the matter with Ole?"

"Hae yust went under the raft and I tank hae's not coming back."

A COINCIDENCE

Georgia Lawyer (to colored prisoner). Well, 'Ras, do you want me to defend you? Have you any money?

'Rastus. No; but I'se got a mule and a few chickens and a hog or two.

Lawyer. Those will do very nicely. Now, let's see, what do they accuse you of stealing?

'Rastus. Oh, a mule and a few chickens and a hog or two.

"You admit then," inquired the Magistrate severely, "that you stole the pig?"

"I has to Boss," said the prisoner.

"Very well," returned the Magistrate, with decision; "there has been a lot of pig-stealing going on around here lately and I am going to make an example of you, or none of us will be safe."

WHERE HE WAS VALUABLE

"Yes," said the celebrated oculist, "he had some rare trouble with his eyes. Every time he began to read he would read double. And yet he is able to hold a very high-salaried position."

"Why, what can he do?" said the friend.

"The gas company gave him a job reading meters."

OF COURSE NOT

Aunt Caroline came running into the dining room, kinky hair on end.

"Missus," she gasped, "I done met a ghost out dar by de well."

"You must have been mistaken, Caroline," said the lady of the house. "There aren't any such things as ghosts."

Aunt Caroline drew herself up haughtily.

"Dey ain't, ain't dey? Well, what would you say if I tole you this 'un done spoke to me? Yessum, I heard him."

"Why, what did he say?"

"Say," sniffed the dusky mistress of the meals. "How you spects I know? I never learned dese here daid langwiches."

WHAT WAS WORSE

"Can you imagine," said the facetious teacher of natural history, "anything worse than a giraffe with a sore throat?"

"Yes, sir," came the answer from one boy.

"What, pray?" asked the teacher in surprise.

"A centipede with corns."

A CURIOUS WORD

There is a word in the English language the first two letters of which signify a male, the first three a female, the first four a great man and the whole a great woman. The word is "heroine."

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

VICEGERENT SNARK JACK BRANTLEY, Northern Indiana, Indianapolis, Ind., held his first Concatenation at Indianapolis on Wednesday, January 8, 1913. Concatenation was held in connection with the annual meeting of the Retail Lumber Dealers' Association of Indiana. Concatenation was held in the sun parlor of the Claypool Hotel at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and adjournment was made to the Columbia Club, where banquet and smoker was tendered to all in attendance at the convention. Over 400 sat down at banquet tables and everyone thoroughly enjoyed banquet and entertainment. The Indianapolis lumbermen were the hosts, and this is sufficient, as they have a reputation as entertainers that cannot be excelled anywhere.

Flowers were sent to Supreme Bojum John Oxenford, as he was unable to be in attendance on account of illness.

Brother Brantley is to be congratulated upon the great success of his Concatenation.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

At meeting held in Minneapolis on January 6, 1913, Brother John W. Phillips (6606) was selected as Vicegerent Snark for the Southern District of Minnesota. Brother Phillips got busy at once and Concatenation was arranged for Tuesday evening, January 14, 1913. Concatenation was held at Elks' Hall. The Scrivenoter was present and made an address to all present, but had to leave before Concatenation was held in order to keep appointment at Omaha, Nebraska.

This was first Concatenation held in Minneapolis in three years on account of some local dissatisfaction. While only one kitten was initiated and the attendance of members was not what was expected or what it should have been from promises made; a start was, however, made, and it is to be hoped that the Minneapolis Hoo-Hoo will again get together and not let personal likes and dislikes prevent them from again enjoying the great benefits to be secured through the Order.

It was suggested that a Hoo-Hoo Club be organized and that they get together, and we trust that this valuable suggestion will be carried out. There is no question of the value of the Order to the lumber industry, and it is up to the lumbermen to get together and not permit anyone to destroy the great advantage that will accrue to them through that spirit of fraternal goodfellowship that governs Hoo-Hoo.

The Scrivenoter was a guest at the salesmen's banquet on Monday evening, January 13, 1913, and highly appreciated the warm welcome and hospitality of the lumber salesmen. Minneapolis was some years ago noted for its Concatenations, and we want that old-time enthusiasm again and feel sure that it will be to the mutual benefit of all to get closer together.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

Vicegerent Snark F. T. Peitch, Northeastern District of Ohio, Cleveland, Ohio, held Concatenation at Colonial Hotel, Cleveland, on Tuesday evening, January 21, 1913. This was held in connection with the annual meeting of the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber Dealers. Larger attendance of old members and larger class of kittens was expected. This was cut down some on account of special meeting of the association called for same hour as Concatenation.

All in attendance had a good time, and Brother Peitch had a fine banquet, which was thoroughly enjoyed. This is first Concatenation held in Cleveland for some years and only marks the start for renewed interest there. The lumbermen of Ohio need the good influence of Hoo-Hoo to bring them closer together, and we trust that before long there will be a demand for another Concatenation in Cleveland and that all Hoo-Hoo there will work together and hold a Concatenation later on.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

Viceregent Snark Louis Hector, Western District Missouri held a Concatenation at Elks' Club, Kansas City, on Thursday, January 23, 1913. This was held in connection with the Annual Meeting of the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association.

Just "pussy foot in" is the way the invitations sent out by Vicegerent Hector read to the HOO-HOO Concatenation held in Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 23rd. And several hundred loyal Hoo-Hoo "pussy footed" it over to the Elks' Club and proceeded to administer the wants of six hopeful kittens; they bathed their fevered brows, made the usual tests for microbes, removed a superfluous appendix or two, gave them drinks other than catnip tea, fed them meats not prescribed by the pure food laws.

One of the most pleasing features of the Concatenation was the presence of Brother Edwin Morrison Adams, 473, of Mound City, Kansas. Brother Adams said he "just pussy footed it in" to see what Scrivenoter Stephenson looked like. The talk Brother Adams gave the boys was enjoyed by all. He is of that rare vintage that improves with age. He asked all Hoo-Hoo to support the faltering foot steps of their erring brothers, and strive to bring them back to Hoo-Hoo. He believes they can yet be made to see the beauties of the love of mankind, the sin of ingratitude. THE BULLETIN wishes Brother Adams, Health, Happiness and Long Life. The world would be better if there were more good Hoo-Hoo like Brother Adams.

The Concatenation was held at 2:30 p. m., the session on the roof was given by the Sap and Bark Club at 9:09 p. m. This caused some confusion, several candidates after signing up did not show up for initiation, and several invited to the session thinking the Concatenation would take up considerable time arrived too late for the "Big Show" and it was truly a great show. The writer has never seen a larger, or better behaved crowd at a gathering of this kind, the Sap and Bark Club is to be congratulated on its work. The programs sent out were novel and clever and if space would permit, I would like to reproduce them here. The entertainment was too big to attempt to give it a fair write up. It consisted of an athletic show with high class boxing and wrestling followed by a very dainty supper, and an unusually high class vaudeville and cabaret show.

The boys of the Sap and Bark Club have shown Kansas City that the visiting lumbermen have good red blood in their veins and like a good keen show with all the coarse stuff eliminated.

The writer sat opposite a prominent lumberman who said, "Boys, you can't get away from it, it is the spirit of the Great Black Cat that invades the air and brings us all here—there is a feeling of affiliation that draws all lumbermen together and Hoo-Hoo cements the bond."

The good ship Hoo-Hoo is in mighty good hands here with the Sap and Bark Club at the helm. It is an honor and a pleasure to attend one of their entertainments. The Sap and Bark Club is composed of the biggest bunch of live wires that ever happened.

Here is Health, Happiness and Long Life to the Sap and Bark Club of Kansas City.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Viceregent Snark R. M. Handy, Colorado, held Concatenation at Denver, Colo., on Tuesday evening, January 21st. This was held in connection with the annual meeting of the Colorado and Wyoming Lumber Dealers' Association, Concatenation was held at Brown's Palace Hotel and the Denver Knot Hole Club sent out a very unique announcement of this Concatenation and we regret that we can not reproduce same in full.

Resolutions were passed at the Concatenation regarding the new ritual and suggestions were made as to desirable changes. THE BULLETIN has, however, not yet received copy of resolution and suggestions and as soon as they are received they will be given publicity through THE BULLETIN.

Brother Handy expected a much larger class of kittens, but he is to be congratulated upon the class he initiated as they are all of the highest character and grade A-1.

THE BULLETIN regrets that we can not give full write up of this Concatenation but report of same has been delayed in the mails.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Vicegerent Snark H. B. Weiss, Western District Tennessee, held his first Concatenation at Memphis, Tenn., Saturday evening, February 1, 1913. Concatenation was held at Hotel Gayoso. Brother Weiss was most ably assisted by Brother J. H. Whaley of The Southern Lumberman.

The Scrivenoter was a guest of the Memphis Lumbermen's Club at luncheon and made a short talk on the benefits of The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo to the lumber industry.

The Memphis Lumbermen's Club is a live organization and is accomplishing great good to the lumbermen of Memphis.

THE BULLETIN wishes the Club Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Vicegerent Snark Weiss is a live wire and we congratulate him upon the success of his first Concatenation and we are expecting good reports from his district this year.

OMAHA, NEB.

Vicegerent Snark S. M. Eaton of Nebraska, most ably assisted by Brothers J. W. Chase of Lincoln, Nebraska, and Lew Wentworth of Omaha, Neb., held concatenation at Omaha on January 15, 1913; this was held in connection with the annual meeting of the Nebraska Lumber Dealers Association.

HARRY B. HUSTON (3896)
Vicegerent Snark, Nebraska, Omaha, Nebraska

Concatenation was to have been held on January 14, 1913, but as date conflicted with entertainment features arranged by the Omaha committee it was postponed until the 15th.

The attendance of old members and the class initiated was not what was expected. This is accounted for by some local conditions in Nebraska in the past.

A new start has now been made and THE BULLETIN feels satisfied that Hoo-Hoo will come into greater prominence than it has ever been. Nebraska lumbermen fully appreciate the great good that can be accomplished by the Order and there are no more loyal Hoo-Hoo anywhere than the Nebraska members.

A business session was held before the concatenation and Brother Harry B. Huston (3896) of the C. N. Deitz Lumber Co., Omaha, Nebraska, was unanimously chosen Vicegerent Snark for Nebraska. Brother Huston is busy at work and we are sure that he will make Hoo-Hoo a live issue in Nebraska and that THE BULLETIN will soon have good news from Brother Huston.

Concatenation was held in Banquet Hall of the Rome Hotel and the Scrivenoter made a short address to all present, outlining the plans for the future work of the Order.

The Scrivenoter acknowledges receipt of announcement of the death of Mrs. Anna Saint-Clair Mendenhall (nee Nourse), wife of Brother John B. Mendenhall (8499), of the National Lead Co., Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Mendenhall died January 25, 1913, at her home, 2522 Cleveland Avenue, Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Mendenhall was a woman of a noble Christian character and had many warm friends. THE BULLETIN joins the many friends of Brother Mendenhall in extending to him our sincere heartfelt sympathy in this his hour of sorrow.

Brother Leonard E. Meyer (22021), of the Meyer News Service Co., Milwaukee, Wis., is a good loyal Hoo-Hoo. Brother Meyer is a great believer in the benefits of the automobile and is Secretary of the Milwaukee Automobile Club. Brother Meyer has secured license number 999 for several years and we are pleased to acknowledge receipt of photograph, showing this number permanently affixed to his auto.

We understand that Brother Meyer is able to get this number each year on account of his being such a good Hoo-Hoo that the Secretary of the State of Wisconsin has set aside this good Hoo-Hoo number for him. THE BULLETIN trusts that Brother Meyer will continue his good work and wishes him Health, Happiness and Long Life.

THE BULLETIN is pleased to announce the election of Brother W. M. Kavanaugh (2666), of Little Rock, Ark., as United States Senator from Arkansas to fill the term of the late Senator Jeff Davis. Brother Kavanaugh will take office March 4 and will serve full term of six years. Brother Kavanaugh is a former Newspaper man and is President of the Southern Association of Baseball Clubs and is considered one of the foremost authorities on baseball law in the country.

Brother Kavanaugh was born at Eutaw, Ala., on March 3, 1866, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Little Rock, Ark., on January 15, 1895.

THE BULLETIN extends hearty congratulations to Brother Kavanaugh and wishes him Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Brother C. L. Showalter (19459) advises that he has bought 9000 acres of timber in Virginia and West Virginia and that he will get operations started at once and that he will make his headquarters at Sherando, Augusta County, Va. Brother Showalter recently made a two months' trip through the South.

We are advised that Brother Showalter was married at Parkersburg, W. Va., on December 26, 1912, but as we have not been advised name of the bride we cannot make announcement under "Wedding Bells."

We however extend to Brother and Mrs. Showalter, our best wishes for Health, Happiness and Long Life.

THE ROAD FROM GROUCHTOWN

Get away from Grouchtown—see the big sun shine.
Come on to the dancin'—the girls are all in line,
The happy folks are crowdin' at the windows and the door
And the fiddle's makin' music that it never made before!

Get away from Grouchtown! It ain't the place to stay,
Where lonesome Winter never has a rosy dream of May;
What's the use of travel, bearing Trouble's load?
Don't you hear the music ringin' down the road?

Lonesome place is Grouchtown—never any light;
Not a star to twinkle through the shadows of the night;
Why should you be stayin' in such a solemn place?
Get out where the light is—look the morning in the face?

Far away from Trouble that only would destroy;
Ready for the dancin' we'll have a round with joy!
Don't you be a-countin' of your tribulations o'er
When the fiddle's makin' music it never made before!

—Frank L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

ARTHUR T. NEFF (2735)
Vicegerent Snark, Northwestern District, Ohio, Toledo, Ohio

If you are really a pessimist, don't inflict yourself on anyone. Doesn't Emerson tell us that GOD made PESSIMISTS after he made HOGS?

WHO ARE ELIGIBLE

Article III of Constitution:

"Section 1. Active membership.—The membership in this Order shall be limited to white male persons of full age of twenty-one (21) years, of good moral character, who possess one or more of the following seven qualifications: Lumbermen, Foresters, Officers of Lumber Associations, Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies, Newspaper Men, Railroad Men, Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men, and so-definitely shall the line of qualification be drawn in each class that the occupation under which persons apply for membership shall be their main or principal occupation, and it shall be the business of the person recognized in the community in which he resides as his principal vocation.

Specific Definition of Eligibility

"(a) Lumbermen.—Lumbermen shall be those who are engaged either in the ownership or sale of timber lands, timber or logs, or the manufacture or sale, at wholesale or retail, of forest products, either as owners, officers, managers of departments, general superintendents, sales managers or salesmen.

"(b) Foresters.—This class shall include those persons graduated from recognized schools of forestry, officials of the forestry service and members of forest commissions or boards, either state or national.

"(c) Officers of Lumber Associations.—Regularly organized lumber associations, state or national.

"(d) Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies.—Officers or representatives of mutual or inter-insurance companies placing risks on lumber property exclusively.

"(e) Newspaper Men.—Publishers, proprietors or persons regularly connected with the editorial or business departments of newspapers.

"(f) Railroad Men.—General officers, general and assistant freight, passenger, claim, purchasing, commercial, soliciting and station agents, chief dispatchers and train masters and members of railroad commissions.

"(g) Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men.—Persons engaged in the manufacture or sale, to lumber manufacturers, of sawmill or planing mill machinery and mill supplies.

"(h) Initiation.—Such persons as above mentioned may be initiated under proper application, payment of initiation fee and election to membership.

"(i) Limited Active Membership.—The active membership shall be limited to 83,999 members in good standing.

Admission of Paint, Cement, Tiling, Roofing and Oil Men

"(j) Manufacturers, wholesale dealers and salesmen of cement, roofing, paints, oil, tiling and other staple articles cannot become active members, but will be welcome as honorary members."

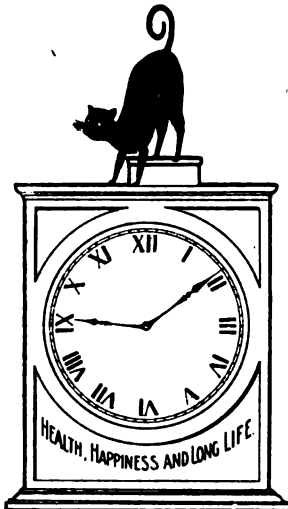

The above is printed for the information of all members. We must comply with the above. In case of doubt take up with the Scrivenoter and he will ask the Supreme Nine to rule.

Watch this closely and before voting for a candidate be sure he is eligible.

DUES FOR 1913

At 9:09 on September 9, 1912, dues became payable for 1913. The Hoo-Hoo year begins and ends on Sept. 9. Look up your cards, and if you find that you have not paid 1913 dues, send $1.65 to the Scrivenoter at once.

Published Monthly by the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, at St. Louis, Missouri.

WILLIAM M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at St. Louis, Missouri, as second-class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year.....66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

THE BULLETIN is the only official medium of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo recognized by the Supreme Nine.

Address all communications for THE BULLETIN to W. M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, 1219 Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO., MARCH 9, 1913.

Every member should read THE BULLETIN and keep in close touch with what is being accomplished.

Remember the Supreme Nine want and need the hearty cooperation and assistance of all members. Let us all get together, stay together and work together for the upbuilding of our Order and let us make it the Order we all want it to be.

Be sure and read the reports of the different concatenations held. This will convince you that Hoo-Hoo is going right ahead to a most splendid success.

* * *

Read the notices of the prospective concatenations and get busy and give your Vicegerent Snark the benefit of your loyal support.

* * *

GET BUSY. If your Vicegerent Snark has not held a concatenation, get in touch with him and show him that you are willing to help and that he should set his date at once and get all members working. Let us all pull together and make this year a record that we will all be proud of.

* * *

THE BULLETIN for February and March was delayed on account of the absence from the office of the Scrivenoter who has been on the road attending concatenations. The April issue will be out on the 9th.

SCRIVENOTER'S REPORT

Absence from the office, attending concatenations, has prevented the Scrivenoter from making up financial report in time for the March BULLETIN.

A full report covering receipts and disbursements will be published in THE BULLETIN for April.

GEORGE HARTSHORN HODGES (592)

Brother George H. Hodges was born in Richland County, Wisconsin, February 6th, 1866, from which place the family moved in the summer of 1869, to Olathe, Johnson County, Kansas, coming via, the "Prairie Schooner Limited."

Within a few years after the arrival of the Hodges family in Kansas, the elder Hodges died, leaving George and his elder brother Frank, as the only support of their mother and sister.

Like most boys, George was full of the spirit of boyhood, liked his fun and play, but this must be denied for the more serious problem of assisting in providing a sustenance for the family.

The first employment of the Hodges Brothers was that of herder for the town cows, which they continued to do for several years, gathering them up in the morning and driving them out to the broad prairies to graze during the day, eating their snack under the not too abundant shade of the willows and returning their charges at night fall.

As soon as the brothers were large enough to work for wages, they learned the lathers trade, and became experts in their line, and today hundreds of residents of Johnson County, boast of the fact that their homes were lathed by the Governor of Kansas, and incidently remark that it was a good job of lathing.

In 1886 he went to work in an Olathe lumber yard, as a day laborer in which employment he got his first insight in the lumber business.

In 1889 with no material security but backed by an unbounded energy and an unblemished integrity and that push found only in men who make a success, he borrowed $2500.00 from an Olathe banker on his own endorsement, and started his first lumber yard in Olathe.

At first the venture did not meet with the success the young man dreamed of, but the experience learned in the school of "hard knocks" had fortified him with that tenacity of purpose that has followed him through life and made possible his many achievements.

When the tide began flowing his way, his brother Frank entered the firm and since then it has been known as Hodges Bros.

In 1891 his health failed him and he thought a change would be beneficial so he secured a position as a traveling salesman, traveling through Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Arkansas, and knows all about the privations, hard knocks and hard work, that the "Knight of the Grip" must endure.

After two years on the road, his health having been restored and is growing business requiring his undivided attention he gave up his position, in order to give his whole time to this rapidly increasing business.

From this small beginning this business has grown until the Olathe yard is one of the largest retail yards, under cover, in the whole country, the entire yard being under a steel roof as is the case of their nine branch yards, all of which are located within a radius of twenty miles of the Olathe headquarters.

Their annual business amounts to more than a quarter million dollars.

Mr. Hodges is not only a self-made man in material wealth, but is a self-educated as well, being a student of the best modern authors, a man who has traveled much at home and abroad, and with a keen perception of public questions he is able to grasp the problems that will confront him as chief executive of the state.

In the fall of 1904 he was elected to the state senate for a term of four years and in 1908 was re-elected, from which position he was elevated to the Governorship.

During his career as senator, he was the sponsor or supporter of every reform and progressive measure before the legislature.

He was universally acknowledged by both democratic and republican press as the exponent of a square deal and sane measures.

The high regard with which Brother Hodges is held by the people of Kansas may be attested by the fact, that he is the first democratic governor elected in thirty years, defeating his republican adversary, who was probably the most popular and most widely known man in the state.

He was the only democrat elected on the state ticket, the others being defeated by from ten to twenty thousand votes.

While business and politics has claimed most of his energy and time, he has given no little time to fraternal societies, being a Knight of Pythias, Knight Templar, 33d Scottish Rite Mason and Hoo-Hoo, having been initiated in the latter at Kansas City, August 26th, 1893.

Among his fellow townsmen he is known as the "Prince of Goodfellows" ever willing to assist the less fortunate and minister to those in distress.

Brother Hodges' home life is ideal and in his home surrounded by a loving wife, and two fond children, fittingly enjoys the comforts and honors he has so justly earned.

LUDINGTON, MICH., March 27, 1913.

Vicegerent Snark Fred. J. Verkerke, Western Michigan, Grand Rapids, Mich., advises that he will hold a concatenation at Ludington, Mich., on March 27, 1913.

The Grand Rapids Nine will put on the work and this is sufficient guarantee of a good class and a most pleasant evening.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, April 5, 1913.

Vicegerent Snark Wm. H. MacFarlane of Utah, announces a concatenation to be held at Salt Lake City, on April 5, 1913. Brother MacFarlane attended the Spokane concatenation and returned home determined to equal Brother Ehrmantraut's great concatenation.

GREENSBORO, N. C., April 4, 1913.

Vicegerent Snark Claude Kiser, West Central District North Carolina, has announced a concatenation for Friday night, April 4, 1913, at Greensboro, N. C.

Brother Kiser advises that he expects this to be one of the best concatenations held in North Carolina and he wants all Hoo-Hoo of this section to get in touch with him and give him their loyal support.

Supreme Senior Hoo-Hoo J. M. English, of Asheville, N. C., expects to attend this concatenation.

EUREKA, CALIFORNIA, April 19, 1913.

Vicegerent Snark Marshall C. Wood, Humboldt District, California, Eureka, Cal., advises that his concatenation of April 19, 1913, will be as great a success as his December concatenation and that he expects as large, if not larger class of kittens. Snark Trower will attend this concatenation.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.

Vicegerent Snark W. G. Blake, Gulf District, Texas, advises that he will hold a concatenation at Corpus Christi early part of April. Date to be announced later. Brother Blake expects a good class and all Hoo-Hoo are urged to give him their hearty support.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Vicegerent Snark F. T. Pietch, Northeastern District of Ohio, Cleveland, Ohio, advises that he is going to hold another concatenation in Cleveland shortly and that he is going to make this concatenation a record one for Ohio. Concatenation will probably be held at the Colonial Hotel as they certainly know how to take care of their friends and make all feel at home. Date will be announced later.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

Vicegerent Snark Bernard Brady, Western New York, Buffalo, N. Y., is busy working up a great concatenation for July. A meeting was held recently by Brothers Brady, Wall, Stewart, Briggs and Stanton and this is sufficient guarantee of a successful concatenation. Supreme Gurdon G. J. Michelsen of Rochester, N. Y., is in close touch with the Buffalo Hoo-Hoo and is working with them.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Vicegerent Snark J. E. McNally, Central District, Ohio, Columbus, Ohio, is at work on a concatenation to be held in Columbus and expects to announce date shortly.

WE ARE now at work correcting our records for the 1913 handbook. This is a big job, and in order to see that book is correct and contains the names and addresses of all members in good standing, it is going to require a little patience on the part of our members. We are working as hard and as fast as possible and will get book out at earliest possible date.

In order to get an idea of how many handbooks to be ordered printed, the Scrivenoter requests that all members who desire a copy of the new handbook advise him now.

Remember that to secure the handbook requires that you write the Scrivenoter requesting that it be sent you. A postal card request is sufficient.

In the 1913 Handbook we want the correct address of every member and we will shortly send out notices to all members asking them to advise their correct address, and it is important that this information be given prompt attention and that return card be sent the Scrivenoter without delay.

NO NAME WILL APPEAR IN THE 1913 HANDBOOK UNLESS DUES FOR YEAR 1912 HAVE BEEN PAID.

You will want your name and address in this book and you are urged to send in your dues AT ONCE, so there will be no question of your name appearing in handbook.

GET IN LINE NOW AND DO NOT KICK AFTER HANDBOOK IS PRINTED.

EVERY member should read carefully, each month, "THE PRACTICAL SIDE." This refers to unemployed members and we can show our best nature and our fraternal spirit by not only reading this page, but by doing all in our power to place our brother in line for a position.

EVERY HOO-HOO who employs MEN can find the MAN he is looking for through the columns of THE BULLETIN.

If you want a man for any position, advise the Scrivenoter and he will put you in touch with the man you want.

Remember, it is your duty as a loyal Hoo-Hoo to assist a worthy brother to employment.

Let us all get a little closer together, and let us help each other.

Read all the advertisements in this issue and advise the Scrivenoter promptly of any opportunity where we can place our members. Do this in a true fraternal spirit.

THE Scrivenoter has been advised that a few men claiming to be members of the Order are going about soliciting aid in the shape of loans from our members. The Supreme Nine requests members of the Order that if anyone, personally unknown to them, applies to them for aid, claiming that he is a member of the Order, and asking for aid on account of such membership, that the member immediately take the matter up by wire with the Scrivenoter, giving as full particulars as possible and always giving number claimed by party who is asking for aid. The Scrivenoter will, if the party is entitled to aid on account of membership in the Order, advise you promptly what action to take. Please bear this in mind and assist the Supreme Nine all in your power to stop this practice.

THE Scrivenoter has received many letters from members in different jurisdictions suggesting that the Junior Ritual be revised and that any and all objectionable matter be eliminated and that the ritual be brought up to date.

Now every member of the Order is, and should be, interested in this revision.

We want a ritual that will cover this section of our initiation in a satisfactory manner.

The Scrivenoter therefore asks that all members, and this means YOU, give to the revision of the Junior Ritual their most careful thought and that they write the Scrivenoter fully, giving him the benefit of their most valuable suggestions as to what they wish covered in this ritual.

Every member has some valuable ideas, and we want them.

Now let us all get busy and make the new Junior Ritual a great success.

DO THIS FOR HOO-HOO.

THE Scrivenoter extends a most hearty invitation to all members of the Order to visit the Scrivenoter's office when in St. Louis, and assures them a cordial welcome.

Come in and see us and see for yourself just how the business of the Order is conducted.

Ask all the questions you wish and we will, to the best of our ability, endeavor to satisfy you fully.

Make this office your headquarters while in St. Louis and have your mail addressed in our care. This is your office and you should use it.

A complete file of the lumber trade journals is kept in this office for the information of visiting members.

Come in and get acquainted.

Death Emergency Fund

THE SIXTH CALL.

The following letter was mailed members making the Sixth Call:

February 15, 1913.
DEATH EMERGENCY FUND,
SIXTH CALL,
PAYABLE MARCH 1, 1913.

Dear Brother:

This is Sixth Call for the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund and you are urged to make prompt remittance to cover. This fund has worked out on original plan and is worthy of the support of every Hoo-Hoo. It has carried a ray of sunshine into a good many homes.

The amount to remit for Sixth Call is $2.00.

The Scrivenoter suggests that in remitting for Sixth Call you also remit covering Seventh Call, if it is convenient to do so. This suggestion is made in order to insure your protection, as many members are away from home a good deal and I believe you will appreciate the importance of keeping at least one call ahead at all times. A full report of Fifth Call will be published in March BULLETIN. Kindly advise if any change is to be made in your beneficiary.

With kindest personal regards, I am,

Fraternally yours,

W. M. STEPHENSON,

Scrivenoter.

In accordance with the rules of this fund members wishing to contribute must send in their remittance of $2.00 to cover the Sixth Call by March 15, 1913. Any contributor to the Fifth Call who dies after March 15, 1913, and who has not responded to the Sixth Call will not be entitled to any benefits.

If you are a subscriber to this fund will you not kindly discuss it with all members you meet and explain same to them and extend to them an invitation to join with us in this good work.

The Fifth Call is in effect up to March 15, 1913, after that date we will be working under the Sixth Call.

BELOW find statement covering receipts and disbursements of this fund. Detail reports have been previously printed and the Scrivenoter will be pleased to give any member full information upon request:

The April BULLETIN will contain full report of Fifth Call and will also cover all receipts for Sixth Call received up to April 1, 1913.

I WANT all members to read over the following letters, selected from those received, endorsing the Death Emergency Fund. If you are not already a subscriber to this fund, the above financial statement, together with endorsements, should cause you to subscribe at once and be a factor in this good work. If you are a subscriber, talk it with all members you meet and urge them to send in their subscription to the Sixth Call.

I consider this Death Emergency Fund one of the best features of our Order. It has worked out in a most satisfactory manner to all, and it will continue in the future, as it has in the past, to be successful in every way.

If you feel that you personally do not need this ray of sunshine, remember there are many others who do, and you cannot do anything better than to join hands with us.

I am very anxious to increase the number of members subscribing to this fund and want every member of the Order to give me his hearty co-operation and support to this end. We cannot tell you in mere words the great good this has accomplished. If there are any features connected with this you don't fully understand, or if there is any information you desire regarding this fund, write the Scrivenoter and he will be pleased to explain it fully.

Come on in and help this good work along.

Sixth Call received and I am glad to enclose check for $4.00 to cover Sixth and Seventh Calls.

I trust that all of the boys will come across, for this is a great work, and one I am sure all would participate in if they would give it a little more thought.

G. B. DEL VECCHIO (14312),
Dyersburg, Tenn.

Enclosed find $2.00 in payment of Sixth Call.

I do not keep up this fund with the hope of securing the benefit of it for my family, but am quite willing to help the other fellow's who dies and we must all do that some day. I hope to contribute many $2.00 and expect to be in at the time when my call comes.

N. N. CRARY (5569),
Beaumont, Texas.

Enclosed find $4.00 to cover Sixth and Seventh Calls. I pay it cheerfully and hope I may be able to pay many more before I have to draw down. It is a fine feature of our Order.

W. E. BEAL (8736),
Vienna, Ill.

It is with pleasure that we again respond to the call of the Hoo-Hoo "Death Emergency Call" for the Sixth time. While we have not needed it for our families we know our money has gone to help some one else in time of trouble, and that is all the pay any one should ask.

O. H. BACHTEL (5324),
L. M. BACHTEL (11158),
Canton, Ohio.

Please find enclosed my check for $4.00 to cover Sixth and Seventh Call for the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. This is something I think all members should give their attention. It certainly is one of the best things of Hoo-Hoo.

W. P. McBROOM (14681),
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Enclosed find my check for $2.00 paying Sixth Call.

I am glad this department in Hoo-Hoo is working out so satisfactorily in its experimental period and I trust what has been done in this direction is sufficient proof to all loyal Hoo-Hoo members to cause them to participate in same, thereby guaranteeing its continuous success.

GEO. F. KENDIG (16785),
Philadelphia, Pa.

I am in receipt of your notice of the 15th of the Sixth Call for the Death Emergency Fund, and am glad to respond to same. While I regret to see any Brother pass to that "Great Beyond," still I trust that those who can not stay with us on this earthly sphere are contributors to this fund at the time of their departure for the other shore, so as to leave behind a small token of remembrance for the loved ones left to battle the world alone. With best wishes for Hoo-Hoo and the Death Emergency Fund and hoping that more of our Brothers will become contributors.

L. F. HALE (971),
Grand Rapids, Mich.

I enclose you herein my check for $2.00 for Sixth Call for Death Emergency Fund. I have responded to every call heretofore and intend to keep coming at every call. My opinion is this fund is a fine thing in Hoo-Hoo. We may never have our beneficiary make claim but there are worthy Hoo-Hoo passing away every few weeks whose families find the fund a blessing and it comes right at a time when a ray of sunshine does the utmost good. Don't let the brethren become neglectful of this feature of our Order.

O. H. THOMAS (994),
Mansfield, Ark.

Enclosed find check for Sixth Call. Am always glad to respond to this worthy cause feeling that we all are helping some of our friends when help is most needful.

E. S. ROCKWOOD (8271),
Westfield, Mass.

I hand you herewith $2.00 for Sixth Call Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. Its a good thing (like all the other features of Hoo-Hoo) push it along.

J. A. WENTZ (442),
Boston, Mass.

I enclose you check for $4.00 to cover Sixth and Seventh Calls for Death Emergency Fund. Every good Hoo-Hoo (which ought to mean every member) should join in this most worthy object. While we wish every Brother Health, Happiness and Long Life, yet we know we must eventually meet the inevitable.

J. W. KERNS (3061),
Auburn, Nebraska.

I enclose herewith my check for $2.00 covering Sixth Call for Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund. I trust that the members will respond promptly and in sufficient numbers to continue the success of this good work.

H. M. HALSTEAD (18448),
Milwaukee, Wis.

Sixth Call at hand this morning. I have no call in my business that gives me more pleasure to respond to than does this. My reason for thinking so, is from the fact, that I know no Order has for its foundation a more worthy object. I only regret that the call is not twice the amount and the benefit doubled. May our Order never quit growing.

THOMAS HALE (23440),
Pryor, Okla.

SHARKS (NOT SNARKS).

By Robert E. Masters (71).

IN WRITING of personal experience and observations as well, a writer is compelled to use the big I more or less. No matter how much they may wish to avoid, but I think

I will not have to use it to the extent that my readers will say of me what Dooley did about Roosevelt's work on "The War in Cuba." "Hinnisey, th' title o' this book ort-a-bin 'alone in Cuba.'"

Don't imagine the title of this article has any reference to the much talked of, and more dreaded loan sharks—compared to him, the wolves of the sea are perfect gentlemen and a great deal more merciful. They don't drag along and make a piece-meal job of it, they just gobble the whole thing down at one gulp and have it over.

Many singular and unheard of things happen to anglers, and many of the occurrences are well nigh unbelievable, here is one little incident in a fishing experience:

I was down on Alamitos Bay where the Halibut take a great fancy to run now and then—I was in a sixteen-foot skiff, and my boatman was maneuvering for position like a skillful billiard player, when something took my bait with a slam-bang-dash and began to run the yards off the reel to a merry song in the most reckless sort of fashion, even with all the pressure I could safely apply to the leather brake without breaking the line. Zip, out he came in a jump clear of the water every inch of him, and revealed himself—or herself a good size, gray shark, he surged to the right and then reverse, out he would come like a flash, then down to the bottom where he would lie and sulk, like an unruly boy kept in after school.

I knew what had taken my hook, the first pass it made, for I had hooked and caught and landed many a one before—and lost some too. But it was very late in the season for these big, gray sharks to be in the bay, my rod, reel and line were in good proportion to each other, but all rather light for the work this fellow had cut out for it, however, he was generous on the give and take plan. I was standing up in the skiff as I always do when I am working any kind of a fish. None of your patent socket seats—patent automatic tension brakes, machine style of fishing with the boatman doing more than half of the whole job for me.

Sometimes his sharklets would let me get in a good share of line and then he would yank and surge and tug and plunge till he was dangerously close to peeling the reel clean, but by a little extra hard and fast work, there would be a few extra yards on the reel post, and an easier feeling aboard boat. I never yet felt the least bit bad about any fish getting away; that is their part of the business and you would get away if you were in their place. So there is no use to grieve over it, and it isn't the big ones that always get away either. That's the fellows story that fishes very little, if any.

ROBERT GEORGE CAMP (27085)
1885—1913.

Brother Robert G. Camp died at his home in Franklin, Va., on January 22, 1913.

In the death of Brother Camp the lumber industry has suffered a great loss.

Brother Camp attended school at the Franklin Academy in early childhood and from there went to Wake Forest College, Wake Forest, N. C., where in 1904 he received a Bachelor's degree. Going from Wake Forest he entered the University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, where he was given the degree of Master of Arts in 1906. The following year he studied law at the University and then spent several months in travel in Europe.

He came into prominent relationship with the lumber trade in 1907, when he was appointed assistant secretary and treasurer of the Camp Manufacturing Co., of Franklin, Va. This concern and its affiliated interests constitute the largest manufacturers of North Carolina pine. The mills of the company are located at Franklin, Marion and Butterworth, Va., Wilmington, N. C., and Marion, S. C.

Brother Camp's sincere, attractive personality was a large factor in his popularity and success, commercially and socially. He traveled extensively in the North Carolina pine trade, in which he made hosts of friends, socially and in business; and by these especially he will be sorely missed. Mr. Camp was prominent in all social, athletic and fraternal organizations in his college and at the University of Virginia; he was a member of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity at the latter institution. He was well known in the city of Norfolk and was a popular member of the Virginia and Country clubs of that city. Having the interest of his home town largely at heart, Mr. Camp was a generous patron of all public enterprises, some of which in a measure are credited to his initiative; he was largely instrumental in organizing the Young Men's Business Association of Franklin. The death of this young man in the midst of a successful career, undoubtedly assured him by his ability and general personal characteristics, is deeply deplored not only by his fellow townpeople but by his many associates in the North Carolina pine industry, where especially his loss will be deeply felt, a sentiment voiced in the general expression to the effect that "this industry in these troublous times needs all the wise young heads and the old ones to carry it safely over the deep waters into the smooth sailing of business prosperity."

The funeral services were conducted from the home at 2 o'clock Thursday, January 23rd, by Rev. J. L. McCutcheon, Pastor of the Franklin Baptist church, of which Brother Camp was a member. Touching talks and prayers were made by Mr. McCutcheon and by Dr. R. T. Vann, offering consolation and comfort to the bereaved ones and paying tributes to the life of the departed member of the home circle. Prof. Hubert L. Poteat of Wake Forest College sang "The Home Land" and "Nearer My God to Thee" and all eyes were moist with tears when Mr. Jas. L. Camp, Jr., sang his brother's favorite song, "O Heart of Mine," with piano accompaniment by Miss Rena Camp. The interment was made in the family plot in Poplar Spring Cemetery, and the flowers were beautiful and numerous beyond description. Indeed the casket was not only covered, but it required several wagons to carry the floral offerings to the grave.

Brother Camp was born in Hertford County, North Carolina, on August 12, 1885 and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Norfolk, Va., on September 19, 1912.

BENJAMIN ARCHER TUCKER (7473)
1857—1913.

Brother B. A. Tucker of Senatobia, Miss., died very suddenly at his home Monday, February 10, 1913.

Brother Tucker attended church Sunday and seemed to be in perfect health. He arose early Monday morning, expecting to make a business trip to Memphis. Finding that he had some time before the train arrived, he told his wife that he would rest awhile. A few minutes later, on going to the bed, she found him dead.

Brother Tucker was a member of the firm of Tucker and Bailey, Senatobia, Miss., and was vice-president of the Senatobia Bank and president of the board of trustees of the Blackburn Female College. He was a lifelong member of the Baptist Church.

In all these years, as a business man, and in all these varied duties, as a useful and progressive citizen, his marked success was founded on a simple, firm faith in right; a quiet confidence, an even justice and a superb courage that made him an inspiration to all who knew him, and a generous benefactor to the many who daily came to him for help or counsel.

The funeral services were held in the home, and were conducted by his close friend and pastor, Rev. A. T. Cinnamon, assisted by Rev. W. N. Duncan of the Methodist church, and Rev. W. M. Phifer of the Presbyterian church.

The interment was in Bethesda cemetery, Senatobia, where a throng of friends attested their love for him and his bereaved family by placing silent but sincere floral messengers of sympathy upon the tomb of him we all esteem.

Brother Tucker was born in Shelby County, Tennessee, on October 6, 1857, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Jackson, Miss., on April 4, 1900. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

FRANK HALLECK (24067)
1865—1913.

Brother F. Halleck of Corona, Long Island, New York, N. Y., died at Majestic Hotel, Chicago, Ill., February 12, 1913.

No particulars of his illness and death have been received.

Brother Halleck was born in New York City on September 5, 1865, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at French Lick Springs, Ind., on February 4, 1910. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

SQUIRE FREEDOM MITCHELL (10408)
1851—1913.

Brother S. F. Mitchell died at Eau Claire, Wis., on February 20, 1913. Brother Mitchell was injured in a fall from a tree near his home at Bismark, Okla., last December, while gathering holly, which resulted in complete paralysis of the lower half of his body. The severe fracture of the spine, which brought about these conditions, did not yield to surgical treatment and he gradually grew weaker until a few days before his death, pneumonia developed.

Brother Mitchell was born at Dansville, N. Y., on November 4, 1851, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Ruston, La., on February 21, 1903. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

HARRY STOLTS (27043)
1848—1913.

Brother H. Stolts, died at De Ridder, La., January 1, 1913, after a short illness. No particulars of illness or death have been received. Brother Stolts was born at Toronto, Ontario, on February 17, 1848, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at De Ridder, La., on August 3, 1912. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

ALFRED BURNSIDE MEAD (12160)

Brother A. B. Mead, of Paonia, Colo., died on train at Salida, Colo., February 21, 1913. Brother Mead was suffering from cancer of the stomach and had started for Denver for treatment but died before reaching Salida. He was a partner of Brother A. J. Castell in The Gibson-Castell Lumber Co. Brother Mead was born at Cooperstown, New York and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Denver, Colo., on February 16, 1904. He was a subscriber to the Death Emergency Fund.

LEE WEBSTER (26723)
1847—1913.

Brother Lee Webster of Marshfield, Oregon, died at Marshfield, Ore., on February 28, 1913. No particulars of his illness and death have been received.

Brother Webster was born at Wilmington, Del., on May 9, 1847, and was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Marshfield, Ore., on May 24, 1912.

NOTES & COMMENTS

Whether March means to you the stormy month of Mars, the war god, or whether it means "the shining one" depends, no doubt, on the matter of temperament. Strictly speaking, declares an eminent philologist, March is not descended from Mars, for both are children of the same parents—"Mar" is an ancient Aryan root that signifies to shine. Naturally the name was given to the god of war (to the shining one in his helmet, buckler and breastplate of polished brass) and to the first month of Spring that moves the leaden clouds of Winter and uncovers the bright sky to the view of earth.

Those who were brought up in the country will remember that March was the month when sassafras tea was always taken to "thin the blood" and rid it of impurities and "humors." Tea made of sassafras roots is by no means an unpleasant drink; indeed there are some folks who hold it next in favor to persimmon beer. And it is in March, with the sap just fairly rising, that sassafras is at its best, pungent and aromatic, good for spring fever, that insidious malady that brings dark clouds to the mental horizon and makes March anything but the "shining one." The doctors now have a learned name for the cause of which spring fever is the effect; "auto-intoxication" is what ails us when we feel limp and floppy. The cure is fresh air, simple diet and exercise, especially exercise. We are always advised to exercise at the very time we are least able to do so. It is like telling a very poor man to buy groceries in large quantities because to purchase "by the little" is really very extravagant in the long run.

The poverty-stricken cannot economize; only the rich can do that. "The destruction of the poor is their poverty," says the Good Book. So the destruction of the feeble is their feebleness. If one had the strength to take all the exercise prescribed, he would not need a doctor at all. That is where sassafras tea comes in; it is a get-well-quick scheme. To profit by it, the patient should first have faith, and then take so much tea that he cannot eat possibly anything. If the tea doesn't help, the faith and the fasting will.

At this writing the breezes are decidedly wintry, but perhaps the poet was right who named March "The Masquerader," setting forth the quaint conceit in these truly beautiful lines

A gray form flitted from the quiet wood;
I wondered what the vagabond could bring;
Then as the gay wind lifted high the hood—
I saw the dimpled, laughing face of Spring!
I knew not what she hid beneath her cloak,
As she tripped with swift blown kiss to me,
But everywhere the dreaming blossoms woke,
And winds were soft with summer's prophecy.

What a fountain of wisdom is a "New Thought" magazine! How charming, in their beautiful simplicity, the plans outlined for the attaining of our heart's desire!

One of the periodicals of "uplift" carries a department entitled "Ways and Means" which the editors claim affords a clearing house of thoughts, "a most valuable symposium for a copious unlocking of energies by ideas." The department is filled with communications from readers of the magazine, which epistles are modestly called "Success Letters."

Success letter No. 413 starts with the assertion that the morning is the time when the normal man feels in prime condition and when his imagination is most active. Probably you already know this, having observed the average man at breakfast. The success-letter writer says he used to waste half an hour in the morning reading the daily papers, but that by four o'clock in the afternoon he could not remember six lines (or was it six words?) of what he had read in the morning. So he cut it out. And now has found the better way:

I use fifteen minutes every morning making plans for the day. These plans are written, and written most carefully, too. It is in the careful expression of our ideas that we evolve better ones. In making these plans, I am picturing myself doing the things that I am planning to do. Thus I am making use of my imagination at its period of maximum strength.

Before writing today's plans, however, he reviews those of yesterday and carefully checks those that were carried out. This, he says, is a wonderful stimulant to faith; and "faith is another feature of a man's personality that is at its best in the morning." You are aware, of course, that by faith we see, as through a rosy mist, the bright vista of a happy day while wondering if the cook will get breakfast on the table in time for us to get to the office before noon. But why talk of time? Time was made for slaves. Emancipated from its thralldom, by the mighty power of thought, this apostle of success has all the time there is! Wherefore:

This is a fine brisk morning; I'll not walk to my work along the accustomed street, but I'll make a circuit and double the length of my walk; and during the walk I'll concentrate my mind on the benefits of pure air and deep breathing. I'll compose a verse or two—as I walk—in expression of these benefits. It will quicken my mental activity;

Of all the treasures on this earth—
The treasures rich and rare,
The one that has the highest worth
Is outdoor MORNING AIR.

Can you write "verse?" If not, begin now to try, because "to step to the rhythm of an impromptu composition, in the brisk air of the early morning, will send a thrill throughout the entire body and make you capable of efforts you have never made before." It's cheaper than a cocktail—and your imagination as well as your faith will be stronger next morning.

Hark to the voice of experience: "After more than a year of making morning plans, I can note a marked improvement in my feelings at the close of the day. And what are some of these plans?"

Yes, that's what we want to know, oh Solomon the Second! Are you a man of affairs, a captain of industry, a great statesman, a trust buster, or something like that? So much imagination, faith, rhythm and morning air should "externalize" in what is vulgarly known as proof of the pudding. Let's hear your "plans."

I'm going to thank the office boy for every errand promptly run and for every duty well performed; and when his duties are not well performed, I'll patiently instruct him how to do them better. I'll say a hearty "GOOD MORNING" to the scrub woman and a smiling "THANK YOU" to the elevator boy. I'll take a few minutes during the noon hour to write a letter to my dear old aunt, who lives in a dull country village, where a letter is always a source of intense delight.

Sounds like Harold, the good little boy in the Sunday school stories, the lad that always gets drowned. And picture the dullness of a village where a letter from "our hero" would be an event. This indeed is a strain on credulity; but how much more so the dear old aunt—everybody knows there are no dear old aunts any more! All the aunts are too busy to be dear and too interested to feel old. While the plan maker is stepping along on the crippled feet of doggerel, the aunt probably is serenely on her way to the meeting of the suffrage league or maybe is at the garage learning how to be her own chauffeur—and it is a safe bet that she can remember at least six lines of what she reads in the morning, the time when faith and imagination are most active.

The debate in Congress upon the Lincoln Memorial bill gave many members an opportunity to deliver eloquent speeches. The bill carries an appropriation of $2,000,000. The popular idea seems to be that the money should be spent upon a Greek temple near the Potomac, but there is some opposition to this; one faction favors an automobile road to Gettysburg and another wants a temple but not a Greek temple. Mr. Humphreys, of Mississippi, prefers the classic memorial and is "dead set" against the road idea. In burning words he declared that he "would not stain the even virtue of our enterprise by exchanging the inspiration of the artist for the sordid commercialism of the road builder." This has indeed a fine sound; but as a western editor remarks, "A pensive philosopher might reflect that we have not seen very much of the road-builders' commercialism in this country. On more intimate acquaintance with it, perhaps we might discern that it is not irredeemably sordid."

As a matter of fact, roads are as full of inspiration as temples. True, the Greeks did not build many roads because they traveled mostly by sea, but the Romans built roads that lasted longer than their empire or their gods. The ancient Greeks and Romans, of course, were pagans. Their temples are of interest to us merely from the standpoint of architectural beauty. If we must have a temple, it is well to have a Greek temple, for since there is no American architecture, the next best thing is to fix upon Greek models and imitate them as best we can. Still there is something almost ludicrous in the idea of thus commemorating the sturdy democracy of a man born in a dirt-floor log cabin. Lincoln himself, no doubt would choose a well built road as a monument. But it might be worse. "Some Congressmen," observes an Oregon editor, "might like to build the monument after the model of the churches in their native hamlets, but surely the country will be preserved from a calamity of that sort."

Perhaps it would be just as well to restrain our wild ardor in the way of monument building until we have more nearly completed our national art education. In the name of art we have perpetuated some grim atrocities. The capitol at Nashville, Tennessee, is in the Greek style of architecture—with a tower!

The architect died—it is said of sorrow and mortification; and his last request was that he be interred in the walls of the main building. Whether or not this sad tale is true in detail, it is a fact that the architect died before the edifice was completed, that his body lies within the walls and that he had most urgently opposed the tower as being entirely unsuited to the Greek style of architecture, inharmonious, glaringly incongruous. The building committee, however, stood pat on the proposition that the tax payers wanted the state house to be surmounted by a tower that could be seen for miles; the "vox" of old "populi" called loudly for a good run for the money! Nor is this an exceptional case of immature art efforts; throughout the length and breadth of "this fair land of ours" there are statues of Confederate soldiers with bow legs and Federal generals with arms too short. That keen observer, Mr. Dooley, has reminded us that America "erects no monuments to heroes unless they wore baggy pants." Being a hero is, of course, a hazardous undertaking in any land, but doubly so in a young country that is bursting with energy and zeal but a bit short on accurate knowledge of the principles of art.

The New York Evening Post wants to know why suffragettes break windows in preference to other things, such as heads.

Why, indeed? A window is the last thing a suffragette ought to want to break. Rightly considered a window is the symbol of civilization. The glass is fragile, easy to break; but for this very reason, the pane represents law and order. In a ruder age the stock in trade of a jeweler would not have been sufficiently protected by a sheet of glass against the greed of the world. There was a time when a regiment of soldiers would have been required. Those were the days when women were not safe either. A lone woman standing in front of a jeweler's window is, therefore, the epitome of the world's struggle against brute force, the acme of the ascendancy of mind over matter, the climax of civilization. The same thing that made the jewels safe insures the safety of the woman. Why, then, should she wish to smash the glass? Why should anybody have other than a kindly feeling toward a window, the perfect emblem of humanity's triumph as expressed in the form of law and order?

If a shop window holds so much of meaning, still more vividly does a church window typify the aspirations and hopes of man. The efforts of medieval art were directed along the line of religious symbolism. The first landscapes were painted merely as a background to a group of holy men or women; the old masters painted pictures of saints. So far not even the most rampant suffragettes have smashed a church window. This form of iconoclasm has not commended itself even to their riotous caprice. Strange as it may seem, however, a recent magazine article by James B. Wasson, of New York, sets forth what he conceives to be an argument against stained glass windows. The article appeared in The Independent, a periodical that is always more or less agitated over non-essentials, and is accompanied by an editorial note to the effect that the article will "voice the sentiments of many who, though silent, have always felt that the stained glass window should not be allowed to color the pure light of the gospel!"

Some of these worried souls might find comfort in the thought that the dim, soft light prevents them from being still more painfully conspicuous when they nod in their pews. The closed mind is the only hindrance to that "pure light" which the New York editor believes too feeble to shine through stained glass! Mr. Wasson contends that the majority of the plain people find nothing helpful or inspiring in the pictures of men and women attired in many-colored flowing robes. He says these men and women could do nothing useful because their robes would impede their movements, and besides the windows "make the churches gloomily dark by keeping out God's sunshine."

The place where the majority of the plain people love to congregate is at the moving picture show, where God's sunshine never penetrates. The plain people just dote on sitting for hours to watch a three-reel "movie," say, of Arabs attacking a caravan on the desert of Sahara—the pictures for which were taken on a sand pile at Michigan City, Indiana. This gives us faith to believe that the stamina of the plain people will enable them to endure the ordeal of a short service at church, despite Mr. Wasson's assertion that the "hectic piety" inculcated by the stained glass windows "serves only to puzzle and anger the strong men and women who are face to face with the problems of the real workday world."

As for the flowing robes, our supreme court justices look very dignified in them; and it is quite beside the mark to say that such attire is not adapted to chopping wood or digging ditches. Neither does it appear that strong men and women have been angered and puzzled at sight of the costume of a judge on the bench.

Robes, or skirts, if you are minded to call them that, typify authority, command, government, power, leadership. King's wear robes. All rule is petticoat rule; men always put on skirts when they wish to signify authority. Even a most puny person can understand this, let alone strong men and women.

"It is no disgrace," solemnly asserts a California paper, "to be the author of a best seller."

No, but it is a great strain on the moral character. The publishers maintain that one popular book will sell five really inferior works by the same author; that is to say, when a book has made a hit, the author can then go to work and grind out five more stories that will "go" on the strength of the reputation made by the first book. This form of gold-brick swindle will then be sprung on the public and good money will be taken, with greatest felicity, by the author and his publishers. That is why we have so many "punk" novels nowadays. A writer achieves a success in a certain popular field, and his subsequent career consists in repeating this identical thing as nearly as possible as long as the public will stand for it—by careful computations the publishers have ascertained that, on an average, five bum books will stand on a foundation of one good book, and then the whole pile tumbles. In the meantime, many honest persons have been deceived and plundered. The only reason why authors of this type do not go out and sandbag people on the streets is because they lack sand. Otherwise their equipment is complete.

It is possible, however, though very difficult, to be the author of a best seller and still be an honest, faithful worker. The reward of such merit is very great. Of the output of the other sort, a critic says, "Such books are not even as valuable as fairy tales." Certainly not. Fairy tales contain the deep ethical instincts of the human race, in concrete expression. In one of his entertaining books of essays, Mr. G. K. Chesterton gets at the real secret of the unflinching interest of the fairy tale:

"Oddities strike only ordinary people; oddities do not strike odd people. This is why ordinary people have a much more exciting time, while odd people are always saying how dull life is. This is also why the new novels die so quickly and why the old fairy tales endure forever. The fairy tale makes the hero a normal, human boy; it is his adventures that startle him—and they startle him because he is normal. But in the modern psychological novel, the hero is abnormal—the center is not central! Hence the fiercest adventures fail to affect him adequately, and the book is monotonous. You can make a story out of a hero among dragons, but not out of a dragon among dragons. The fairy tale discusses what a sane man will do in a mad world. The modern novel discusses what a lunatic will do in a dull world."

The modern novelist does not always take care even to write good grammar, so that not only our morals but our speech may become corrupted at the nearest Carnegie library. As for literary "style," the only idea the authors have is to avoid the use of the word "said" or any other simple "speech verb" such as "asked," "replied" or "answered." For instance, "'What is the meaning of it?' she puzzled." Not for worlds would the novelist have written, "she inquired." In a love story recently published the hero seeks to find the reason why the lovely maiden is weeping: "'I don't know,' swallowed the girl!"

This is the approved mode of painting a "gripping" scene—summer moonlight, lovers parting at the gate, the villain lurking in the shadows: "Farewell," gulped Charles. "Good-bye," she choked. Fenwick, watching, shrank further into the gloom, his smile diabolical, ghastly. "Idiots!" chortled he.

And so the novelist pursues his weary way, always seeking refuge from the commonplace and never quite able to effect his escape! Consider his predicament: His "properties" are covered with the dust of ages, his theme has been many times worked over; villains have existed since time began, hatred is elemental, love is ever from of old. Naturally a novelist cannot be expected to have new ideas or any originality of thought; that would be asking too much! What then, is there in the way of novelty? Nothing, apparently, except the way the same old characters are made to express themselves. Hence odd, peculiar, fantastic "speech verbs." The heroine "flashes" witicisms; the father of the family "snarls" a complaint about the battercakes, the mother "falters" or maybe "gasps," the very young person "gurgles;" others "beg," "challenge," "echo," "retort," "demand," "urge," "blurt," "murmur" and "moan." Sometimes they "congratulate" and "soothe," but more frequently they break loose and "jeer," "growl," "roar" and "shriek." The verbs "deny" and "insist" are also in high feather. Incidentally the various characters make an awful lot of queer noises, and it is a wonder they don't have serious throat trouble. They do everything with their vocal organs except to say something!

A bright idea has lately occurred to me, a plan for the relief of the fiction writer and also of the long-suffering reader: Instead of straining after new effects in verbs, why not freshen up the nouns? The names of objects might be twisted around and given a sort of new turn. Not that any modern novelist could be persuaded to cease calling a spade a spade, for that is his last hope when all else fails. Make an exception of the spade, then; there are plenty of other nouns. In an old book entitled, "Family Anecdotes" is related the story of a young lady who was "putting on airs" in an effort to impress the adoring swain, who had called at her home in the evening, with her wide knowledge of language. She wished him to hand her thimble to her—it was in the work basket on the table. Probably she was making a bluff at being domestic—that's the way some girls do. But she did not say "thimble;" she referred to the article as "that truncated cone, slightly convex at the summit and semi-perforated with symmetrical indentations."

Why wouldn't something like that be a snap for the fiction-mongers?

For a long time there has been much complaint of the "tipping evil," as a Washington paper expresses it. "For some years past we have been making up our minds that we will cease to pay tips, or rather that other people shall cease to pay them, while we ourselves continue to do so for fear the waiter may be cross with us." After so long a time, all this tip talk has really made some impression. The revenue of the waiter has to some extent fallen off. Having no effective means of bringing pressure to bear upon the public, the real paymaster, the waiter retaliates upon the hotel proprietor, or restaurant keeper, who ought to pay him but who does not. Hence, the waiters' strike. A western editor, who probably has found hard sledding in New York, declares that the restaurant keeper should be hanged and the waiter also—not because the latter has gone on strike but because he is a waiter and the greater crime obliterates the lesser! But the restaurateur is the greater criminal of the two, according to this tale of woe:

We go into his establishment in order to get a little something to eat and he gives us an orchestra but no food, at least none to speak of. We enter his caravanserai in quest of nourishment and he supplies us with young women who are insufficiently clothed and whose performances would be repudiated by a fourth-rate vaudeville show. But still no food. And the public pays for it all. It pays the staff of brigands who struggle for its hat and coat and who have themselves paid the restaurateur for the privilege of being brigands. Under pretense of paying for food that it does not get, the public pays the orchestra, it pays the scantily clad young women, it pays the hat pirates, and it pays the waiters, and it goes away hungry. And now because at last it declines to pay the waiter quite so much as it has been paying him, the waiter goes on strike and threatens to poison the food.

The writer of the foregoing pleads that "we poor pilgrims be treated in a manner consistent with our simple piety;" and most persons will agree with the following: "What we want is something to eat, neat but not gaudy, a chair to sit on, a peg to hang our hats on, and a waiter who gets paid on Saturday night like the rest of us and who, like the rest of us, puts a tag in the cash drawer if penury should overtake him during the week."

CHICAGO, ILL.

Vicegerent Snark Harry B. Darlington, Northern Illinois, Chicago, Ill., held his first concatenation at Chicago on February 12, 1913.

The following account of the concatenation is copied from the American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill., of February 15, 1913.

THE CHICAGO CONCATENATION.

"A highly successful concatenation was held in Chicago during the convention of the Illinois Lumber & Builders' Supply Dealers' Association. The concatenation was held in the Hotel Sherman, Wednesday evening, February 12, at 9 minutes past nine, 13 candidates being given the work. Before the concatenation Vicegerent Snark Darlington asked the members to make the first part of the ritual as impressive and solemn as possible, as he said that that part of the work contained the fundamental and essential features of the order and the candidates would be better impressed with its solemnity if the members refrained from making unnecessary cat calls and senseless remarks.

The concatenation was preceded by a very enjoyable dinner, which was attended by a representative following of the Great Black Cat."

THE BULLETIN has been after Vicegerent Snark Darlington for his photograph and we expected to have it before this so we could publish same with this concatenation but "Harry" is a very modest young man and so far we have been unable to get him to come across. We have not given up, however, and the next time the Scrivenoter is in Chicago he will get a photograph of our handsome Vicegerent Snark so that all may judge of his beauty.

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in, with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried, he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

Somebody scoffed: "Oh, you'll never do that;
At least no one ever has done it."
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew he'd begun it;
With the lift of his chin, and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit;
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.
There are thousands to tell you it can not be done,
There are thousands to prophesy failure;

There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you;
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That "can not be done," and you'll do it.

BURLINGTON, IOWA.

VICEGERENT SNARK J. M. FURLONG, Southern District Iowa, held concatenation at Burlington, Iowa on February 11, 1913, in banquet hall of the Hotel Burlington. Concatenation was held in connection with the Annual Meeting of the Southeastern Iowa Retail Lumberman's Association. Following the concatenation, a vaudeville troupe entertained the Hoo-Hoo, and all in attendance at the convention with songs, dances and other specialties and a Dutch lunch was served at close of the vaudeville entertainment. All present had a good time and nothing was left undone for the entertainment of the visitors. The following committee who had charge of the entertainment features is to be congratulated upon the great success of the evening:

- T. S. ARCHIBALD, Burlington Lumber Company,
- J. M. FURLONG, Lothman Cypress Company,
- W. F. GILMAN, Burlington Lumber Company,
- E. C. NOELKE, Noelke-Lyons Mfg. Company.

The Lothman Cypress Company, St. Louis, Mo., furnished the Association badges for this meeting and Brother E. W. Blumer, Sales Manager, was highly complimented upon the unique and beautiful design furnished.

Brother Darlington is on the staff of the American Lumberman and is well known in the lumber trade and has made an army of friends. He is a hard worker for the best interests of the Order and THE BULLETIN expects him to hold several concatenations this year.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA.

Vicegerent Snark Alan M. Stewart, Manitoba, held his first concatenation of the current Hoo-Hoo year at Winnipeg, Manitoba, on February 13, 1913.

This was the largest and most successful concatenation ever

ALAN M. STEWART.
Vicegerent Snark, Manitoba, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

held in Canada and one of the best ever held in the history of the Order. Brother Stewart was assisted by Supreme Junior Hoo-Hoo Tennant, Brothers Galbraith, Little, Knight, Warner, Morton, Chandler, McDonald, Hooper and by all the good Hoo-Hoo of Manitoba. THE BULLETIN regrets that it is impossible to print the names of all who took part in this great concatenation and who assisted Brother Stewart in making this one of the greatest concatenations ever held. THE BULLETIN

H. S. Y. GALBRAITH.
Scrivenoter, Winnipeg Concatenation, Winnipeg, Manitoba.
extends to Brother Stewart and his able assistants its most hearty sincere congratulations and we wish them all Health, Happiness and Long Life.

The following account of the concatenation was sent us by Brother Hooper, of the Retail Lumberman and Western Builder, Winnipeg, and we extend to him our thanks for his kindness.

JOHN HOOPER.
President of The Hooper Publishing Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Black Cat Editor of the "Retail Lumberman," who is boosting Hoo-Hoo in his journal. Brother Hooper was formerly connected with the American Lumberman staff, Chicago, Ill.

The largest concatenation ever held in Canada, and the biggest ever held by the Order for years, is the answer that Western Canada Hoo-Hoo have to send to their brothers in the United States.

It is plainly evident that Western Canada will continue the good work to make Hoo-Hoo the greatest, grandest and best organization on the face of the globe. For every member we have put in the ranks of Hoo-Hoo let us put in two more.

It was on the thirteenth day of February, 1913, at thirteen minutes past eight of the new moon, when the proceedings began, and over two hundred loyal Hoo-Hoo answered to the roll-call.

At precisely nine minutes past nine, sixty-four purblind kit-tens were escorted into the gardens to feed on the catnip beds.

The sight of sixty-four of the best young business men of Western Canada walking through the gardens east and west to the accompaniment of the thunderous salvos of artillery, the rapid fire of gatling guns, and the cheers of three hundred admirers, was a sight to behold. The shades of Bolling Arthur Johnson and Jim Baird would have turned in their graves had they been dead.

On looking over the list we find that lumbermen from Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and Minnesota were initiated into Hoo-Hoo.

The Black Cat Editor of this journal made a true prediction when he told Brother Stephenson it would be a "monster" concatenation. Ain't we always right?

Short talks were made by Brothers Stewart, Tomlinson, Tennant, Hooper, Galbraith, and a number of others whose voices sounded familiar, but being hidden by a dense cloud of smoke, after the artillery had been fired (or was it the Habano de Cabagos?) we are grieved and pained to omit some names.

Harry Hays, it was announced, turned in no less than twenty-two of the applications—the greatest number ever signed up by a single member in Canada or the United States for a single concatenation. Hurrah for Harry!

The proceedings went off without a hitch, and after the preliminary work eighteen candidates were selected for the full degree exemplification. They all went through this in splendid shape, and not a single feature of the many good points in the revised ritual was missed. The general comment was favorable to this clean-cut initiation, and will tend to lift the Order up higher in the estimation of all.

A glance over the list of the candidates also shows that it numbers some of the most prominent and best known business men in this Last Best West. The red blood and real life of the West is represented by the typical Westerners that the list contains, keeping up the splendid records already made in Calgary by Vicegerent Snark Birnie, and at Moose Jaw by Vicegerent Snark Cooke.

During the evening Brother Hooper moved, seconded by Brother Galbraith, that the following message be telegraphed to the Supreme Scrivenoter:

W. M. Stephenson,

Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

"Three hundred loyal Western Canada Hoo-Hoo send greetings. Largest concatenation ever held in Canada, and second largest in the world. Sixty-four new members and twenty applications held over to come in later. Long live Hoo-Hoo."

This was signed by Supreme Officer E. D. Tennant, Vicegerent Snark Stewart, and Hugh S. Y. Galbraith, Scrivenoter, and at once forwarded.

THE BULLETIN regrets that it was impossible to get a list of all in attendance at the concatenation, but as there were over three hundred present and with sixty-two "kittens" it is readily seen that this was an impossibility.

This concatenation was held in connection with the Annual Meeting of the Canadian Western Retail Lumbermen's Association.

JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA.

Vicegerent Snark D. A. Reid, Eastern Florida, Jacksonville, Fla., held his second concatenation at Jacksonville, Fla., on February 22, 1913.

Brother Reid writes as follows:

For several weeks prior to holding this concatenation, everything looked as bright for a successful gathering of Hoo-Hoo, as one could wish. To begin with, this meeting was to be held just after the adjournment of the Georgia and Florida Saw Mill Association Meeting, bringing together a large number of Lumbermen. For the occasion, the Vicegerent had been requested to hold the concatenation on same day of the aforesaid Association Meeting, as such a large crowd would be present. But, alas, we were doomed to defeat—everything was against us—out of eighteen promised purblind kittens, only five presented themselves to be brought into the light of Hoo-Hoo land.

A number of out-of-town kittens could not attend on account of delayed trains, etc. Being business men, they waited at home for late trains Saturday afternoon, that did not show up in time to reach Jacksonville for the ceremonies. Pressing business prevented others from attending, and the late adjournment of the Lumbermen's Meeting had a deterring effect upon our meeting. Under ordinary circumstances, when the time to organize for the concatenation came, and only five kittens present, the meeting would have been postponed, but all arrangements had been made for our banquet to be served at 11:30 p. m. Consequently the work went on with a good and efficient corps of officers; the work was finished on time and at 11:30 promptly we entered the banquet hall. One hour and a half was spent very pleasantly with some entertaining short speeches, story telling and pleasantries kept all in a good humor. At the conclusion, a rising vote of thanks was extended to Snark D. A. Reid for his efforts in bringing the crowd together and showing them such a good time.

Below is our menu:

We are pleased to publish following account of banquet copied from the American Lumberman:

F. E. Ayers, of Iowa City, was toastmaster. The stories he told and the way he related them proved in some instances so true as to cause a quiver of apprehension on the part of some of the speakers when he arose to introduce them.

The Triple Male Quartet, of Mt. Herman Lodge, A. F. & A. M., favored the visitors with a number of the booster songs written by Henry S. Ely.

Billy Haskell, officer and director in almost every line of endeavor in Cedar Rapids, village postmaster, proprietor of a coal yard or two, financier, philanthropist and pretty nearly everything else, was on the program to speak on the subject "The Evolution of Rattlin'a." Mr. Haskell studiously avoided his subject, but told stories, joked the lumbermen about their shortcomings and was very popular.

Duke Gronen, of Waterloo, was assigned the subject "The Article that Waterloo Made Famous." He also avoided his topic as a pest, told stories and let loose little details of the private lives of substantial members of Hoo-Hoo.

Mark Anson, of Muscatine, explained in careful detail "How to Square Convention Matters With Your Wife." He enlarged upon the subject, took in others such as late poker sessions, amber fluid parties and little details of wine suppers for two. Some of the members begged him for copies of his speech, but he destroyed the evidence at once.

Met Saley, described on the program as "An Old Bandit," and who was introduced as being at home everywhere, delighted the lumbermen with a beautiful oration on "The Successful Elusion of the Sheriff." The assigning of this topic to him was a stroke of genius. He went into detail. Old lumbermen, hovering on the verge of failure for years, thanked him afterwards with real tears in their eyes. He told how to prod delinquent payments out of a tight-fisted, solvent old farmer who thought lumbermen could live by the grace of God and their nerve. He told how it was possible to get this money and still keep out of the clutches of the law and how many times his methods had saved some lumberman from bankruptcy. He also destroyed the manuscript of his speech.

D. E. Baker, of Traer, a long-running-gear chap, built on the order of a panatela cigar and described as being like his subject, spoke on "A Long Two-by-Four Worked Scant." Mr. Baker told two stories that will live long after the topic assigned him has been forgotten. This much can be said, they were brand new.

H. M. Willhite, of St. Louis, read a poem from the versatile pen of S. M. Thompson, entitled "Shellsburg Ravings." It was not as bad as it sounds. Ella Wheeler Wilcox wrote some that were warmer, but this one was guaranteed to bring the temperature of any room up at least 10 degrees and it was finally voted to punish the author by locking him up in a Turkish bath 48 hours, alone with the poem.

Supreme Scrivenoter W. M. Stephenson, of St. Louis, the only member of the Supreme Organization present, spoke on the subject "The Hoo-Hoo." He gave the candidates who were gathered about the banquet table cold chills of fright. Some of them nearly had to be gagged and halted to get them to the scene of the festivities to come. But they were all present and accounted for when the happy moment arrived. After the banquet all adjourned to Knights of Columbus Hall, where the Hoo-Hoo meeting was held.

The following poem written by Brother S. M. Thompson, Shellsburg, Iowa, was read by Brother H. M. Willhite, of St. Louis, Mo., at the banquet.

"That Bird, The Cat"

You can talk about your Melbas, your Scotties and Caruso,
 And Sousa with his big brass band playing some grand intermezzo,
 Even Pryor's "Lights Out" march seems tame, Liszt's Rhapsodies are easy,
 And Schumann-Heinks high notes are punk, her voice a trifle wheezy,
 For when it comes to soft, sweet strains, the kind that lift your hat,
 You get THOSE from that famous bird, Known as the Hoo-Hoo Cat.
 These famous Hoo-Hoo Cats, dear boys, have Ringlings skinned a mile,
 And Barnum beat a city block, in doing stunts worth while.
 Forepaugh is but a "has been," when one speaks of SHOWS that's good,
 And a LUMBERMAN'S a "never is," if still in "kitty-hood."
 So all you guys who are wearing "fuzz," instead of wearing "fur"
 Be ready tonight to learn that gentle "purr."
 There will be some "fancy" doings at our meet in Cedar R—,
 For Spengler's crossed the state steen times in his new motor car,
 Rounding up a bunch of Cats, BLACK CATS from every station,
 Urging every one to come to this concatenation.
 There will be big Cats and small Cats, fat Cats and lean,
 To assist the timid kittens through the onion beds so green.
 To you, dear, precious kittens, who are seeking Hoo-Hoo light,
 Just take a tip from Uncle Hem, and you'll come out all right
 DON'T NEVER BACK when "FORWARD MARCH is ordered by Old Tom,
 STEP HIGH, SPEAK LOW, OBEY COMMANDS, DRINK, CHEW and SWALLOW DOWN
 Just anything that comes your way, be it HASH or COD FISH BALL,
 Take my advice: BE GAME, OLD SPORT: while in Columbus Hall.
 A little "balk" upon your part or to jump astride the trace,
 When the Cats are doing all they can to help you win the race,
 Will put your engine on the bum, your cylinders will miss,
 Your plugs won't spark, your clutch will grab, just sure if you resist.
 If you're not a "Willing Worker," better bid your friends farewell,
 Before the gong is sounded for the work will sure be—hard.
 Now just supposin' you live through the night we give the gas,
 And are able to return back home as one of the Black Cat Class,
 I'll bet a ten bone, silk, high hat, against a withered pippin,
 You'd break a rib, but what you'd be on deck at our next meetin',
 So make a break, cut loose and come, no matter where you're at,
 You can't go wrong, if you hold fast, to the tail of the big black cat.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.

Vicegerent Snark H. H. Hoyt, Northwestern Missouri, St. Joseph, Mo., held his first concatenation at St. Joseph, Mo., February 28, 1913. Brother Hoyt was assisted by arrangement committee consisting of Brothers R. G. Worster and G. W. Scott.

Brother Hoyt sent out a fine poster notice of his concatenation and did everything that a human being could do to make the concatenation a success in every way. All present had a most enjoyable time and Hoo-Hoo is stronger in Northwestern Missouri than ever. Brother Hoyt had eighteen kittens signed up but only ten were able to be present. Brother Hoyt will hold another concatenation later on to take care of the kittens who were unable to attend this concatenation.

Brother Burt J. Wright (1133), of Falls City, Nebraska, occupied the station of Junior and it is unnecessary to say that the kittens were satisfied and happy. At close of concatenation, adjournment was made to Hotel Metropole where banquet was served.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON.

Vicegerent Snark J. H. Ehrmantraut, Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho, Spokane, Wash., held concatenation in

J. H. EHRMANTRAUT,

Vicegerent Snark, Eastern Washington, Northern Idaho, Spokane, Wash. connection with the annual meeting of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association, Spokane, Wash., February 14, 1913.

Brother Ehrmantraut worked hard on this concatenation and deserves the congratulations of all Hoo-Hoo upon its great success.

In addition to initiating twenty-eight regular members, he secured one honorary member. This is the first honorary member this Hoo-Hoo year.

Brother Ehrmantraut was assisted by all Spokane Hoo-Hoo and we regret we cannot mention them all. Their good work is most highly appreciated.

Snark of the Universe, Frank W. Trower, San Francisco, Cal., and Supreme Custocatian, L. R. Fifer, Seattle, Wash., were present at concatenation.

There was a large attendance of Vicegerent Snarks, Past Vicegerent Snarks and Past Members of the Supreme Nine and all seemed to be enthused with a new spirit to work for Hoo-Hoo and make it a thoroughly representative lumbermen's Order.

Past Snark of the Universe, H. J. Miller of Index, Wash., was present and did all in his power to assist Brother Ehrmantraut. Brother Miller favored the boys with two new poems which were highly appreciated.

Friday noon, February 14th, Brother Ehrmantraut gave a luncheon in the blue room at Davenport's, Spokane, Wash., to the following members:

H. H. Lamping, Geo. W. Hoag, H. Romeyn, D. G. Black, A. L. Porter, J. A. Grythman, E. E. Engdahl, Geo. Duffy, Bert West, F. T. Bement, F. W. Trower, L. R. Fifer, W. H. Macfarlane, J. G. Robson, H. J. Miller, F. H. Gilman, F. H. Wheelan.

After luncheon all present discussed the future of Hoo-Hoo and several important matters were taken up for future action for the good of the Order.

The following resolution was introduced by Brother Geo. W. Hoag, at the concatenation and adopted unanimously.

"We regret and deplore the untimely end of our beloved Brother, Supreme Bojum, John Oxenford, of Indianapolis, Ind., and extend to his widow our sincere heartfelt sympathy in this her hour of sadness."

The following resolution was introduced and adopted at concatenation and is printed in full for the information of all members and your Scrivenoter will appreciate suggestions from all members in regard thereto. This resolution will be presented to the next annual meeting for consideration.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED AT HOO-HOO CONCATENATION FEB. 14th, 1913.

Resolutions.

Be it Resolved, that it is the sense of this meeting that the Vicegerent Snark after his appointment shall, within thirty days, appoint his officers, who shall serve with him during his term of office, and that his appointments shall be officially recognized by the Supreme Scrivenoter.

2nd. Be it further resolved, that to increase the fraternal and social features of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, that the annual dues be increased one dollar per capita per annum, and that the monies so collected be credited to each district, and held on deposit by the Supreme Scrivenoter subject to the call of the Vicegerent Snark, and his regularly appointed Scrivenoter and Senior Hoo-Hoo of his district and the Vicegerent Snark shall furnish receipted vouchers for all monies spent and the same to be kept on file in the Supreme Scrivenoter's office.

3rd. Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Supreme Scrivenoter and that he be requested to submit them to the next annual meeting of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo for their consideration.

COMMITTEE:—

Geo. W. Hoag, Chairman
Geo. L. Curkendall,
H. H. Lamping.

At the session "ON THE ROOF," Past Snark of the Universe, H. J. Miller, made a motion which was promptly seconded by Brother A. L. Porter and many others and was unanimously adopted as follows:

"That Brother Geo. W. Hoag's song, "Hi Hi Hoo-Hoo," be recommended to the Supreme Nine for adoption as the official song of Hoo-Hoo and if adopted as such that the Scrivenoter be instructed to have the song copyrighted and a supply of copies printed, sufficient for the needs of the members."

Brother Ehrmantraut has promised to send the Scrivenoter a complete copy of this song and as soon as received the Scrivenoter will take matter up with the Supreme Nine for action.

The Spokane Concatenation was a great success in every way and we believe that it has created a spirit of enthusiasm that will live and that only pleasant memories remain with all who attended.

Brother Ehrmantraut advises that he is going to hold one more get-together meeting, before his term expires, similar to the one held last September. These get-together meetings are of great value not only to the members but to the lumber industry and we would like to see more of these meetings held. The following committees had charge of the concatenation:

One Man and One Hook to One Fish.

If you have an idea that a shark is dull, and not up to tricks to rid himself of the hook, get rid of that idea, for they are as resourceful as the game fishes, and I have known some of them resort to devices to get rid of their tormentor that I have never known a game fish to do—and that's just what this shark was doing, but he showed he was getting exhausted from his efforts and mighty tired of the job—he was not entirely alone in that, though I was not as ready to quit, as he began to show signs of doing. I could not push him too hard because I knew my tackle would not stand it and I had to watch and be careful to meet any last desperate flurry he might make, when he saw us and the skiff; by careful pumping and leading around, I finally got him in reach of the gaff and yanked his head up on the gunwale of the boat and gave him his quietus, he was only six feet eight inches long, and why he didn't get away is still a mystery to me.

On the end of my line, I had a hard brass wire connecting link, one and one-fourth inches long out of No. 16 wire. I had used these occasionally when still fishing for pan fish, as a convenience for changing quickly, one can have a couple of hooks of different sizes on fine wire snells, baited ready for instant use if he gets a fish or loses a bait at times when a small school may be passing along, by moving the slide on the link, the old snell can be slipped off, and a fresh baited hook can be put on and over after them, instead of losing the time to get your fish off the hook and rebaited. During the struggle between the shark and I the slide had worked down and the link had been strained open at a 45 degree angle, the snell and shark on the closed end and the loop on my line on the open end. I enclose a sketch exact to size and shape as it was when I landed the shark, and in all his jumps and jerks and rushes and rolling himself up in the line, it's a wonder the line did not slip off. I take no credit for keeping the taut line we hear so much about, because I didn't do it—no man could in some of those rushes.

The link was polished bright from friction through the water, I took it off, examined it, the slide worked snug. I then threw it overboard with the remark, I would never use one of those things again—and I never have.

This all happened on Friday morning. On Tuesday morning following, my boatman and I were fishing for yellow fins in about the same location, where the water was deeper than any other part of the bay. I had a strike and in due time landed the fish, about one and one-half pounds weight; when I went to take the hook out of his mouth, I noticed something glitter in his throat—I looked and looked, scarcely believing my eyes, I told the boatman to "look down this fish's throat—he did and broke out with 'well I'll be—'" I can not tell the expressions of astonishment he gave vent to, there may be ladies hearing all this—but I told him to take it out while I held the fish's mouth open, and it was that self same brass connecting link I had thrown overboard the Friday before.

In sinking, the link would naturally zig zag from friction and being bright, it was also natural for a fish to strike at it for a bug or worm; but the wonderful part of it was for me to catch the fish that did it, it was cross wise and fast in its throat. This is only one of the many strange things that happen to any man, who has spent much time at the angling game.

Tomorrow the critics will commence,
You know who the critics are,
The fellow who never caught a fish.

WHO ARE ELIGIBLE

Article III of Constitution:

"Section 1. Active membership.—The membership in this Order shall be limited to white male persons of full age of twenty-one (21) years, of good moral character, who possess one or more of the following seven qualifications: Lumbermen, Foresters, Officers of Lumber Associations, Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies, Newspaper Men, Railroad Men, Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men, and so definitely shall the line of qualification be drawn in each class that the occupation under which persons apply for membership shall be their main or principal occupation, and it shall be the business of the person recognized in the community in which he resides as his principal vocation.

Specific Definition of Eligibility

"(a) Lumbermen.—Lumbermen shall be those who are engaged either in the ownership or sale of timber lands, timber or logs, or the manufacture or sale, at wholesale or retail, of forest products, either as owners, officers, managers of departments, general superintendents, sales managers or salesmen.

"(b) Foresters.—This class shall include those persons graduated from recognized schools of forestry, officials of the forestry service and members of forest commissions or boards, either state or national.

"(c) Officers of Lumber Associations.—Regularly organized lumber associations, state or national.

"(d) Officers or Representatives of Lumber Insurance Companies.—Officers or representatives of mutual or inter-insurance companies placing risks on lumber property exclusively.

"(e) Newspaper Men.—Publishers, proprietors or persons regularly connected with the editorial or business departments of newspapers.

"(f) Railroad Men.—General officers, general and assistant freight, passenger, claim, purchasing, commercial, soliciting and station agents, chief dispatchers and train masters and members of railroad commissions.

"(g) Sawmill Machinery and Supply Men.—Persons engaged in the manufacture or sale, to lumber manufacturers, of sawmill or planing mill machinery and mill supplies.

"(h) Initiation.—Such persons as above mentioned may be initiated under proper application, payment of initiation fee and election to membership.

"(i) Limited Active Membership.—The active membership shall be limited to 88,999 members in good standing.

Admission of Paint, Cement, Tiling, Roofing and Oil Men

"(j) Manufacturers, wholesale dealers and salesmen of cement, roofing, paints, oil, tiling and other staple articles cannot become active members, but will be welcome as honorary members."

The above is printed for the information of all members. We must comply with the above. In case of doubt take up with the Scrivenoter and he will ask the Supreme Nine to rule.

Watch this closely and before voting for a candidate be sure he is eligible.

DUES FOR 1913

At 9:09 on September 9, 1912, dues became payable for 1913. The Hoo-Hoo year begins and ends on Sept. 9. Look up your cards, and if you find that you have not paid 1913 dues, send $1.65 to the Scrivenoter at once.

Published Monthly by the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, at St. Louis, Missouri.

WILLIAM M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at St. Louis, Missouri, as second-class matter.

TERMS TO MEMBERS.

One Year.....66 Cents. | Single Copies.....6 Cents.

THE BULLETIN is the only official medium of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo recognized by the Supreme Nine.

Address all communications for THE BULLETIN to W. M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter, 1219 Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO., APRIL 9, 1913.

EACH member of the Supreme Nine has written a letter to the Vicegerent Snarks in his jurisdiction requesting that they hold at least one concatenation in their district before the end of this Hoo-Hoo year, September 9, 1913.

This is very important and THE BULLETIN urges all Vicegerent Snarks to see that this is done.

This office has received many letters from members asking when a concatenation would be held in their section and in every case we have referred them to their Vicegerent Snark and have suggested that they get in touch with and give him the benefit of their valuable co-operation, assistance and support. The Vicegerent Snark cannot be expected to personally do all the work necessary in working up and holding a concatenation and it is the duty of all loyal Hoo-Hoo to get in behind their Vicegerent Snark and help him all they can.

It is the duty of all the Vicegerent Snarks to do all in their power to assist the Supreme Nine in their efforts to build up and make Hoo-Hoo a thoroughly representative Order. There is no question whatever of the great good that can be accomplished through Hoo-Hoo to the lumber and allied industries to say nothing of that spirit of fraternal goodfellowship that the Great Black Cat instills in the individual member.

The Scrivenoter believes that all of our Vicegerent Snarks have the best interests of the Order at heart and that all of them are not only willing but anxious to do their share in the good work and it is up to the members to get busy and work with us to the end that Hoo-Hoo will be the great success all loyal members want it to be.

Now let us all get busy and put our shoulders to the wheel and let us all get together, stay together and work together and if we will do this we will all feel well repaid for our efforts and Hoo-Hoo will go forward to a greater success and we will all be proud of the button of White, Black and Gold.

* * * *

The Scrivenoter wishes to call the attention of all members to article in this issue giving the history and plan of the Death Emergency Fund. Read it and if you have any suggestions to offer send them in. This fund is worthy of the support of all members and you owe it to yourself to join hands with us in this good work.

* * * *

A member can become a contributor to the Death Emergency Fund at any time. All that is necessary is to send the Scrivenoter $2.00 and the name and address of beneficiary and a card will be mailed at once covering call that is in force at time remittance is received.

We are working as hard and as fast as possible on the handbook and we hope soon to have the copy ready for the printer. We will send out circular shortly to all members asking for their correct address and firm connection and we want all members to help us to make this issue correct in every way.

No name will appear in the handbook unless dues for year 1912 have been paid and we urge you to see that your name is in the book. If you have not as yet received your 1913 card better sit right down and remit $1.65 to the Scrivenoter.

DO IT NOW.

* * * *

Read THE BULLETIN regularly and keep in touch with what is going on in Hoo-Hoo. Write us your idea of what kind of a paper you want and help us make OUR PAPER the best fraternal paper published.

THE Scrivenoter extends a most hearty invitation to all members of the Order to visit the Scrivenoter's office when in St. Louis, and assures them a cordial welcome.

Come in and see us and see for yourself just how the business of the Order is conducted.

Ask all the questions you wish and we will, to the best of our ability, endeavor to satisfy you fully.

Make this office your headquarters while in St. Louis and have your mail addressed in our care. This is your office and you should use it.

A complete file of the lumber trade journals is kept in this office for the information of visiting members.

Come in and get acquainted.

JAMES HENRY STRAIN (25782)

Dewitt, Arkansas.

Brother Strain has invested in a rice farm of about 600 acres 8 miles Northeast of Dewitt, Ark., and made special trip to Little Rock to attend concatenation held there by Vicegerent Snark Gay on March 8, 1913. To show how happy a man can be on a farm, Brother Strain had his photograph taken in Little Rock. Brother Strain was initiated into Hoo-Hoo at Quincy, Ill., on July 1, 1911, at which time he was connected with the Borden-Vay Lumber Co., Quincy, Ill.

THE BULLETIN wishes him success in his new venture and Health, Happiness and Long Life.

Help! Hoo-Hoo, Help!

THE following call for immediate funds for the relief of our Brothers, in the different sections, was published in the American Lumberman, Chicago, Ill., March 29, 1913:

HELP! HOO-HOO, HELP!

MANY of our brethren are in dire distress through the visitation of wind, flood or fire, and must have instant aid. Now is the time to help—now, when you who have to spare see this appeal, not next week or next month. Send what you can—$100, $50, $10 or only $1, AT ONCE, to my order, and I will see that it is placed where it will do the most good to Hoo-Hoo in need, will acknowledge receipt and make as detailed a report of expenditures as can be made with deference to the feelings of those relieved.

W. M. Stephenson, Supreme Scrivenoter, 1219 Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The following editorial from the American Lumberman, March 29, 1913, is printed for information of all members:

HOO-HOO TO PROVE ITSELF.

"Supreme Scrivenoter W. M. Stephenson, of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, has asked the American Lumberman to issue an immediate call to Hoo-Hoo in every State for contributions, little or great, for the relief of brother Hoo-Hoo in actual need in the States affected by the disasters of the present week, and for the rapid relief of their families where such relief is required. There is every indication at this hour that such help will be abundantly needed.

Hoo-Hoo always has offered itself as a fraternity in fact—not merely as a brotherhood of joyous nights but as a brotherhood of dark days as well. This is Hoo-Hoo's opportunity to prove itself. For surely no Hoo-Hoo should suffer while other Hoo-Hoo have plenty, nor a Hoo-Hoo be content merely to rejoice in his own safety while other Hoo-Hoo are in want.

Contributors should wire Mr. Stephenson, Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo., authority to draw on them for such amount as they desire to give. This will be the quickest way. Contributions otherwise should be sent immediately by mail.

Great Hoo-Hoo has given the sign of distress. The rest remains to Hoo-Hoo."

Now is the time and the opportunity for all loyal Hoo-Hoo to show their loyalty to the Order and their brotherly love to those in distress. NOW ALL TOGETHER AND SHOW THAT HOO-HOO IS ALIVE TO THE CALL FOR ASSISTANCE.

SEND WHAT YOU CAN AT ONCE. MONEY IS NEEDED NOW.

The following telegram has been received from Snark of the Universe Frank W. Trower, San Francisco, California:

"Your wire from Chicago. Approve call for aid to sufferers. Have taken up with Everett, Cornwall, Fifer and Allen. Have mailed two hundred letters to local lumbermen requesting contributions and offering use of our Order to afford quick and direct aid. Neither subscriptions nor help should be confined to Hoo-Hoo, but we should especially help lumbermen, their employees and families."

NOW SHOW YOUR LOVE FOR YOUR BROTHER AND YOUR LOYALTY TO THE ORDER BY SENDING IN YOUR CONTRIBUTION AT ONCE. NOT ONLY SEND IN YOUR OFFERING, BUT MAKE IT YOUR BUSINESS TO CALL THIS MATTER TO THE ATTENTION OF ALL HOO-HOO AND ALL LUMBERMEN AND THE ALLIED TRADE WHO ARE ELIGIBLE FOR MEMBERSHIP IN HOO-HOO.

Full account of receipts and disbursements will be made and no disbursements will be made without approval.

NOW IS THE TIME TO ACT.

DO THIS FOR HOO-HOO.

ALL LUMBER PAPERS ARE REQUESTED TO GIVE THIS PUBLICITY AND HELP.

ADVISE ME PROMPTLY OF ANY ONE IN YOUR SECTION NEEDING ASSISTANCE.

W. M. STEPHENSON, Scrivenoter,
1219 Wright Building, St. Louis, Mo.

A Few Short Lengths

A cordial reception isn't an invitation to stay all day.

Death Emergency Fund

The following details of the origin and plan of the Death Emergency Fund are published for the information of all members of the Order, whether subscribers to the fund or not, to the end that all will thoroughly understand just how this fund is handled. At a joint meeting of the Supreme Nine and House of Ancients held in Chicago, Ill., November 18-20, 1909, Brother Leonard Bronson (145) suggested the establishment of a "Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund." The following committee was appointed to work out the details:

TOM A. MOORE, Chairman
C. H. KETRIDGE
LEONARD BRONSON
JOHN OXENFORD
LUCIUS E. FULLER
GEO. W. HOTCHKISS.

The committee reported at a meeting of the Supreme Nine and House of Ancients held at Chicago, Ill., July 19, 1910.

DETAILS OF THE PLAN.

The following is quoted from the original announcement of the plan as drawn up by the committee and adopted by the Supreme Nine and House of Ancients.

Whether to the rich or poor, the high or low, whether anticipated or coming unannounced, death always comes as a sudden shock and often finds his victim financially unprepared; resources of the amplest may be just out of reach. The Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo has not been and will never be an insurance organization, with all the complications and details inevitable in such an organization. But in the judgment of its officers this plan for instant payment of a death benefit, howbeit but a small one, is a natural and logical extension and development of the spirit of brotherly love that has maintained our Imminent Distress Fund for so many years; and these officers believe that the plan offered is so simple and practical, and so nearly automatic in its operation, that no complication can possibly arise; that on the contrary the plan can be put into immediate and smooth working, and that great good will result. The plan gives the Order what it has never had—a definite and systematic method of making its spirit of helpfulness and charity more effective than it can ever possibly be through disbursements of small sums to distressed members.

OPERATIVE ON $6,000.

The fund from which the proposed death benefits are to be paid shall have been established, and death payments shall immediately begin, when there shall have been remitted to the Supreme Scrivenoter the sum of $2 each by as many as 3,000 members of the Order in good standing.

If such number of remittances is not received prior to January 1, 1911, then it will be adjudged that the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo does not approve of the establishment of such death benefit and the money received in response to this call will be turned into the regular Distress Fund of the Order, and the plan will be abandoned.

Out of this fund, if it shall be established, shall be paid to the beneficiary named by the subscriber thereto, the sum of $250. This payment shall be made immediately upon the Supreme Scrivenoter having reasonably satisfied himself of the death of the subscriber, without red tape, or any further delay or formality. The payment shall be made in person or by mail if the beneficiary resides within one night's travel of the Scrivenoter's office; and by wire if beneficiary's residence is more distant. No medical examination shall be required and no age limit shall be imposed upon the subscriber.

REPLENISHMENT OF THE FUND.

When, by reason of death payments as above provided, the fund in hand shall have been reduced to $2,000, or in the judgment of the Snark and Scrivenoter, is about to be reduced to such sum, another invitation to subscribe to the fund shall be immediately issued to every member of the order. But no renewal of subscription shall be demanded on account of response to first call. Response to all invitations, whether to the establishment or to the successful replenishment of the fund, shall be purely voluntary.

If at any time the fund on hand falls below $1,000 by reason of failure of succeeding calls to produce sufficient replenishment, it will be adjudged that the membership of Hoo-Hoo wishes the plan not longer maintained, and in such event whatever balance of the fund remains on hand shall be turned into the regular Distress Fund, and the undertaking will be at an end.

EXPENSES OF ADMINISTRATION.

No expense shall be charged against the Death Emergency Fund except that of postage, printing, and the small sundry expenses incident to effecting prompt payment in the case of death. For the present and until the plan assumes the large proportion it will have should practically all members of the Order in good standing become participants it is believed the present clerical force of the Scrivenoter's office can successfully and expeditiously handle whatever work the plan entails, and in no event is it contemplated that the Scrivenoter will be given increased compensation on account of this plan.

No legal responsibility shall attach to the officers of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo by reason of this plan. The designated beneficiaries of those who contribute to the fund may expect payment of the sum named provided the death of the subscriber occurs prior to fifteen days after the date of issuance of the next succeeding request for contribution.

Members may become subscribers at any time, but may not duplicate their subscription with expectation of duplicating the benefits to be received.

FOUNDED ON FAITH.

The whole plan is founded on faith, but on faith in Hoo-Hoo, the only organization in the history of the world that has existed for twenty years without ritualism or ceremony, with only the open air for a lodge room, and solely upon the spirit of comradeship and brotherly love existing among men whose business brings them together.

A SLIGHT CHANGE MADE.

At the twentieth Annual Meeting a slight change was made in the plan as printed on the foregoing pages, whereby hereafter a new subscriber will be required to have been a subscriber for a period of sixty days prior to death before his beneficiary can claim payment of death benefit except in case of death by accident. This restriction will apply to the new or first subscription only, and not to any subsequent subscription made, no matter how soon after such subsequent subscription death may occur, or from what cause death may occur.

HOW THE PLAN HAS WORKED.

The foregoing fully sets forth the plan upon which the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund was established and has been so far maintained.

Six Calls have been made as follows:

First Call—July 28, 1910.
Second Call—April 1, 1911.
Third Call—October 1, 1911.
Fourth Call—April 1, 1912.
Fifth Call—October 1, 1912.
Sixth Call—March 1, 1913.

WE ARE NOW WORKING UNDER SIXTH CALL.

Following is financial statement covering receipts and disbursements of First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Calls.

RECEIPTS.

Total Subscriptions First Call.....	$7,963.62
Total Subscriptions Second Call.....	5,687.97
Total Subscriptions Third Call.....	5,013.60
Total Subscriptions Fourth Call.....	4,382.50
Total Subscriptions Fifth Call.....	4,597.85

Total receipts.....$27,545.54

Following statement shows balances carried forward from Call to Call—

From First to Second.....	$1,984.54
From Second to Third.....	2,961.43
From Third to Fourth.....	2,976.58
From Fourth to Fifth.....	2,087.17

DISBURSEMENTS.

Expenses (see annual reports for itemized account).....	$ 3,030.98
Death Claims paid (94 claims).....	23,500.00

Total Disbursements.....$26,530.98
Balance to credit Sixth Call.....$1,014.56

The matter of the dates of issuance of these successive Calls is gone into to show that the original calculations made of death rate were remarkably correct—making the indemnity cost at the rate of $4.00 per annum (two Calls of $2.00 each) for $250.00 of indemnity, or on the basis of $16.00 per annum for $1,000 of indemnity.

These figures are cited merely to show how the proposition has worked out. No one, of course, is permitted to come in for more indemnity than $250.00. Right here, also, it is proper to say that the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund was not conceived and established as a business proposition to enter into competition with any insurance organization. Its appeal to members of Hoo-Hoo is on a different and higher plane. The Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund was conceived and established as a method through which the sentiment of charity and brotherly love existing among Hoo-Hoo can be systematically, promptly and effectively extended to the bereaved ones of our dead members. It has magnificently fulfilled this end, and is worthy the heartiest support of every member of the Order, even though he feels no need himself of insurance at any price, and even though the Calls should come four times a year instead of twice.

The cost of participation during the time that has now elapsed since the fund was established is gone into only that the exact workings of the undertaking may be understood by all, and not to urge the proposition on our members as a business matter.

It is, however, none the less gratifying to be able to say that considering the fact that no restriction whatever is made as to age or condition of health; that we take alike the young man in the bloom of youth and the old man taking his last slow steps, and the sick along with the most robust—the Hoo-Hoo Death Emergency Fund has been demonstrated to be the cheapest death benefit ever furnished by any organization, company or individual. This is something surely of which to be proud.
